Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a stupefying poison. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—a little late though—Congress says "Put it on the label, if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good!! Hereafter for this very reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure

Tickling or dry coughs will quickly loosen when using Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is so thoroughly harmless that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to use nothing else, even for very young babies. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing and mountainous shrub give the curatve properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. It calms the cough, heals the sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Accept no other. Sold by all dealers.

It's a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the heart and kidneys. That is all wrong. A weak stomach means weak stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the heart and kidneys The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping stomach heart and kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure so soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by all dealers.

Men of All Ages Wear "Gitche Gamee" Shoes

Wearers of "GITCHEE GAMEES," the leading shoe of the Northern Shoe company, can be found among men at all times of life.

Always of the same sterling quality, "GITCHE GAMEES" are made in many styles and on many different lasts, so that all tastes can be satisfied.

If you look first for STYLE in a shoe—the "GITCHE GAMEE" has it!

If you care more for comfort and long-wearing qualities, these also the "GITCHE GAMEE" has.

Made in the "NOSHCO" factory, where QUALITY is of more importance than anything else, the "GITCHE GAMEE" could be nothing but a shoe of EXCEPTIONAL quality.

A man seldom expresses himself as pleased with a pair of shoes, if they wear well he takes it as a matter of course, but thousands of satisfied wearers have proclaimed the "GITCHE GAMEE" a shoe of superlative excellence.

Some of the special construction points of the "GITCFE GAMEE" are well worthy of notice; the toe-boxes, for instance, made throughout of solid sole leather.

The counters also are of a high grade of sole leather, while the heels are solid one-piece lifts seldom found in any shoes save "GITCHE GAMEES".

One pair, bought NOW, will make of you also, a "GITCHE GAMEE" enthusiast.

Shoes of "NOSHCO-MAKE" are all made a little better than seems necessary. Ask for them if you want the BEST.

PROCEEDINGS

Official Proceeding, Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake County.

Sept. 28th, 1909.

On the call of the County Auditor, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 230 of the Laws of Minnesota for the year 1905 and acts amendatory thereof, the Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake County met in special session at the office of the County Auditor in the City of Red Lake Falls, Minn., on Tuesday the 28th day of September, A. D. 1909, at 10 o'clock a. m. for the purpose of hearing and considering the petition of Peder H. Thoreson and others for the establishment and construction of Drainage Ditch No. 38, the petition of Ole O. Nesja and others for the establishment and construction of Drainage Ditch No. 39, the petition of Alex. F. Lattimore and others for the establishment and construction of Drainage Ditch No. 40 and the petition of John N. Swanson and others for the establishment and construction of Drainage Ditch No. 41, all wholly within Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Members present: Lindquist, Aubol, Johnson and Pigeon.

Members absent: Demann.

Meeting called to order by the Chairman at 10.00 o'clock a. m.

The petition of Peder H. Thoreson and others for a Drainage Ditch came up for hearing and the petition was read. After hearing the arguments of all persons interested for or against the construction of the proposed ditch, on motion made by Commissioner Pigeon and seconded by Commissioner Johnson the following resolution appointing an engineer to survey the route of the said proposed ditch was adopted:

In the matter of the petition of Peder H. Thoreson and others for locating and constructing County Ditch No. 38 in the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota.

State of Minnesota, County of Red Lake. ss.

Whereas, a petition bearing date the 11th day of August, 1909, signed by Peder H. Thoreson, Peter P. Korstad, Ole Johnsrud, Christ Odegaad, Oluf O. Omlid, Ole P. Borstad, Michael Stengel, Jos. Trenda, Ole O. Sunsdahl, Idan Thoreson, Even Ljulestad, Andrew Nelson and John T. Homme praying for the establishment of a certain public drainage ditch in said County, designated and numbered by the County Auditor as County Ditch No. 38 the route of which is more fully described in said petition, and a proper bond accompanying the same, have been filed with the County Auditor of said County, as by law required.

And, Whereas, It appears by satisfactory proof to the County Board of Red Lake County, that due notice of the pendency of said petition, and the time and place at which the same would be heard, has been given as required by law;

Now, Therefore, We, the County Board of said County, at a special session held this day, do hereby appoint C. H. Martz as a competent and experienced engineer to make an accurate survey of the line of said Drainage Ditch No. 38 from its source to its outlet, as provided and specified in and by Chapter 230 of the General Laws of 1905, and acts amendatory thereof and after completing his duties as such engineer to make and file his report with the County Auditor of said County, on or before the 30th day of November, 1909.

Dated Sept. 28th, 1909.

By the Board,
C. A. LINDQUIST,
Chairman of County Board of Red Lake County.

Attest: A. A. LATENDRESSE,
(Seal) County Auditor.

On motion made by Commissioner Pigeon and seconded by Commissioner Johnson and carried unanimously the following order appointing Viewers on County Ditch No. 38 was made:

In the matter of the petition of Peder H. Thoreson and others for County Ditch No. 38, in the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota.

Whereas, a petition bearing date the 11th day of August, 1909, signed by Peder H. Thoreson, Peter P. Korstad, Ole Johnsrud, Christ Odegard, Oluf O. Omlid, Ole P. Borstad, Michael Stengel, Jos. Trenda, Ole O. Sunsdahl, Idan Thoreson, Even Ljulestad, Andrew Nelson and John T. Homme praying for the establishment of a ditch in said County, designated and numbered by the County Auditor as County Ditch No. 38, the route of which is fully described in said petition, together with a proper bond accompanying the same, has been filed with the County Auditor of said County; and said County Auditor has given due notice of the pendency of said petition, and the said notice has been published and served as by law required; and hearing had on said petition pursuant to said notice; and the said County Board of said County have heretofore duly appointed a competent engineer, to-wit. C. H. Martz to make a survey of said ditch.

Now Therefore, We, the County Board of said County, at a special session held this day, do hereby appoint Gunnard Lindquist and K. O. Gigstad and Otto Zaiser, three resident freeholders of said County, who are not interested in the construction of said proposed work, and not of kin to any of the parties known to be interested therein, to be viewers of said proposed work and of the route thereof. The said viewers shall first take an oath to faithfully perform their duties as such viewers; and thereafter, having received a certified copy of the petition for said ditch and of the order appointing them such viewers and of the order of the County Auditor of said County designating the time and place of the first meeting of said viewers, shall meet at the time and place specified, in the order of the County Auditor aforesaid and shall proceed to view said proposed work, and the land damaged or benefitted thereby; and, having completed said view and examination of said work, shall make and file their report thereof with said County Auditor of said County within thirty days from the date of their first meeting. In said report they shall in tabular form give the names of the owners of each tract of land to be benefitted or damaged by said proposed work, the description of each tract of land so benefitted or damaged (said names of owners to be the same as appear on the County tax duplicates of said County, and the description to be given in legal form), and the total number of acres in each of said tracts, the estimated number of acres in each tract of land to be benefitted or damaged (as the case may be), the number of acres added to any tract by the total or partial drainage of any meandered lake, or the change of any water course and the location and value of such added land; the damage, if any, to riparian rights pertaining to any tract, and the amount that each tract of land will be benefitted or damaged by the construction of said work. In case said ditch drains, either in whole or in part, any public or corporate road or railroad, or benefits any such roads so that the roadbed or traveled track of any such road will be made better by the construction of said ditch, said viewers shall estimate the benefits arising therefrom to said road, roadbeds or railroads, and report said benefits, together with the names of roads and others particulars necessary to identify the corporations, private or public, to be benefitted thereby, and amounts of benefits to each; they shall report as part of such tabular statement the damages awarded to each municipal or other corporation for injury to any road or roadbed, and from the necessary construction and maintenance of any bridge, culverts or other works rendered necessary by the establishment of such ditch, stating the same separately. They shall also report the total estimated benefits in respect to said ditch entire, and branches thereof, if any, and also whether or not, in their opinion, the estimated expense of the construction of said ditch including the damages assessed therefor, is greater than the utility of said proposed ditch; and whether or not said proposed ditch is impracticable for any reasons, and if so, stating the reason why it should not be constructed. In making said view and survey of said proposed work and their report thereon, the said viewers shall proceed according to Chapter 230 of the General Laws of 1905 and acts amendatory thereof.

The County Board of Red Lake County, Minnesota.
By C. A. LINDQUIST, Chairman.

Dated this 28th day of September, A. D., 1909.

Attest: A. A. LATENDRESSE,
(Seal) County Auditor.

The petition of Ole O. Nesja and others for a Drainage Ditch came up for hearing and the petition was read. After hearing the arguments of all persons interested for or against the construction of the proposed ditch, on motion made by Commissioner Aubol and seconded by Commissioner Johnson the following resolution appointing an engineer to survey the route of the said proposed ditch was adopted:

In the matter of the petition of Ole O. Nesja and others for locating and constructing County Ditch No. 39, in the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota.

Whereas, a petition bearing date the 20th day of July, 1909, signed by Ole O. Nesja, O. H. Langlie, Andrew O. [illegible] and Halvor [illegible] Gjervold and Tobias Eidum praying for the establishment of a certain drainage ditch in said County, designated and numbered by the County Auditor as County Ditch No. 39, the route of which is more fully described in said petition, and a proper bond accompanying the same, have been filed with the County Auditor of said County, as by law required.

And, Whereas, It appears by satisfactory proof to the County Board of Red Lake County, that due notice of the pendency of said petition, and the time and place at which the same would be heard, has been given as required by law;

Now, Therefore, We, the County Board of said County, at a special session held this day, do hereby appoint C. H. In the matter of the petition of Alex. F. Lattimore and others for County Ditch No. 40 in the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota.

Whereas, a petition bearing date the 16th day of August, A. D. 1909, by Alex. F. Lattimore and others praying for the establishment of a ditch in said County designated and numbered by the County Auditor as County Ditch No. 40, the route of which is fully described in said petition together with a proper bond accompanying the same has been filed with the County Auditor of said County; and said County Auditor has given due notice of the pendency of said petition and the said notice has been published [illegible] County have heretofore duly appointed a competent engineer, to-wit. C. H. Martz to make a survey of said ditch.

Now Therefore, We, the County Board of said County, at a special session held this day, do hereby appoint Gunnard Lindquist and K. O. Gigstad and Otto Zaiser, three resident freeholders of said County, who are not interested in the construction of said proposed work, and not of kin to any of the parties known to be interested therein, to be viewers of said proposed work and of the route thereof. The said viewers shall first take an oath to fathfully perform their duties as such viewers; and thereafter, having received a certified copy of the petition for said ditch and of the order appointing them such viewers and of the order of the County Auditor of said County designating the time and place of the first meeting of said viewers, shall meet at the time and place specified, in the order of the County Auditor aforesaid and shall proceed to view said proposed work, and the land damaged or benefitted thereby; and, having completed said view and examination of said work, shall make and file their report thereof with said County Auditor of said County within thirty days from the date of their first meeting. In said report they shall in tabular form give the names of the owners of each tract of land to be benefitted or damaged by said proposed work, the description of each tract of land so benefitted or damaged (said names of owners to be the same as appear on the County tax duplicates of said County, and the description to be given in legal form), and the total number of acres in each of said tracts, the estimated number of acres in each tract of land to be benefitted or damaged (as the case may be), the number of acres added to any tract by the total or partial drainage of any meandered lake, or the change of any water course and the location and value of such added land; the damage, if any, to riparian rights pertaining to any tract, and the amount that each tract of land will be benefitted or damaged by the construction of said work. In case said ditch drains, either in whole or in part, any public or corporate road or railroad, or benefits any such roads so that the roadbed or traveled track of any such road will be made better by the construction of said ditch, said viewers shall estimate the benefits arising therefrom to said road, roadbeds or railroads, and report said benefits, together with the names of roads and others particulars necessary to identify the corporations, private or public, to be benefitted thereby, and amounts of benefits to each; they shall report as part of such tabular statement the damages awarded to each municipal or other corporation for injury to any road or roadbed, and from the necessary construction and maintenance of any bridge, culverts or other works rendered necessary by the establishment of such ditch, stating the same separately. They shall also report the total estimated benefits in respect to said ditch entire, and branches thereof, if any, and also whether or not, in their opinion, the estimated expense of the construction of said ditch including the damages assessed therefor, is greater than the utility of said proposed ditch; and whether or not said proposed ditch is impracticable for any reasons, and if so, stating the reason why it should not be constructed. In making said view and survey of said proposed work and their report thereon, the said viewers shall proceed according to Chapter 230 of the General Laws of 1905 and acts amendatory thereof.

Petition for Public Ditch.

To the County Board of the County of Red Lake State of Minnesota:

The undersigned land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for, the expense of the contruction of the County Ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare and the reclamation of wet and overflowed lands require the establishment and contruction of a County Ditch along the following described route in the Towns of Kratka and Mayfield in said County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said ditch is as follows: Commencing at the South West corner of Section One (1) and the South East corner of Section Two (2) in Township One Hundred Fifty Two (152) north of Range Forty One (41) west of the Fifth Principal Meridian and following the section line north for One Hundred Sixty (160) rods to the North West corner of the South West Quarter (SW¼) of Section One (1) in said township, and thence in a northwesterly course following the natural water course for about one and one-half miles to the South West corner of the North East Quarter (NE¼) of Section Thirty Five (35) in Township One Hundred Fifty Three (153) north of Range Forty One (41) west, and thence for One Hundred Sixty (160) rods north to the South West corner of the South East Quarter (SE¼) of Section Twenty Six (26) in Township One Hundred Fifty Three (153) north of Range Forty One (41) west and then following the section line for One Hundred Sixty (160) rods west between Sections Twenty Six (26) and Thirty Five (35) in Township One Hundred Fifty Three (153) north of Range Forty One (41) west, and thence in a northwesterly course for about one and one-half miles to a point forty (40) rods north of the South west corner of the North West Quarter (NW¼) of Section Twenty Seven (27) Township One Hundred Fifty Three (153) north of Range Forty One (41) west on the section line between Sections Twenty Seven (27) and Twenty Eight (28) and thence due north to the Red Lake River on the section line between Sections Twenty Seven (27) and Twenty Eight (28), and Sections Twenty One (21) and Twenty Two (22) in Township One Hundred Fifty Three (153) north of Range Forty One (41) west, and terminating at Red Lake river on the section line between Sections Twenty One (21) and Twenty Two (22) in Township One Hundred Fifty Three (153) north of Range Forty One (41) west, as its outlet into Red Lake river.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such County Drainage Ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter Two Hundred thirty (230), of the General Laws of Minnesota for 1905 and acts amendatory thereof.

FROM KEELBOAT TO AEROPLANE

By EMERY STEELE HUNTINGDON

THE MIGHTY activities and marvelous progress the world has seen in the past 100 years are strikingly illustrated in the centennial celebration of the incorporation of St. Louis. Picturesque pageants with everything in the way of the spectacular which is most likely to stir the imagination of the spectator into appreciating the work of the past through contrasts with the present feature the week's program.

The greater part of the history of early St. Louis is really more fit for the unwritten American epic poem than it is for mere prose. Its work as a frontier town in the first half of the nineteenth century made it the mid-continental city of the United States in the second half. Its pioneer trade routes are now the great routes of steam transportation between the Rio Grande and the Canadian border and between the Mississippi and the Pacific. It established the first water routes from the headwaters of the Ohio to the mouth of the Missouri and of the Illinois, opening the first water connection for steam transportation between the Ohio and the upper Mississippi and Missouri, developing the Ohio river states on both sides of that stream.

Every state now on the map west of the Mississippi was penetrated by its business pioneers, establishing the first centers of trade. The whole west is interested with St. Louis in celebrating this great event, because in founding the first great city of the trans-Mississippi west the pioneers made the western beginnings now explained in scores of other western cities and in actual thousands of other incorporated towns, which, if they are not already great, are not unduly modest in their expectations of becoming so. The invitation to a thousand mayors of American cities to participate in the festivities shows that St. Louis fully appreciates its position as the pioneer city of the great west.

As there were less than 200 houses, including outhouses and barns, in the St. Louis which incorporated in 1809, it could not have had much over 900 people. The town was already the chief seat of the western fur trade, with its trading stations pushed to the headwaters of the Arkansas and far towards the sources of the Missouri and the Yellowstone. Doing business wholly by barter, with almost no money in hand, in sight or in circulation, with resources represented almost wholly by the spirit of its 900 people; with the ax and rifle and blacksmith's sledge as its implements, with the one-horse cart, the keelboat and canoe as its transportation facilities, the little town, when it incorporated, already looked on its work as that of opening up the United States of the future to the Rocky mountains and beyond them to the Pacific. In 1809 it had lost Meriwether Lewis, but it still had his companion explorer, William Clark, to stand for the spirit of the American and French "makers of destiny" who thought little more of starting a thousand miles into the unknown west from St. Louis than the average St. Louisan now thinks of starting for the Pacific coast in a sleeping car.

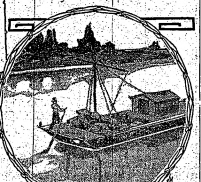
OLIVE STREET, ST. LOUIS 100 YEARS AGO

OLIVE STREET TODAY



MISSISSIPPI RIVER KEELBOAT IN 1809

From a village of 900 inhabitants to the fourth city in the United States, with a population of three-quarters of a million, is a wonderful achievement, but it sinks into insignificance when compared with the giant strides of the past century in the world of science, commerce, the arts and every field of endeavor which makes for a higher and better civilization.

It is a severe strain on the imagination to attempt to bridge over the gap between the meaning of an airship crossing the Mississippi river at St. Louis this year and what the ancient keelboats of 1809 meant, as they landed at the foot of Walnut street, where the town was founded in 1764 by the pioneers who had paddled and cordelled their bateaux painfully up the river from New Orleans under Laclede as he advanced in the bold attempt to control the fur trade of half a continent with his handful of men.

The keelboat then was no more out of date than the airship is now. It was the best modern boat in 1809 which could be equipped by the capital of St. Louis, of New Orleans or of Philadelphia. Because of it Philadelphia and St. Louis commanded the east and west movement of business as that north and south was commanded by New Orleans and St. Louis, as soon as their first fleets of keelboats were regularly organized. It helped to make great history, even if it did have to be pulled up stream by a rope dragged by men on the bank.

This distance in point of change in the way things are done is almost impassable for the mind. In point of fact in St. Louis it is only a matter of the third generation between keelboat and aeroplane. In 1907 the first airship on record as crossing the Mississippi river crossed it at St. Louis during the internation[illegible] year. It is something to [illegible] part of the record to which belongs the history of the first locomotive crossing the Mississippi at St. Louis in 1852 to complete the work of the St. Louis argonauts of 1849, crossing to the Pacific in their "prairie schooners."

If we suppose aeroplanes and airships circling in the air above the St. Louis keelboat landing of a hundred years ago we may imagine, if we can, how they appear to the men whose grandfathers not only navigated the river in keelboats, but lay flat behind the goods the boats were loaded with while they were being shot at by Indians along the banks.

It is almost if not quite as hard now to imagine what the world meant before the age of steam as it is to think out what will be its meaning in the age of the perfected airship and aeroplane. Every contrast possible in the St. Louis centennial week of pageants is a challenge to look backward and forward in the attempt to find out what a hundred years already mean as the first success in the attempt to find what it is to mean shortly, for this generation and for the grandchildren of this generation in 2009.

The makers of the centennial week program were keenly alive to the opportunities for spectacular effect suggested by the most striking events of the world's progress. The aeronautic events such as balloon races, aeroplane and dirigible balloon contests, suggest the future possibilities of transportation in contrast with those of 1809. For comparison with automobiles and aeroplanes the bateau of Laclede's day, with its stumpy mast, its cordelle and its sweeps, is an educational feature of the water pageant, which includes crafts of all the kinds which now ply the waters of the Mississippi. The Veiled Prophet's pageant, unique and picturesque, is another feature which is full of romantic interest. The educational parade, the parade representing 3,000 of St. Louis' industries, the procession of a thousand mayors and the other events which find a place on the program all suggest that as a great week for St. Louis its centennial week is still greater, as it belongs to a hundred years of history-making for the continental United States.

The city of St. Louis was founded by Pierre Laclede Liguest in 1764. The territory west of the Mississippi river was then in possession of France. Laclede landed at the foot of what is now Market street, organized the village and resided there for 14 years. He named the new site St. Louis in honor of Louis XV., the reigning sovereign of France. The territory was transferred by France to Spain by secret treaty in 1762, but it was not announced in the new village until October, 1764. In 1803 Spain retroceded the sovereignty to France and on April 30, 1803, France sold all the territory west of the Mississippi river, known as the Louisiana purchase, to the United States for $15,000,000, Napoleon remarking: "This accession of territory strengthens forever the power of the United States."

With less than a thousand inhabitants when the whole country had not quite seven and a quarter million in 1809, St. Louis emerged from the era of the keelboat and pirogue to pioneer the steamboat on western rivers. Loading its first steamboat in 1817, it had more than doubled its [illegible] in 1820. From 4,000 in 1820, two decades of steamboating gave it 16,469 in 1840. About that time it began its great transcontinental work with the "prairie schooner," reinforcing the steamboat in overland transit. With the transcontinental overland movement, to Oregon as well as California, growing, in 1850 it had 77,860 people and was beginning its work as the first pioneer of railroads to the Pacific. After bringing the first locomotive west of the Mississippi in 1852, it more than doubled its population in that decade, reaching 185,587 in 1860. With the foundations of the states now west of the river, already laid along its first trade routes in 1860, it advanced in the next two decades to 350,552 people. Chicago was passing it in population then, without being able to take from it its historical place as the "first great city of the west," the pioneer and founder of the west of the present. Since 1880 it has doubled its population once more, advancing from 350,000 to over 700,000. At its present rate of increase, responsive to that of the Mississippi valley, St. Louis is doubling business in a little over 10 years. Its bank clearings increased from $292,000,000 in 1869 to $3,074,000,000 in 1908. Its tonnage of merchandise received and forwarded was 20,162,000 tons for the first six months of this year. Its bank resources reported June 23, 1909, at $385,881,000, more than double the total of the tenth year back.

Such figures illustrate much more than local progress. They are mid-continental before they become local, in the sense that the people of the whole area between the Allegheny and Rocky mountains are now exerting new energies and utilizing new forces of growth, unforeseen even as late as 10 years ago. As the percentages of this growth are of course greatest west of the Mississippi river, St. Louis has almost "made itself over" in 15 years in growing up to the new growth of the country. Since it began work for the world's fair, celebrating the Louisiana purchase, it has learned to look back on itself in the last decade of the nineteenth century as "old St. Louis." In looking back to the older St. Louis of 1809, it can boast that as a frontier outpost it led the progress of the continental United States. In looking forward, in its centennial year, it can see that the greatest results of the history it has made are only the beginnings of greater results, which belong to the immediate future of the continental United States, whose progress makes the frontier town of 1809 the midcontinental city of 1909.

GRAFT FOWL BONE ON JAW.

An unusual surgical operation was performed at St. Joseph's hospital, in Omaha, recently. A portion of the jawbone of Lucretia Norris was removed and a piece of chicken bone inserted in the place of a diseased section.

The girl is six years old, and was born with a malformed jaw. It was to remedy this that a bone from a freshly killed chicken was inserted.

The Subjugation of Father

By BERTHA HART NANCE

(Copyright, by W. G. Chapman.)

"I am so glad," declared Felix, "that we are to have a quiet wedding."

Nan surveyed the ring upon her slender finger, then let her glance wander to the veranda floor, where the shadows of the vine leaves were dancing merrily. Then, with one of her quick changes of mood, she turned to him with eyes that danced like the leaves.

"I believe," she accused, "that you are afraid of a crowd."

"I surely am," confessed Felix without turning his head. Her eyes followed his, and she saw a man coming in at the gate.

"Who is that?" she inquired.

"I think I saw him at the hotel this morning."

"Good evening," he began, slowly, lifting the stylish hat from his well-groomed head. Then, as they replied, he suddenly bounded up the steps.

"Why, Nan, I've found you at last," he exclaimed, making a quick dive at her lips with his. Nan's head went up and backward, and the kiss exploded in midair. Felix sprang to his feet.

"What right have you to kiss this lady?" he jerked. The other man faced him with a cool smile.

"Husband," echoed Felix, and Nan also rose.

"I never saw him before in all my life," she cried, her voice quivering with excitement.

"And Have You No Proof?" Demanded Felix.

"No mistake about it," he protested. "I am Charles K. Asberry of Chicago, and this lady is Nan Asberry, nee Whipple, whom I married in Chicago five years ago. She was there attending school and we became acquainted. Shortly after the Christmas holidays she eloped with me and we were married. We lived happily together for nearly six months. I was then, as now, a traveling salesman, and, returning from a business trip, found Nan gone, leaving no trace. She had told me that her parents lived in Wellington, Kan., but I found this to be untrue. Happening to visit this little Texas town, I heard of her this morning as about to be married to Felix Dixon, whom I suppose to be you, sir." Felix was too overcome to nod.

"There must be some mistake," he kept repeating.

"There is," put in Nan, "I did go to school in Chicago five years ago, but I never ran away or was married, and I never saw this man before."

Asberry smiled to himself. "You see she admits a part of it already," he murmured aside to Felix. "By degrees the rest will come to her. Some of these cases of loss of memory are very peculiar."

"What's all this? What's all this?" cried another voice. A stout, red-whiskered man emerged from within the little cottage, dragging a chair after him.

"Oh, papa, oh, papa," sobbed Nan. "Here's a man that says he is my husband. It's like a nightmare."

Mr. Whipple sat down slowly. Asberry was already introducing himself.

"Let us hear your story," encouraged Whipple. Asberry repeated it, while all listened attentively.

"And have you no proof," demanded Felix, when he had finished, "other than your bare statement?"

"What should I have?" argued the stranger. "What motive would a man have for making such a statement? Proof? I can't be expected to carry marriage certificates and locks of hair about with me, but still I have something which may be considered proof."

Taking out his watch, he opened it and pointed to a picture within.

"It certainly looks like it," she had to confess.

"Felix," pursued Mr. Whipple, "get that picture of Nan in there on the piano. Let us compare them. There, don't you see they are the same? Nan, what are you going to do about this?"

"I don't know," she stammered. "I know what he says is not true; I can prove it by my schoolmates and teachers. Of course it will take a little time to write to them."

"Do," echoed Felix. "I am going to get a preacher and be married at once."

"Get married if you will," growled Asberry, "but Nan is going back to Chicago with me on the next train, which leaves, I believe, just two hours hence."

"I'll never do it," wailed Nan, sitting down and burying her face in her hands. [illegible]

"Of course not. We'll be married and I defy you to prevent it." Felix glared at Asberry.

"Now, Felix," interrupted Mr. Whipple, "are you quite sure that would be for the best? Had you not better wait till we get absolute proof?"

"Dear Charles," she cooed, throwing her arms about his neck. "I am so glad you have found me at last." Whipple sprang out of his chair. Nan laid her curly head on Asberry's shoulder.

"It has been so long," she murmured. "I remember it all now. I ran away from school and we were married. Then I see us living together in that dear little flat. The rest is a blank."

"Nan," gasped her father. "Take your hands off that man. Do you hear me?" But Nan's voice ran evenly on.

"We will go back there, won't we, Charles? Only you won't leave me alone so much, like you used to."

Whipple's eyes seemed starting out of his head. Striding forward, he grasped Nan by the arm, and shouted into her ear:

"Nan, Nan, are you crazy?"

"Not in the least," she replied, quietly, turning from Asberry. "Only I remember everything now."

Nan tripped into the house without replying. There was a little silence, and they heard her returning. She was gazing fondly at something which she held in her hand.

"Look," she cried, extending it to her father. "When he put my picture in his watch he gave me this beautiful little watch with his picture in it. I have treasured it all these years." Whipple took it with hands that shook.

"It is Asberry's picture," he conceded, "however you come to have it. But, Nan, you never saw this man before. This whole thing is a joke, a joke, do you hear, one of my practical jokes. I wanted to test Felix's affection. I met this man in Dallas a while back and he agreed to play the part, and I supplied him with your picture. You are not married."

In the silence that followed, Felix came forward.

"Do you believe this?" he asked Whipple.

"I suppose I'll have to," was the weary reply.

"Do you call it a fair test of a man's affection for his betrothed, or a father's, for his daughter, to give him absolute proof of a thing?"

"What do you mean?" demanded Whipple.

"Do you call it unfair to turn a joke on an inveterate practical joker?" Whipple glanced keenly at the three. They were laughing in unison.

"What does this mean?" he choked.

"Only this," explained Felix, "that, as Nan said a while ago, you found the right man. He was an old friend of mine. We let you have your fun with us, then we had ours with you. And, as a reward for the way he played his part, he is going to be my best man."

APPOINTED BY ROYALTY

All London Signs "Purveyor to Their Majesties" Must Be Authorized.

The American in London, on his first visit to that marvelous city, is struck by the number of signs over shops with the royal arms painted thereon and announcing that the tradesman is a purveyor to their majesties. Yet, when the matter is sifted, the number is not so large. Officially, according to the Atlantic Daily News, there are about 200 tradesmen in London, who hold the royal warrant and are entitled to use the royal arms as a shop sign, with the accompanying words, "By royal appointment." The royal warrant has to be received and sealed, in due form, otherwise if a tradesman styles himself a purveyor to a member of the royal family without this formal permission he is guilty of an offense which is punishable by a fine not exceeding £20. Moreover, he is liable to a similar fine if he uses arms too nearly resembling the royal arms as to lead people to believe that he is carrying on his business under the authority of royalty. Several instances have occurred during the last two years of the enforcement of these penalties. The warrants are exhibited in the shop windows, headed by the royal arms and bearing the signature of the lord chamberlain, the controller of the royal household, the treasurer of the latter or the master of the horse, etc., according to the circumstances.

White House Dinners.

Some one has been going back to the good old times and comparing the White House dinners of the days of the fathers with those of the present. The difference is marked, and in favor of the dinners to-day. A recent White House dinner took 87 minutes. Your ancient dinner at the executive mansion, back in the earlier administrations, began at eight and wound up after midnight. The tables groaned and the stomachs of the guests groaned under the weight of rich dishes and fierce liquors. It took a strong man to escape the need of assistance home after the function was over. Times have changed.

Not Alarmed.

"I hope you gentlemen will soon settle your bills," whined the landlord of the country house. "If you don't I expect the wolf will knock at the door pretty soon."

"No danger," spoke up the tall boarder, who was a shoe clerk up in town. "No self-respecting wolf would stop at such a boarding house as this."

HER PHYSICIAN ADVISED

Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Columbus, Ohio.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during change of life. My doctor told me it was good, and since taking it I feel so much better that I can do all my work again. I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fine remedy for all woman's troubles, and I never forget to tell my friends what it has done for me."—Mrs. E. HANSON, 304 East Long St., Columbus, Ohio.

Another Woman Helped.

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored my health and strength, and proved worth mountains of gold to me. For the sake of other suffering women I am willing you should publish my letter."—Mrs. CHARLES BARCLAY, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ours and Theirs.

"A play on names unconsciously perpetrated by my youngest son was very funny," said a Flatbush man the other day. "We live next door to a family named Feltenour, and the other night while my family was busy reading in the library we heard a racket on the back porch. My son went out to investigate, and on his return my wife, always inquisitive, asked what had caused the noise.

"'Nothin' but a couple of cats,' Jim told her, and then I heard her ask: 'Did you see whose they were?'

"'Yes; one was ours and the other was Feltenour's.'"

The extraordinary popularity of fine white goods this summer makes the choice of Starch a matter of great importance. Defiance Starch, being free from all injurious chemicals, is the only one which is safe to use on fine fabrics. Its great strength as a stiffener makes half the usual quantity of Starch necessary, with the result of perfect finish, equal to that when the goods were new.

Sheer white goods, in fact, any fine wash goods when new, owe much of their attractiveness to the way they are laundered, this being done in a manner to enhance their textile beauty. Home laundering would be equally satisfactory if proper attention was given to starching, the first essential being good Starch, which has sufficient strength to stiffen, without thickening the goods. Try Defiance Starch and you will be pleasantly surprised at the improved appearance of your work.

Weakened by Alcohol.

Dr. Bertillon, the eminent French vital statistician, has shown that tuberculosis is twice as prevalent among the retail liquor dealers of France as among other shopkeepers. He attributes it to the fact that the alcohol which they handle and use all day long weakens their bodies and thus renders them more susceptible to the disease germ.

With a smooth iron and Defiance Starch, you can launder your shirtwaist just as well at home as the steam laundry can; it will have the proper stiffness and finish, there will be less wear and tear of the goods, and it will be a positive pleasure to use a Starch that does not stick to the iron.

GOLF STORY STIRS

Premier Asquith Reported to Have Played on Sunday.

Quick Contradiction Causes Some of the English Publishers to Be Suspicious—King Edward Has a Similar Experience.

London.—Premier Asquith's recent motion in both Westminster and Fleet street. Through a mistake in telegraphing the premier was understood to have played his record three hours round at Littlestone links on Sunday afternoon.

Now the question of Sunday playing is still a burning one and, although in many clubs it is permitted if the players act as their own caddies, there is a tremendous section of the population which regards the Sunday golfer as one disregarding the Sabbath.

Great was the excitement throughout England Monday when the reports of the premier's Sunday golfing were read, and the nonconformist conscience, which has been a bane to many Liberal premiers, was touched to the quick.

The Liberal electoral organizers at Westminster at once realized that if Sunday golfing by their leader was to be added to their other responsibilities the results in the general election were a foregone conclusion.

Mr. Asquith was telegraphed to and promptly replied the report was erroneous, and thereupon the news agencies and newspapers were asked in hot haste to kill the story on the wing

The form in which the contradiction was sent out was unfortunate, as it suggested that the whole story of Asquith's play was incorrect. Those responsible for its publication stuck to their guns, and excitement ran high until it was ascertained that what Mr. Asquith wished to deny was that he had played golf on Sunday.

It was Saturday afternoon that he had a game.

King Edward has just hac an experience of a similar kind. On his return from Marienbad, before going to Doncaster, the king paid a visit to the Marlborough club. This is the only club in which his majesty retains active membership, though of recent years he has been rarely seen there. His one time favorite corner in the smoking room has always been reserved for him, and even his favorite chair.

Once a year he makes a point of dining at the Marlborough, and the Sunday after his return from Marienbad was this year elected for the occasion. The dinner was served for four, and afterwards the party sat down to bridge.

Now, King Edward likes his loyal subjects to know what he is doing, and instructions were given that a paragraph was to be communicated to the press relative to his majesty's visit to the Marlborough club.

It happened that the person who framed the paragraph mentioned that after the dinner his majesty had played bridge. It was just upon midnight when one member of the royal circle, possibly it was the king himself, noticed the unfortunate circumstance that the bridge playing had been mentioned. Telephones were called into requisition and special messengers dispatched to Fleet street, and after a considerable flurry the item was deprived of its dangerous addendum.

BALKY HORSE LOSES PRIZE

Joliet, Ill.—Ten thousand people who gathered on the farm of John H. Lumbard, near Wolf's Crossing in Will county, the other day saw William Fairweather capture the plowmanship of the world. The contest between Fairweather and Alvin Stark, who won the prize last year, was close, but at a critical moment one of the three horses driven by Stark balked and the prize was Fairweather's.

The annual plowing match is the great event of the year among the farmers of northeastern Illinois, and a long procession of automobiles, carriages, wagons and conveyances of every description reached the Lumbard farm until the roadway for a distance of two miles from the farmhouse were crowded with vehicles.

The contestants in the post-graduate class began the work of turning the furrows in the half acres assigned them. Straight as the traditional shortest distance between two points they seemed to follow the line, and their admirers looked on with breathless interest as each one slowly and carefully held to the course.

Washington.—The United States stands lowest in the list of those bidding for the importation of cotton goods into Siam. It sent only $303 worth of goods to that country in 1907-1908, according to Vice-Consul Carl C. Hansen, at Bangkok. Great Britain had the majority of the trade.

Senator Lost in a Canyon

Was Without Water and Had Practically Abandoned Hope of Escape from Prison.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Lost in a canyon on San Clemente island, with no water and but little hope of being found by other members of his party, United States Senator Flint spent seven unpleasant hours the other day.

San Clemente lies 35 miles oceanward from Catalina. The party had an excellent time fishing, tramping, exploring the Indian mounds, etc. They started on one of these expeditions, and when returning Senator Flint saw what he thought was a short cut to camp He tried it. He soon found himself working down the narrow run-away of a deep canyon. He was not long in reaching the bottom of the gorge. The sides rose almost straight. He turned to go back, but found that he could not. The canyon walls were of decomposed granite.

Senator Flint tried to work his way back, but fell and rolled 50 feet, sustaining many bruises, but fortunately escaping severe injuries. His only way out was to keep straight on down, He turned his steps. It was desperately hard work, creeping over the edges of dry waterfalls, sliding from one grade to another, and making way down the canyon bed. Just as he was about to give up in despair, he saw the ocean before him. He scrambled down the last 100 yards and came out on a small, sheltered part of the beach.

Finally a fishing-boat hove in sight. The castaway senator took off his coat and waved it as a token of distress. At last he attracted the attention of the fishermen who rescued him.

Birds Killed by the Wires

Paris.—In the present era of life at high pressure, when the network of telegraph and telephone wires is continually claiming more space overhead, little attention is paid to the fact that the wires prove a real obstacle to the feathered tribes.

Along the railways particularly the wires are sometimes so numerous and so close to one another that they resemble an immense snare extending over long distances. Flocks of quail in migratory flight and coveys of young partridges just trying their wings dash into the wires as into a net, and the birds fall to the ground, not owing to an electric shock, as is commonly supposed, but simply stunned or killed by collision with the wires.

This fact is so common that formerly and perhaps at the present time in Algeria, where the railways toward the south are still few and where goods are transported by periodical caravans following the tracks indicated by the telegraph posts, the merchants carry no provisions of meat, but trust to finding sufficient game along the route.

The Saint-Hubert club of France, which has collected approximate statistics relative to these misdeeds of the telegraphic wires, has even requested the minister of public works to cause the wires to be arranged in horizontal planes and not one above the other, as at present.

But it has not been found practicable to accede to this request, as the incessant and rapid extension of the telegraphic system would lead to the superposition of [illegible] constitute a similar obstacle to the flights of the birds. It must therefore be concluded that there is little hope of remedying the cynegetic evils of the game-destroying telegraph wires.

French Exports to United States.

Paris.—French exports to the United States have increased rapidly under the new tariff. The total for August shows an increase of 76 per cent. over that of the same month in 1908. The greatest increase was in hides, which are being rushed over to America in such quantities as to alarm French manufacturers. They fear America may monopolize the tanning industry and oblige them to import their leather.

TEXAS HUNTS ANTS

Federal Scientist Searching for Species from Argentine

Pests Are Pronounced Vicious and Are Proof Against Means Generally Used to Destroy Insects—Multiply Very Rapidly.

Galveston, Tex.—Dr. Delos Van Dine of the bureau of entomology, United States department of agriculture, is in Galveston on an ant-hunting expedition. Dr. Van Dine is associated with the southern field crop insect investigation, under the direction of W. D. Hunter, in charge of the laboratory at Dallas, and is in charge of the department of insects affecting sugar cane and rice.

Dr. Van Dine is searching for a special kind of ant, said to be very destructive, and which has been imported into the country from Argentina, and hoping and praying he might not find it It is known that these ants have got a foothold in Louisiana and other states, even as far west as California, and the government is anxious to eradicate them as quickly as possible.

It is believed these ants, which in general appearance differ very little, if any, from other ants found in this country, got into this country through fruit and other shipments imported from Argentina.

Dr Van Dine has just completed a tour of the sugar-cane and rice-growing sections of Texas and is on his way to the Louisiana fields. Incidentally he is searching for this new ant, but so far has not discovered any in Texas, even though they are in large numbers in the sugar-cane section of Louisiana and in New Orleans are doing considerable damage.

The department requests samples of all kinds of ants found in Galveston sent to the government entomological bureau at Dallas. Just kill a few ants and mail them in a small box to this address, and the experts will examine them and find out if any of the Argentine specimens are among them. They may be found, if here, in the restaurants, hotels and homes.

This ant drives out all other ants, some of which are beneficial insects. It also forms alliances with the mealy bug and plant lice and protects these most destructive insects, which destroy sugar cane, rice and other crops. These Argentine ants are vicious things, which destroy the good insects and protect and encourage the others. These insects multiply rapidly and are wonders in the ant family.

It is said that insect powder, germicides and other insect destroyers have no terror for these Argentine ants, and that they can bridge many obstacles heretofore said to be impregnable against ant invasions. For instance, the water vessels in which the legs of tables are set do not deter these ants. When an army of Argentine ants invades a home and finds the cupboards and tables surrounded by vessels containing water the commander of the ant army simply decrees that a sufficient number of insects be killed to form a bridge, over which the living army crosses the water and invades the tables or sideboards.

Now that the ant has invaded this country and promises to continue pillaging and destroying crops, Uncle Sam is anxious to find some way of wiping out the entire family. With this end in view, one of the greatest experts in this country on ants is now experimenting under the direction of William Newell, in charge of the crop pest commission in Louisiana. It is said the known poisons that destroy or drive away the ordinary ant have no effect upon these tough-skinned revolutionists from the South American republic, and something more effective will have to be invented to wipe them out.

Gossip has a thousand tongues—and they all work overtime.

Would Find Use for It.

After a day and a night spent in answering telephone calls from people who wanted the latest news from Peary and Dr. Cook, the secretary of one of the arctic clubs had retired for a well-earned rest, when the persistent 'phone bell rang again. A voice at the other end said:

"What ambulance?" roared the irate secretary.

"Why, the one you sent for."

"I sent for no ambulance."

"You lie!"

The secretary gasped, then he screamed into the 'phone:

"Send it as soon as possible, and you come over, too, and I'll send you back in it!"

Laundry work at home would be much more satisfactory if the right Starch were used. In order to get the desired stiffness, it is usually necessary to use so much starch that the beauty and fineness of the fabric is hidden behind a paste of varying thickness, which not only destroys the appearance, but also affects the wearing quality of the goods. This trouble can be entirely overcome by using Defiance Starch, as it can be applied much more thinly because of its greater strength than other makes.

And He Suffered.

Little Willie, suffering from an attack of toothache, had paid his first visit to the dentist, accompanied by his mother. Father, on his return from the office that evening, was naturally much interested.

"Didn't it hurt?" asked father.

"Sure, it hurt," replied Willie.

"Weren't you scared when the dentist put you in that big chair and started all those zizz-zizz-zizz things?"

"Oh, not so much."

"That was a brave boy. But, surely, you suffered?"

"Of course I suffered. But I just kept repeating over and over the golden text we had in Sunday school last Sunday."

"The golden text? What was it?"

"Why, 'Suffer little children to come unto me,'" replied Willie, glibly. "I kept saying that over and over to myself, and the first thing I knew it didn't hurt any more."

Afraid of Ghosts

Many people are afraid of ghosts. Few people are afraid of germs. Yet the ghost is a fancy and the germ is a fact. If the germ could be magnified to a size equal to its terrors it would appear more terrible than any fire-breathing dragon. Germs can't be avoided. They are in the air we breathe, the water we drink.

The germ can only prosper when the condition of the system gives it free scope to establish itself and develop. When there is a deficiency of vital force, languor, restlessness, a sallow cheek, a hollow eye, when the appetite is poor and the sleep is broken, it is time to guard against the germ. You can fortify the body against all germs by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It increases the vital power, cleanses the system of clogging impurities, enriches the blood, puts the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition in working condition, so that the germ finds no weak or tainted spot in which to breed. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients printed on its outside wrapper. It is not a secret nostrum but a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION and with a record of 40 years of cures. Accept no substitute—there is nothing "just as good." Ask your neighbors.

GREAT HARVEST CARNIVAL

We will celebrate the great crops we have had by having a huge Carnival Sale on mostly everything in our store. This immense sale will commence on Saturday, October 16, and will continue till October 26—ten days of bargain giving such as Red Lake Falls never saw before. No real sale ever lasted that long, no such general reductions on all goods in a store were ever given. We want all the people of this county to get acquainted with our immense stock of goods and participate in the great values we will give during this sale. Don't fail to attend this sale and there will be enough bargains to go around. If you peruse this ad carefully you will not fail to see that this is a chance to make your money go further than usual. You can save from 10 per cent to 50 per cent of your good money at this sale. We have made tremendous cuts on merchandise that is not strictly up to the minute. People who are not overly particular about style but want to double the purchasing power of their dollars will do well to come to this sale. This does not by any means mean that only out of date goods will be offered. The reductions will be on mostly eveaything, but certain goods will be cut deeper than others.

CITY ELECTION IS NEAR AT HAND

Theo. Garceau Will Not be a Condidate for Office of Mayor.

Several Candidates for Some of the Other City Offices.

The city election occurs the second of next month and the citizens of the city are begining to show an interest in local political affairs and there will be interesting contests for some of the city offices. However, there will be no contest for the office of mayor. Theo. Garceau, a number of whose friends had suggested that he be a candidate, has decided that he will not run. There will be no opposition to the reelection of mayor J. A. Duffy.

Two Aldermen at large are to be elected and there are four candidates for the places. H. H. Hennemuth and Thos. Crompe are candidates for reelection. The new men in the field are Jos. Salley and Theo. Majeras.

Geo. F. Hennings will probably be elected alderman from the first ward without opposition. He is a candidate for the office and no one has yet shown a desire to oppose him.

Fred Borchers, alderman from the second ward and president of the city council, is a candidate for re-election. He is opposed by a strong man. Sam E. Hunt is a candidate for the office.

There are two candidates for the office of city treasurer. Ovide Emard is a candidate for re-election and he is opposed by E. G. Buse. Both candidates are making active canvasses.

The adoption of amendments to the city charter in the recent special city election makes the office of city assessor elective and there are three candidates for the place—Rufus Poirier, Chas. Kruse and Anthon y Deforge.

Judge Swanson is to have a manoply of the business in the city's matrimonial department. He is the only candidate for city justice.

THE BAND WILL PLAY

Will Give a Fine Concert at the Metropolitan Opera House Friday Night.

The first indoor band concert of the season will be given at the Metropolitan opera house Friday evening. Director Brunelle has arranged a fine program and there should be a large attendance at the concert. The program is published on another page of this issue. Red Lake Falls people are proud of their band. They can give expression to that feeling by attending the concert. You will enjoy the good music and the presence of a good crowd will encourage the band boys.

FOR NATURALIZATION

Judge Watts Will be Hire Nov. 8 to Consider Petitions

Judge Wm. Watts will be in Red Lake Falls on Monday, Nov. 8, to consider the petitions of those who have made applications for naturalization. A number of residents of the county have filed applications with the clerk of court and these people should bear the date in mind.

PAY YOUR TAXES

Penalty Will Attach if You Delay Long

Those tax payers of the county who paid one half of their taxes last spring must pay the other half befor Nov. 1 if they would avoid paying a penatly of ten per cent. This statement will not interest those who did not pay the first half for the penalty has already attached. However, those who have not paid any part of their taxes should remember that an additional penalty of ten per cent will attach Jan. 1 1910, if not paid by that time.

CHANGE AT BIJOU.

Messrs. Wander & Lemieux Purchase From C. H. Barr.

C. H. Barr, who has conducted the Bijou theater since last May, has sold the fixtures in the building to Messrs. Wander and Lemieux. The new proprietors have installed their picture machine and expect to put on a show tonight. Mr. Barr left this afternoon for Staples where he will open a show house.

Martz is Busy.

Last Saturday County Surveyor C. H. Martz with a crew of two men arrived at High Landing to survey out the routes and take the levels on the lines for the four county ditches petitioned for and ordered surveyed and viewers appointed at the last meeting of the County Board. They have not been able to do much this week on account of the heavy wind and having to wait for some of their supplies to be brought up on the boat. He expects it to take them about two weeks longer to make the survey of the four different ditches petitioned for.—Eleven Towns

TOOK GOOD GAME FROM THIEF RIVER

Local High School Foot Ball Team Too Fast for Thief River Falls Boys.

It was a good game of foot ball that was played on the local grounds Saturday afternoon between the Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls high school teams. While the Red Lake Falls boys clearly outplayed their opponents it was a close enough game to be intensely interesting.

Within five minutes of play Red Lake Falls scored a touchdown, and the superiority of the local team was apparent from the first. At no time did it seem possible that the visitors could pull out a victory. Thief River Falls played difefensive game nearly all of the time. Thirty and twenty five minute halves were played and for less than five minutes of time were the visitors aggressive. They pulled off a clever fake play and that with a few line plunges advanced the ball about thirty yards, but they lost the ball on downs and there was nothing more to it. During a greater part of the time Red Lake Falls had the ball in Thief River territory and on a number of occasions came near scoring touchdowns. Garceau made a run from the center of the field for a touchdown after getting the ball on a fumbled forward pass by Thief River. But the referee called the play back, a decision that was "bad." In the last minute of play Garceau carried the ball over again, but the play was called back and time was up with the score 5 to 0 and the Red Lake Falls boys the winners.

Thief River Falls played old style foot ball and but for their two heavy men who made some have through the line would not put up much of a game. Red Lake Falls played a fast open game and made long gains around the end and with the forward pass.

Saturdays victory puts Red Lake Falls in the running for the valley championship. Wayne Richardson, the Thief River Falls coach, officiated as referell. N. T. Nason was umpire and Prof. Hess of Thief River Falls and Chas Baurdon were time keepers.

Saturday evening the visitors were tendered a banquet at the high school building by the high school students and high school faculty.

Dairy Development

M. J. Cort, a creamery supply salesman, says that throughout northwestern Minnesota the output of the creameries is 40 per cent over last year, and with warm weather and good pasturage, such as prevails, the percentage of increase will be 50 per cent before the end of the year. In many creameries the output has been sold for over 6 cents a pound more than was received on an average last year. This gives some idea of the tremendous rate of advancement of the industry in this section.—[illegible] Falls Journal.

LAFOLLETTE FORGOT PRESIDENT TAFT

Denounced Cannon and Aldrich but Said Nothing About President Taft.

Temperance People Have Politicians Doing a Guessing Contest.

St. Paul, Oct. 19.—Admirable as Senator LaFollette's lecture as delivered here in St. Paul, it contained some notable omissions and inconsistencies. For instance he lost no convenient opportunity of denouncing Cannon and holding Aldrich up to obloquy, but he had no word of criticism for President Taft who endorsed Aldrich and dragooned Minnesota and other congressmen into line for Cannon. The fact is that President Taft is just as responsible as is Cannon for the tariff he declares to be the best ever passed by a republican congress, for, when, through the president's influence, Cannon's election was insured, any other kind of tariff revision except that approved by standpatters was out of the question. Then while LaFollette vigorously opposed ship subsidies, he recommended Clapp who voted for them in violation of his pledges to the confidence of his audience.

BACK TO FIRST PRINCIPLES.

These, however, were mere flaws which scarcely marred an otherwise admirable discourse. Only the boldest outline of it can be given here. It was a plea for representative government to the men of the present to bring back the government to what the fathers designed it to be, and to transmit to posterity in its integrity a government of the people, by the people and for the people. Clearly in Senator LaFollette's view the government which imposed on the people the exactions of the Payne tariff law is not a government representative of the people. Senator LaFollette attributes what he considers to be the fact that our governments, municipal, state and national, are not representative of the people largely to the evils attendant upon the development of our business and industrial system. The abuses follow and the result from the organization of capitalistic combinations, especially those known as mergers. By a close combination of these, a few men, Mr. LaFollette gave their number as fourteen, practically control all financial, transportation and indusfrial activities national in scope in the country, and controlling these and through the banks and the federal treasury the money of the country, control and modify legislation for the benefit and in the interest of the great combinations and not for the benefit and in the interest of the people. Thus we have tariff legislation in the interests of the manufacturers, transportation legislation or the lack of it in the interest of the railroads, banking legislation in the interest of the banks and so on down the line. Each of these abuses Mr. LaFollette likened to a tree. His purpose was not to attract attention to any one of them especially, but rather to so picture them to the mind's eye that it might be seen what a forest they make.

OPTISMISTIC VIEWS.

Senator LaFollette is not fearful that in time this forest may not be cleared. He realizes, however, that it is a big job. The American people are equal to insist on the men they elect representing them and them only. All that is necessary is to bring back the government to where the fathers started it and keep it there. The people can do this whenever they choose to exercise their power. If they are negligent about this; if they fail to take that active part it was designed by the constitution in the government of their country, they must expect that others will exercise the powers and privileges of which they failed to make use. To the extent that this happens popular government is a failure.

THE LAFOLLETTE PROGRAM.

Senator LaFollete ridiculed the contention that the Payne law is a substantial compliance with the pledges on the republican platform. He denounced ship subsidies as a steal to fatten a trust in which the big fourteen are interested. He promised to fight to the last ditch Aldrich's central bank plan which is designed to put in the hands of a combination of capitalists who control the banks the money of the people to be used in speculation. LaFollette was deadly in earnest about everything. He was full of his subject. He had given it such exhaustive study that the question with him was evidently not so much what he would say next, but what he could most profitably refrain from saying. As it was he kept his audience in their seats until a quarter after eleven, interested every minute, enthusiastic all the time, occasionally bubbling over with applause and at the end indulging in three cheers for the great Wisconsin commoner.

NERVOUSNESS IN THE SECOND

Later developments seem to indicate that the contest for the republican nomination for congress in the second district will be confined to Senator Putnam and Mr. Ellsworth. The indications are that Mr. McCleary during his recent pilgrimage found little to encourage him to make the race. Mr. Dinehart is not anxious to go up against Hammond to make a fight for the privilege, and has decided to await a more convenient season for breaking into congress.

TIED TO TAWNEY'S MACHINE.

In the first district they don't appear to find it an easy matter to get a republican insurgent candidate to make a stand against Tawney. At one time T. H. Kelly of Owatonna thought he would like to try conclusions with Tawney, but it is understood that after looking the ground over he concluded that it was a good deal of a proposition. The fact is that down there Tawney has managed to get most all the men otherwise eligible for nomination tied up to him. Possibly some one will be found later, maybe Knatvold who tried it before, or Hurley of the Albert Lea Tribune or some one else. Brown of Winona and Senator Cashman of Owatonna are spoken of as possible democratic candidates. In the present state of public opinion either of them could be elected without difficulty.

REPRESENTATIVE SPOONER GETS BUSY.

In the seventh district there has really been quite a little doing. Representative Spooner is known to have been looking the ground over, to have

SALOONS RAIDED

Carrie Nation is Only Second Rate Hatchet Manipulator.

The saloons at Mahnomen, Waubun and Callaway were raided last week by federal authorities and it was a raid in comparison with which a Carrie Nation performance looks insignificant. A lot of officers of the United States Indian bureau armed as formidably as a man of war walked into the saloons at Mahnomen and carried the laughing water to the nearest gutter and turned it loose to flow gracefully down the village street. The four saloons at Mahnomen were treated impartially. The people at Waubun and Callaway were notified to be on the lookout for the raiders, but it was too late, for other officers were doing stunts at those villages.

At Mahnomen the federal authorities submitted to arrest after completing their job and were taken to Crookston and locked up in the county jail charged with malicious destruction of property. They have since been released on habeas corpus writs and the case will be fought out in the courts to determine whether the Indian bureau has authority under an old Indian treaty which it it is claimed covers the case to order the saloons closed. The determination of the question will also determine whether the order that the Cass county saloons close their doors is to be effective.

ANNUAL FAIR AT ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH

Ladies of the Church Making Arrangements For The Big Event.

Will Be Three Days Fair, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday Nov. 2, 3 and 4.

The date has been set and the ladies are making arrangements for holding the annual fair. The fair will be held at the church for three days, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 2, 3 and 4, and will be conducted about as last year. During the three days of the fair many articles of value will be on display at the church and will be offered for sale and during the entire time the fair is being held the ladies will serve meals at the church. The fairs have in the past had a big patronage and no doubt this year's fair will be no exception. The funds to be raised are for the benefit of St. Joseph's school, which no doubt in a measure accounts for the general interest taken in the success of the fair.

Basket Sociable

There will be a basket sociable at Terrebonne next Tuesday evening, Oct. 26, for the benefit of St. Anthony's church. All are invited to attend.

ENFORCE TREATY

SPECIAL INDIAN AGENT BRANDT DECLARES HE HAS WRITTEN EVIDENCE.

A PENITENTIARY OFFENSE

Mahnomen Raiders Bound Over To Grand Jury—Case Hinges On Validity of Indian Treaty.

Mahnomen, Minnesota.—William E. Johnson, who led the raid on the saloons here this week, and nine of his Indian service policemen were bound over by Justice Schulind on the charge of destroying property maliciously.

The applications for the release of W. B. Johnson and his nine lieutenants, now in jail at Crookston, Minn., will be made by Assistant Attorney Oakley before the federal court in St. Paul. Mr. Oakley will apply for writs of habeas corpus.

Have Saloon Books.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Unless the saloonkeepers in the White Earth reservation lie down and be good, quit business and clear out, government agents assert they have ample evidence to send dozens of retailers, and even wholesalers, to the penitentiary, and that they will do it.

J. P. Brandt, special Indian service officer, with headquarters in Minneapolis, who returned from the White Earth reservation, driving twenty-five miles to Detroit, and taking the train there to avoid arrest, said today that the government will certainly proceed in this way unless the law is obeyed.

"We seized books and invoices in the saloons," said Mr. Brandt. "In the saloonkeepers' own handwriting we have a list of more than 150 Indians who owe them money. More than that, we took samples of the liquors destroyed and confiscated, and under the law we can proceed against the wholesalers.

"We were acting under orders from William E. Johnson to defend ourselves if necessary," said Mr. Brandt. "After the work was done, arrest was not objected to. T. E. Brents, another special officer, and myself escaped it because Mr. Brents had some important court work on in Iowa, and didn't want to be held up. Mr. Brents led the raid at Waubon."

Mr. Brandt said the notice to saloonkeepers in Cass county, above township 138, expires Oct. 17, and that unless the saloons are closed promptly, the federal forces will undoubtedly make a similar move there."

The treaty of 1855, under which William E. Johnson, special officer of the Indian bureau of the United States interior department, made his raids and has been tested in the supreme court of the United States and upheld.

Its constitutionality was brought into question in 1879 by the late Cushman K. Davis, when he was United States district attorney. He had caused the arrest of a man at Crookston for selling liquor to Indians. The case became famous as the "forty-three gallons of whisky" action.

The saloonkeepers who have been selling liquor to the Indians claim immunity under a decision of the supreme court of the United States, in the matter of Heff, filed April 10, 1905. This was an action started in the United States circuit court of Kansas, following the arrest and conviction of John Brown, a Kickapoo Indian, for selling liquor to others of his tribe.

But the supreme court of the United States held forbidding the sale of liquor to Indians law unconstitutional because in 1887 the congress enacted a law providing for the allotting of lands in severalty to Indians, and this law distinctly took the Indian out of the apron strings which had tied "Poor Lo" to the government, and made him a citizen of the United States, subject to its laws and with all the privileges accorded any citizen.

UNCLE SAM'S DOUBLE WEDS.

Age Was No Bar To Courtship And Marriage.

Buffalo, Minn.—After a courtship of about a year, George Washington Eagy, aged 71, a pioneer settler of Annandale, Minn., and Mrs. Alice Babcock, aged 60, bade defiance to old age and were married at the home of the bride's daughter, Mrs. George McClintle, Minneapolis. The aged couple will make their home in this city, where Mrs. Eagy has a small candy and stationery store on the high school grounds.

Looking so much like "Uncle Sam," that he is often called upon to play the role in patriotic demonstrations in this vicinity, Mr. Eagy has lived near Maple Lake and Annandale for nearly fifty years.

7 BOYS BURNED BY GASOLINE.

Soak Powder In Oil and Apply Match With Disastrous Result.

Minneapolis.—Touching a lighted match to a gallon can of gasoline-soaked powder resulted in a fierce explosion in front of 635 Seventh Ave. No., in which seven small boys of the neighborhood were frightfully burned. Four are at the city hospital, three more are at their homes, and two of those at the hospital may die.

PRESENTS SILVER SERVICE

New York.—Standing in front of the great aft 12-inch turret of the battleship Minnesota, Miss Rosemarie Schaller, of Hastings, Minn., as the official representative of her state, presented to that battleship what is said to be the most magnificent silver service ever given to an American warship. Four years ago Miss Schaller had broken the bottle of wine on the bow of the giant fighter as she left the ways and she became the first woman in the navy's history to officially represent a state in making the customary presentation of a silver service to a new warship.

Miss Schaller, a tall, graceful girl, dressed in white and wearing a large hat covered with white plumes, made a pretty picture as she faced Commander William S. Sims, of the battleship, to whose custody as the representative of the navy department, the service was intrusted. The blue-jackets were massed on the top of the turret and on the bridge behind Miss Schaller while she was speaking, and when she had ended the sailors cheered uproariously for the girl whose picture has held the place of honor in the captain's quarters of the Minnesota since she went into commission over two years ago.

The late Governor Johnson, of Minnesota, was to have accompanied the Minnesota delegation to New York had he lived, and Miss Schaller's little speech of presentation was largely a eulogy of the dead executive of her state, to whom, with tears in her eyes, she referred as one who had forever entrenched himself in the hearts of Minnesotans."

More than 300 guests were present. Captain Hugo Osterhaus, commanding the second division of the Atlantic fleet; Commander Sims, Flag Lieutenants Berry, Lieutenant King, Captain Osterhaus' aid, and Lieutenant Commanders W. K. Harrison, O. P. Jackson, I. C. Wettengel and R. I. Curtin received the guests on the after-deck of the battleship.

The silver service of fifty-six pieces had been placed on an onyx table and covered with a large American flag that was not removed until Miss Schaller had been introduced. Behind Miss Schaller, as she spoke, was a stand of colors that were also presented to the ship by the state, whose name she bears. Commander Sims himself was not forgotten, and when the ship presentations were over, J. Harry Lewis, of St. Paul, presented the commander with a gold cigaret case.

WANTS DOCKS AND LEVEES.

Speaker Urges Importance of Landings On Waterways Convention.

Winona, Minn.—"To stimulate the growth of commerce along the river is the object of this association," said Congressman J. J. Esch, of La Crosse, one of the principal speakers of the Upper Mississippi River Improvement Association Convention.

"We can restore river navigation and will do so by continually appealing to congress and making our appeals so strong and convincing that they will not be able to resist. There should be a definite amount appropriated annually. Another way we can aid the project after the appropriation is received is by installing proper terminals and other facilities which are necessary if we wish to compete with the railroads, such as docks and warehouses."

Mr. Esch also urged that some action be taken looking to the improvement of the present navigation laws. The address of the Wisconsin congressman summed up the object of the organization and was delivered in a forceful manner before the 200 delegates who had assembled for the afternoon session.

University Instructor Holds Class In Drama On River Banks.

Minneapolis, Oct. 11.—George Norton Northrop, of the English department of the University of Minnesota, is meeting his classes in modern drama under the oaks on the Mississippi river bank.

Many of the students have cast longing eyes out of doors during the golden weather of the last week and Mr. Northrop acted accordingly.

Seated about the sward, their gaze bent upon the ripples and waves of the Father of Waters, the students listen to Mr. Northrop's dissertations and mark references in their books.

That the system has proved a good one has been shown in the improvement in recitations and the zest with which the students attack the latter day exponents of the drama.

Big Fire Loss At Langby.

Crookston, Minn.—The town of Lengby in the extreme eastern part of Polk county, sustained a fire loss, estimated at $25,000. The A. G. Lillo general store and warehouse, a saloon and several residences were destroyed.

Mill City Mills Hard At It.

Minneapolis.—Minneapolis mills made 480,120 barrels of flour during the last week, a big increase over the production of 353,975 barrels in the corresponding week last year and of 327,935 two years ago. All the mills are in operation.

The greatest production of record was in October, 1905, when weekly runs of 471,000 and 474,000 barrels appeared in two instances. The Northwestern Miller reports a condition of activity warranting expectation of a new record production this fall.

PRESIDENT ACCEPTS RESIGNATION OF NEWLY APPOINTED MINISTER.

SAYS HE IS VERY SORRY

Wires Crane From Arizona That He Stands by the Demands of Secretary Knox for Commission Issued Him.

Washington, Oct. 14.—All doubt as to what action the president would take with respect to the resignation of Charles R. Crane, minister designate to China, was dispelled by the receipt this morning of a dispatch from President Taft addressed to his secretary, Mr. Carpenter, directing him to convey to Mr. Crane the announcement of the fact that the resignation had been accepted.

"Convey to Mr. Crane the following communication:

"I concur in the letter, under date of Oct. 12, which the secretary of state has addressed to you and I greatly regret that the circumstances found to exist by him make it necessary for me to accept your resignation.

(Signed) "Taft."

Peking, Oct. 14.—The Japanese legation today laid before the Chinese government and also gave to the native and foreign press, the explanation of Secretary of State Knox for the recall of Charles R. Crane, United States minister designated to China.

The incident impresses the government as unfortunate and has revived the feeling among Chinese officials that the only hope of national security rests in the co-operation of the powers.

IMMEDIATE AID NEEDED.

Key West, Fla., Oct. 14.—Immediate assistance from the outside world is necessary to carry on the work of cleaning up the city and caring for the victims of the hurricane of last Monday. Mayor Fogarty today announced that the city was forced to suspend work because of lack of funds.

Great distress and suffering is reported among the employes of the large tobacco factories which suffered heavily by the storm. Hundreds are on the point of starvation, it is declared.

Today the only work in progress is being carried on by private corporations and large shipping interests. Many streets have been left impassable, filled with wreckage of houses and uprooted trees. Sewers are broken and clogged throughout the city and unless they can be repaired very shortly an epidemic is feared.

MAY NOT BE TRIED.

Sheriff Says Mrs. Arbogast Is Mentally Unbalanced.

St. Paul, Oct. 14.—Sheriff William A. Gerber doubts whether Mrs. Louis Arbogast ever will be placed on trial for the murder of her husband, Louis Arbogast, the West Seventh street butcher, who was found dead in his bed last spring. Her mental condition, the sheriff thinks, will preclude the possibility of a trial.

Sheriff Gerber says:

"Physically, Mrs. Arbogast is in fine condition, but mentally she is almost a wreck. I do not believe when the court sees her real condition, it will permit her to stand trial. I believe that Mrs. Arbogast has been in practically the same mental condition for at least twenty years, and I am informed that for several years, callers at the Arbogast home have not been permitted to see her."

NEWS NOTES CONDENSED.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—Two convicted murderers, Thomas Willis, a negro, and Stanley Nazarko, a Slav, were hanged in the Luzerne county prison here today.

Philadelphia.—Dr. Cook, the arctic explorer, arrived here today from Buffalo, where he will be the guest tonight at a dinner given to the National Hardware association.

Big Stone Gap, Va.—Under peculiarly spectacular circumstances a Methodist revival came to a close at Pennington Gap, when a number of volumes of Robert G. Ingersoll's works were publicly burned.

Grand Canyon of Colorado.—The air at this altitude was crisp and cool and Taft looked forward to his day of rest and sightseeing with the greatest possible pleasure.

Winnipeg, Man.—The last spike in Section F of the National Transcontinental railway was driven yesterday afternoon near Wabigon river. This is the government line connecting Winnipeg with the Head of the Lakes.

San Antonio, Texas.—Ten trains, one hundred and seventeen cars, left San Antonio this morning for El Paso bearing United States troops, stationed at Fort Sam Houston, who will pass in review before President Taft and President Diaz when they meet Saturday.

TRIED TO ROB BANK.

Two Robbers Frightened Away From Shakopee Minn., Bank.

Shakopee, Minn., Oct. 14.—Two robbers made a bold attempt to rob the First National bank in this city this morning between 12 and 1 o'clock. They were frightened away by a light in the room of D. W. Daye, a dentist, living on First street directly across from the bank and by the approach of the night watchman. They escaped and the police have no clue.

There was about $20,000 in the vault of the bank and had the robbers been undisturbed they undoubtedly would have reached the cash.

HISTORIC VIRGINIA HOMESTEAD

House Where George Washington's Mother Lived and Died at Fredericksburg Still Standing.

Washington.—Not many tourists visit the house in which the mother of George Washington lived and died in Fredericksburg, Va. The Washingtons, or the branch of that large Washington family which played so great a role in American history, left the Pope's Creek's farm, later called "Wakefield," in Westmoreland county, about three years after the birth of George Washington. The family removed to another Washington farm in Stafford county on the north bank of the Rappahannock river, opposite Fredericksburg. It was there that much of the boyhood of Washington was spent. It was there that the mythical exploits of chopping down the cherry tree, etc., were performed.

Where Mother of George Washington Died.

After George Washington and his brothers had left this farm and after the marriage of Betty Washington to Maj. Fielding Lewis of Fredericksburg, Mrs. Mary Washington bought a cottage in Fredericksburg, close to "Kenmore," the home of her daughter, and resided there many years. She died in that cottage August 25, 1789.

The cottage is a plain two-story frame dwelling standing at the corner of Charles and Lewis streets—two village streets, deep in dust or mud according to the weather. The house is heavily shaded by old sycamore trees and is furnished with Washington and other Virginia relics. It is owned and cared for by the Society for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities. The superintendent is R. C. Beals, who, with his wife, occupies the house.

The big living room on the ground floor and to the left of the entrance is that in which Mrs. Washington died. As nearly as possible it is preserved as Mrs. Washington kept it. A rare old mahogany tester bed stands on that part of the floor where stood Mrs. Washington's bed. The original bed is owned by a member of the Washington family. The walls are lined with steel engravings which belonged to Mrs. Washington, and some of these were her property when she was Mary Ball; before her marriage to Augustine Washington, and came from her girlhood's home, "Epping Forest," in Lancaster county, about thirty miles from Fredericksburg. The room in the rear of this living and sleeping room was the dining-room and the same table around which the Washingtons ate stands in the middle of the floor. The dining-room is bare of carpets or rugs and was in Mrs Washington's time. The furnishings are plain and simple.

HEADS BANKERS' ASSOCIATION

Lewis E. Pierson, President of Big New York Financial Institution, Honored by Chicago Convention.

Chicago.—Lewis E. Pierson, president of the Irving National Exchange bank of New York, was unanimously elected president of the American Bankers' association at the convention recently held in this city.

President Pierson is 38 years of age and a native of Metuchen, N. J. He was appointed cashier of the New York National Exchange bank in 1898 and subsequently was made vice-president. He assumed the presidency January 12, 1904, at the age of 33 years. The New York National Exchange bank absorbed the Irving National bank in 1906, and Mr. Pierson retained the presidency of the enlarged institution.

Concerning the Eskimo.

The Eskimo is affable, brave and loyal. He speaks a language which is highly inflected—many primitive people do—and has certain rudimentary ideas of a warm and habitable heaven and a cold and cheerless hell. And in knowledge of ways and means to fight cold, ice and darkness and wrest subsistence from a frozen desert he leads all other children of the north and south. But he lives his life in a realm of ideas incalculably remote from civilization. Peary tells of a tribe of less than 100 people [illegible]

SIMPLY AN ARCTIC OUTING

Two Eskimo Lads That Accompanied Cook Claim That He Never Left Sight of Land According to Peary.

New York, Oct. 13.—The carefully prepared evidence which Commander Peary has been compiling ever since his return from the north and with which he hopes to annihilate Dr. Cook's claims to having reached the pole, was made public here today. The statement and a map have been copyrighted by the Peary Artic club.

Cook's Answer to Charge.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 13.—Dr. F. A. Cook, the Artic exporer, arrived here this morning from Cleveland. In the midst of a heavy storm he went directly to his hotel.

"I can only say that the actual living human witnesses of my journey to the pole will themselves be able to disprove the distorted declarations put into their mouths by the statements issued by Commander Peary," said Dr. Cook today to the Associated Press.

"There could not be better testimony than that given by the men themselves before an unbased body of inquirers. Commander Peary evidently regards their evidence as of the most profound importance and so do I. It seems to me that he might have brought them along with him if he was so confident that they would corroborate his story. He, however, chose not to do so. I will therefore send for them as soon as possible and place them at the disposal of any scientific or other body that may desire to examine them with the aid of any competent interpreter, whom the examining body may appoint."

CELEBRATE N. D. BATTLE.

Beautiful Shaft is Unveiled at Whitestone.

Monango, N. D., Oct. 13.—The beautiful granite shaft, commemorating the great battle of Whitestone, fought Sept. 3, 1863, by General Sully and his little frontier army against the murderous Sioux hordes who had been trailed from the horrible massacre at New Ulm, Minn., and vicinity, was unveiled on Whitestone battlefield today.

A great crowd gathered at the battle field early this morning, coming from all the surrounding towns and the country districts of this neighborhood and many coming from a distance to witness the historical event. The statue was unveiled by a daughter of Colonel Wilson of the Sixth Iowa volunteers, one of the officers of Sully's army.

Gov. John Burke was the principal speaker of the day. He reviewed the historical event which the statue commemorated and paid a tribute to the bravery and loyalty of the soldiers who gave their lives in the terrible Whitestone battle. Pres. J. H. Worst of the North Dakota A. C., and a number of others also delivered addresses.

A number of the surviving members of General Sully's army were present on the spot where over forty-six years ago they fought the redskins and where they left twenty of their comrades dead on the field.

TO ASK TAFT'S PARDON.

Friends of Convicted Banker to Make an Appeal to President.

New York, Oct. 13.—A petition asking President Taft for clemency toward Charles W. Morse, the former banker, is being prepared for circulation among the prominent business men and financiers of the east.

Morse's attorneys are striving to have the United States supreme court grant him a new trial, but in case of defeat an executive pardon will be his only means of escape from the sentence of fifteen years imprisonment recently affirmed by the federal circuit court of appeals.

Austin, Tex.—An express train on the Houston & Texas Central railroad which left here at 8:30 this morning for the west, ran into a burning bridge near McNeil. Several coaches were wrecked. Four passengers are reported killed and a number injured.

Washington—The court of appeals today failed again to render a decision in the contempt case against Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor, the general understanding, however, is that a decision will be handed down within the next day or two.

Barcelona—Prof. Francisco Ferrer, the Spanish educator and convicted revolutionist, was shot today. The execution was done at the Fortress of Montjuich where the prisoner had been confined since his condemnation by courtmartial.

PEARY REFUTES THE CLAIMS OF EXPLORER COOK

ISSUES LONG PROMISED STATEMENT IN NORTH POLE DISPUTE.

GIVES STORY OF THE ESKIMOS

The Statement Is Signed by Peary, Bartlett, McMillan, Borup and Henson of the Roosevelt Party—Eskimo Boys Closely Questioned by All.

(Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1909, by the Peary Arctic Club, in the office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, D. C.)

New York, Oct. 12. — The following statement of Commander Robert E. Peary, which he submitted, together with the accompanying map, to the Peary Arctic club in support of his contention that Dr Cook did not reach the north pole, is now made public for the first time The statement and map have been copyrighted by the Peary Arctic club

INTRODUCTION BY PEARY.

Some of my reasons for saying that Dr. Cook did not go to the north pole will be understood by those who read the following statements of the two Eskimo boys who went with him, and who told me and others of my party where he did go. Several Eskimos who started with Dr. Cook from Anoratok in February, 1908, were at Etah when I arrived there in August, 1908. They told me that Dr. Cook had with him, after they left, two Eskimo boys, or young men, two sledges and some twenty dogs. The boys were I-took-a-shoo and Ah-pe-lah. I had known them from their childhood. One was about eighteen and the other about nineteen years of age.

On my return from Cape Sheridan and at the very first settlement I touched (Nerke, near Cape Chalon) in August, 1909, and nine days before reaching Etah, the Eskimos told me, in a general way, where Dr. Cook had been; that he had wintered in Jones Sound, and that he had told the white men at Etah that he had been a long way north, but that the boys who were with him, I-took-a-shoo and Ah-pe-lah, said that this was not so. The Eskimos laughed at Dr. Cook's story. On reaching Etah, I talked with the Eskimos there and with the two boys and asked them to describe Dr. Cook's journey to members of my party and myself. This they did in the manner stated below.

(Signed) R. E. PEARY.

Signed Statement of Peary, Bartlett, McMillan, Borup and Henson, in Regard to Testimony of Cook's Two Eskimo Boys.

The two Eskimo boys, I-took-a-shoo and Ah-pe-lah, who accompanied Dr. Cook while he was away from Anoratok in 1908 and 1909, were questioned separately and independently, and were corroborated by Panikpah, the father of one of them (I-took-a-shoo), who was personally familiar with the first third and the last third of their journey, and who said that the route for the remaining third, as shown by them, was as described to him by his son after his return with Dr. Cook.

To go more into details: One of the boys was called in, and, with a chart on the table before him, was asked to show where he had gone with Dr. Cook. This he did, pointing out with his finger on the map, but not making any marks upon it.

As he went out, the other boy came in and was asked to show where he had gone with Dr. Cook. This he did also without making any marks, and indicated the same route and the same details as did the first boy.

When he was through, Panikpah the father of I-took-a-shoo, a very intelligent man, who was in the party of Eskimos that came back from Dr Cook from the northern end of Nansen's strait, who is familiar as a hunter with the Jones Sound region, and who has been in Commander Peary's various expeditions for some fifteen years, came in and indicated the same localities and details as the two boys

Then the first boy was brought in again, and with a pencil he traced on the map their route, members of our party writing upon the chart where according to the boy's statement, they had killed deer, bear, some of their dogs, seal, walrus and musk oxen.

The second boy was then called in and the two went over the chart together, the second boy suggesting some changes as noted hereafter

During the taking of this testimony it developed that Dr. Cook had told these boys, as he told Mr. Whitney and Billy Pritchard, the cabin boy, that they must not tell Commander Peary or any of us anything about their journey, and the boys stated Dr. Cook had threatened them if they should tell anything.

They, with Dr. Cook, Francke and nine other Eskimos, left Anoratok, crossed Smith's Sound to Cape Sabine, slept in Commander Peary's old house in Payer Harbor, then went through Rice strait to Buchanan bay. After a few marches Francke and three Eskimos returned to Anoratok.

Dr. Cook, with the others, then proceeded up Flagler bay, a branch of Buchanan bay, and crossed Ellesmere Land through the valley pass at the head of Flagler bay, indicated by Commander Peary in 1898, and utilized by Sverdrup in 1899, to the head of Sverdrup's "Bay Fiord" on the west side of Ellesmere Land.

Their route then lay out through this fiord, thence north through Sverdrup's "Heuerka Sound" and Nansen strait.

On their way they killed musk oxen and bear, and made caches, arriving eventually at a point on the west side of Nansen strait (shore of Axel Helberg Land of Sverdrup), south of Cape Thomas Hubbard.

A cache was formed here and the four Eskimos did not go beyond this point. Two others, Koolootingwah and Inughito, went on one more march with Dr. Cook and the two boys, helped to build the snow igloo, then returned without sleeping.

(These two Eskimos brought back a letter from Dr. Cook to Francke, dated the seventeenth of March. The two men rejoined the other four men who had been left behind, and the six returned to Anoratok, arriving May 7. This information was obtained not from the two Eskimo boys, but from the six men who returned and from Francke himself, and was known to us in the summer of 1908, when the Roosevelt first arrived at Etah. The information is inserted here as supplementary to the narrative of the two boys.)

After sleeping at the camp where the last two Eskimos turned back, Dr. Cook and the two boys went in a northerly or northwesterly direction with two sledges and twenty-odd dogs, one or more march, when they encountered rough ice and a lead of open water. They did not enter this rough ice, nor cross the lead, but turned westward or southwestward a short distance and returned to Heiberg Land at a point west of where they had left the cache and where the four men had turned back.

After being informed of the boys' narrative thus far, Commander Peary suggested a series of questions to be put to the boys in regard to this trip from the land out and back to it.

Did they cross many open leads or much open water during this time? Ans. None.

Did they make any caches out on the ice? Ans. No.

With how many sledges did they start? Ans. Two.

How many dogs did they have? Ans. Did not remember exactly, but something over twenty.

How many sledges did they have when they got back to land? Ans. Two.

Did they have any provisions left on their sledges when they came back to land? Ans. Yes; the sledges still had about all they could carry, so they were able to take but a few things from the cache.

From here they went west across the ice, which was level and covered with snow, offering good going, to a low island which they had seen from the shore of Helberg Land at Cape Northwest. On this island they camped for one sleep.

From this island they could see two lands beyond (Sverdrup's Ellef Ringnes and Amund Ringnes Lands). From the island they journeyed toward the left-hand one of these two lands (Amund Ringnes Land), passing a small island which they did not visit.

The above portion of the statement of the Eskimo boys covers the period of time in which Dr. Cook claims to have gone to the pole and back, and the entire time during which he could possibly have made any attempts to go to it.

If it is suggested that perhaps Dr. Cook got mixed and that he reached the pole, or thought he did, between the time of leaving the northwest coast of Helberg Land at Cape Northwest, and his arrival at Ringnes Land, where they killed the deer, we must then add to the date of Dr. Cook's letter of March 17th, at or near Cape Thomas Hubbard, the subsequent four or five sleeps at that point, and the number of days required to march from Cape Thomas Hubbard to Cape Northwest (a distance of some sixty nautical miles), which would advance his date of departure from the land to at least the 25th of March, and be prepared to accept the claim that Dr. Cook went from Cape Northwest (about latitude eighty and a half degrees north) to the pole, a distance of five hundred and seventy geographical miles, in twenty-seven days.

After killing the deer they then traveled south along the east side of Ringnes Land to the point indicated on the chart, where they killed another deer.

They then went east across the south part of Crown Prince Gustav sea to the south end of Helberg Land, then down through Norwegian bay, where they secured some bears, but not until after they had killed some of their dogs, to the east side of Graham Island; then eastward to the little bay marked "Eid's Fiord" on Sverdrup's chart; then southwest to Hell's Gate and Simmon's peninsula.

Here for the first time during the entire journey, except as already noted off Cape Thomas H. Hubbard, they encountered open water. On this point the boys were clear, emphatic, and unshakable. They spent a good deal of time in this region, and finally abandoned their dogs and one sledge, took to their boat, crossed Hell's Gate to North Kent, up into Norfolk Inlet, then back along the north coast of Colin Archer Peninsula to Cape Vera, where they obtained fresh elder duck eggs. Here they cut the remaining sledge off, that is shortened it, as it was awkward to transport with the boat, and near here they killed a walrus.

From Cape Vera they went on down into the southwest angle of Jones Sound, where they killed a seal; thence east along the south coast of the sound, killing three bears at the point noted on the map, to the peninsula known as Cape Sparbo on the map, about midway on the south side of Jones Sound. Here they killed some musk-oxen and, continuing east, killed four more at the place indicated on the chart, and were finally stopped by the pack ice at the mouth of Jones Sound. From here they turned back to Cape Sparbo, where they wintered and killed many musk-oxen.

After the sun returned in 1909 they started, pushing their sledge, across Jones Sound to Cape Tennyson; thence along the coast to Clarence Head; (passing inside of two small islands not shown on the chart, but drawn on it by the boys), where they killed a bear; thence across the broad bight in the coast to Cadogan Fiord; thence around Cape Isabella and up to Commander Peary's old house in Payer Harbor near Cape Sabine, where they found a seal cached for them by Panikpah, I-took-a-shoo's father. From here they crossed Smith Sound on the ice, arriving at Anoratok.

BIRDS LOYAL FRIENDS OF COUNTRY PEOPLE

They Kill Insects That Destroy Our Crops and Their Songs Are Delightfully Sweet and Cheering.

An Insect Destroyer on Its Nest.

There is no sweeter sound around the farmhouse than the notes of summer birds. Birds are welcome visitors and true and appreciated friends. To be without them, life loses much of its charm and beauty; to have their company, life cannot help but be cheery and orcharding and gardening a success. Birds bring us both pleasure and profit. They cheer us with their songs. They kill insects that destroy our crops. The amount of good they do in both ways can scarcely be over-estimated. Even the hated English sparrow does more good than it does harm. A single pair in one day, with a nest of young, will carry off and consume several hundred cabbage caterpillars. How many other harmful insects they destroy during the course of a summer, no one knows. Since stringent quail laws have gone into active effect in so many states, and quails have increased in numbers, chinch bugs have practically disappeared from the face of the country, with a saving of millions of dollars each year in grain crops. Quails may not be wholly responsible for all of this good, yet it is positively known that they destroy countless numbers of the noxious bugs each summer.

Birds will stay about a home if they are given encouragement. The best encouragement is an abundance of trees and shrubs for them to hide and rest in. Most of our common birds nest in low bushes, or the lower branches of trees. A few nest on the ground. If there are trees and shrubs about the home the birds will surely come and make these their home. If they are not disturbed they will return to this retreat from spring to spring after their annual winter visit to the southland.

Cats and birds do not get along well together. Or rather, birds do not feel comfortable in the presence of cats. Cats, however, have no objection to the presence of birds. If you want the confiding presence of birds, you must not keep cats. It is a simple question of choice. Cats will not only kill and eat both young and old birds, but frighten them away in trying to catch them. Throwing stones or shooting at them will result in driving them away.

Birds are wild animals and naturally timid, yet by giving them natural protection and nesting places in the form of trees and bushes, they will come and stay near the dwelling house. The house wren has nested season after season on the writer's front porch and has sat on a vine and sung within three feet of the newspaper he was reading. Nearly all birds that come about the place will become almost as tame as poultry if they are not disturbed in their natural activities and are made to feel that they will not be harmed. Avoid quick and threatening movements in their presence. If a robin alights near you on the lawn to look for a worm, either stand still or walk straight ahead about your business and it will not be alarmed.

On the north and west sides of our home grounds we have an abundance of trees and shrubs, some places in dense masses. In these from a dozen to twenty different kinds of birds nest each summer, and other dozens come as frequent visitors. Their twitterings are heard all day long in summer, and in early morning in May and June they fill the air with their chorus song, greeting the coming day with the sweetest music. We should not care to live in a home not surrounded with shrubs and trees filled each spring and summer with our friends, the birds.

A Dainty Morsel for the Youngsters.

GUINEA FOWLS NICE EATING

The guinea fowl is one of the wildest of all farm poultry, yet it has enough domestication in its nature to make a good home fowl. Being wild by nature, they wander over wide areas and hide their nests and they will practically raise themselves. They will not thrive under close confinement.

Owing to the guinea fowl hiding its nest, its egg crop does not amount to a great deal, but the raising of the fowl costs so little that they are almost clear profit, and they are highly prized as a meat animal by those who are fond of gamey flavor of meat. The flesh is rather dark, but fine grained and tender, possessing an exquisite gamey flavor, and the eggs, though rather small, are much relished on account of their rich taste. The demand for guineas is said to be good in the larger cities for restaurant trade and is increasing rapidly as epicures become acquainted with the good qual[illegible] cacy of flavor approaching that of wild game, especially that of the prairie chicken, with perhaps the guinea being the more tender and juicy of the two, and when young it is far superior to any other bird for frying or broiling.

The feeding of the young guinea birds is about the same as for young turkeys. When they are about three weeks old they are given free range, when they are able to care for themselves. The birds are very valuable in the destruction of noxious insects on the farm, catching grasshoppers especially in great numbers.

Have a Settled Plan.

It is a poor plan to be continually changing one's policy. Select some particular line and make it work out successfully, says the Orange Judd Farmer. Do not allow yourself to be too easily discouraged. There is no crop but that has its enemies, in some sort of insect or fungous growth; but because of this we cannot stop growing the crop—the enemy must be met and conquered; and so with livestock. Disease may creep in or we may have made some mistake in management that has caused us more or less loss, but should we give up that branch of husbandry on that account? Certainly not. Get a better hold. Profit from your own past experience, as well as from that of others, determined to succeed and there is little doubt but that the problem will work out right.

Whatever branch of husbandry is taken up must be carefully studied if he would make the most of it, let it be the growing of potatoes or the caring of livestock. The farmer can learn something new all the time if he will keep his eyes open, study and ask questions of those who have had experience in similar lines.

Be "Forehanded."

Begin now to prepare the Christmas gifts which there is such pleasure in making. A little work when chatting on the porch these lovely days may be at hand and much accomplished in odd moments. The popular Irish crochet in lace insertion or edge is always acceptable, or the pretty, dainty, little jabots are still much in favor.

One of the prettiest of lunch cloths is made of several rows of double hemstitching with the space between each row filled with the pretty feather-stitching. Then one may have a spray of French embroidery in two corners and the initial just far enough up to lie in sight on the table when the cloth is spread.

Very beautiful effects are made with the lace braid that has a thread which draws up, doing away with the tedious overhanding. A very handsome dolly may be easily made of this kind in two afternoons, the knotted lace thread being used.

The little individual towels embroidered with the initials make a very welcome gift.

The Dutch collar may be easily made, looking much like the expensive ones in the shops. Buy the imitation crochet lace insertion and edge and stitch it on with the machine. It really looks like the real lace and wears well.

Lucanian Eggs.

Slice five hard cooked eggs into eights, lengthwise, lay into a buttered baking dish, alternate layers, with one cupful of cooked macaroni, one and three-fourths cupfuls of white sauce, one-half cupful of grated cheese, salt, pepper and anchovy essence for seasoning. Finish with buttered crumbs and bake in a hot oven until the crumbs are brown.

Ginger Snaps.

Take one cupful of sugar, one cupful shortening, one cupful of molasses, one egg, one teaspoonful of soda and ginger, one tablespoonful of vinegar; mix with enough flour to roll them and bake in a quick oven.

WHAT will not woman, gentle woman dare,
When strong affection stirs her spirit up?"
—Southey.

"Man may be the head of the family, but far better than that, woman is the heart of it."

Pressed Beef Flank.

Wipe, remove superfluous fat and roll a flank of beef. Put in a kettle, cover with boiling water and add one tablespoonful of salt, one half teaspoonful of pepper corns, a bit of bay leaf and a bone or two which may be at hand. Cook slowly until the meat is in shreds; there should be but a little liquor in the kettle when the meat is done. Arrange the meat in a deep pan, cover and press with a heavy weight. Serve cold, thinly sliced.

Bed Making.

Bed making is an art. One should be as careful and painstaking as possible for an illy-made bed cries out at you in every wrinkle. The metal bed is the most sanitary. They may be expensive or not, as the purse permits. Then have a good, easy spring for we spend one-third of our lives in bed, and let it be a comfortable one. Next, a good, comfortable mattress made in sections, so that it may be easily handled, and turned at least once every other day. The sheets should be long enough to tuck in well at the bottom and turn over a good quarter of a yard, or half is better, at the top of the bedding. The subject of the length of sheets was considered of enough importance to warrant a bill being presented to a state legislature to compel hotels to furnish six-foot sheets. A long sheet, if an under one, may be folded under the mattress at the head and foot, so keping it from pulling and wrinkling. This is a very important item in the making of a sick bed. A long upper sheet, after being generously tucked in at the bottom, leaves the half yard to fold over the blanket and comforter, thus keeping them clean.

In putting on the blankets in making a bed, when they are double ones in one piece, place the open ends at the head so that one may be thrown back if the covering seems too heavy.

Bed making is said to be the best exercise for a sluggish liver, as the stooping and swaying of the body calls into action those unused muscles.

OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE FALLS CITY

$1.00 Per Year in Advance

The Hibbing Tribune has commenced a daily issue. Those range towns are growing some.

A newspaper man in Renville county by way of introduction, remarks that he intends to make his paper one of the scintillating stars of journalism. A star that doesn't scintillate isn't much good, anyway.

One good fight still remains in William Randolph Hearst and he will try once more to be elected mayor of New York on the Independence League ticket. A man with millions and determination can make his presence felt but Willie may as well prepare to say his prayers. The Tammary tiger will swallow him, boots and all, this time.

John R. Walsh, the Chicagoan who made and unmade himself, now at the age of 70 is trying to keep from going to states prison. Rare men by comparison even with successful men are those who are masters of themselves and know when to quit; the men who exercise eternal vigilance in their combats with their enemies, and that fickle jad, fortune. The speculator no less than the critic needs to bear in mind Pope's admonition: "Be sure your self and your own reach to know; how far your genius, taste and learning go."

The Ackley (Iowa) World says that the public feeling over the death of Governor John A. Johnson shows once more that it is better to be a millionaire in manhood than it does to be a millionaire in purse. The young men of the country will do wisely to make note of the fact. As a general thing it is up hill work; the world doesn't always respond nor seem to be taking notice, but it is just the same, and the boy who is so constituted that he has the nerve to climb and stick in the face of all obstruction, is sure to win honor. By his own self-respect he will win the admiration of those about him; they may appear indifferent, but the time and occasion comes when the good record and the certain sacrifices will be amply rewarded. Don't forget it or mistake it.

Time was, and that quite recently, when the reckless way in which our railroads killed and maimed passengers was a reproach to the roads and made traveling unsafe. But of late a most welcome change. Last year several roads did not kill a single passenger although the number carried amounted to very many millions. This fact shows a greater efficiency in service, a higher regard for the safety of passengers, and a better equipment with safety appliances. In no small degree this improvement is also due to the enactment and enforcement in some states of salutary laws.

"I had always heard that New Englanders were 'smart,'" a young physician who has "graduated" from a village practice remarked the other day, according to Lippincott's, "but I hardly thought it developed at such an early age. Just after I settled in Dobbs Corners a 12-year-old boy called on me one evening. 'Say, Doc, I guess I got measles,' he remarked, 'but nobody knows it 'cept the folks at home, an' they ain't the kind that talks if there's any good reason to keep quiet.' I was puzzled and I suppose I looked it. 'Aw, get wise, Doc,' my small visitor suggested. 'What will you give me to go to school an' spread it among all the kids in the village?"

At the recent convention of advertising men in Louisville, says the St. Louis Times, one of the delegates who lives in the West told a story of having met a man from New York. "Where are you from?" inquired the New Yorker. "Los Angeles," said the man from California. "Oh, I see," exclaimed the Empire State inhabitant. "So you're from the West. Well, I've been West some myself. Now, last year I was out as far as Cleveland and stopped a while at Pittsburg. I was all around the West." "Is that so?" said the man from Los Angeles with a great show of interest. "Well, I was up East myself not so very long ago. I was in Denver and Salt Lake City and all around. It's strange we didn't meet.

Senator Knute Nelson in his opening address at the state fair gave some very good advice to farmers which will be taken seriously by many of the soil tillers. The senator said he believed that in most cases the farmer's boy who abandons the farm for the city life makes a mistake. "A few succeed," he said, "but the majority fall by the wayside and regret their entrance into the vortex of over-crowded city life. Farmers, the remedy for this is largely in your own hands. You must make farm labor and farm life more pleasant and attractive. You must give the boys shorter hours and more holidays. Give them an ample everyday education and supply them with books, magazines and newspapers. Do not route them out of bed before sunrise and make them work until dark. Give them good board and good clothes.

Senator LaFollete in his Weekly of October 2d, pays the following eloquent tribute to the late John A. Johnson:

"The passing of Gov. John A. Johnson marks the untimely end of a notable career. Born in obscurity, raised in distressing poverty, denied the schooling that is the right of every American boy, burdened early in life with the responsibility of family provider, yet this man by diligence and ability, coupled with a rugged personality and a loveable disposition, rose step by step to a position of commanding distinction. His life was full of achievements; his future seemed rosy with promise. The whole nation joins with Minnesota in mourning his loss.

According to an announcement from St. Paul there are no private banks in the state of Minnesota. The last private bank in the state, the Security Bank of Pipestone, has incorporated as a state bank. The capitalization is $25,000. Three years ago the legislature passed a law providing that word "bank" could only be used by state or national banks. In accordance with the law, the private banks of the state have gradually come into the fold as state banks until the bank at Pipestone was the only one remaining.

The temperance people are getting into poltics in earnest. They expect to capture the next republican state convention and force a county option plank in the platform. While it is improbable that the prohibition wing can gain control of the party, it would not be surprising if they elected from three to four hundred delegates, and if they make good their threats to bolt in the event their demands are not acceded to, there'll be trouble to burn in the next campaign.

The young ladies of Mankato operated the street cars for a whole day last week in the interest of charity, and the beaux of the city are out of change.

TAFT'S TARIFF SPEECH.

LeSueur News: Taft was here and is now away. The concensus of opinion in Minnesota is that he is a failure. His Winona speech will not swallow even with water. If he is a great statesmen he can not fool all of the people all of the time.

Sauk Rapids Sentinel-Free Press: In his Winona speech President Taft made a particular plea for the high duty on cotton goods that the "infant" cotton industry of the East might be protected. "Sixty-six per cent dividend," sounds like a pretty yell from a grown-up, not to say infant—and that's what these same cotton manufacturers got last year. Can you measure your profits in those figures, Mr. Farmer? No, your profits, or a lot of them, had to go to make tht 66 per cent for the cotton manufacturers.

Foley Independent (Rep.): President Taft's Winona speech does not seem to meet with that measure of commendation which its author undoubtedly looked for. To say the least, it was lacking in tact and was not worthy of our chief executive. Mr. Taft has demonstrated that he is not to be absolutely relied upon when it comes to a crisis and we await with interest and impatience Mr. Roosevelt's opinion of the man upon whose shoulders he placed his mantle.

North Branch Review (Rep.): Even the big Eastern papers see that President Taft made the biggest mistake of his life in indorsing the course of Tawney and the other standpat congressmen and are predicting that it will be impossible for him to retain the votes of the people of the West. It not only means a loss of votes for Taft, but it is not at all unlikely that the next congress will be ruled by a democratic majority.

Really, though, Minnesota people were bunkoed by Taft. They had expected a social call from the national head, but received instead a partisan visit from a party head who spoke for party purposes, plead for party solidarity, defended an iniquitous party tariff measure and claimed in effect that party welfare is all important. It is true that national politics and policies demand national parties, but to place the welfare of party before that of the people is astounding and that Taft or any other president should do so is doubly astounding.

consulted his friends and to have felt of the attitude of leading democrats. While Volstead is an insurgent, he was of the milk and water kind, having previously voted for Cannon and the orignal Payne bill. Spooner has long cast an envious eye on his seat and considers the present an auspicious time to go after it. Too bad about Volstead, too. I understand that he wanted all the time to vote against Cannon and the rules, but allowed himself to be persuaded by Senator Clapp and President Taft that party solidarity was more to be desired than loyalty to his consitution.

A DISTURBING ELEMENT

There is the very deuce to pay by reason of the activity of the anti-saloon league. It threatens to make county option the issue of the republican convention and is acting as if it meant business. There is no reason to doubt that if it sets the right way to work, it can bring into the republican convention between three and four hundred county option delegates, possibly a majority. No one can tell what will happen if the temperance people really get stirred up. Given a bunch of delegates like that with such old warhorses as Jacobson, Heatwole, Young, Rachie and Youngdahl to lead and marshal them there's going to be something doing every minute.

CHANGING FRONT.

That's what the politicians are afraid of, for there's no denying that they are deadly afraid of county option. But they see they've got to reckon with it, and the railroads and the Steel Trust also see that they've got to trim their sails to meet the varying winds. Heretofore these interests have formed a close combination with the liquor people. They're beginning now to think the bargain isn't a very good one, and that an alliance with the temperance forces would suit their purposes a whole lot better if it could be arranged anyway. Indeed just now the brewery crowd are not in very good odor and are being slammed all around.

AFTER THE BREWERS.

Among other candidates for governor are beginning to look at them sideways. I understand that even Bob Dunn has soured on Dar Reese and his friends, and that he has about reached the conclusion that a nomination once secured the support of the saloons does a man more harm than good. The prospect of those temperance delegates in the convention is wonderfully convincing in such matters.

ON THE GROUND FLOUR.

I understand that some candidates have already concluded that it's up to them to get in on the ground floor. Ed. Young, of course, was with the county option people all the time—at least since a year ago. Jacobson is making a bee line into the fold with revenge in his heart against the interests who last time gave him a dirty deal. But what is one to say when it is known that William E. Lee of Long Prairie has about concluded that the party should stand for something and have some principle to fight for, and that even the governor is beginning to lose faith in the sources of political strength on which Senator Smith and Dar Reese rely. There are some queer things happening these days. For instance Representative P. H. McGarry of Walker has come out flatfooted for county option. Incidentally, McGarry is credited with having W. E. Lee's gubernatorial boom in his keeping, and everyone who knows McGarry knows that he is a hustler from away back.

LOTS OF TRIBULATION.

Don't worry about the republicans not having troubles of their own. Never believe that Eberhart is going to get away with the nomination without a struggle. The wheels are already beginning to move, and in a month or so there will be more gubernatorial candidates than you can shake a stick at. Moreover these will include practically the entire state contingent, not a man among whom hasn't this minute a lightning rod piercing the political azure.

SELLING LIQUOR TO INDIANS.

The fact that the federal government found it necessary to send its agents into Minnesota to suppress an illegal traffic in intoxicating drinks is occasioning a good deal of comment. What, is it asked, has the attorney general been about that he permitted the violation of law of which all the evidence indicates he was fully aware? Indeed I learn that so far as the saloons at Mahnomen are concerned the attorney general was consulted before they were open, and he advised those interested to go ahead. Since they have shut down I learn that the attorneys for the brewing companies have displayed a surprising zeal for law and order. They, too, are going to co-operate with the federal government in enforcing the law. It is surprising how close the views of the lawyers employed by the liquor interests now coincide with those of the attorney general, especially in view of the fact that the traffic grew up and flourished with their knowledge but without a word of protest from them until the federal authorities interfered to protect the wards of the government?

S.S.S. CURES MALARIA

Malaria is due to impurities and poisons in the blood. Instead of being rich, strong and healthy, the circulation has become infected with germs of disease which destroy the rich, red corpuscles that furnish nourishment and strength to the body, and reduced this vital fluid to such a weak, watery condition that it is no longer able to keep the system in health, or ward off the countless diseases and disorders that assail it. The loss of these red corpuscles takes the color and glow of health from the cheek, and we see pale, sallow faces and washed out, chalky complexions among the first symptoms of Malaria. But Malaria is a general systemic disease, and as the blood becomes more heavily loaded with its germs we have more serious and complicated symptoms; the impure blood having its effect on all parts of the body. The appetite fails, digestion is weakened, chills and slight fever are frequent, and the sufferer loses energy and ambition because of a constant tired-out and "no account" feeling. The lack of necessary nourishment and healthful qualities in the blood causes boils and abscesses, skin affections, and in some cases sores and ulcers to break out, and sometimes the patient is prostrated with a spell of malarial fever which may leave his health permanently impaired. To cure Malaria both a blood purifier and tonic are necessary, in order to remove the cause and at the same time build up the system from its weakened and run-down condition. S. S. S. is the medicine best fitted for this work. It is the most perfect of all blood purifiers, and the purely vegetable ingredients of which it is composed make it the greatest and safest of all tonics. S. S. S. goes down into the circulation and removes every trace of impurity or poison, and at the same time gives to the blood the health-sustaining qualities it needs. It cures Malaria thoroughly and permanently because it removes the germs and poisons which produce the disease, and while doing this tones up and strengthens every part of the system. When S. S. S. has cleansed the blood the symptoms pass away, the healthy color returns to the complexion, the old tired, depressed feeling is gone, and the entire health is renewed. Book with information about Malaria and any medical advice free.

During 1900 I was running a farm on the Mississippi river and became so impregnated with Malaria that for a year I was almost a physical wreck. I tried a number of medicines recommended as blood purifiers, chill cures, and Malaria eradicators, but nothing did me any good until I began to use S. S. S. The result was that after taking it for awhile I was as well and strong as I ever was. I have never had a chill since nor the slightest symptom of Malaria. I hope others will be benefited by my experience, and with that end in view I give this testimonial, knowing that S. S. S. is the best remedy for Malaria.

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a stupefying poison. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—a little late though—Congress says "Put it on the label, if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good! Hereafter for this very reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure

Tickling or dry coughs will quickly loosen when using Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is so thoroughly harmless that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to use nothing else, even for very young babies. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing and mountainous shrub give the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. It calms the cough, heals the sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Accept no other. Sold by all dealers.

It's a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the heart and kidneys. That is all wrong. A weak stomach means weak stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the heart and kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping stomach heart and kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure so soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by all dealers.

VALUE OF BARNYARD MANURE

Minnesota Farmers' Institute Circular No. 16 By A. D. Wilson.

Barnyard manure is undoubtedly one of the most valuable by products of the farm. It is almost an absolute necessity on the farm if the soil is to be maintained at a high state of productivity. At a conservative estimate six to ten loads of barnyard manure applied to a cornfield, the corn crop followed by a grain crop and seeded to grass, left one or two years in grass then plowed and sown to grain, will produce enough more during the four or five years following the application of the manure to return from $2.00 to $3.00 per ton on the manure applied.

It is essential, if crops are to be removed year after year carrying with them a part of the plant food stored in the soil, that some steps be taken to replace the plant food removed.

Manure not only adds plant food directly to the soil, but it also aids in liberating portions of the mineral plant foods, as potash and phosphoric acid, that are in the soil in an available form.

The three elements of plant food liable to become exhausted in most soils are nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, nitrogen may be easily supplied to the soil by growing clover and other legume crops. Manure adds nitrogen and potash, and some phosphoric acid, but its chief function in regard to the two latter elements is to assist in liberating the stores of these elements locked in the soil.

Phosphoric acid and potash are found in most Minnesota soils in quantities sufficient to produce a hundred or more ordinary crops. Plant food that is soluble, that is dissolves in water as will sugar, cannot remain in the soil in large quantities because it is carried out by water flowing through the ground. Hence it is found in an insoluble form in the soil, and the problem of the farmer is to make this plant food soluble while the crops are growing and can use it. Barnyard manure and other vegetable matter when decaying gives off an acid which acts on the surface of soil particles and aids in dissolving small amounts of plant food.

Considering the great value of barn yard manure and the need of it to enrich the partially depleted soils and supply the vegetable matter rapidly used up by corn and grain crops, it seems that more care should be exercised to save in the best possible way the millions of dollars worth of this valuable by product produced every year in Minnesota.

It has been amply proved by experiment that the greatest value is obtained from manure if it is applied directly to the field as fast as it is made.

If it is left in piles about the barn, it decomposes and much of its value is lost as gas and is bleached out by rains. By applying directly to the field and spreading it very little decomposition takes place until it is worked into the soil. Then practically all of the value is retained by the soil and the additional benefit of the decomposition and dissolving mineral plant food is secured.—A. D. Wilson.

GUIDEPOSTS IN FRANCE.

A Striking Feature of the Roads Throughout the Country.

A feature of the roads of France is the ever present guidepost. These guideposts consist of an iron plaque about two feet long and a foot high securely mounted on sturdy posts or fastened to some substantial wall. They are painted in white and blue and show without any possibility of mistake not only the commune or township in which they stand, but the next important place in either direction as well as the distances between all the chief points upon that route. Thus you will find if you are traveling on a road which leads to Paris that the name of the metropolis will appear on the signboard, although it may be several hundred kilometers distant.

In addition to these guideposts the Touring Club of France has put on the chief roads a series of signs and symbols to indicate to motorists and bicyclists what sort of a road they are approaching. The sign "ralentir," which translated into good United States means to "let up," has caused many a motorist who is unfamiliar with the road he is traveling to slow down and to find shortly after the sign had been passed that it was well that he paid attention to it because of a steep grade or some abrupt turn. There is no excuse, in view of the symbols and signboards, for any one motoring in France to get on the wrong road or to come unexpectedly into trouble.—Frank Presbrey in Outing Magazine.

The results of an investigation into the relative proportions of the sexes in litters of pigs is stated as follows by George M. Rommel of the bureau of animal industry:

The number of sows whose litters were reported was 1,477. The number of boar pigs was 6,660, the number of sows 6,625 and the total 12,285. The average per sow was as follows: Boars, 4.51; sows, 4.48; total, 8.99. The figures are mainly for litters farrowed during 1906. In forty-nine cases second litters during the year were reported for the same sows, which somewhat raises the average per sow.

Boars are seen to be slightly more numerous than sows, but for all practical purposes the sexes may be regarded as equal in number at birth. The relative proportion was found to be 1,005 boars to 1,000 sows. Expressed in lowest terms of whole figures, the proportion is 201 boars to 200 sows.

Hog Lore.

Make low down pig troughs. If pigs have to habitually hump themselves to reach their feed they will become humpbacked.

Pigs more than three weeks old should be in the pasture, not in a hog house. Access to fresh earth is essential to their thrift.

Hogs have a way of their own of taking a bath. They wallow in the mud, stand in the sun to dry the mud, then rub it off on a post. It works all right, too, removing scurf and opening the skin pores.—Iowa Homestead.

No Foot, No Hog.

According to my observation, a large number of hogs shown at the state fairs are lacking in bone. Altogether too many of them are down on their dew claws. If I were judge I certainly would never place a premium on a hog that did not stand squarely on his feet. There is an old adage, "No foot, no horse," and it is equally true when it is changed to read, "No foot, no hog," remarks a practical farmer.

THE PROCRASTINATOR.

We dilly dally all the day
In idleness and song,
And then we wonder why it is
We do not get along.
And when the day is at a close
We idle half the night,
And still we cannot comprehend
Why things don't work out right.

We sit serenely in the sun
And whittle on a stick
Or tune our little light guitar
And simple music pick,
And when the day comes to an end
In looking at the score
Discover we are only where
We were the day before.

We make resolves as to our rest
We tumble in at night
That on the day that's just ahead
We'll work with all our might.
And when the morrow comes along
We quite forget to try,
And it resembles to a T
The one that's just gone by.

And so we run our life along
In planning to succeed,
And if we drag a living out
In luck [illegible] are indeed,
And at the end we lay us down
While [illegible] roll away
And [illegible] as the ones

Petition for Public Ditch.

To the County Board of the County of Red Lake State of Minnesota:

The undersigned land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for, the expense of the construction of the County Ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare and the reclamation of wet and overflowed lands require the establishment and construction of a County Ditch along the following described route in the Towns of Kratka and Mayfield in said County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said ditch is as follows: Commencing at the South West corner of Section One (1) and the South East corner of Section Two (2) in Township One Hundred Fifty Two (152) north of Range Forty One (41) west of the Fifth Principal Meridian and following the section line north to the North West corner of the South West Quarter (SW¼) of Section One (1) in said township, and thence in a northwesterly course following the natural water course for about one and one-half miles to the South West corner of the North East Quarter (NE¼) of Section Thirty Five (35) in Township One Hundred Fifty Three (153) north of Range Forty One (41) west, and thence for One Hundred Sixty (160) rods north to the South West corner of the South East Quarter (SE¼) of Section Twenty Six (26) in Township One Hundred Fifty Three (153) north of Range Forty One (41) west and then following the section line for One Hundred Sixty (160) rods west between Sections Twenty Six (26) and Thirty Five (35) in Township One Hundred Fifty Three (153) north of Range Forty One (41) west, and thence in a northwesterly course for about one and one-half miles to a point forty (40) rods north of the South west corner of the North West Quarter (NW¼) of Section Twenty Seven (27) Township One Hundred Fifty Three (153) north of Range Forty One (41) west on the section line between Sections Twenty Seven (27) and Twenty Eight (28) and thence due north to the Red Lake River on the section line between Sections Twenty Seven (27) and Twenty Eight (28), and Sections Twenty One (21) and Twenty Two (22) in Township One Hundred Fifty Three (153) north of Range Forty One (41) west, and terminating at Red Lake river on the section line between Sections Twenty One (21) and Twenty Two (22) in Township One Hundred Fifty Three (153) north of Range Forty One (41) west, as its outlet into Red Lake river.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such County Drainage Ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter Two Hundred thirty (230), of the General Laws of Minnesota for 1905 and acts amendatory thereof.

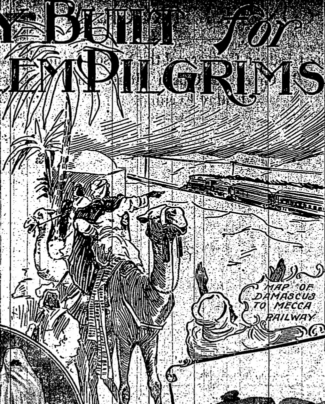
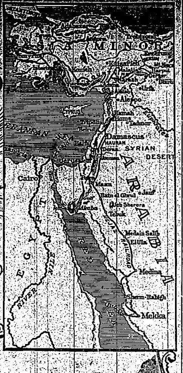
RAILWAY BUILT for MOSLEM PILGRIMS





MAP OF DAMASCUS TO MECCA RAILWAY

THE Damascus to Mecca railroad has many remarkable features which distinguish it from other lines. Its principal object is to provide a means for faithful Moslems to perform their pilgrimage to the holy places of Mecca and Medina with a greater degree of comfort than formerly.

Its inception is due to the initiative of the present sultan, and the enthusiasm created by its first announcement brought in subscriptions from the faithful in all parts of the Islamic world. A special stamp tax forms a solid annual contribution to the expenses, somewhat less evanescent than other contributions may prove to be.

Geographically, the line has provided a means of travel in a country with a fascination of scenery quite peculiar to itself and unlike any other part of the world. Instead of traversing populous countries and great cities, it seems to delight in passing through immense solitudes—through a country peopled mainly by the spirits of the "Arabian Nights," where little surprise would be occasioned in finding a roc's egg in some inhospitable, rocky valley, or in seeing a genie floating in a stream of thin vapor out of a magic bottle.

MOSLEM VILLAGE WOMEN

The line commences at the traditional parting-place of the great pilgrimage, the Bawabet Allah, or Gate of Allah, in Damascus. For the first few miles the line traverses the Hauran, running parallel to the French Hauran railroad. From ancient times this district has been an extremely rich one, and the Romans used it as a granary.

The deep, narrow ravines of the Yarmuk, the ancient Hieroymax, which the line follows in its descent to the Jordan, present several difficulties of engineering successfully overcome. Large numbers of Italian, Montenegrin, Croatian, Greek, and other European workmen had to be employed on the difficult rock cuttings, tunnels, and viaducts of this section.

The Jordan valley, where the line crosses it, is 800 feet below Mediterranean level; but the difficulties of construction cease when the Yarmuk valley has been successfully traversed, and the ascent to the sea is made by easy gradients.

MOUTAKA PILLARS IN ARABIA

South of Deraa the main line soon leaves the richer corn land and enters on upland, undulating country, the land of Easban, producing abundant grazing in the spring. At that season troops of gazelle roam about the country, and the Bedouin, with vast herds of camels, are found close to the line.

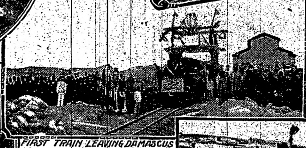
The landscape gets bleaker as the train moves south. The mountains of Moab are passed some distance to the west, and the track is laid far out in the desert, where the valleys are wide and easy to cross, and before they deepen into narrow ravines as they enter the mountains.

The old pilgrim route is followed very closely throughout, and at the stations the stone cisterns and reservoirs, to provide a supply of water to the pilgrims are noticed. Water becomes very scarce; in a few places wells have been dug and water is raised by wind-pumps. For some reason boring for artesian wells does not seem to have been tried. One attempt was made in rocky ground, and when the drills broke no further attempts were made.

As the line approaches Maan an extremely desolate country is traversed. Low ranges appear to the east, apparently of sandstone or limestone formation, although the ground is strewn thickly with black fragments of obsidian along some sections of the line. The ravines now trend eastward, to lose themselves in a wide depression in that direction, as shown in the recent maps of this country by Prof. Alois Musil. Maan is the first point since Amman where water is procurable in any quantity, either from springs in the small town itself or from wells at the railroad station. The place is a large railroad center, with several stone buildings for officials, a small shop for temporary repairs, a hospital, and quite a good hotel—a substantial building, rather small in size. The small town, containing some good stone and mud houses, is not visible from the railroad, but lies beyond a hill nearly a mile off. Two copious springs supply the necessary water.

Date palms are reared; small gardens with various kinds of fruit trees and a few fields of corn are visible, but from a little distance the place is little else than a drab patch on a gray landscape. Its principal distinction is its proximity to the rocky city of Petra, a ride of some eight hours to the west among the Moab hills. The climate of Maan is invigorating, both in winter and summer, as the place stands 3,525 feet above sea-level, surrounded by the dry, invigorating air of the desert.

The principal drawbacks are the severe dust storms. Rain is not uncommon in the spring and then a tinge of green spreads over the landscape. The ancient fortress of Petra and now Maan owe their importance as standing at the gate of Arabia, and forming the last outpost of Syria and western civilization before the long, dreary stages of the northern Arabian journey.



FIRST TRAIN LEAVING DAMASCUS

For countless ages—long before the present pilgrimages—this was the route by which the gold, frankincense, and Arabian products found their way into Syria; but the Suez canal and steamer transport by the Red sea seem to have abolished all, or almost all, trade prospects, and only the pilgrims remain.

On leaving Maan it may indeed be said that all hope of dividend is left behind and the line enters a spirit world without towns or even inhabitants. The stages south of Maan, the old pilgrim route, were the most desolate of all, and the way was always strewn by dead and dying camels as the caravan toiled along. The line crosses a constant succession of small wadis.

Some 50 miles south of Maan comes the most remarkable change in the landscape and the veritable gate of Arabia and the home of the genie is at last reached. The line arrives quite suddenly at the edge of the curious escarpment known as the Batn-el-Ghrul, or the Hollow of the Genie.

From the station of Batn-el-Ghrul, at the top of the descent, the traveler can walk to the edge of the cliff and take in the immense extent of view which unfolds itself to the south. The escarpment is visible for some 20 miles to the east, and is a sheer cliff without, it is said, a single passage of descent. For some 15 miles to the west, also, the escarpment is fairly well defined, until it merges in the high ranges overlooking the Gulf of Akaba. The pilgrim route follows the descent close alongside the line and is from 3,207 feet at the summit to 3,278 at the foot of the escarpment, or 329 feet altogether.

The view from the summit is extremely striking and comprises a great inland depression, walled in by a continuation of the escarpment on the east, and glowing throughout in the most brilliant and striking colors. The prevailing note is bright red and yellow, changing to violet, purple and black, so that every tint except green seems to be supplied. The escarpment is of sandstone, which seems to have worn away in some places to sand-drift of all colors, but principally red and yellow. The spurs of the Telesh-Shahim, which run out parallel to the line, are covered with glistening black rocks, at first sight volcanic, but, as I was told by an engineer, they were really of sandstone blackened by the intense heat of the sun. The depression extends south for a distance of about 120 miles. In this clear, dry air every feature is visible. Inquiries regarding the country to the east gave it as an almost waterless region, although a route does exist from Maan to Jauf along which some scanty wells can be found. Towards the Red sea the district is said to contain a few villages, and a sufficient supply of water from small springs.

An endless series of beautiful mirages unfold themselves as the train toils slowly along these two lines of steel leading through an endless expanse of sand and rocks, varied with an occasional volcanic outcrop raising black-topped hills.

At Tebuk, 430 miles from Damascus, is the first oasis of any size, and here a depot has been formed, at which the railroad can recoup itself before another long strentch of nearly waterless desert is entered and the next depot at El Ula reached. A group of buildings for the employes, a small repairing shop, and a hospital with 60 beds form the principal part of the depot.

Tebuk consists of a group of date palms about a half a mile square, deriving water from a large spring and watched over by another of the masonry forts which mark a pilgrim station. Altogether there were about 60 mud houses, with a few walled gardens belonging to the permanent inhabitants of Tebuk. All that were seen were of a distinctly negroid type, different from the nomad Bedouin. The surrounding country is but sparsely inhabited by Arabs.

Besides date palms, there are in the gardens a few lemon trees and pomegranates, and outside are some few fields of wheat, cultivated principally as green fodder. The Italian engineer in charge of this section had managed to make a garden in the sand, where by means of irrigation he grew most kinds of European vegetables, but none of the inhabitants seemed inclined to copy his example.

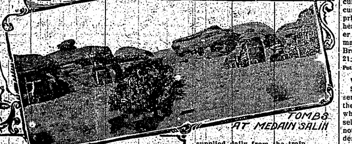
It seems certain that Mohammed visited Tebuk in his earlier wanderings, and tradition refers to Jebel Sherora as the Pulpit of the Prophet, probably from its commanding position overlooking all the surrounding country.

The rainfall in this country is extremely capricious, and perhaps two or even three years may elapse before there is any appreciable fall here, although at Maan there appears to be always some rain in the spring.

Of animal life there appears to be very little. An antelope, which the Turks call a wild cow, but which looks to be oryx beatrix, is to be found in this district, but only in small numbers. The large troops of gazelle seen north of Maan do not roam here. It is said that the ostrich is occasionally found, and the skin of one specimen is preserved in Maan station.

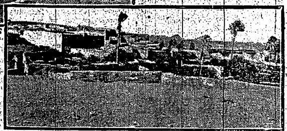
The desert air is extremely dry and clear, always invigorating, and even the great heat in summer is not as insupportable as in a damper climate, where the thermometer is probably lower. Climate has without doubt a great effect on the human character and intellect, and the nervous, high-strung temperament of the Arab is to a great extent the creation of his environment of desert, with its splendid mirages to fire the imagination and sparkling air to keep the nerves always alert.

South of Tebuk want of water is again a great difficulty, and the small posts have to be supplied daily from the train.



TOMBS AT MEDAIN SALIH

At Medain-Salih the valley widens a little, and here are found some rock-cut tombs similar to those at Petra, but far fewer and less ornate. Traces of a town exist, but there is nothing now visible except the usual fort of the pilgrim. Here again, as well as at Tebuk, the site would seem a favorable one for trying artesian wells, but no attempts have been made to prove their success or otherwise.



A CITY IN THE DESERT: MAAN

The permanent way has been laid throughout by Turkish soldiers, but the station buildings, all of very solid masonry, as well as bridges and culverts, of which there are a great number, have been constructed mostly by Italian workmen, with some Greeks and Montenegrins. As many as three or four hundred Italian workmen were employed at one time on the works near Tebuk, and so little did fanaticism come into play that they built the fine new mosque at Tebuk. Subsequently they instructed some Turkish engineers, who continued the work from El Ula to the Holy City itself.

It is difficult to think of this railroad becoming a great highway or developing any great trade with Central Arabia, as the section from Maan to Medina traverses an unproductive country without possibility of development, and the interior of Arabia has no surplus products to dispose of. In any case, when the line reaches the sea, at Sherm Rabigh, it is probable that any trade, either export or import, to Medina or Mecca will pass through that port in preference to the long land journey. The following summary of distances shows the extent of the line:

Damascus to Maan	235 miles
Damascus to Tebuk	430 miles
Damascus to El Ula	609 miles
Damascus to Medina	820 miles
Damascus to Mecca	1097 miles

The gauge of the line is the somewhat curious one of 1.05 meter (3 feet 5¼ inches), which was necessary, when the line was first commenced, to correspond with the gauge of the Beirut-Damascus line, over which the rolling stock had to be brought. The branch to the Mediterranean, at Haifa, was constructed subsequently. The rails were supplied by the American Steel Trust, by a French firm domiciled in Russia, and by the firm of Cockerill in Belgium.

The engineers in charge of sections were also of various nationalities—French, Poles, Hungarians, etc.—while the guiding spirit in the construction has been Meissner Pasha, a very able German engineer. But besides these the general direction has been under Marshal Kiazim Pasha, to whom the greatest credit is due in bringing the line successfully into Medina, and to Hajji Mukhtar Bey, a brilliant Turkish engineer, who has absorbed all modern methods of construction, and completed the last section into Medina without European assistance.

In conclusion, it is difficult which to admire the most, this far-reaching conception of his majesty the sultan—to build the line and thus to further the interests of his religion and bind together the outlying portions of his empire—or the silent, unswerving devotion of the Turkish soldier, who has carried the matter to a conclusion, and who watches without complaint over miles of line through a country almost without water or inhabitants.

New Hair Grown by Cuticura.

"About two years ago I was troubled with my head being scaly. Shortly after that I had an attack of typhoid fever and I was out of the hospital possibly two months when I first noticed the loss of hair, my scalp being still scaly. I started to use dandruff cures to no effect whatever. I had actually lost hope of saving any hair at all. I could brush it off my coat by the handful. I was afraid to comb it. But after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and nearly a box of Cuticura Ointment, the change was surprising. My scalp is now clear and healthy as could be and my hair thicker than ever, whereas I had my mind made up to be bald. W. F. Steese, 5812 Broad St., Pittsburg, Penn., May 7 and 21, 1908."

When to Send Children to Europe.

Some people wait so long before sending their children to Europe that the little ones are humiliated by others who have already been there. Every self-respecting parent will be careful not to subject his children to this evident injustice; at the same time all unseemly hurry is to be avoided.

Some people argue that as soon as a child can walk well and speak a few necessary French words, he should be placed in a stateroom, next to a private bath, and sent to Paris. Others feel that he must naturally lose much at this age, and that the proper time is between five and six, when—as an American—he has reached his maturity.

Probably the ideal age is about four. At four a child can easily do England, France and Italy, and get home in time for the first night at the opera.—Judge's Library.

LAND OF THE MIDNIGHT SUN

John Dixon's Criticism of "Square" Johnson's Son-in-Law Certainly Well Within Reason.

When the carpenters began work on the house in which "Square" Johnson's married daughter was to live they were much tried by the constant presence and lavish advice of the "square's" son-in-law. "He's a scatterwit if ever I saw one," said John Dixon, head carpenter, to his wife one night. "What do you suppose he told us to-day?"

"You'd better go right along with your story," said Mrs. Dixon, who was rolling out biscuit dough and had no time to waste on speculation.

"Well, he told us about a fire that got started in a house somewhere out west last month," said John Dixon, speaking more complacently as he looked at the dough and saw it taking shape for the oven.

"He must sit up nights to read the papers, that man. And says he, the men that were working on the house left some shavings on a window sill, where the sunlight came through a bullseye pane just such as I have in my front door and it set fire to the shavings in no time.

"'Did the house burn down?' I asked him, knowing well it didn't, for nothing ever happens in his stories. 'No,' he said, 'it didn't, for the men were right there, but if that thing had happened in the middle of the night you just think how 'twould have been. Nothing would have saved that building,' says he, 'and more than likely the barns and outbuildings would have gone, too!'"—Youth's Companion.

A Merchant's Vow.

At the Church of St. Michael de Rupe, perched on the summit of Brentor, the bishop of Exeter the other day dedicated a new peal of bells. Tradition has it that the church owes its erection in that elevated position—1,130 feet above the sea—to the vow of a merchant overtaken by a terrible storm while voyaging to England, that he would build a church on the first spot of land sighted.

This happened to be the lofty crest of Brentor and accordingly the church was built there. For some centuries the little church has served as a landmark over a wide area, and services are regularly held in it.—London Standard.

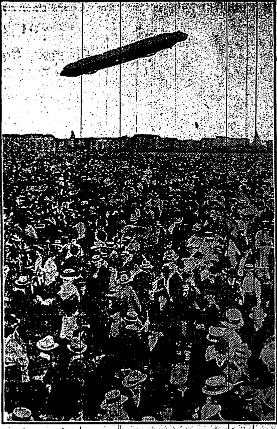
VISIT OF ZEPPELIN AIRSHIP TO BERLIN



All Berlin went mad with delight recently, when the airship Zeppelin III., 19 hours overdue, hove in sight of the waiting thousands assembled on the Tempelhof parade ground, the scene of our picture. Thence she sailed over the capital and spent several hours maneuvering in mid-air, encircling in turn the tower of the Town Hall, the dome of the Royal Castle and the spires of the Cathedral. Finally she proceeded to Tegel, and came to earth in the presence of the kaiser. The Zeppelin took two days and seven hours to reach Berlin from Friedrichshafen, a distance of 473 miles, having to stop once for a new motor and again for repairs to the steering gear and one of the propellers.

TRIAL OF A BIG GUN

Breech-Loading Cannon Designed for Shooting Immense Shell.

It Will Have Extreme Range of 25 Miles and Can Penetrate Two Feet of Hardest Steel Armor.

Washington.—Advices have been received in Washington to the effect that the giant 14-inch breech-loading gun being built at the works of the Midvale Steel Company of Philadelphia for the navy department, and which when completed will be the largest and most powerful naval weapon in the world, will be delivered toward the end of the month. If the delivery is prompt its official tests may be conducted at the naval proving ground at Indian Head, Md., in October or November.

There is a great 16-inch gun at Sandy Hook proving grounds, built under the auspices of the ordnance department of the army, about eight years ago, and from which only a few shots have been fired. Thirteen, 14, and even 16-inch guns have been built in some foreign navies, but that was many years ago, before modern ordnance reached anything like the excessive pressures and temperatures such as are used in the modern 12-inch weapons using cordite or smokeless powder. When the 12-inch gun came into fashion as a more powerful weapon than the old 13-inch gun of our navy, and the 13½-inch gun of the old Royal Sovereign class of battleships in the British navy, the construction of the larger sized bore ceased.

The shot projected from this new American 14-inch gun will weigh 530 pounds more than the most powerful 12-inch gun now in the service of the American fleet on the target grounds below the Virginia capes. Stated another way, the new shell weighs more than a half ton and will be as tall as a man. After it is fired the shell will travel a distance of 542 inches within the bore of the gun. There the grooved rifling of the gun will impart a rotary motion, which will make the shell spin around rapidly on its flight through the air, and prevent the huge projectile from turning on end and losing its force.

This new 14-inch gun will have an extreme range of 25 miles, although the range at which it would fire in actual battle would be about 9,000 yards, or five miles. The range of naval battles has more than trebled since the Spanish-American war. Then it was thought that battles on the sea would be fought at 3,000-yard range. Guns were built accordingly. All heavy American naval guns are now built powerful enough to engage the enemy at five miles' distance. The 1,400 pound shell from this new gun will leave the muzzle of the weapon at the rate of 2,600 feet per second of time, and its muzzle energy will be 65,606 foot tons. This is about 13,000 more foot tons of muzzle energy than that designed for the latest 12-inch guns, and about 2,000 foot tons more of muzzle energy than that of the 45-caliber 12-inch guns now in actual service on the target grounds. So great is the penetrative power of this new 1,400 pound shell when fired with the full load of 365 pounds of powder from the new 14-inch gun, that the projectile will be able to penetrate 22.7 inches of the latest Krupp steel armor at the muzzle. This would be equivalent to penetration of not less than 25 inches of Harvey nickel steel at the muzzle.

But this does not measure the full power of the gun for naval purposes, the muzzle penetration being merely a proving ground factor, for after the shot hurled from the 14-inch gun has traveled a distance of 3,000 yards it will still have the remaining velocity of 2,234 feet a second, which would enable it to pierce at that distance a thickness of 18.7 inches of Krupp steel armor. After it has traveled 6,000 yards, or 3,000 yards distant, the shell will have a remaining velocity of 1,909 feet per second, giving it at that range a penetration of 18.7 inches of Krupp steel.

BRING BACK ART TREASURES

Treasury Advices Show That New Tariff Law Has Increased Donations to Libraries.

Washington.—Millions of dollars' worth of valuable paintings are being bought abroad by American millionaires for free entry under the new tariff law.

Treasury department advices show that one Philadelphia millionaire alone recently imported $200,000 of these works of art. The law provides that works of art over 20 years of age may be brought in free of duty, provided accompanying affidavits show the age of the paintings. Another paragraph of the law provides for free entry of works of art over 100 years of age. The first paragraph has been construed to apply to paintings and everything except articles of utility, and the second paragraph to articles of utility.

It is stated that private as well as public galleries are being greatly enriched by the operation of the new law.

End of White Plague Near

British Scientist Declares That Consumption May Be Wiped Out in Generation or Two.

Edinburgh, Scotland.—Everything points to the early and final disappearance of tuberculosis in civilized countries, according to Prof. R. W. Philip, who in an address before the British Medical association recently gave his reason therefor. The diminution of consumption, he says, can be accomplished within a generation or two by a concerted movement toward educating the public.

Recent widespread investigation, Prof. Philip says, points to the fact of supreme significance not hitherto recognized—namely, that tuberculosis is commonly contracted in childhood. Therefore it must be prevented from attacking young children.

Milk, he says, is not the usual cause, notwithstanding the popular opinion to the contrary. The real [illegible] is the relatively [illegible] home and school life. Thus tuberculosis is not only to be credited with a much greater proportion of mortality in childhood than is generally supposed, but is largely responsible for the aggravated manifestations of otherwise simple complaints.

Prof. Philip agrees with Dr. Mary Wollencroft of New York and her co-investigators that tuberculosis is far more prevalent than health statistics indicate. Concerted action is therefore necessary to put homes, schools, factories and shops under sanitary control.

Sufficient air is preventive as well as a curative agent. Of tuberculin he says it is good only in light cases of consumption or in the early stages. When the system becomes laden with the tuberculosis toxins the addition of tuberculin only makes matters worse.

Treatment of individual patients, Prof. Philip says, must [illegible] toward preventing the airless condition which breeds the disease. The main object is more air for young lungs in the large cities, in the congested tenement districts. Air creates appetite. Appetite creates or restores health. Health resists disease.

STUDY OF BIRD LIFE

Campaign Started to Found University Devoted to Conservation.

Scientists Will Teach the People That Feathered Creatures That Eat Crop Destroyers Are Salvation of the Country.

New York.—To save the natural wealth of America by educating its people regarding the value of wild bird life, as the only sure check to the insect pests that are rapidly devastating the crops and woods of the country, is the object of a movement now gathering headway in this city. Headed by the National Association of Audubon societies, a campaign is to be begun in every section of the continent for the establishment of a national university devoted to the conservation of American resources through the preservation of the pest killing birds. Suitable endowment is to be sought by officers of the association.

Broadening the educational work that is now being pushed by the Audubon workers is designed to be the main aim of the proposed national university. Skilled ornithologists are to be employed in compiling and analyzing scientific data showing the capacity of various species of wild birds for destroying such pests as the gypsy moth, the boll weevil and the brown-tail moth, whose ravages have been proven to cost the country $1,000,000,000 in its crop yield each year. Men and women lecturers, trained at the proposed university, will be stationed in every section of the continent to present to the people proofs of their enormous loss in agricultural wealth, due to lack of knowledge of the work done by the feathered insect eaters.

On the children of the land the Audubon officials declare they must base their hopes for the spread of the gospel of conservation through the bird resources of the nation. Trained teachers are to be assigned to conduct summer schools among the teachers of every region and through them to reach the future American citizens. The preparation and extensive circulation of the illustrated, educational pamphlets on the economic uses of wild bird life is to be one of the chief activities of the new institution, as it is of the National Association of Audubon societies at present. Textbooks treating of all the local wild birds will be published and issued to every school.

"Nothing but the education of the American people on this subject can now avail to ward off the impending agricultural devastation," said William Dutcher, president of the National Association of Audubon societies, at its headquarters, 141 Broadway. "If persons of wealth desire to bestow upon their country the greatest possible benefaction, now and for all time, no better way could be devised than to endow such a national university on conservation through bird life as we have projected. We shall exert our best efforts to procure this extension of the educational work that we have been pushing for years."

FASTS AND CURES HIMSELF

Cleveland Man Goes Without Food for Over Fifty Days, Drinking Nothing But Water.

Cleveland, O.—William H. Maire, a Cleveland man, who is at Battle Creek, Mich., has completed a fast of 50½ days, according to information received by his relatives here. In performing the feat Maire lost 40 pounds. Throughout the fast he drank filtered water.

Maire says the first eight days were trying, but after that he experienced little inconvenience. On completing the fast he drank a teaspoonful of milk. His second and third meals consisted of two and three teaspoonfuls of milk.

Stomach trouble, which puzzled physicians, caused Maire to try fasting as a cure. He says he is now in perfect health.

Boonton, N. J.—Unless Charles A. Zabriskie returns to his family here within four years he will lose a legacy of $25,000, according to the will of his father, which has been filed for probate. Zabriskie disappeared two years ago, and subsequently was mentioned in a divorce action.

Reward for Rescuing Cat.

Dublin.—The rescue of a cat which had fallen or been thrown into the Liffey was witnessed by a large crowd from the quay wall.

The cat swam to one of the circular abutments of a bridge, and Mrs. Wesby Roebuck, Castle Dundrum, Dublin, who was motoring past, offered a reward for its rescue.

A laborer named Peter Kavanagh volunteered and he was lowered from the bridge by two constables, and the cat was brought up in safety and taken to the Cats' home.

DELICACY OUT OF SEASON

Farmer Absolutely Unable to Understand the Possibility of Ice in July.

We are so accustomed to having things "out of season," and especially to the cutting and storing of ice for use in the summer, that it is hard to put ourselves in the place of the simple old farmer told of by a writer in the Toledo Blade.

In the summer of 1900 a party of surveyors was working through the state of Arkansas, surveying and locating the Midland Valley road. One day the surveying corps stopped at a farmhouse and shouted for the farmer.

The Arkansan came out, and the surveyors asked him if they could get a drink.

"Certainly, boys," he said. "I'll give you the best I've got, and the best I've got is buttermilk."

"That will be fine," the surveyors said, and the old farmer gave each of the gang a glass of buttermilk.

"Yes, indeed," McLoud replied, "but it would be better if we had some ice to put in it."

Turning to the farmer, McLoud said, "Have you any ice?"

Young Guest—It seems to me that you don't object to the mosquitoes singing in your room.

Old Guest—You bet I don't. Why, when the mosquitoes are singing I can't hear the glee club practicing on the piazza.

True Representative of Race.

Dr. Bethmann-Hollweg may claim this distinction, that he is the first German chancellor to wear a beard. Bismarck hastened to shave his off when he entered upon diplomacy, and showed his rivals and enemies a massive jaw and clear-cut chin; and he shaved to the end, with an interval enforced by neuralgia in the early '80s. As a soldier, too Caprivi shaved, all but his mustache, and so did Hohenlohe and Bulow. But Bethmann-Hollweg is gaunt, rugged, hirsute, pan-Germanic.

Poverty and Consumption.

That poverty is a friend to consumption is demonstrated by some recent German statistics, which show that of 10,000 well-to-do persons 40 annually die of consumption; of the same number only moderately well-to-do, 66; of the same number of really poor, 77; and of paupers, 97. According to John Burns, the famous English labor leader, 90 per cent. of the consumptives in London receive charitable relief in their homes.

Wholesale and Retail.

"What business did you say Miss Gaddie was in?"

"Oh, she's in everybody's business."

"Wholesale, eh?"

"Yes, except when it comes to a bit of scandal. She retails that."

Never take a mean advantage of anyone in any transaction, and never be hard upon people who are in your power.—Dickens.

FOOD QUESTION

Settled with Perfect Satisfaction by a Dyspeptic.

It's not an easy matter to satisfy all the members of the family at meal time as every housewife knows.

And when the husband has dyspepsia and can't eat the simplest ordinary food without causing trouble, the food question becomes doubly annoying.

An Illinois woman writes:

"My husband's health was poor, he had no appetite for anything I could get for him, it seemed.

"He was hardly able to work, was taking medicine continually, and as soon as he would feel better would go to work again only to give up in a few weeks. He suffered severely with stomach trouble.

"Tired of everything I had been able to get for him to eat, one day seeing an advertisement about Grape-Nuts, I got some and tried it for breakfast the next morning.

"We all thought it was pretty good although we had no idea of using it regularly. But when my husband came home at night he asked for Grape-Nuts.

"It was the same next day and I had to get it right along, because when we would get to the table the question, 'Have you any Grape-Nuts' was a regular thing. So I began to buy it by the dozen pkgs.

"My husband's health began to improve right along. I sometimes felt offended when I'd make something I thought he would like for a change, and still hear the same old question, 'Have you any Grape-Nuts?'

"He got so well that for the last two years he has hardly lost a day from his work, and we are still using Grape-Nuts." Read the book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Facts For Sick Women

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, or secured so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Almost every woman you meet has either been benefited by it, or knows some one who has.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing over one million one hundred thousand letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The reason why it is so successful is because it contains ingredients which act directly upon the female organism, restoring it to healthy and normal activity.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials such as the following prove the efficiency of this simple remedy.

Minneapolis, Minn.:—"I was a great sufferer from female troubles which caused a weakness and broken down condition of the system. I read so much of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other suffering women, I felt sure it would help me, and I must say it did help me wonderfully. Within three months I was a perfectly well woman.

"I want this letter made public to show the benefits to be derived from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. John G. Moldan, 2115 Second St. North, Minneapolis, Minn.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

The fire was not discovered until it had made such progress that it was impossible to do anything to save the men or any of the property.

TILTED THE LID

Thirsty Boys Helped Themselves to Beer and Lunch.

A robbery was committed in Red Lake Falls last Sunday night. Some fellows who were thirsty and hungry tilted the lid at two of the saloons and helped themselves to joy water and other things to satisfy their appetites. They entered the Robillard saloon through a back window and "appropriated," or otherwise disposed of, a case of beer. They then went to the Cyr & Savard saloon, forced an entrance to the lunch room and partook of a "sumptuous repast." If there was any money in the saloons it wasn't for them. They did not seem to be in need of money. The cash register were not tampered with.

Boy Kills Bear.

The 14-year-old son of Herman Kiso of the town of Esplee in Marshall county, last Saturday won his spurs by laying low one of the finest black bears ever seen. The boy noticed the bear and secured his father's rifle and though he says he had to shoot more than once he kept right at him until old bruin finally yielded to the inevitable. The old bear weighed 347 pounds and the pelt brought a nice round price. As for the boy one may safely conclude that he grew at least a foot in the next three days and well might he feel proud. He had dropped a beast such as few American boys rarely have an opportunity to see.—Thief River Falls Press.

Building the New Soo

Three of the contractors who have taken grading contracts on this end of the new Soo line are now at work and in spite of the inclement weather the work is being pushed as fast as possible, and within another week there will be several more contractors on the job. This work according to the contracts is all to be completed this fall and there will be very little grading left to be done next spring, so that it can be finished soon enough so as not to hold up the construction gang which will start laying steel as soon as possible next year.

Halvorson Brothers of Plummer have the contract for the first five miles and started work Tuesday, being the first to move dirt on this half of the line. Later in the week Dan Conroy of Turtle Lake, Wisconsin, who has the next mile and A. Perusse of Red Lake Falls who has the next six miles started work, the latter using two graders with traction engines.

There have been two surveys run by the party under "Sid" Jones, the last varies but very little from the first running a trifle more to the south. On the first one they missed making connections with the party from the east by several hundred yards, being too far north, so another was run which varied about seven tenths of a foot, to the station of a hundred feet, from the first.

From Moose Lake this line takes a direction a little south of southwest, crossing the Northern Pacific near McGregor from where it runs in a nearly straight line to the government dam at Leech Lake where the division will be, crosses the Great Northern just west of Bena, and then turns and parallels it through to Bemidji; from there it again takes a northwesterly direction, crosses Clearwater county north of Oldberg and Pine Lake cuts across the northeast corner of the town of Edan, and running south of Gully postoffice enters town of Chester in section 25 runs in nearly a straight line to section 2 of the town of Lambert, where it crosses Lost River just below the bridge and then takes a straight shoot to Plummer. This will very likely place one town somewhere near the crossing at Lost River and the next one near the point where they enter the town of Gully.—Plummer [illegible]

MALVIN'S COUNTY FAIR

Plans To Hold a Corn Exhibit and Talkfest in Red Lake Falls.

Southern Red Lake county has produced a corn crop that the big corn farmers of Iowa and Illinois can't beat. P. L. Malvin, manager of the local creamery, belives that the good fortune that has come to the people here should be appropriately celebrated. He is arranging for holding a corn exhibit in Red Lake Falls next month. He plans to have the farmers bring in samples of their best corn to be placed on exhibition. These will be displayed in some public building where meetings of interest to farmers will be held.

Prominent men, authorities on various agricultural subjects, will speak, the band will play and there will be other interesting features. The exhibits will be judged and prizes will be awarded to those farmers who bring in the best exhibits. It is appropriate that southern Red Lake county's good fortune in harvesting a bumper crop be appropriately celebrated and the business men of the city should cooperate with Mr. Malvin in the effort to make the corn exhibit a big success.

For Sale

Notice of Tax Sale of Unredeemed Lands in Red Lake County, Minnesota, Under Sections 936, 937 and 938, Revised Laws of 1905, as Amended by Chapter 430, General Laws 1907.

Pursuant to the provisions of Sections 936, 937 and 938 of Revised Laws of 1905, as amended by Chapter 430, General Laws 1907, notice is hereby given that on Monday, the 8th day of November, 1909, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at the office of the County Auditor in the County Court House at Red Lake Falls, Minn., in Red Lake County, Minn., all tracts or parcels of land situate in Red Lake county, bid in for the State, and not assigned to purchasers or redeemed within three years from the date of the tax sale at which said parcels were offered and so bid in by the state, will be offered at public sale, and will be sold to the highest bidder therefor. No parcel will be sold for a less sum than the aggregate taxes, penalties, interests and costs charged against it, unless the cash value thereof fairly determined by the State Auditor, shall be less than such aggregate, provided however, that all parcels bid in for the state for the taxes of 1901 or prior years, and not assigned to purchasers or redeemed as aforesaid, may be disposed of for one-half of the total taxes as originally assessed. Purchasers shall forthwith pay the amount of their respective bids to the County Treasurer. Said sale will begin at the time and place named above and will continue from day to day until every such tract or parcel shall have been offered for sale, under the provisions of said statutes. The list of said real property, subject to said sale, and which will be so offered for sale, unless previously redeemed, is now on file in the office of said County Auditor, and of the State Auditor of said State.

Owners or interested parties may redeem their property by paying the full amount due to the County Treasurer, at any time before sale, and within sixty (60) days after proof of service of the Notice of Expiration of Redemption has been filed with the County Auditor.

After the Notice of Expiration of Redemption has been served, as provided in Section 956, Revised Laws 1905, the Governor is authorized to issue a deed in the name of the State to the persons entitled thereto. (See Section 938 R. L.)

IF YOU USE A
Cole's Original Hot Blast Heater

The following is a copy of a letter just received from the Cole Manufacturing Co. The original can be seen at our store.

Chicago, Ill., October 6, 1909.

Hunt Hardware Co,
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Gentlemen:—You are authorized to sell the Original Cole's Hot Blast Heater this year on the most rigid guarantee ever made by any stove manufacturer. Our guarantee to every customer of yours is:
1—A saving of one-third in fuel over any lower draft stove of the same size, with soft coal, slack or lignite.
2—That Cole's Hot Blast will use less hard coal for heating a given space than any base burner made with same size fire pot.
3—That the rooms can be heated from one to two hours each morning with the soft or hard coal put in the stove the evening before.
4—That the stove will hold fire with soft coal from Saturday night until Monday morning.
5—A uniform heat day or night with soft coal, hard coal or lignite
6—That every stove will remain absolutely air-tight as long as used
7—That the feed-door is and will remain smoke and dust-proof.
All we ask is that the stove shall be operated according to directions and connected up with a good flue.

If you look first for STYLE in a shoe—the "GITCHE GAMEE" has it!
If you care more for comfort and long-wearing qualities, these also the "GITCHE GAMEE" has.
Made in the "NOSHCO" factory, where QUALITY is of more importance than anything else, the "GITCHE GAMEE" could be nothing but a shoe of EXCEPTIONAL quality.
A man seldom expresses himself as pleased with a pair of shoes, if they wear well he takes it as a matter of course, but thousands of satisfied wearers have proclaimed the "GITCHE GAMEE" a shoe of superlative excellence.
Some of the special construction points of the "GITCHE GAMEE" are well worthy of notice; the toe-boxes, for instance, made throughout of solid sole leather.
The counters also are of a high grade of sole leather, while the heels are solid one-piece lifts seldom found in any shoes save "GITCHE GAMEES".
One pair, bought NOW, will make of you also a "GITCHE GAMEE" enthusiast.
Shoes of "NOSHCO-MAKE" are all made a little better than seems necessary. Ask for them if you want the BEST.

CITY ELECTION NEXT TUESDAY

Will be Close Contents for Every Office Except Mayor

Three Candidates for Assessor, Two for Each of Other City Offices.

The city election will occur next Tuesday, Nov. 2, and much interest is being taken in that political event. Mayor J. A. Duffy will be re-elected without opposition, but there will be a contest for each of the other city offices. Two aldermen at large are to be elected and there are four candidates for the offices. There are two candidates for alderman in each of the three wards and for the office of city treasurer and there are three candidates for the office of city assessor. The candidates whose names are to be on the official balot are as follows: Mayor J. A. Duffy. Alderman at large—Theodore Mojeras, Thomas Crompe, Joseph Sally, Henry Hennemuth. Alderman first ward—Geo. F. Hennings, Joseph Remick. Alderman second ward—Sam E. Hunt, Fred Borchers. Alderman third ward—P. B. Gaass, Simon Paul. City Treasurer—Ovide Emard, E. G. Buse. City assessor—Charles J. Kruse, Albany Deforge Rufus Poirier. Justice—S. A. Swanson, V. M. Higinbotham.

Company Loses Case.

The supreme court last Friday handed down a decision in the case of the Red Lake Falls Milling company vs. City of Thief River Falls, the decree being in favor of the city. The action was brought by the milling company to compel the city to allow the removal of a wooden storage house within the fire limits. In his decision Justice O'Brien says:

"A city ordinance establishing fire limits and declared it unlawful for any person" to erect or attempt to erect within the above described fire limits any wooden building." Held, the moving of an already constructed wooden building, from a point outside to a location within such fire limits, was within the prohibition of the ordinance.

DANIELS WAS FLUSH

Polk County Sheriff Paid Expenses of Raiders.

Sheriff Orin Daniels of Polk county may have to pay out of his own pocket the railroad fare for the United States inspector and nine deputies whom he took as prisoners from Crookston to Duluth to the habeas corpus hearing in the federal court there, following their raid on saloons in the Indian county.

The fees of the sheriff of Mahnomen county for making the arrests and all his expenses of taking the prisoners to Crookston, as well as the expense of boarding them there, must be borne by Mahnomen county. But the minute the habeas corpus proceedings were st arted in the federal court and the prisoners taken to Duluth for a hearing they were out of the state's jurisdiction, and the county cannot be compelled to pay for it. But it is not likely that the federal treasury will stand the expense. The federal court ruled that the county authorities had no right to arrest or hold the federal agents, and the government probably will not pay them for doing something which they had no legal right to do'

The attorney general has told Daniels that he cannot advise him as to whom he can look to to pay the expense account and Daniels has a guessing contest all to himself.

Horticultural Meeting

The annual convention of the Red River Valley Horticultural Society will be held at Crookston on Friday, Nov. 19th, 1909, morning and afternoon sessions.

S. B. Green, professor of horticulture at the Minnesota University, will be present and speak on "Fruits," kinds and varieties to grow in north, western Minnesota.

Supt A. D. Wilson, of the Farmers, Institute, has also been invited and will most likely be present and speak.

John's a Good Guesser.

Br'er John Eastman predicts the overwhelming defeat of Mayor Duffy in the city election next Tuesday. John is a fearless guesser if not a good one. John has been guessing a whole lot of things about Red Lake Falls during the past five years and his reputation for accuracy has not suffered any in this last instance. He hit the mark—in the same place he has hit it so many times before. Guess again, John.

WILL STOCK CLEARWATER

State Department Will Supply Trout and Bass Fry

The Clearwater river is to be stocked with brook trout and black bass. Several cans of fry will be received next Tuesday and these are to be put in the stream. It is thought that the Clearwater will make a good trout stream. The stream is fed by springs and the water is cold and clear and the current rapid.

HIS LEG WAS BROKEN

Garceau Had Leg Broken in Thief River Game and Did Not Know It.

Theo. Garceau, the fast quarterback on the Red Lake Falls high school foot ball team, has been hobbling around on a fractured leg since the Red Lake Falls-Thief River Falls high school game and did not know until Tuesday, ten days after the game was played, that the injury was so serious.

Garceau was tripped by a Thief River player while making a long run that would have scored a touchdown had he not been thrown. It was necessary to take time out, but after two or three minutes, play was resumed and Garceau finished the game and handled the team in fine shape. The small bone of the left leg is fractured, but it is not a bad break and there will be no bad effect from the injury. However, Garceau will be out of the game for the remainder of the season. He is a very fast man and the loss of his work on the team may cost Red Lake Falls the championship of the valley association.

GOV. EBERHART'S FIRST APPOINTMENT

Selection of W. E. Hale for the District Bench Pleases Senator Nelson.

Gossipy Gossip About Politics and Many Other Things.

[Special Correspondence to the Red Lake Falls Gazette.]

St. Paul, Oct. 26.—Governor Eberhart the other day made his first appointment outside of his official family. A seat on the Hennepin county bench having become vacant by the resignation of Judge Brooks, the governor appointed W. E. Hale to that position. The appointment is generally regarded as a good one, both from a professional and a political point of view. Mr. Hale is a prominent lawyer and an able man. He is a warm personal friend of Senator Nelson, to whom, whether he advised it or not, the appointment can not fail to be peculiarly gratifying; and just now it is particularly well worth while for any public man with a future before him to court the favor of the senior senator.

WHY NELSON IS GRATIFIED.

When Judge Lochren resigned his seat on the federal district bench, Senator Nelson strongly recommended Judge Hale for that position. President Roosevelt had other designs. Probably he thought Mr. Hale was too old a man. But his first objection was that he wished to recognize Milton D. Purdy, whose work in connection with the department of justice had pleased him. That's where he and Nelson locked horns. Roosevelt appointed Purdy. Nelson held up his confirmation until after the senate adjourned. Roosevelt appointed Purdy again and he served during the recess. In the meantime Taft was elected president. He did not want to offend Roosevelt. He did not want to start out by antagonizing so influential a member of the senate as Nelson. So he compromised the matter by appointing some one else so that both Hale and Purdy were out in the cold. Now the governor has taken care of Hale. Nelson is naturally gratified.

A JUDICIAL FORECAST.

Speaking about judgeships, I learn that Senator Gunderson of Alexandria aspires to a seat on the State's supreme bench. The salaries of the judges having been increased while he was a member of the senate, he is ineligible as a candidate for either of the seats about to become vacant, but will come up three years hence. A good while to look forward to possibly; but that's how things are being shaped. Senator Gunderson, who belongs to the advanced wing of the republican party, was easily the ablest lawyer and the most influential member of the bar north of the Twin Cities. His election to it would bring to the supreme bench added strength.

PULLING THE WIRES.

William E. Lee, of Long Prairie, is a candidate for the republican nomination for governor. He has not said so in so many words, but his friends, with his knowledge, and presumably with his consent, are in the field at work for him. Among them are some shrewd and successful campaigners who enjoy a large acquaintance throughout the state. Mr. Lee is coqueting with the temperance people, and wouldn't turn up his nose at the endorsement of the Anti-Saloon League. In these counties where it is popular, his friends are talking county option. His campaign is being shrewdly managed and is going to make a noise throughout the state.

A RISING MAN.

They were talking the other day at the Merchants about Congressman Hammond. Someone who knew quoted John Lind as saying that Mr. Hammond makes the best speech of any man in public life in the state in a decade. They all agreed that he had a wonderful hold on the confidence of the voters in the Second district. Some one who spoke up and said his speech in Denver nominating Governor Johnson had made him a national figure. Why not? Mr. Hammond has made two extraordinary campaigns in his districts. It is the fashion these days to speak slightingly of McCleary. Nevertheless McCleary is no weakling. I remember well enough when you could get more people out to hear McCleary than any man in the state. Who doesn't remember his joint debates with John Lind? I remember, too, when calls came for McCleary from Ohio, from Indiana, from Illinois, from New York, from everywhere where the battle was raging most bitterly.

HOW McCLEARY LOST HIS PULL.

In those days McCleary got almost any majority he wanted in the Second district up to 10,000. He was indiscreet of course. His head got swelled. He got to thinking he knew it all; that it was his mission to instruct; not to represent. He brought the schoolmaster into politics. The voters were his pupils, to discipline if they didn't learn their lesson. He brought his defeat largely on himself of course. But why wasn't it a republican who profited from his mistakes? There were plenty of them down there. Somerville, Ewart, Gutterson, Miller, half a dozen others. Why did the people choose Hammond who belonged to the minority party? It's easy to lay it to factional causes. That wasn't the real reason. It was because Hammond was the biggest, the strongest, the all-around best man in sight.

A GOT-TOGETHER PARTY.

And that's why the democrats are talking Hammond for governor. The democrats have a way of putting up their best man, and a way of agreeing to put up their best men without that unseemly squabbling of which we have seen far too much of in this state. And they have a way of electing them. And they have a way, after they have elected them, of rallying round them, and booming them for something better. Not in one case only, but in scores of them. Instance Works of Mankato, Moonan of Waseca, Cashman of Steele, Schaller of Hastings, Glotsbach of Rice, and let us not forget Sageng of Ottertail, who is at least a half brother. What now could the democrats, and for that matter the people of the state, do better than to get behind a big, clean, white, able, loyal, true man like Hammand, and, after electing him governor of the state, demand his nomination to the presidential office as a characteristic representative of public sentiment throughout the nation and especially in that great galaxy of states we call the Middle west. Think it over.

A STATE WATCHDOG.

Auditor Iverson, perhaps he's a candidate for governor, too, who knows? At all events he's getting a lot of free advertising just now which is not without its advantages. It's the state's timber he's looking after, and the state's trust funds. His zeal is commendable. Sam has been a long while in the auditor's office in one capacity or another—from 1887 to 1891 and from 1895 up to the present day. They do say that during that time a whole lot of people waxed fat at the expense of the state's timber and the state's trust funds. Pretty big people, some of them too, who didn't need the money. Mr. Iverson, no doubt, had some inkling of what was going on; and we can imagine the rumpus he kicked up when he found the big timber thieves were getting in their work, since he is fussing so about the little ones. And while I commend Mr. Iverson's course, I am nevertheless bound to say that I've got a whole lot of sympathy for the pioneer who goes into the wilderness to carve himself out a home. I know if I went up three miles away from anyone, wthout any roads to speak of, without churches or schools or the advantages of civilization, and cut down the trees and cleared away the stumps, and built a house, and planted the fields, I would think myself none too well repaid for my privations and the privations to which my wife and children were obliged to submit, if I got every stick of such kind of timber as there is now on most state lands. And I think, moreover, that the state would make an almighty good bargain if it swapped its timber for hardy settlers and cultivated farms. But I suppose that's old-fashioned and the beter way is to divide the profits of the jack pine and the spruce between the lumbermen and the trust funds, giving, of course, the lumbermen the giant's share.

TAWNEY'S TROUBLES AND HIS ASSETS.

Those who figure that it will be no trick at all next year to win Tawney's seat in the First district from him, in my opinion, scarcely give sufficient weight to what is likely to happen in congress during its next session. I question whether those most interested and no one can be more vitally interested in the matter than the farmers of Minnesota attach sufficient importance to the preparations that are being made to attack a growing industry which it is quite within the bounds of possibility may be, I will not say wiped out, but most injuriously affected by legislation which a powerful machine has been organized to force through congress. I refer to oleomargarine tax legislation.

Many articles of value will be on display at the church and will be offered for sale and during the three days of the fair the ladies of the church will serve meals. St. Joseph's annual fair has always been a big event and this year will be no exception. The funds to be raised are for the benefit of St. Joseph's school.

INSPECT ROSEAU DITCH

State Officials Look over Drainage Work in Northern Minnesota.

Frank A. Day, representing Governor A. O. Eberhart, and the members of the state drainage commission, are in Roseau county this week inspecting the last section of the big Roseau ditch. This is the Roseau river cut-of, seven miles long and fifty feet wide in some places. It will reclaim about 155,000 acres. The other members of the party are Secretary of State Julius A Schmahl, State Auditor Samuel G. Iverson, State Drainage Engineer George A. Ralph, and James Larson, assistant secretary of state.

Ditch Work to Sublet

To The Voters of the City

As I may be unable to meet all my friends in the city between now aud election day, I wish to call your attention once more to the fact that I am a candidate for the office of City Treasurer. I feel that I am as much entitled to the office as any one as I am an old resident; was born in Red Lake Falls twenty eight years ago, and have spent the best part of my life here, furthering the interests of the city as well as my own. My education and business ability will enable me to handle the affairs of the position and as I have regular office rooms in the city, open at all times, it will be very convenient for the public to look up matters connected with the office at any time. I hope that all my friends will turn out election day and put a cross after my name.—E. G. Buse.

DR. GRONERUD IS DEAD

Physician Took Overdose of Morphine Last Thursday Night.

Dr. August Gronerud, the Bronson physician who was confined in the Red Loke county jail for several weeks last spring, held to answar to the charge of abortion, is dead. He died last Thursday night from the effects of an overdose of morphine.

It will be remembered that when arrested last spring Dr. Gronerud was almost a physical and mental wreck, his condition being due to the excessive use of morphine.

The Gronerud case was on the calendar this term but the case was dismissed Monday on motion of the county attorney. In fact the case was practically disposed of last spring, the state not having evidence enough to convict.

It is not believed that Dr. Gronerud committed suicide. He was a slave to the drug habit and it is believed that to satisfy the craving for the drug he took a dose that his weekened physical condition could not withstand.

Henry Diebel of Theif River Falls was in town Monday.

SHORT SESSION OF DISTRICT COURT

Judge Watts was in Red Lake Falls a Few Hours Monday.

Court Will Convene Again on Monday Morning, Nov. 8.

The session of district court held in Red Lake Falls this week was a brief one. Judge William Watts came over from Crookston Monday morning and returned to Crookston in the afternoon. Court was in session for a short time in the forenoon a nd in the afternoon. Cases were set on the calendar and arguments were made in one or two court cases but none of the civil cases were disposed of. The only criminal case on the calandar, that of the state of Minnesota vs. August Gronerud, was disposed of. On motion of the county attorney the case was dismissed. The regular grind of work will commence Monday, Nov. 8, and court will probably continue in session for a week or more.

Citizens summond for jury service will be required to report Tuesday, Nov. 9. A part of the day on Monday, Nov. 8, the court will devote to the consideration of applications for naturalization.

CASS LAKE SALOONS CLOSED

Federal Authorities Tell Saloon Keepers to Quit Business

Five of the seven saloons at Cass Lake have gone out of business by order of William E. Johnson, special agent of the Interior department. The agent said that the Endion and Tedford saloons might continue in business. The other saloon keepers, William Kirchof, C. F. Nelson, A. R. Siddon, Al Marshik and H. D. Latendresse were to remove all their liquors outside the county before Oct. 27, and the five saloons have already quit selling liquor.

WILL COST DEAR

MAHNOMEN COUNTY HAS HEAVY BILL TO SETTLE AFTER LOSING CASE.

CALLS RAID OPE A BOUFFE

Minneapolis. — "It was an amusing opera bouffe," said William E. Johnson, in recounting some of the incidents of his raid upon the saloons of Mahnomen last week, and his subsequent arrest. "We had been informed after destroying all the liquor we could find at Ogema and Waubon that we would have trouble at Mahnomen. It was reported that there was a real killer at Mahnomen, a fellow named Bolieau or something like that, and were warned to be on our guard.

"We began our work at Mahnomen about 10 o'clock in the morning, and had cleaned out several places, when a large crowd gathered in front of Miller's place, where the deputies were at work.

"One of the deputies told me that the crowd wanted to see me and I went out and asked what was wanted.

Pulled His Gun.

"We are the council," said one man, 'and we order you to stop!' We were busy just then, so I closed the door and went on with seizure of liquor. A little later the crowd burst into the room through the rear door. Many were armed, some with revolvers. I pulled my .44 and you should have seen that crowd break for the door.

"After the work was done, I went out on the street and was met by a lot of citizens. I learned that the deputy sheriff of Mahnomen county had sworn in forty-five deputies to aid the town marshall and the city council in preserving the peace.

"'What do you want?' I asked, after the crowd had halted me.

"One man with a paper in his hand jumped out and shouted: 'We want to arrest you.'

"'Do you want me alone, or all the other men?' I asked.

"'We want everybody,' said the man with the paper.

Arrest Was Easy.

"'Well, you can have them all as soon as they are through with their work,' I replied. I was perfectly willing to be arrested then, but I would not permit it as long as there was any liquor to be found in the town. An unarmed boy could have arrested me and the idea of swearing in forty-five deputies for the job was intensely funny.

"Mahnomen county will have a nice bill to pay in defending the saloons. Our bill at the Polk court jail in Crookston, I am informed, will reach $640. Then there is the expenses of the forty-five deputies and other expenses which will amount to several hundred dollars more. And on top of this will come the expense of the court proceedings at Duluth and the fees of the attorneys, which probably will not be small. Mahnomen county has had some fun, but will have to pay for the music later on."

RELIGIOUS PROGRESS GREATEST.

Spread of Gospel to be Big Movement in the Coming Decade.

Minneapolis. — Fred B. Smith, of New York, general secretary of the international committee of the Y. M. C. A., spoke in the Metropolitan theater at the noonday meeting of the Congregational Brotherhood of America. "Religion and Men" was his subject.

After outlining the achievements since the beginning of the century and venturing that no man would attempt to prophesy the events of ten years more, in science, politics or commerce, he declared that the triumph of religion will go down as the mightiest movement.

"Take it from me," he said, "the world-wide conquest of religion will be bigger than politics, greater than commerce, outclassing society, grander even than the vital issues of life itself.

"That man who is big enough to put the major part of his life into the work of God will be greater than our kings of finance, commerce or politics. Religion takes a man out of the rut. It fills his most important personal needs, makes him live a better and broader life and, greatest of all, prepares him for the life to come.

"Religion is not a dying issue, to be associated only with black livery, flowers and a casket. A man who thinks only of life as from cradle to grave is a small and a narrow man. I'm mightily concerned with the part that is behind the curtain.

Majors Enjoy Army Test.

St. Paul.—Major P. C. Hutton and Major S. G. Sturgis, of the regular army, who are on their annual endurance ride, have left Glen Morris on the second stage of their test. They left Fort Snelling and rode to a relay camp west of Shakopee, and they turned north to Minnetonka, arriving at Glen Morris, on Christmas lake, where they passed the night. "We are in splendid shape after our ride," said Major Hutton over the telephone. "We will ride to the relay camp, beyond Shakopee.

New Hotel for Pets.

Minneapolis. — A hotel for cats will be run by the Minneapolis Humane society next year in connection with the dog pound at Twenty-First Avenue N. and the river. Too many demands have been made on the society to care for cats.

Cats, dogs, canaries and pets of all kinds will be given humane attention for a consideration. Stray cats will be collected by the dogcatcher and put out of the way. This last branch of the work was begun today.

MILLIONAIRE GOLD BRICKED.

Minneapolis, Oct. 15.—H. F. Chaffee, millionaire Dakota land owner, president of the Amenia & Sharon Land Company and heavily interested in the John Miller Grain Company, Minneapolis, paid $25,0&00 in real money to a clever swindler who successfully worked upon him the time-honored gold brick trick. In return for the small fortune, Mr. Chaffee found himself the possessor of 80 pounds of yellow metal, probably worth about $15.

The operators of the swindle were "John Armstrong," a gray-hared miner and the owner of a fictitious gold mine of fabulous resources in old Mexico, and "W. H. Harper," Philadelphia, archaeologist of wide repute and reliable assayer of precious metals, the former occupying modest quarters at the Beaufort hotel and the latter holding forth in the finest suite of rooms in the Rogers hostelry.

Mr. Chaffee met Armstrong three days ago at Chaffee's home in Amenia, N. D., where the swindler told a story that he was in search of an uncle by the name of Chaffee.

Gold As Security.

He told of the two golden ingots, worth $40,000 at any government mint, which he held in two trunks in Minneapolis, ready to be placed as security for the $25,000 loan.

Mr. Chaffee was more than interested and agreed to accompany the miner to Minneapolis and look at the gold. His son, E. W. Chaffee, himself an assayer, accompanied him on the trip.

Armstrong, producing an auger and steel drill, bored several small holes in each of the yellow disks. The Chaffees in the meantime scraped up the metal shavings.

When a handful of these had been secured, Armstrong placed them in an envelope and the trio started out to find a competent assayer to compute the purity of the gold.

At the store of J.B. Hudson & Son, jewelers, Armstrong went inside alone. He joined the group in several minutes with a card bearing the names of two assayers, who he said were highly recommended by this firm. One was a St. Paul man, but the other, W. H. Harper, was located at the Rogers hotel.

The party went there and, in answer to a card, Mr. Harper sent down word that, although he was rather busy, he would see the gentlemen for a few minutes.

Applied the Acid Test.

Taking some nitric acid, which the younger Mr. Chaffee had thought it best to purchase in person, Mr. Harper applied it to the metal shavings submitted to him by Mr. Armstrong, and after watching the action of the acid, pronounced the metal to be of the highest grade.

The next move was made at the Security National bank where Mr. Chaffee cashed a personal check for $25,000. All three parties concerned then returned to the Beaufort, where the money, 25 crisp one thousand dollar bills, was handed over to Armstrong.

BIG RELIGIOUS CONVENTION.

Minneapolis, Minn.—With a "message to the men of Minneapolis," delivered at a down-town meeting by Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus, of Chicago, the second national convention of the Congregational Brotherhood of America opened at noon. The attendance is large, and all parts of the country being represented, and the enthusiasm is intense. This evening the President, John H. T. Main, of Iowa college, will preside at the second session, and the speakers will be Dr. S. B. Capen, of Massachusetts; Henry M. Beardsley, of Kansas, and Dr. Gunsaulus.

Others who will address the convention before the closing on Sunday evening are E. L. Smith, of Seattle; Prof. A. P. Hollis, of North Dakota; Fred B. Smith, of New York; Dr. W. B. Forbush, of Michigan; President Northrop, of the University of Minnesota; President M. L. Burton, of Smith college; T. C. MacBillan, of Chicago; Wayne B. Wheeler, of Ohio, and, at the annual banquet Saturday night, Mayor Haynes, of Minneapolis, and Booker T. Washington.

Continued to Higher Court.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The case of the state of Minnesota vs. C. J. Johnson came to an abrupt end before Judge Wm. C. Leary, in police court. Johnson was charged on the records, with running a blind pig.

"If the court please, I move that this action be annulled,' said Captain Thos. Garvin. It was Captain Garvin who had conducted the raid in which Johnson was caught.

The court looked up quickly.

"Because the defendant is dead, your honor," explained the captain. "He died at the City hospital Wednesday night."

Faces Military Service.

Minneapolis, Minn. — Jules Frelin, assistant professor in the French department at the university of Minnesota, acknowledges that after having escaped the manacles of a French military prison, he is now enmeshed in enough red tape to keep several professors busy. Professor Frelin has received a letter from A. Bailly Blanchard, secretary of the American embassy at Paris, telling him what to do in order to satisfy requirements that may or may not release him from the obligation of military service.

Was Slow With Warning.

Minneapolis. — When a St. Paul citizen left Minneapolis for that city, on board an interurban car, he saw a man crawling through a transom in the Mullane & Carlson saloon, 1119 Washington avenue S.

The St. Paul citizen waited until he got home before telling of the robbery. He accosted Patrolman Frank Peterson, stationed at Seventh and Wabasha streets in that city, who immediately communicated with the Minneapolis authorities.

TRACK MURDERER

CONFIDENT OF CAPTURE

Farmer, His Wife and Sister-in-Law, Slain Near Kansas City—Police Confident Murderer Was Stranger—$500 Obtained.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 21.—Bloodhounds, fresh on the trail of the man suspected of the murder of Alonso Royen, his wife and sister-in-law, Miss Rosa McHahon, five miles west of Kansas City, Kas., yesterday, are rapidly approaching this city today.

Followed by posses of officers and farmers, the bloodhounds followed the trail assiduously all last night. They traced the suspect from the house in which the two women lay murdered to a ravine, where Van Royen's body lay. Then the hounds turned into the road and came toward Kansas City.

The officers are confident that the murderer is a stranger who was seen with Van Royen last week. The theft of $500 from a trunk in the house and a diamond ring from the finger of Mrs. Royen indicates that the motive was robbery.

ENGLAND'S PROBLEM.

Washington, Oct. 21.—The army of unemployed in Great Britain has grown steadily and has now reached proportions that are causing the government great uneasiness. In a special report, John L. Griffiths, United States consul-general at London, gives extracts from a special statement just issued by the Royal commission on the poor law and relief of the distress.

The commission declares that during the fiscal year ending March 31, last, the number of those who were without work and who sought government aid totalled thirty-one persons in every 1,000 of population, although in the fiscal year, preceeding, only fourteen out of each 1,000 made applications for assistance.

MARCH IN FRISCO PARADE.

Twenty Thousand People Participate in Industrial Parade.

San Francisco, Oct. 21.—Like the first day of the Portola festival, today dawned beautiful and sunny after a night of showers, and long before the civic and industrial parade had passed a record-breaking crowd lined the streets. The parade, headed by Don Gasper De Portola and Queen Verglia, was the greatest affair of its kind ever witnessed in this city.

Twenty thousand persons, representing virtually every fraternal, municipal and industrial body of the state, were in line and as a cosmopolitan feature it was equal of the military parade of Tuesday in which six nations were represented.

ROBBERS MAKE HAUL.

Reedsville State Bank in Wisconsin Looted—Citizens Pursue.

Manitowoc, Wis., Oct. 21.—Bank robbers, believed to number three, robbed the Reedsville State bank last night or early this morning and secured $6,500 in cash and negotiable papers. Then then stole a horse and carriage from a farmer and made their escape. The authorities together with twenty-five citizens of Reedsville are scouring the surrounding country in the hopes of capturing the thieves.

W. C. T. U. AT OMAHA.

Evangelistic Work Taken up by Convention—Day of Prayer.

Omaha, Oct. 21.—Evangelistic work occupied the time of the officers and delegates to the annual convention of the Women's Christian Temperance union the greater part of today, designated as a "day of prayer." Miss Elizabeth W. Greenwood, evangelistic superintendent of the world organization, presided at the meetings in the First Methodist church.

NEWS NOTES CONDENSED.

Hartshorn, Okla.—As the result of an explosion which occurred in mine No. 8 of the Rock Island Coal Mining Co., eight miners may be dead. One miner is known to have been killed.

Constantinople.— Twenty-five persons were drowned following the bursting of a dam at Lake Derkos, thirty miles northwest of this city. The lake supplies water for the capital.

Dayton, O.—The Computing Scale Works, the Bimm storage building, one of the buildings of the Big Four freight station, the pasture of the Chamberlain Filter Co. plant and the Klee Bottling Works were destroyed by fire. The loss aggregates $750,000, mostly insured.

Minocqua, Wis.— The bandits who dynamited the bank of Minocqua yesterday, securing several thousand dollars, are at bay near Bradley. A telegram for reinforcements was received here and additional armed men are on their way to Bradley.

DEAD MAN AT THROTTLE.

Northern Pacific Train Passed Stations Without Signals.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Oct. 21.—Emil Dumrow, engineer on an extra train on the Northern Pacific, was instantly killed at Perham this morning. It is supposed he was leaning out of the cab window, and that his head struck a standpipe.

The fireman noticed that he was passing stations without giving signals and found Dumrow dead. He lives at Staples.

CONDEMNS MUCH MEAT.

Washington, Oct. 21.—"More meat is condemned as unfit for human food in the United States than in any other country on God's green earth. That fact may account, in a contributory way, for the present high prices of meat."

This statement was made by a responsible official of the department of agriculture in connection with charges made at the convention of the American Public Health association now in session at Richmond, Va.

DICKINSON GETS A MEDAL

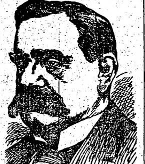
Washington.—An almost forgotten incident in which Secretary of War Jacob M. Dickinson heroically rescued James F. Joy, a Detroit lawyer, from the Detroit river 14 years ago, was recalled when a handsome solid gold medal, suspended from a ribbon held in the beak of an American eagle was presented to Mr. Dickinson on behalf of the United States government.

The medal, approved by President Taft before his departure on his trip and commemorating the courage of the war secretary in saving the life of a fellow man, was presented by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Hilles.



Secretary of War Dickinson.

"In testimony of heroic deeds in saving lives" read the inscription on the medal, which also bore a laurel held aloft by a woman. Touched deeply by the unexpected recognition of his act, the secretary of war, with characteristic modesty, merely said:

"I did not have much time to consider what was best to be done when Joy fell into the river and if I had I might have done what Rip Van Winkle told his wife Gretchen he would do in case she fell into the water, 'Go home and think it over.'"

He added that he did not know he had done anything remarkable.

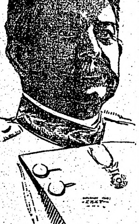
Dickinson probably owes his seat in President Taft's cabinet as secretary of war to the act of heroism.

GEN. BELL A MOUNTAINEER

Chief of Staff of the Army Makes a Difficult Ascent in the Grand Canyon.

Los Angeles.—During his recent visit in the Grand canyon, on his way east from the coast, Gen. J. Franklin Bell, chief of staff of the United States army, demonstrated that he is a strenuous mountaineer.

The general and his aid, Capt. F. W. Sladen, Miss May Chandler of Los Angeles, J. H. Fleming, master of trails, horses and wheeled vehicles at El Tovar, and a guide, composed a party which negotiated the entire Bright Angel trail. The general gallantly acted as Miss Chandler's special escort. The picturesque wonders of the mighty chasm were viewed from every available point on this steep path from the rim to the bottom.



Gen. J. Franklin Bell.

Gen. Bell's conspicuous energy was not exhausted in overcoming the hardships of the Bright Angel trail, so he proceeded, with a guide, to climb a mountain 1,000 feet high which rises up from the depths of the canyon near the foot of the trail.

The sides of the mountain are well-nigh perpendicular, making the task achieved a most toilsome one. From the side of this mountain flows a living spring, creating a splendid pool of pure water at the bottom.

Gen. Bell and aide proceeded east, continuing the general's official army inspecting tour, while the Los Angeles party, which included Miss Chandler, her mother, Mrs. Harry Chandler, and the latter's father, Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, returned to the city.

Made a Good Profit.

Lord Greenfield, being asked to buy something by a smart young matron who kept a table at a ladies' fair, said that he wanted what was not for sale, a lock of her hair. Whereupon she promptly cut off the coveted curl and handed it to him, naming the price—$100. Later the purchaser was showing his trophy to a little circle of friends. "She rather had you there," laughed one benedict. "To my certain knowledge, she only paid three dollars for the entire bunch."

So He Does.

"Do you believe that tough beef is as good for a person as tender beef?" "Better. The man who gets tough beef gets both nourishment and exercise."

NORTH POLE JURY

TO PASS ON DATA OF DR. COOK AND COMMANDER PEARY, RIVAL EXPLORERS.

TO SETTLE CONTROVERSY

Peary Has Turned in His Observations and Cook Will Be Ready Within a Month—Copenhagen Stands Pat.

Washington, Oct. 20.—O. P. Austin, Dr. L. A. Bauer, Rear Admiral Colby M. Chester, Frederick V. Colville, Dr. J. Howard Gore, Gilbert H. Grosoner, C. Willard Hayes, Alfred J. Henry, W. H. Holmes, Dr. C. Hart Merriam, Dr. O. H. Tittman and Henry Gannett, chairman, are the even dozen members of the world-wide standing research commitee of the National Geographic society which is to pass on the merits of the north polar controversy. They are all prominent in scientific and geographic work.

Washington, Oct. 20.—Commander Robert E. Peary's observation records and proofs that he reached the north pole, April 6, 1909, were submited to the National Geographic society today and were referred by that body to the committee on research with directions to the chairman to appoint a committee of experts to examine the records and report to the board.

Copenhagen, Oct. 20.—The University of Copenhagen has declined to forego its privilege to a first examination of the north polar records of Dr. Cook. The authorities of the university today cabled to the National Geographic society at Washington as follows:

"Sorry. The university not able to comply with your request."

Toledo, Oct. 20.—Dr. Cook said today that he will be ready to submit his proofs of discovery of the north pole to the University of Copenhagen within two months or possibly within a month. He will begin work upon his documents on his return to New York immediately after the close of his lecture tour at Minneapolis next Monday night.

TYPHOON IN CHINA SEA.

Manila, Oct. 20.—A typhoon of unusual severity swept across Northern and Central Luzon on Sunday night. Wire communication with all points beyond Dagupan and Luzon was cut off. One message brought to Dagupan from San Sabian says that the loss of life was considerable and damage to property heavy.

Torrential rains accompanied the storm and an extensive area was flooded. The railroad bed was washed out at several points and one railway station was swept away.

Hong Kong, Oct. 20.—Many casualties attended the typhoon that played havoc with native shipping and damaged other vessels at various points on the coast during the night. At this port the Standard Oil steamer Lynd-Hong Kong Maru and both were damhurst fouled the Japanese steamer aged.

At Macao the Portugese gunboat Patria was lifted from her moorings and carried up the Canton river. The gunboat was stranded on a flooded rice field.

Many houses were blown down in the vicinity of Maco where junks and fishing smacks in large numbers foundered, involving many casualties.

HOT FROM THE WIRES.

Ryder, N. D.—With over 100 men fighting a fierce prairie fire south of this place, it took several hours before the blaze was extinguished. The fire threatened claim shacks, several of them being destroyed. A large quantity of hay was burned, and the loss foots up into the thousands.

St. Paul—A jury was completed in the Ramsey county district court to try Mrs. Mina Arbogast, accused of murdering her husband, Louis Arbogast, a wealthy butcher, on May 13 last.

Merrill, Wis.—The bank of Minocqua, at Minocqua, Wis., was robbed by four masked men. The robbers blew open all the vaults and escaped with several thousand dollars.

Washington—A new explosive, the invention of a Britisher, which possesses the possibilities, it is said, of revolutionizing the blasting work in connection with the construction of the Panama canal, has been tested on the Isthmus of Panama, and as a result the Panama canal commission has ordered twenty tons of it for trial.

Naviasha, British East Africa—Col. Roosevelt, accompanied by R. K. Cunninghamn, hunter and guide, arrived here. All members of the hunting expedition are very well.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Sad Fate of Little Girl in Grand Forks County.

Grand Forks, N. D., Oct. 20.—Pitiful in the extreme was the death by fire Monday of Julia Dallum, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nels Dallum of Turtle River township. Miss Beulah Hewitson, whose home is west of this city, and who is teaching school in that district, was herself seriously burned in a heroic effort to save the life of her little pupil. The news of the accident did not reach this city until yesterday, when arrangements for the funeral of the dead child were made

DRY FARMING CONGRESS.

Billings, Oct. 20—At a meeting of the National Dry Farming congress here next week, Dr. Adolph Aanonson, in charge of the dry land experiments in Palestine for the Turkish government, will make his first public announcement of his discovery of wild wheat on the slopes of Mount Hebron. The reorganization of the dry farming congress upon an international basis is contemplated in the revised constitution to be presented to the congress next week by the executive committee.

THE TASK OF THE FOREST SERVICE

By OVERTON W. PRICE

A LITTLE more than 10 years ago Gifford Pinchot took charge of the government forest work. Up to then the duties of the division of forestry lay mainly in compiling forest data and statistics, its usefulness was necessarily narrow, and its discontinuance in contemplation. The work employed 10 persons, of whom two were professional foresters.

The forest service now administers the national forests, whose aggregate area is about the same as Texas and Ohio combined, and whose money value is more than twice that of the total equipment of the army and navy. It furnishes the chief source of information and assistance to private forest owners and users, who wish to practice forestry. Its force numbers about 3,000, of whom 250 are professional foresters.

This great machine is administered under a policy which has the approval and the co-operation of the American people. It is not an impractical policy constructed by theorists—by those who sometimes hit the bystander instead of the bullseye, because they have not learned the use of the gun with which they shoot. Nor is it a foreign policy, expected to meet conditions under which it was not constructed. The policy of the forest service makes no fetish of the forest. It urges no destructive upheaval in economic conditions. But when the line is plain between the use of the national forests or any of their resources, for the permanent benefit of many, or for the temporary benefit of a few, the forest service encourages use by the many and prevents its monopoly by the few.

There are two planks in the platform of the forest service. They are these:

To insure through public ownership and administration the fullest permanent use of those forests which are essential to the public welfare.

To teach American citizens how to make the best use of forests in private hands and of their product, by finding out and telling them how.

The 194,500,000 acres of national forests stand for the first plank. They conserve most of the water and one-third of the timber of the west. This national heritage, whose measurable material resources are worth more than two billions of dollars, is being administered by the forest service in the best permanent interest of all the people. At an average cost for protection of about one-fifth of a cent per acre, the damage by fire on national forests for the last three years has been, per million acres, about three per cent, of that on private forest lands. In these three years the use of the national forests by the people has more than doubled. In 1908, so great were the demands of the people's business, that an average of only about one-fifth of the time of the forest rangers could be given to fire patrol. This was the equivalent of all the time of one man for the patrol of 580,000 acres, an area half the size of the state of Delaware.

From Arizona to the Canadian border and from California to Minnesota and Arkansas, the forest rangers have done their duty. This has meant unrelenting effort, usually under frontier conditions. There is no more exacting work than fire patrol; and, short of war, nothing makes greater claims than fire fighting upon personal courage, fiber and devotion. The forest rangers are the backbone of the service. Were it not for them, the national forests would soon be forests no longer. And as each of these public servants comes to lay down his tools for younger hands to pick up, he will leave behind him, in the vigorous, unscarred forests of his district, a valuable heritage to the community and the honorable record of a trust fulfilled.

The protection of the national forests from fire is incidental only to the development of their fullest permanent use. This use is limited only so far as is needed to insure the permanence of the forest and to keep it in satisfactory condition. Last year 1,500,000 cattle and horses and 7,500,000 sheep and goats grazed within national forests, or 12 and 21 per cent., respectively, of the range stock of the west. Nearly 400,000,000 feet of mature timber was sold and cut, or enough to build 25,000 ordinary frame houses. More than 130,000,000 feet more was given away to settlers for firewood and other home uses. All this timber was cut and logged conservatively, to the improvement of the condition of the forest. Under such management a forest produces wood forever.

For a man can handle his forest in three different ways, just as he can handle money in three different ways, and the same is true of a nation. He can destroy his forest by wasteful logging and the fire which follows it, just as he can squander money until it is all gone. He can protect his forest adequately from fire or other injury, but fail to harvest its crop, just as he can lock up money in a safe and let it lie there protected from loss, but unproductive and useless. Or he can handle his forest rightly and profit by the interest without impairing the capital, like the man who invests money safely and well.

There is nothing intricate about the principles or the practice of forestry. It has its own careful, skilled methods based on study comparatively recent in this country, but which in other countries began hundreds of years ago. To describe these methods would fill many pages and it takes trained men to apply them. But in the last analysis forestry is common sense, scientifically applied. Cut the mature trees, but do not cut them until they have shed seed enough to start young trees to make another forest. Remember always that the sapling will make a valuable tree some day if it is not injured, just as a boy will make a wage earner if he has his chance. Keep fire out of the forest, because it is worse than the axe in careless hands, for the fire consumes everything, young trees and old, and the forest soil as well. Waste nothing. These are the principles under which logging is done in the national forests. The result is to make of them a factory as well as a storehouse of wood.

But the usefulness of the national forests does not end with producing timber and grass. Their still larger value to the nation is in conserving stream flow. These mountain forests are to the streams of the west, what the storage battery is to the wire—the source of energy in reserve. Without forests to check the run-offs, streams fluctuate or even go dry for part of the year; but those streams which rise in well forested watersheds maintain a comparatively even flow.

The reclamation service, when its task is finished, will have turned 50,000,000 acres of desert into fertile farm land, dotted with homes. Under its director, Frederick Haynes Newell, whose achievement is national and enduring, this work, unparalleled in scope, is going successfully forward. The story of what has been done by the men of the reclamation service, in the face of engineering difficulties historic in their magnitude, has yet to be adequately written. But for the permanent success of its work, the reclamation service must depend not merely upon its reservoirs and dams, but upon the thoroughness with which the forest service does its duty. The preservation of the national forests is vital to the fulfillment of the national irrigation policy.

In the conservation of water used for the development of power through electricity, as well as for irrigation, lies another great function of the national forests, whose importance is only beginning to be generally realized. In the regulation of the development of this power within national forests, through the leasing of power sites without passage of title to the user, through a charge for the occupancy and use of these sites and through rigid provisions against combination and monopoly, the forest service is effectively safeguarding, within national forests, the interests of the American people, whose property these water powers are. Herein lies the greatest public service which the forest service is rendering. The standing timber in the national forests, which is alone sufficient if it were cut clean to meet all the needs of the nation for 10 years, is of less value than the sites for the development of water power, whose usefulness these forests conserve. The complete destruction of this timber by fire would be far less grave than for the power sites within national forests to pass into unregulated corporate ownership or control.

The power of the immediate future is water power. The trust of the immediate future is the power trust, if nation, state and citizen fail to do their utmost. In some regions this trust is already firmly intrenched. In others it is in the making. In every region it is spreading, strengthening, acquiring, where men need power to work for them and water runs down hill. To say there are no combinations to control water powers is to be of them, or to be misinformed.

In addition to their resources of water, wood and grass, the national forests serve a host of minor uses of great importance to the settlers who live in and near them and to the development of the communities in which they lie. A total of about 10,000 permits for these minor uses have been granted, involving the occupancy of national forest land or the use of other resources, of which more than half were without charge.

This vast and increasing business is handled by the officers of the forest service, who are the servants of the people, in the interest first of all of the small man. The timber and the grass the national forests produce cost a fair price to the lumberman and the stockman.

The forest service is not charged with the regulation of corporations. But it is charged with the right care of a vast public property. It sees to it that the yield from this property, the water, the wood and the grass, goes first to those who need it most—to the home builders. For every permit granted to a man to graze 1,000 head of stock or more, the forest service has granted 10 permits to small owners to graze their little bunches of sheep and cattle. For every large sale of timber, it has made 20 small sales to feed the little sawmills upon which the frontier communities depend.

The national forests are to the west what coal is to the engine. The forest service is the stoker. There is coal enough in the bunkers to keep a full head of steam throughout the run, if it is not wasted. If it be wasted, the engine will soon slow down for lack of fuel.

ILLOGICAL FEAR OF LEPROSY

Specialists Are Still Doubtful Whether One Person Can Transmit It to Another.

There is possibly no disease the presence of which inspires greater fear in the public mind than does leprosy. This is perhaps in a measure due to the loathsomeness of the disease in its later stages, but it is in most cases simply fear of a name.

The disease or diseases spoken of as leprosy in the Bible are popularly supposed to be the same as the leprosy of to-day, and the evident fear the leper inspired in the people of old is held to justify the dread with which he is still regarded. The Biblical descriptions do not, however, fit modern leprosy, so that whether the fear of the "leper" of olden times was or was not justified it should not be allowed to color the view with which the leper of to-day is regarded.

Leprosy is indeed an infectious disease, that is to say, it is due to the presence in the tissues of a bacillus, known generally as Hansen's bacillus, after the Norwegian physician who discovered it; but whether it is contagious under the ordinary conditions of modern life in temperate climates, at least, is held by specialists in diseases of the skin to be very doubtful.

Of the few lepers known to the physicians in all the larger cities some are cared for in hospitals, others live at home and visit the clinics or the doctor's office from time to time; yet an instance in which another person has acquired the disease from any of these lepers is unknown.

There are many diseases more to be dreaded than leprosy because more rapidly fatal, more painful or more contagious, yet none of them except perhaps smallpox is more feared.

The illogical terror of leprosy may be the cause of great cruelty to those afflicted. There are thousands of people who show culpable indifference to the enforcement of the laws against spitting in public places, although they know full well that the success of the crusade against tuberculosis hinges largely upon care in this regard. Yet these same persons would fly in horror from any place that had harbored a leper.—Youth's Companion.

DETAILS AND CARE OF FARM MACHINERY

Mower Is Simple and Easy of Management, Yet Its Care and Adjustment Need Attention—By Prof. Fred R. Crane.

The mower is a simple machine, easy of management, and yet certain details of its care and adjustment must be attended to carefully to secure good and economical work.

The cutter-bar sometimes gets out of line with the pitman, causing the machine to run hard. This may also result in breaking the sickle near the sickle-head at A as shown in the drawing.

By the proper adjustment upon the line B, where the cutter-bar hinges, this bar may be brought into line with the pitman, and it should never be worked when out of true. The proper line-up is shown in the drawing.

B, wristpin joint upon which the cutter-bar works and the line upon which the adjustment must be made to bring the cutter-bar into line with the pitman.

Another trouble is that some of the sickle-guards may become bent up or bent down so that the sickle cannot work smoothly upon the wearing surface of the guards. The remedy is to pound each bent guard into exact line with the other guard so that the sickle-sections lie down upon the ledger-plates. Bent guards cause "ragged" cutting and extra wear upon the sickle and require more force to run the machine.

The main-spring of the mower should be adjusted tight enough to assist in raising the cutter bar, but not so tight as to cause the bar to keep flopping up and down when cutting in the field.

BUILD YOUR SILO EARLY

Thrifty Farmer Will Have It Ready to Take Care of Crops Before the Frost Comes.

Silos should be built in time to take care of the crops before frost comes, and the thrifty farmer will build as early as possible.

I built a round silo, 16 feet 4 inches in diamater by 30 feet high, and placed in it about seven acres of drilled corn well eared, and three acres of hill corn from the shock, all cut and blown into the silo, mixed as it went in and wet down well, writes Joseph Newman in Farmers' Review. This made 135 tons of the best winter feed for dairy cows that I ever saw.

We started feeding it to 50 cows and ten head of young stock on December 1, and it was sufficient to last them until March 10.

The corn put in in this way furnished not only the roughage, but concentrates, and all needed to balance the ration was four pounds of gluten meal and four pounds of wheat bran per day for each cow. Following this stock in the barnyard were about 30 hogs, shotes and sows, and with practically no other feed I never saw stock look any better on March 1.

We found the best way to feed was to feed the bran and gluten meal before and during milking time, and the ensilage after milking. The milk was bought by one of the large milk companies which supply Chicago with bottled milk and was pronounced by them a fine article, testing on the average about 3.7 per cent. butter fat by the Babcock test.

For a dairy of 50 cows, two round silos, each 18 feet in diameter by 36 feet high, should furnish enough for the winter's feeding and to carry the stock through the dry time the next fall.

I do not put anything on top of the silage after filling, and did not lose six inches on top, and the pigs took care of that when it was thrown into the barnyard.

Ground Dries Quickly.

The time of year has come when the ground dries out very fast after a rain. Give plenty of time after each rain for the soil to dry out before you begin work on it. More injury than good is done by working the ground when it is too wet. Do something else while the soil is drying so as to be ready when it is in a good workable condition.

Mustard Plants.

The average mustard plant yields over 700,000 seeds; plantain, 14,000; shepherd's purse, 64,000.

CLOD CRUSHER AND LEVELER

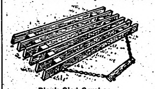
The clod crusher and field leveler for plowing ground shown in the accompanying illustration may be made any size desired. Six pieces of two by six timber may be used, set on edge as indicated, and placed four inches apart. They are held together with blocks having holes in the center, through which are passed half-inch iron rods, 32 inches long.



Plank Clod Crusher.

How to Build a Stack.

Start the stack as though you were going to put up a large shock, except that the sheaves must be a little more slanting. This will insure a good slope for drainage from the bottom to the top with very little, if any, spoiled grain in the bottom of the stack. Lay the butts of each circle of sheaves a little farther out till the stack is of desired size. Then start another layer, beginning at the outside.

After laying the outside circle start the second, the butts of which should reach just to the band or twine, on the first. Continue this to center of the stack, then back to the outside circle again and proceed as before to center of stack. Follow this plan carefully, remembering to keep the middle full, and your stack will shed water like a shingle roof.

Water for Ducklings.

The young ducklings should have water to drink at their feeding time. Many duck raisers are careless in this respect. But an observation of their habits will show that they go to the watering trough constantly while eating from the feed dish. The water should always be deep enough for them to get their bills in up to their eyes. Otherwise, their breathing is hampered by clogged nostrils.

Attention to Poultry.

Poultry should be given as much attention as any branch of the farm's income. It should be studied as carefully as dairying or hog raising and the farmer will find his profits from this source are not inconsiderable.

PLANK FRAME BARN BUILDING

It Is No Longer An Experiment and Has Made Good Wherever Properly Constructed.

In general the foundation and roof are costly parts of a barn. Added storage capacity costs little in height, so it is wise to build of good height. The plank frame is no longer an experiment. It has made good where properly constructed. Its advocates claim a saving of material over the old style frame barn, writes E. L. Allen, in Rural New Yorker. But if the building is high (as it should be) it will require longer material for braces. The long timbers are hard to get and are more expensive. Another advantage in the plank frame is that it is much more quickly and easily erected. Quite a large saving may be made here. The roofing question is a complicated one. A good deal might be said for and against almost any kind of roof. But the slate roof is the cheapest and most satisfactory in the end. If the barn is to house stock, let the stable receive your special attention. Study the subject of ventilation, and adopt some system, as King's, that will enable you to have pure fresh air in the stable constantly. It is vital. Plan for all the sunlight practical. Make it sanitary. There is a chance for a lot of headwork here. Money expended to secure best stable conditions will pay you the biggest kind of interest every year you use it.

Largest Tobacco Farm.

The largest tobacco farm in the world, containing 25,000 acres, is near Amsterdam, Ga. Here is grown about one-third of all the Sumatra tobacco used for cigar wrappers in the United States.

Herring Taken by the Billion.

One Doctor—Only One

No sense in running from one doctor to another! Select the best one, then stand by him. No sense either in trying this thing, that thing, for your cough. Carefully, deliberately select the best cough medicine, then take it. Stick to it. Ask your doctor about Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for throat and lung troubles. Sold for nearly seventy years. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Why try this thing, that thing, for your constipation? Why not stick to the good old reliable family laxative—Ayer's Pills? Ask your doctor if he approves this advice.

The Minneapolis Tribune, leading Republican paper of Minnesota, says that everywhere "the voters should prefer a Democrat to a Republican who voted for Cannon."

The death of Martin N. Johnson, United States senator from North Dakota, leaves a vacancy to be filled by Governor Burke's appointment, and for the first time in a good many years the northern Missippi valley will have a Democratic representative in the upper house.

Hon. Halvor Steenerson has announced his candidacy for re-election to Congess and says he will not vote for Cannon "under any circumstances." Halvor once before made this pledge and violated it. It may be necessary for him to put up a bond to that effect.

In theory, at least, we imprison criminals primarily to reform them. We cannot conceive that whipping is conducive to that end. Most convicts imagine that they have been mistreated by the judge's sentence. It cultivates and strengthens their imaginary grudges against society when they are whipped, and that feeling does not help them to reform when they leave the penitentiary. Moreover, whatever spark of self respect may remain must be extinguished by the brutality of a whipping.

"At Yale," replied President Hadley to a visiting clergyman who asked how long it was the custom to preach, "there is a fixed belief that no conversions are made after the first half hour." It is a good thing to know when to stop talking, either in the pulpit or on the platform. It is easier to bore than to please, as many audiences will testify. The wonder is that so many public speakers are so slow of observation. Brevity is rarer than wit, for the professional humorist in public is likely to be tempted to length by applause.

The Fairmont Independent notes that one of the village justices of Wells put a practical idea into operation last week. Some time ago a wife beater in that village paid a fine of $75.99 and costs, but as usual in such cases, the wife and children suffered for the necessities of life on account of the fine. Last week he was fined $90 for the same offense which was paid. The judge remitted the fine and placed it in a bank to the credit of the beaten wife to be used for herself and children, and now they are dressed and fed. The idea is a practical one which might well be followed by other justices similar cases.

The following are some gems culled from the examination papers of a public school: "Sodom and Gomorrah are the two largest volcanoes." * * * "The office of the gastric juice is situated in the stomach." * * * "Queen Elizabeth was one of the queens of England. She was famous for her fondness for chivalry and cavalry and other wild game." * * * "Isthmus is a place across which to build a canal." * * * "A mountain range is a very large cook stove." * * * "Drink is the curse of mankind, and has a marked influence on the doctor's conclusions in cases of sickness." * * * "The chief exports of Russia are Russian sables and immigrants."

"Surely," said President Lowell of Harvard university in his inaugural address, "the essence of a liberal education consists in an attitude of mind, a familiarity with methods of thought, an ability to use information, rather than a memory stocked with facts, however valuable such a storehouse may be." President Hadley of Yale puts it this way: "The ideal college education seems to me to be one where the student learns things he is not going to use, by methods that he is going to use. The former element gives the breadth, the latter element gives the training."

"A merchant navy resting on a subsidy," says Harper's Weekly, "is an image with clay feet. We have subsidized manufacturers and know the evils of that—how easy it is to form the habit, how naturally it grows, and how very, very hard it is to break it off."

Job Eastman, one of the pioneers of Minnesota, died last week at Anoka. He was the father of John W. Eastman of the Thief River Falls News and of Charles C. Eastman of the Wadena Pioneer-Journal.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Fairmont Sentinel: Everybody is asking "What is Bob Dunn going to do?" Which goes to show that Robert is still an important factor in Minnesota politics.

Albert Lea Standard: Next, following Taft, if Joe Cannon will only come into the district and indorse and laud Tawney, the latter's finish will be felicitously accelerated.

Elk River Star-News: The lieutenant governorship looks more attractive to the politicians than it used to, and it will no longer be passed along with a "Give it-to-George" wave of the hand.

Madison Independent Press: If Fred Johnson is the man that some of our exchanges picture him to be in speaking of the democratic nomination for governor we would say, go after it, Freddie.

LeSueur News: It is said the republican party of Minnesota will be forced to adopt a county option platform for the next campaign. Admited, but what of it? No party is in style now, if it lives up to its platform promise.

Red Wing Free Press: A political party which places its president under the necessity of junketing through the country to explain away and apologize for its maladministration, as President Taft is obliged to do, is not such a commendable party that one needs to blush for criticising it and its leaders.

Sauk Rapids Sentinel-Free Press: A contemporary thinks that "Minnesota is entitled to have the head of one of its great men printed on a series of postage stamps." It is, and we suggest that the head of that noble personage, Samuel Roosevelt Van Sant be selected.—Princeton Union.

Then you could lick him all right, Bob.

Montevideo Leader: Fred W. Johnson, brother of our late governor, is being talked about for gubernatorial timber next year. Mr. Johnson is an able man, a good public speaker, a successful newspaper man and a protege of John Lind, who appointed him state librarian while he was governor. We very much doubt if he would ask for the place, but he would certainly make a good run if he should be nominated and should go after it and would find lots of friends both in and outside the party.

Park Rapids Clipper: In making selections of candidates for the next legislature the northern part of the state should keep in mind that reapportionment is all important and that until we have a just representation at the statehouse we can hope for little else that we require. Legislators in both houses should be selected who are pledged to work primarily for this one object. If we do this all together we will get it.

Notice of Tax Sale of Unredeemed Lands in Red Lake County, Minnesota, Under Sections 936, 937 and 938, Revised Laws of 1905, as Amended by Chapter 430, General Laws 1907.

Pursuant to the provisions of Sections 936, 937 and 938 of Revised Laws of 1905, as amended by Chapter 430, General Laws 1907, notice is hereby given that on Monday, the 8th day of November, 1909, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at the office of the County Auditor in the County Court House at Red Lake Falls, Minn., in Red Lake County, Minn., all tracts or parcels of land situate in Red Lake county, bid in for the State, and not assigned to purchasers or redeemed within three years from the date of the tax sale at which said parcels were offered and so bid in by the state, will be offered at public sale, and will be sold to the highest bidder therefor. No parcel will be sold for a less sum than the aggregate taxes, penalties, interests and costs charged against it, unless the cash value thereof fairly determined by the State Auditor, shall be less than such aggregate, provided however, that all parcels bid in for the state, for the taxes of 1901, or prior years, and not assigned to purchasers or redeemed as aforesaid, may be disposed of for one-half of the total taxes as originally assessed. Purchasers shall forthwith pay the amount of their respective bids to the County Treasurer. Said sale will begin at the time and place named above and will continue from day to day until every such tract or parcel shall have been offered for sale, under the provisions of said statutes. The list of said real property, subject to said sale, and which will be so offered for sale, unless previously redeemed, is now on file in the office of said County Auditor, and of the State Auditor of said State.

Owners or interested parties may redeem their property by paying the full amount due to the County Treasurer, at any time before sale and within sixty (60) days after proof of service of the Notice of Expiration of Redemption has been filed with the County Auditor.

After the Notice of Expiration of Redemption has been served, as provided in Section 956, Revised Laws 1905, the Governor is authorized to issue a deed in the name of the State to the persons entitled thereto. (See Section 938 R. L.)

Petition for Public Ditch.

The undersigned land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for, the expense of the contruction of the Public Ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare and the reclamation of wet and overflowed lands require the establishment and contruction of a Public Ditch along the following described route in the Towns of Star and Hickory in said County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said ditch is as follows: Commencing at Northwest corner of section two (2) in township No. one hundred fifty-three (153) North of Range No. thirty-nine (39) in Red Lake county, Minnesota, thence running south along the section line between sections two (2) and three (3), between sections ten (10) and eleven (11), between sections fourteen (14) and fifteen (15), between sections twenty-two (22) and twenty-three (23), between sections twenty-six (26) and twenty-seven (27) and between sections thirty-four (34) and thirty-five (35) to the south-west corner of the south-west quarter (S.W.¼) of section thirty-five (35) in said township No. one hundred fifty-three (153) north of range No. thirty-nine (39), thence continuing due south from the north-west corner of the north-east quarter (N.E. ¼) of section three (3) township No. one hundred fifty-two (152) North of range No. thirty-nine (39) through said section three (3) in a southeasterly direction to a point on the Red Lake river one hundred rods west of the south-west corner of section two (2), township one hundred fifty-two (152) north of Range No. thirty-nine (39) and terminating at the Red Lake river in said township No. one hundred fifty-two (152) north of range No. thirty-nine (39) as its outlet.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such Drainage Ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by chapter two hundred thirty (230), of the general laws of Minnesota for 1905 and acts amendatory thereof.

GOV. EBERAART'S FIRST APPOINTMENT

A CAMPAIGN MAPPED OUT.

Secretary of the Treasury McVeagh will at the next session of congress recommend a uniform oleo tax of two cents a pound. It is now a quarter of a cent a pound on uncolored oleo and ten cents a pound on oleo colored to resemble buter. That is one reason why Billy Lorimer, who in congress fought the Grout law taxing oleo ten cents a pound at every stage, was bought a seat in the United States senate. Because he favors the reduction of the tax on oleo is one reason why Joe Cannon is kept in the speaker's chair. It was useful to the packers to have a man there to fix the ways and means committee and the committee on agriculture for them. The other day the president appointed a Chicago man on the tariff commission. His name is Sanders, and he is the editor of the Breeder's Gazette. It was as an attachment to the tariff law that McVeagh sought to reduce the tax on oleo. In the Breeder's Gazette of Sept. 22, this man Sanders speaks of the reduction of the oleo tax as "another attack on oleo." "The chafing of dairymen," he says, "under the competition of butterine is crystallizing into another campaign against this byproduct," and he speaks of a uniform two cent tax as adding to the "burdens" of the packers. Note the craft with which he conveys the impression that this fight is brought on by the dairymen and that its result will be detrimental to the packers. That is part of the packers' campaign.

WHERE TAWNEY COMES IN.

And here I get to where Tawney comes in. He has plenty of political sins to answer for of course. But whatever else may be said of him every hour he has been in congress Tawney has been loyal to the dairymen. If it had not been for Tawney the ten cent tax on oleo would never have been enforced. If that tax is not repealed at the next session of congress, Tawney is the one congressional leader the dairymen look to to prevent it. There is no doubt at all where he stands on the subject; there never has been.

WHAT MAY HAPPEN.

When Secretary McVeagh begins his fight to reduce the oleo tax, he will have Cannon and Lorimer in congress to help him. In the lobby will possibly be their man Sanders helping out his Chicago friends and patrons. The packers who want to go more extensively into the profitable business of oleo making will be there with oodles of money. The range cattle men and the senators from the range country will back them up. So will the cotton-seed-oil people from the south. So may the president. Now suppose Tawney leads the fight against this crowd, and suppose he beats them out, are the farmers and dairymen and buttermakers of the First district, whose business he will have saved, and who with those dependent upon their patronage form practically its entire population, going to be as hard on him because he didn't vote just as they wanted him to on the tariff as they otherwise might be? I don't believe it. And so I say that those who are quite certain that they got Tawney skinned have another think coming. Before they quite make up their minds, it will be just as well to await the result of the row the packers' proposition is certain to kick up in the next session of congress.

S.S.S. CURES SKIN DISEASES

The skin is composed of two distinct layers. One is known as the epidermis, or outer skin, which has no fibres, and serves principally as a covering to the body, and a protection from outward dangers to the delicate flesh beneath. The other layer is known as the derma; or true skin, and is composed of elastic fibres, fat tissue, glands, lymphatics, nerves, etc. The thousands of tiny veins and arteries with which it is interlaced constantly supply every fibre and tissue with healthful properties from the circulation to keep the skin smooth and perfect.

This is changed, however, when the blood becomes infected with humors, acids or impurities. Instead of constantly supplying rich, nutritive properties to the skin, the circulation deposits the acrid impurity with which it is contaminated, into the sensitive fibres and tissues. This causes irritation and inflammation, which splits or breaks the thin outer cuticle, while the tissues beneath ulcerate and discharge upon the surface in the form of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, etc. There is likewise a dry form of skin diseases, such as Acne, Psoriasis, etc. In these varieties the humor in the blood diseases and inflames the glands, hair follicles, etc., causing them to swell and protrude to the outer surface. Pimples, rashes, eruptions and like troubles, are all dependent on imperfect blood, and no one can have a good complexion, free from humiliating blemishes, unless the skin is kept healthy by good blood.

S.S.S. cures Skin Diseases of every kind by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the blood. It cools the acid-heated circulation, builds it up to normal strength, multiplies its rich, nutritious corpuscles, and adds to its purity in every way. Then the skin, instead of being irritated, inflamed and diseased by acrid impurities or fiery humors, is nourished, soothed and softened by a cooling, healthy stream of blood. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and therein lies its ability to cure skin diseases. Book on Skin Diseases and medical advice free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

S.S.S. CURED HER.

Some time ago I was troubled with a severe skin affection called Acne. Small pimples would appear on my face and neck which would in time fester and become inflamed. My complexion was muddy and sallow and most unsightly. I chanced to read about S.S.S., and concluded to give it a trial; the result was entirely satisfactory, my complexion soon becoming clear, the pimples disappearing, and my skin became soft and smooth. I cannot too highly recommend S.S.S. to any who are likewise afflicted.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

Tickling or dry coughs will quickly loosen when using Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is so thoroughly harmless that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to use nothing else, even for very young babies. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing and mountainous shrub give the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. It calms the cough, heals the sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Accept no other. Sold by all dealers.

It's a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the heart and kidneys. That is all wrong. A weak stomach means weak stomach nerves. always. And this is also true of the heart and kidneys The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping stomach heart and kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure so soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by all dealers.

THE ENCORE HABIT.

Sims Reeves, who in his day was accepted as the most celebrated tenor on the concert stage, was so much of a favorite that whenever he sang he was usually greeted with a hearty encore, accompanied with enthusiastic cheers.

Reeves was very good natured about the matter, but he made it a rule never to sing more than one selection when he felt that his voice was not in first class shape. He happened to notice that an elderly man, who turned out to be a dealer in hats along the Strand, London, attended nearly every concert within convenient distance if Sims Reeves happened to be on the bill and generally led the encore brigade. This hatter was a persistent person and often applauded until he had forced Reeves to respond to double and triple encores.

Determined to teach the little hatter a lesson, one afternoon just as dark was approaching Reeves entered his admirer's store and said, "One hat please," naming the particular shape which he desired. The little hatter didn't recognize the great tenor and handed out one hat.

"Good," said Reeves. "How much is this hat?"

"Five shillings," said the store proprietor.

"Encore," said Reeves.

A second hat was forthcoming, and Reeves ultimately obtained three "encore" hats. When the little hatter demanded £1 sterling for the purchase, Reeves pretended to be furious.

"Send these four hats to this address," ordered the tenor in terrible tone, "but I only pay for one hat. Do you understand? The three other hats are 'encore' hats. If you make me sing songs for nothing, you must send me hats for nothing."

The little hatter was speechless.—Portland Oregonian.

Theater Seats.

The seats were in the orchestra on the theater's left. "The left side of the house always sells out first," said the box office man. "Everybody seems to prefer it to the right. I don't know why. Boxes especially—we can sell two left to one right box every time. Nobody takes the right side for choice. And there is no reason for this. As much goes on in the right extremity of the stage as in the left—we proprietors always look after that—and you see just as much from the right as from the left side. Why, then, is the left side always at a premium?"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

His Title.

"Papa," said little James, "what do they call a man who writes comic operas—a composer?"

"No, my son," the old man answered; "he is usually called a plagiarist."—Los Angeles Times.

Do not try to drive your employes ahead of you, but keep ahead of them and invite them to come on.—Success

"PAGEANT."

Professor Skeat on the Proper Pronunciation of the Word.

Instead of trusting to casual observers, it is far better to understand the principles that govern our pronunciation. There is one principle in particular which, rightly considered, gives us a good deal of help in the instance under consideration.

In my "Primer of English Etymology" I give some simple rules of accentuation. Rule 1 is as follows:

"When the length of a word is augmented an original long vowel is apt to be shortened by the accentual stress falling upon it." Such augmentation is due to the formation of a derivative.

An easy example is seen in the case of cone, pronounced with a long "o," for if we form a derivative by adding the suffix "ic" the result is conic, with a short "o."

There is a general principle that affects the whole language and sets up a standard habit. By way of illustration, compare bile with bilious, crime with criminal, brake and bracken, dine and dinner, mine and mineral, coal and collier and perhaps at least seventy more. A remarkable instance is seen in collie, which is merely a new pronunciation of coaly. Certain dogs were once called coaly dogs because of their coal black markings. An extension of the same principle may be made in comparing the dissyllabic forms agent and cogent with the allied trysyllables agitate and cogitate.

When once such a principle has become general it is obvious that a word like pageant will be influenced by the very large number of dissyllables that have the former vowel short, and this is why the truly normal pronunciation of the word resembles the "a" in Paget. I do not certainly know the origin of that name, but I suppose it is merely the diminutive of page, in which the "a" is shortened as a matter of course simply because the diminutive "et" has been added.

The pronunciation of primer has often been discussed, and many are they who think that they clinch the matter by saying that the "i" in the Latin primus is long, for that proves nothing at all as regards modern English and those who have studied our peculiar ways with the closest attention are well aware that the normal way is, after all, to pronounce it as if it were spelled primmer. We do not therefore spell it with a double "m," because that is not our system. We write tonic and conic and mimic in order to show their connection with tone and cone and mime, and we trust that the unfortunate reader, after he has thus had the etymology explained to him, will provide the pronunciation for himself. Such a word as pageant may be usefully compared with magic and tropic and agitate.—London Academy.

Our Languages.

What a lot of languages we talk, even if we talk only English! I was assailed by a man across the luncheon table with a language about a cup tie final and confessed that it was quite unintelligible. Then another man talked about golf, which is another language. And then the woman's language elbows these columns. "The Countess — wore a sea green cloth skirt with a bolero of the same color and a white marabou stole, and a black taffeta bow garnished her huge hat of burnt tagel straw." It is a fine example of women's slang. But to the man it means nothing—but expense.—London Outlook.

Homemade Ink.

A good ink is made in this way: Bruise half a pound of nutgalls and stand in one quart of water, shaking it now and then, for about four hours. Then add three ounces and a half of gum arabic and when it is quite dissolved three ounces of copperas. To prevent the ink from becoming moldy when kept add three or four drops of creosote. This gives a pleasant-like smell to the ink and does not corrode the pens as chloride of mercury would do.

Preparing For a Siege.

Wife—The last time I asked you to give me some money you said you couldn't because the cashier was sick. Now you say it's the treasurer. Husband—I know it. He caught it from the cashier, and now I'm afraid the secretary will get it.—Life.

A Queer Attack.

"Some people can stand on the top of a high building and look down," said Mrs. Lapsing, "but I can't. It always gives me an attack of verdigris."—Chicago Tribune.

Cutting.

Hubby (modestly)—I was taken by surprise when you accepted me. Wifey (sarcastically)—Is that so? You were taken by mistake if anything.—Kansas City Journal.

Perfectly Reckless.

The members of the church voted that their dearly beloved and devoted pastor should have a vacation, and so he decided that he would visit a brother worker in the neighboring village. This good brother, recognizing his fellow worker in the Lord way back among the congregation on Sunday morning and wishing to show every courtesy, asked him to lead in prayer. But the visitor calmly replied: "You'll have to excuse me, dear brother. I'm on my vacation."

BUTTER LAMBS.

Fat and Early Ones For Easter and Fancy Trade.

Some years ago we attempted to raise "Easter lambs," and, though we did not get our lambs out early enough, we got some experience in intensive lamb production which has since helped us much in our sheep operations and which incidentally shows what gains lambs will make, says C. A. Waugh in National Stockman.

We bred 100 ewes to lamb in February, thinking that would be early enough for us to make the lambs fat enough by Easter. Instead we ought to have bred at least one month earlier, which additional month would have made things just right.

We housed the ewes in a large warm shed in which we have since fed over 800 lambs. One requisite for early and quick lamb production is plenty of warmth and room.

During the entire winter we gave the whole bunch one bushel of corn apiece per day, feeding cornstalks and clover hay as roughage. We also fed nearly all the turnips they would eat. This root crop stimulated milk production.

Let no one who is not an old shepherd try to raise early lambs. One must truly love one's sheep, and if you don't you have to make the bluff seem real. As soon as the lambs began to drop it was eternal vigilance. If one slept too long a lamb was the price of the sleep. We divided the night into watches. The hired man watched until midnight, while the "boss" watched until morning. As soon as a ewe had a lamb she was put off in a pen away from the rest of the flock. Every few days we would have graduation exercises, and each pen of ewes would move up a grade.

If a young lamb were chilled the least bit of a blanket was wrapped about him and he was placed in a capacious basket behind the kitchen stove. If pretty far gone a spoonful of brandy was poured down his throat. This will revive almost any lamb if he is not too far gone. The brandy does not make him drunk. Try it next spring.

Big Gains, Good Price.

We succeeded in raising 100 lambs, one per ewe. When these were old enough we nailed slats around a pen, placing these just far enough apart to permit a lamb to squeeze through. In this pen were placed all the cracked corn and other fattening grains that they would eat. The gains made were almost phenomenal. Several which we weighed at consecutive periods gained seven pounds per week. The 1st of August they averaged seventy-five pounds apiece, many weighing upward of ninety pounds. At that time we received $6 per hundredweight at home. Now the same lambs will bring about $7.20 per hundredweight delivered at our home station.

Why Not?

You perhaps wonder why we have not tried again, breeding earlier, as I have suggested. We would have done so, only that the kind of hired help which will sit up half of the night in order to look after your interests cannot be picked up at a minute's notice.

When to Lift Your Hat.

In answer to the question, "Please tell when and where are, or is, the correct time for a gentleman to lift or remove his hat," we reply: Without consulting authorities of etiquette, in fact giving it to you offhand, so to speak, we should say at the following times and on the following occasions, respectively, the hat should be lifted or removed as circumstances indicate: When mopping the brow, when taking a bath, when eating, when going to bed, when taking up a collection, when having the hair trimmed, when being shampooed, when standing on the head.—Wichita (Kan.) Beacon.

ANOTHER WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Gardiner, Maine.—"I have been a great sufferer from organic troubles and a severe female weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but I could not bear to think of it. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash—and was entirely cured after three months' use of them."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Me.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and renewer of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills, and creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake as well as those you love, give it a trial.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

Dorothy and the Stork.

When little Dorothy Walworth was introduced to her baby brother in the First Methodist Episcopal Parsonage in Yonkers, N. Y., she manifested intense interest, but was not astonished.

"I knew he was coming," she exclaimed; "I knew it."

Pressed for an explanation, the five-year-old said: "I was down to the Bronx zoo the other day and saw the stork in his cage. I recognized him by the black stripes on his wings that papa said were there. Well, when the stork was standing alone on one leg, I went close to him and whispered in his ear that I wanted him to bring me a baby brother or sister. He didn't say anything, but I knew he would do it, because he bent his head toward me and winked an eye."

His Proper Field.

A colored man was brought before a police judge charged with stealing chickens. He pleaded guilty and received sentence, when the judge asked how it was he managed to lift those chickens right under the window of the owner's house when there was a dog loose in the yard. "Hit wouldn't be no use, judge," said the man, "to try to 'splain this thing to yo' all. Ef you was to try it you like as not would get yer hide full of shot an' get no chickens, nuther. Ef yo' want to engage in any rascality, judge, yo' better stick to de bench, whar yo' am familiar."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Many Were in the Same Boat.

According to the Saturday Evening Post, this is a story heard with much glee by congress during the last days of the Roosevelt administration:

During the recent cold spell in Washington, a man, shivering and ragged, knocked at the door of a K street house and said to the lady: "Please, madam, give me something to eat. I am suffering severely from exposure."

"You must be more specific," the lady replied. "Are you a member of the senate or of the house?"

A One-Part Melodrama.

He—No. It's the eternal struggle between religion and society. He is as straight-backed as she is straight-front.—Life.

A Ready Explanation.

"What is the reason you were so late in discovering the north pole?"

"Well," answered the explorer, "you see they have such long nights in the arctic regions that I overslept."

A BANKER'S NERVE

Broken by Coffee and Restored by Postum.

A banker needs perfect control of the nerves, and a clear, quick, accurate brain. A prominent banker of Chattanooga tells how he keeps himself in condition:

"Up to 17 years of age I was not allowed to drink coffee, but as soon as I got out in the world I began to use it and grew very fond of it. For some years I noticed no bad effects from its use, but in time it began to affect me unfavorably. My hands trembled, the muscles of my face twitched, my mental processes seemed slow and in other ways my system got out of order. These conditions grew so bad at last that I had to give up coffee altogether.

"My attention having been drawn to Postum, I began its use on leaving off the coffee, and it gives me pleasure to testify to its value. I find it a delicious beverage; like it just as well as I did coffee, and during the years that I have used Postum I have been free from the distressing symptoms that accompanied the use of coffee. The nervousness has entirely disappeared, and I am as steady of hand as a boy of 25, though I am more than 92 years old. I owe all this to Postum."

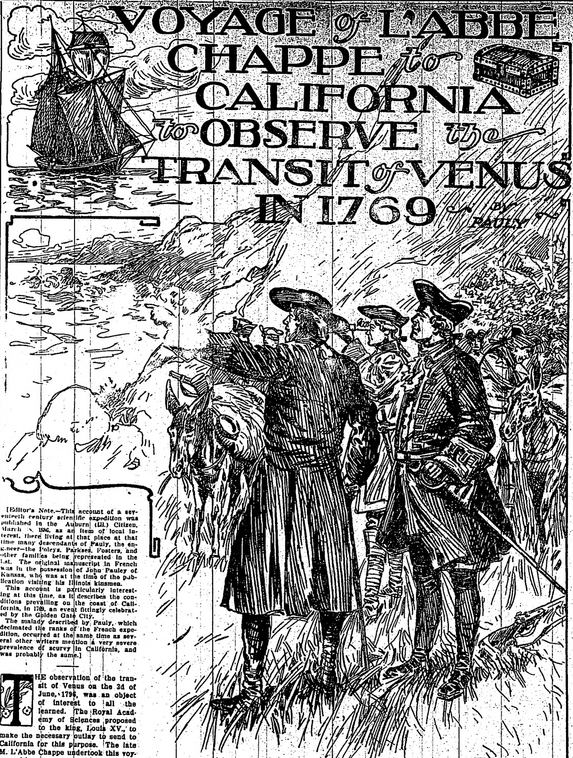
VOYAGE of L'ABBE CHAPPE to CALIFORNIA to OBSERVE the TRANSIT of VENUS IN 1769

By PAULY



[Editor's Note.—This account of a seventeenth century scientific expedition was published in the Auburn (Ill.) Citizen, March [illegible], 1886, as an item of local interest, there living at that place at that time many descendants of Pauly, the engineer—the Poleys, Parkses, Fosters, and other families being represented in the list. The original manuscript in French was in the possession of John Pauley of Kansas, who was at the time of the publication visiting his Illinois kinsmen.

This account is particularly interesting at this time, as it describes the conditions prevailing on the coast of California, in 1769, an event fittingly celebrated by the Golden Gate City.

The malady described by Pauly, which decimated the ranks of the French expedition, occurred at the same time as several other writers mention a very severe prevalence of scurvy in California, and was probably the same.]

THE observation of the transit of Venus on the 3d of June, 1796, was an object of interest to all the learned. The Royal Academy of Sciences proposed to the king, Louis XV., to make the necessary outlay to send to California for this purpose. The late M. L'Abbe Chappe undertook this voyage with a courage worthy of his zeal for the progress of science. I was selected to accompany him and we set sail for Mexico in the month of September, 1768.

After a perilous voyage of about 3,000 leagues, we arrived in Mexico on Easter day, 1769. Time was passing; we stopped but eight days to refresh ourselves. The viceroy procured us mules and provisions, and we undertook to perform by land a part of the remainder of our travels, which was about 300 leagues. Amid lofty mountains, dreadful precipices and arid deserts, we encountered new dangers every day. We failed from fear a thousand times. We were also oppressed by the excessive heat, which left us hardly strength enough to drag ourselves. A thousand insects of every species gave us no rest by day or night, and we had constantly to be on our guard against the very ferocious beasts with which the country is covered. Moreover, we lacked the necessaries of life, for the provisions that we got in Mexico had been spoiled by the heat. We were obliged to live on wild cattle and whatever fruits we could find here and there. We made our halts near some river or spring, that we might slake the burning thirst with which we were constantly consumed; to find one it was often necessary to march a whole day's journey.

Arrived in the evening in some valley, or on the side of some hill, we would endeavor to take upon the ground (et a la belle etoille), the repose which our cruel fatigue rendered so necessary. When scarcely asleep we were often aroused by a storm, and then by the impetuous torrents that came down upon us from the heights of the mountains. Many a dark night we had to save ourselves and our equipage, fearful at every step of tumbling down some of the precipices.

After running a thousand risks we arrived at last at the port of San Blas, on the Pacific ocean; thence we embarked for California on a brigantine which the viceroy of Mexico had had prepared. The Pacific ocean, although very tranquil, is not the less dangerous on account of the (vigies) with which it is filled.

The great calm which prevailed at that time caused us to despair of arriving in time to accomplish the object of our voyage. After six weeks sailing, during which we made but 150 leagues, on the greatest breadth of the sea, the shortness of the time caused us to risk a hazardous exploit.

The part of California near which we found ourselves was the port of San Jose—so dangerous that no one had ever landed there. The access to it is guarded by the incessant waves that break impetuously against the rocks.

The Spanish astronomers who were of our company wished to wait for a favorable wind to land at Cape St. Lucas, which was distant but ten leagues. The landing there is indeed less dangerous, but we did not follow their advice because we were pressed to arrive at the place of our destination; we resolved to attempt to disembark at the first land we should discover.

While these gentlemen were yet deliberating, four Indian sailors and myself let down the long boat; we took with us half of the instruments. I agreed with the Abbe Chappe that if we perished he might find other means to land elsewhere with the rest, which would be sufficient for making his observations. I embarked then in the long boat with my four sailors, steering directly for the coast; the nearer we approached it the more we were sensible of the difficulty of landing.

We were constantly thrown back by the accumulated waves, and our boat threatened all the while to ship water. When on the point of losing courage, one of the sailors discovered, at a distance, the mouth of an unknown river. This discovery animated us; we reached the coast by this mouth but with great difficulty. I sent back the long boat for the Abbe Chappe and the Spanish astronomers, who arrived safely enough.

Arrived on the peninsula the twenty-first of May, 1769, 13 days before the epoch of the transit of Venus. We found no (azile a pouvoir nous mettre a labir), the inclemency of the weather.

The savages that repaired to us said that a contagion was prevailing in this country which ravaged it completely. The interpreter who translated this added that they said that in order to withdraw ourselves from the influence of this terrible malady, it was necessary to remove some hundred or more leagues farther to the north.

The means of undertaking this new journey, broken down with fatigue as we were; we had neither horses nor carriers to transport our baggage; it was impossible to march on foot, and we shrank from a journey through a desert. All these reasons decided us to occupy ourselves with no business but that which had brought us.

We labored to construct an observatory, which was ready the twenty-eighth day of May, six days before the epoch when we would have need of it.

We made our observations on the third of June, with the greatest exactness.

The contagion made new progress every day; a general sorrow reigned in all this part of California; we were not long without participating in it in a distressing manner. This dreadful malady came upon us six or seven days after the observation. We were wholly without succor; we could not be useful to one another, because we were attacked almost all at once.

The little medicine that we had brought from France was useless, from want of knowing how to apply it.

Nevertheless, the abbe, all sick as he was, continued his observations all the time. After observing an eclipse of the moon, he at last yielded to his faintness, the delirium of his disease left him but little time to examine himself; he died the first of August, 1769. We were all dying (I and the companions of our voyage), when I had the sorrow to close his eyelids.

Our situation and our want of strength induced us in this case to bury him without much ceremony. I devoted some moments to regret for the loss I had suffered, and in the height of a disease from which I did not expect to recover I took the precaution to collect all the papers relating to the object of the voyage. I placed them in a casket with an address to the viceroy of Mexico. I earnestly begged some Indian chiefs who were about me to make this casket safe in case we should all die, and to transmit it to the vessel which ought to arrive in the month of September to take us. My intention in this was to secure to my country this valuable depot. I remained in my condition of sickness, pain and wretchedness until the twenty-ninth of September.

At last the captain of the vessel arrived; he had landed at the island of Ceralvo, which is situated some 30 leagues from San Jose. My joy was so much the greater in seeing him that he pressed me to quit the fearful place where M. L'Abbe Chappe and all the rest had died. We were carried to Ceralvo. I forgot to say that this cruel contagion had taken from us the chaplain and nearly all the persons that formed our little company.

Although sick and oppressed with grief, I was compelled to undertake the perilous route which I had followed in coming, sometimes upon mules, sometimes upon the backs of the Indians, when it was necessary to cross the streams. With all this trouble, I reached Mexico the twenty-third day of November, 1769.

There I was received by monsieur the marquis of Croix, the viceroy of that country, with a compassion worthy of that good patriot. He had had the kindness to send to meet me a carriage and his physician. Arrived at the capital of Mexico, and having paid my respects to the viceroy I was lodged by his orders at the expense of the city.

When I left Mexico the marquis de Croix recommended me cordially to the commander of the Spanish fleet, in which I embarked. We landed at Cadiz the twenty-first of July, 1770. The court was at the Escurial. I had myself taken thither, and presented myself to the marquis d'Ossun, then French ambassador in Spain. He received me with marks of kindness and consideration, and gave orders to show me whatever they have to show strangers in this royal house.

He caused me to dispatch in advance of the party, the strictest orders through the minister of customs, that at no pass on my route must be searched either myself or the chests in which were the observations which I bore.

I did not arrive in Paris till the fifth of the following December. I sent to the Academy the observations that we made in California. This society expressed the greatest satisfaction with my zeal and my services. They presented me to the king, and to all his ministers. They solicited for me a recommendation of my labors. His majesty, Louis XV. granted me a small pension of 800f.

The government is too equitable to leave me in want in the flower of my age, afflicted with the evils which I have incurred for the service, and indispensably obliged to have a servant to lead me. I hope, then, from his justice and from his goodness, that he will grant me an increase of the pension sufficient to enable me to accomplish with decency the rest of my public career.

HELD TO STRICT ACCOUNTING

Chinese Police Officials Are Expected to Be Urgent in Preventing and Punishing Crime.

In lemon-colored silk a Chinese diplomat on an Atlantic City pier talked about Chinese laws.

"Some of our laws, you know, are very stimulating," he said. "For example, Chi owed money to a money lender. Chi would not pay, and the money lender hanged himself on Chi's doorpost. Chi was condemned to death. You see, he was really responsible for the money lender's death.

"A son able to support his parents is imprisoned for life if he won't do so. A son unable to support them is imprisoned for three years, as we hold—and quite rightly—that there must be something wrong with a young man who can't support his parents.

"Our police are excellent, thanks to the stimulus of our law. When a crime is committed a sleuth is put upon the case and given, say 30 days, to land the criminal. If the sleuth fails, he himself pays the penalty of the crime, less two degrees. Thus, if the Sigel murder had occurred in China, a police official would now be undergoing life imprisonment. That, too, is a just and stimulating law. For if the police can neither prevent nor punish such a crime as the Sigel murder, then they should see themselves punished for their rank incapacity."

Good Gunnery at Sea.

If our navy's gunners can shoot little targets so full of holes nobody is able to see the exact score they can shoot up an enemy's big battleships so thoroughly that nobody can tell or many care to know which guns won the victory. The target practice off the Virginia capes should make every American proud of our ships and of the men in them.

BABY'S WATERY ECZEMA.

Itched and Scratched Until Blood Ran —$50 Spent on Useless Treatments —Disease Seemed Incurable.

Cured by Cuticura for $1.50.

"When my little boy was two and a half months old he broke out on both cheeks with eczema. It was the itchy, watery kind and we had to keep his little hands wrapped up all the time, and if he would happen to get them uncovered he would claw his face till the blood streamed down on his clothing. We called in a physician at once, but he gave an ointment which was so severe that my babe would scream when it was put on. We changed doctors and medicine until we had spent fifty dollars or more and baby was getting worse. I was so worn out watching and caring for him night and day that I almost felt sure the disease was incurable. But finally reading of the good results of the Cuticura Remedies, I determined to try them. I can truthfully say I was more than surprised, for I bought only a dollar and a half's worth of the Cuticura Remedies (Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills), and they did more good than all my doctors' medicines I had tried, and in fact entirely cured him. His face is perfectly clear of the least spot or scar of anything. Mrs. W. M. Comerer, Burnt Cabins, Pa., Sept. 15, 1908."

Expensive Silence.

Little four-year-old Alice was lying on the floor whining and crying steadily one afternoon, until, her father's patience exhausted, he called out to her: "Oh, stop, Alice, and I'll give you a penny."

Alice stopped only long enough to answer: "I can't stop for less than a nickel! Boohoo! Boohoo!"

A Frencch Scholar.

As William bent over her fair face he whispered: "Darling, if I should ask you in French if I might kiss you, what would you answer?"

She, calling up her scanty knowledge of the French language, exclaimed, "Billet doux."—Tit-Bits.

LEFT THEIR SEATS HASTILY

"While in Paris this summer another girl and I went out to Versailles one afternoon," said a school teacher who had just returned from abroad. "It was dusk when we reached the railway station, and as there was no waiting room we sat down on two crates that were out on the platform among a lot of others. We noticed that the station employes kept staring at us with a persistence that was annoying. Presently a man in a shabby uniform with a bucket on his arm approached us. He touched his cap deferentially and said—in French, of course:

"'Mesdames, pray do not let me disturb you, but I am forced to open the boxes on which you are seated in order to feed the boa constrictor and other serpents that are within.'

"When we recovered from our fright we found we had been seated in the midst of a huge collection of snakes that had just arrived from their native jungles en route for the zoo near Versailles."

The Soft Answer.

"Walking on the outskirts of Boston one day," she said, "he and I inadvertently entered a field that had a 'No Trespassing' sign nailed to a tree.

"Soon a farmer appeared.

"'Trespassers in this field are prosecuted,' he said in a grim tone.

"Dr. Hale smiled blandly.

"'But we are not trespassers, my good man,' he said.

"'What are you then?' asked the amazed farmer.

"'We're Unitarians,' said Dr. Hale."—Washington Star.

To Breaking One Neck, $2.

The "line-up" man was a facetious soul. The woman for whom he was putting up a pulley clothes-line was exacting. She ordered it put in a certain place, which it was almost impossible for him to reach. He hesitated. "If I have to put it there, lady," he said, "I'll break my neck." Still she did not relent. "All right, lady," he consented, with a cheerful grin, "but it'll cost yer $2 extry if I break my neck."

Good to Her Husband.

"George, dear," said Mrs. Dovekins, who had come downstairs in time to pour the coffee, "I'm going to walk to the car with you this morning. Aren't you glad?"

BUG-PROOF POTATO

Massachusetts Man Produces Tubers of Great Superiority.

Montague, Mass.—Bug-proof potato vines that show by analysis twice the ratio of food products in them over the average tuber, cantaloupes that run sixteen to forty-eight pounds, peas that will be ready for picking in half the time that green peas usually require, corn in half a dozen colors and of attractive taste—these things are some of the achievements of Rev. Amos N. Somers, pastor of the little Unitarian parish here, who has spent years delving into the chemistry of nature and has accomplished what he believes is a valuable thing for mankind, especially in potato culture, for this is a necessity of necessities.

Mr. Somers tells his story by saying that the potato rarely matures a seed and notes that the great potato raising companies in Maine offer large sums for small measure of seed.

"Of course, everybody knows," he continued, "that potatoes grow from planting the eye of the vegetable in the ground in the spring. Hybridization by mixing the pollen is not a new thing, but with the potato you can't do it, for there's no pollen to mix. So, after many years of trying, I have evolved what I call graft hybridization. The problem was harder, as the potato grows below the ground, while fruits and many vegetables grow above and the stalks or stems can be grafted in the familiar way.

"So one day it occurred to me to graft the sprouts together just at the surface of the ground. I took two cuttings, sliced them off and then fastened them together with the bodies of the tubers touching and the two parts of the sprouts also lying close against each other. Fastening these together, I planted them with the top of the graft just above the ground. At the juncture of the two a new cellular tissue body grew, and from this a new variety of potato grew. I got this new variety, which I call the Standard, from a graft hybrid of the Green Mountain and the Lady Somers, named after my wife.

"The Standard is a very smooth skin potato, with eyes hardly sunken below the surface. This last fact makes it an economical potato, for there is less waste in peeling it and the analysis shows it has just twice the amount of foodstuff in it and twice as much starch as the average potato. The average one shows 15 to 18 per cent. foodstuff. In body weight 100 of my potatoes will greatly outweigh 100 potatoes of the ordinary sort of the same size, and on bushel measure the same difference occurs. The Lady Somers I got from the Early Rose and the old Delaware potatoes.

"It was my study of Darwin that started me on this. I have watched the work of Prof. George J. Romanes of England, the author of 'Darwinism After Darwin,' and have corresponded with him, and I have succeeded in this where he failed. Profs. Geddes and Thompson of Edinburgh are also in the same line, but I feel I have surpassed them in results. My results were first definite four years ago, after 35 years of trying.

"The vine of my potato has a peculiar odor and is offensive to the potato bug, for it never goes near them. I have taken bugs from plants of the usual type in the next row to my potato patch and put them on the new vines and in half an hour I can't find one, and I really feel I have got hold of a bug proof potato. If so, that's a big thing in itself, for look at the expense saved the farmer in plaster and paris green and in labor. Then, again, the roots of my potatoes are very much longer than the average roots, which, of course, makes them all the better as plant feeders and as resisters of drought.

"This is a summary of my discoveries and results of methods used by me in the preparation of new varieties of food plants, especially new species of potatoes by graft-hybridization."

In Wrong Cottage.

Annapolis, Md.—By the casual remark of a neighbor, William G. Speed of Baltimore learned that he had been occupying the wrong cottage at Arundel-on-the-Bay, near Annapolis, for the whole summer, while the cottage for which he had paid rent in advance had remained idle. Speed leased a cottage from the owner, who is traveling in the west, but misunderstood the directions and occupied the wrong house. The absence of both owners prevented the mistake from being known until a few days ago.

BEE'S STING CURES

One of the Latest Departures in European Medical Science.

Insect Inject Formic Acid That Breaks Down the Poisons in the Blood That Cause the Painful Disease.

It is an ingenious appliance, secured to a small platform resembling the lid of a box. This is placed over the hole of a hive, and the bees readily enter if a trace of honey is applied as a bait outside a perforated zinc slide, which is part of the mechanism. By closing the slides the bees are imprisoned, the requisite number thus being secured. The little "vaccinators" can then be removed from the hive, or inspection box, and may be sent by post or carried about ready for use.

The actual operation of vaccination is simplicity itself. The "bee vaccinator" is placed on the affected part of the patient and a knob is pressed down until the bees sting.

"It is one of the newest departures in medical science," a well-known medical man said, "and is still in the experimental stage.

"But for some time past it has been observed that, in a general way, beekeepers certainly enjoy immunity from rheumatism, or, if they have suffered from this complaint, it has disappeared after they have been stung a few times.

"The effect of a bee sting is that the formic acid which the insect injects breaks down, or, speaking informally, neutralizes the poisons in the blood which give rise to the symptoms of rheumatism.

"The operation of bee vaccination should not, of course, be undergone without medical advice. As for the number of bees required—that depends on the patient, and would be for a doctor to decide."

At St. Bartholomew's hospital it was ascertained that a "bee vaccinator" was actually in use in the treatment of patients suffering from rheumatism, but no official statement as to the result of the experiments was as yet forthcoming. Bees are regularly supplied to the hospital for the purpose.

"Personally, I have had the good fortune never to suffer from rheumatism, and I have kept bees ever since I can remember," says a man who is exhibiting at the Crystal palace.

"It does not follow that beekeeping is a positive assurance of immunity from rheumatism, but beekeepers of my acquaintance who have suffered from rheumatism have told me how these pains have disappeared after they have been stung.

"Any beekeeper will tell you that the first few stings cause inflammation and swelling, but this gradually goes down, and after a while he experiences little or no discomfort from a bee sting. A wasp sting is a different matter.

"I am surprised the medical profession has not taken up bee vaccination before.

"The difficulty, however, has been in manipulating the bees—that is to persons other than beekeepers.

"People operating have been in greater danger of being stung than the patient hitherto.

"This invention has solved the difficulty, and secured the safety of any one carrying out the operation, because it is impossible for any of the bees to escape from the vaccinator."

Who Pays for Milk at Sea

Owner of Cows Thinks Steamship Company Should Reimburse Him for Product Enjoyed by Crew.

Seattle, Wash.—A puzzling milk problem has been presented to steamship owners here. The cows gave milk while they were aboard the steamer; they were milked punctually each day and the milk was used by the crew. These facts are admitted, but now the question is, who is to pay the owners of the cows?

This is the knotty problem which has been put up to Albert Schubach, president of the Schubach-Hamilton Steamship Company. Mr. Schubach says this claim is the most absurd of the thousands which big steamship companies receive annually.

John Kehoe of Tanana is the claimant, and he declares that unless the company pays for the milk used by the members of the steamer Mackinaw's crew he will seek legal redress. Mr. Schubach has replied stating that the company is in no wise responsible for what disposition was made of the product from the gentle bovines.

When the steamer left Seattle in June Kehoe shipped four fine cows to St. Michael. The Mackinaw was 18 days en route, having spent several days ashore on the Yukon flats. The cows gave their milk each day, and it helped to elaborate the bill of fare. Now Kehoe wants pay for five gallons of milk a day for 80 days—total, 90 gallons.

In replying to Kehoe President Schubach tersely says:

"As to the milk you say was used for 18 days, I would like to know what you would have done with it. You would have had to leave it in the cows, thrown it overboard or drunk it yourself. You had a perfect right to refuse it to the crew, as the milk was yours. You gave it to them without understanding on our part. It is up to you and the cows."

Old Tongues are Revived

Chaldean, Arabic and Assyrian Languages Taught St. Louis Children—Study Ancient Customs, Too.

St. Louis.—In the downtown section of St. Louis languages and customs, ages old, that have lasted through centuries, to invade the intense modernism of a busy city, are being taught.

In the little school of the Syrian Maronite Catholic church of St. Anthony the Hermit, the Assyrian members of the church are having taught to their children the ancient languages of Arabia, Assyria and Chaldea.

The school, opened a short time ago, has become firmly established and is gradually widening its scope. The school originated in the desire of the parents to instill into their children pride and patriotism in the ancient lands of their forefathers. At the same time the spirit of Americanism is not being forgotten.

Under the direction of Alexander Misrany, once a teacher in the Jesuit and Christian Brothers' colleges in Syria, the children of the district are learning the tongues spoken centuries ago in the ancient countries famed in Bible history. The children are making rapid progress, according to their instructor, and are, at the same time, being instructed in the history of Arabia, Assyria and Chaldea.

English also is being taught to those yet unfamiliar with that tongue, but the establishment of oriental pride in the children is the principal purpose of the school.

DECREASE IN LAND RECEIPTS

Cash Taken in for Year Shows Million Dollars Less Than in Preceding Year.

Washington.—The total cash receipts of the general land office for the fiscal year ended June 30 last were $11,072,688, which is a decrease of about $1,000,000, compared with the previous year, according to a statement issued by Commissioner Dennett. Of the total receipts $9,235,234 was received from the sales of public lands, $2,062,318 from the sale of Indian lands and $159,491 was received as reclamation water right charges.

Of the amount collected from the sales of public lands the reclamation fund will received approximately $8,500,000.

North Dakota leads the states in the amount of receipts from the sales of public lands, with a total of $1,382,686, and Oregon is next, with a total of $958,933.

Usually There Are Other Troubles to Prove It.

Pain in the back is pain in the kidneys, in most cases, and it points to the need of a special remedy to remove and cure the congestion or inflammation of the kidneys that is interfering with their work and causing that pain that makes you say: "Oh, my back."

Thompson Watkins, professional nurse, 420 N. 23rd St., Parsons, Kan., says: "For some time I was annoyed with sharp twinges across the small of my back and irregular passages of the kidney secretions. Since using Doan's Kidney Pills, I am free from these troubles."

New Geyser in Yellowstone Park.

For a few days past there have been indications of an eruption of some kind near the Fountain hotel in Yellowstone park, says a dispatch from Mammoth Hot Springs, Wyo. Now a new and magnificent geyser has broken out in full force about 100 feet north of the regular Fountain geyser near Fountain hotel. This new geyser, which does not appear to affect any of the others in that vicinity, played to a height of 150 to 200 feet, throwing off immense quantities of hot water, mud and steam. The new geyser does not play regularly as does Old Faithful, but at short intervals, the eruptions occurring five or six hours apart, and lasting about one hour.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Improper breathing is a frequent cause of consumption. A large majority of people are too lazy or too ignorant to breathe deep, and hence the lungs are developed only to part of their capacity and thus afford fertile field for the growth of the tuberculosis germ.

of London,

Quaker Oats

In an article published in the Youth's Companion of September 23rd, 1909, Dr. Browne, the great medical authority on foods, says, about brain and muscle building—

"There is one kind of food that seems to me of marked value as a food to the brain and to the whole body throughout childhood and adolescence (youth), and that is oatmeal.

"Oats are the most nutritious of all the cereals, being richer in fats, organic phosphorus and lecithins."

He says oatmeal is gaining ground with the well-to-do of Great Britain. He speaks of it as the mainstay of the Scottish laborer's diet and says it produces a big-boned, well-developed, mentally energetic race.

His experiments prove that good oatmeal such as Quaker Oats not only furnishes the best food for the human being, but eating it strengthens and enlarges the thyroid gland—this gland is intimately connected with the nourishing processes of the body.

In conclusion he says—

"It seems probable therefore that the bulk and browniness of the Northerners (meaning the Scotch) has been in some measure due to the stimulation of the thyroid gland by oatmeal porridge in childhood."

The Scotch eat Quaker Oats because it is the best of all oatmeals.

Joke Medicine.

He is a very practical, serious-minded man of business. The other day he met a friend, and related to him an alleged joke, and at its conclusion laughed long and heartily.

The friend looked awkward for a moment, and then said:

"You'll have to excuse me, old man, but I don't see the point."

"Why, to tell you the truth, I don't just see the point myself. But I've made it a rule to laugh at all jokes; I think it's good for the health."

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better FOR HIM—it pays better. But you are thinking of the cure not the profit, so there's nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.

Notice of Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date of April 19, 1904, made by Wilton L. Barclay and Edith M. Barclay, his wife, mortgagors, to George Atherton, mortgagee, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Red Lake County, Minnesota, on the 25th day of April, 1904, at 1:30 o'clock P. M. in Book "14" of Mortgages on pages 319 to 322, inclusive, upon which mortgage there is now due and payable the sum of Twenty-three hundred sixteen and 70-100 dollars ($2316.70); and whereas, the said George Atherton is now dead and letters of administration on the estate of said George Atherton, deceased, have been duly issued to Sarah Haste, and authenticated copy of said letters has been duly recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds; and which said mortgage was duly assigned by said Sarah Haste, administratrix, to Union National Bank of Streator (Ill.) by instrument in writing dated August 9, 1909, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds on the 27th day of August 1909, at 11 o'clock A. M., in Book "8" of Mortgages on page 446.

NOW THEREFORE, Notice is hereby given that, by virtue of the power of sale in the said mortgage contained and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, of the premises therein described, to be made by the Sheriff of said County, at the front door of the Red Lake County Court House, in the City of Red Lake Falls, Red Lake County, Minnesota, on FRIDAY the 10th day of December 1909, at ten o'clock in the forenoon to satisfy the amount which will then be due upon the said mortgage, the costs and disbursements of sale and Seventy-five Dollars ($75) attorney's fees, stipulated to be paid in case of a foreclosure of the said mortgage.

The premises described in the said mortgage and so to be sold are, all that tract or parcel of land lying and being in the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, described as follows, to-wit: The Northwest quarter (NW¼) of section (10), township one hundred fifty-two (152), North range forty-three (43), West, of the Fifth Principal Meridian, containing one hundred sixty acres of land, according to the United States Government Survey.

The Big Harvest Carnival Sale at LaBissonere's will be continued on many things.—Ladies fleeced vests 15c, heavy fleeced Misses and Boys hose 15c, baby cloaks 75c, boys $5.00 suits $1.00, another lot of suits at ⅓ off, sardines 3c, corn starch 5c, soda 5c, cranberries 10c, honey 12½c, oranges 20c, fancy Montana Wealthy apples, tomatoes 10c.

It was a delightful concert that was given by the Red Lake Falls concert band last Friday evening. The audience—an audience that was too small—gave the band boys liberal applause, but there should have been more of a crowd and more applause. Director Brunell and the band boys are doing fine work and there efforts to give Red Lake Falls a good band should be appreciated. Few cities the size of Red Lake Falls have so good a band. Mrs. E. F. Marshell sang a solo so well that the audience demanded another. Frank Jeffers, on behalf of the band boys, made a thank you speech. The audience wanted a cake walk, but Jeffers was the personification of dignity.

PATTI'S EARNINGS.

Adelina Patti never suffered from the financial timidity of a Jenny Lind. Not only was she a supreme vocalist, but, as Colonel Mapleson remarked, "no one ever approached her in the art of obtaining from a manager the greatest possible sum he could by any possibility contrive to pay." But the musical miracle was the spoiled darling of her day, and she never failed to obtain exactly what she wanted. She was first engaged in London in 1861 by Mapleson to sing four nights "on approval" and in case of success to obtain £40 a week. This contract was not fulfilled, however, for, being hard pressed financially, she had borrowed £50 from a rival manager, and her receipt proved practically a contract. This was the beginning of a career so dazzling that its successive steps are simply a series of increasing banknotes. In 1872 she obtained in London 200 guineas a night, since she insisted on having more than Christine Nilsson, who was receiving £200. She sang twice a week. Ten years later she was given $5,000 a night! Her famous contract to sing in America provided that the money should be paid her at 2 o'clock on the day she sang; also a drawing room and sleeping car to be especially built for her, with conservatory, fernery, etc. Further, there was to be deposited to her credit $50,000 for payment of the last ten performances—Patti's favorite device. She thus received about twenty times what Mario and Grisi got.

Her private car incidentally cost $60,000 and contained a silver bath and gold keys to the doors, to say nothing of a $2,000 piano. Patti gave to the manager only her voice and her costumes. Her drawing capacity justified this. "Lucia," as an example, was sung to an average of $14,000. "Traviata" drew more, since she sang more notes. It was a frequent occurrence among the poorer music lovers to buy a club ticket and each take turns at hearing her for twenty minutes. If one overstayed his time he paid for the entire ticket. Some mathematicians computed by dividing the number of notes sung by the sum paid that in "Semiramide" Patti received 42½ cents for each note. This was found to be just 7 1-10 cents a note more than Rossini got for writing the whole opera.—George Middleton in Bookman.

Gentlemen:—You are authorized to sell the Original Cole's Hot Blast Heater this year on the most rigid guarantee ever made by any stove manufacturer. Our guarantee to every customer of yours is:
1—A saving of one-third in fuel over any lower draft stove of the same size, with soft coal, slack or lignite.
2—That Cole's Hot Blast will use less hard coal for heating a given space than any base burner made with same size fire pot.
3—That the rooms can be heated from one to two hours each morning with the soft or hard coal put in the stove the evening before.
4—That the stove will hold fire with soft coal from Saturday night until Monday morning.
5—A uniform heat day or night with soft coal, hard coal or lignite
6—That every stove will remain absolutely air-tight as long as used
7—That the feed-door is and will remain smoke and dust-proof.
All we ask is that the stove shall be operated according to directions and connected up with a good flue.

THE JUDGE OF GOOD FOOTWEAR
DECIDES ON "GITCHE GAMEES"

Because he knows that a shoe that shows signs of careful workmanship will stand the strain of service.
Even a casual inspection of the "GITCHE GAMEE" proves that exceptional care has been taken with every detail.
The "GITCHE GAMEE" is admittedly a beautiful shoe, but it is more than that, it is an honest shoe.
Honest labor and honest leather have made it and it will stand honest wear in consequence.
A shoe that can be used on all dress occasions, the "GITCHE GAMEE" can also be used day after day at the hardest kind of work, without losing it's style and shape.
The toe-caps will not fall in, the leather will not crack.
The leather is the best obtainable at any price and has been thoroughly preserved before leaving the factory.
The "GITCHE GAMEE" is manufactured by the Northern Shoe company, who's greatest care is QUALITY, not quantity.
A faulty shoe returned to them would not be merely a "Return," it would be a blot on the reputation of the house; therefore they do not make faulty shoes.
"GITCHE GAMEES" are made in a great variety of styles and shapes, to suit the tastes of all ages.
Buy one pair from your dealer and the shoes themselves will convince you of their superiority, it will be the best four dollars you ever invested in footwear.
When you buy any of these Shoes of "NOSHCO-MAKE," you are getting the BEST Shoe of the kind that it is possible to procure. Ask for them!

LIGHT VOTE CAST IN CITY ELECTION

The city election held Tuesday passed off very quietly. There was little to induce people to take enough interest to turn out and vote and a very light vote was cast.

Mayor J. A. Duffy was re-elected without opposition. There were contests for each of the other city offices, but nobody conducted a very, vigorous campaign. However there will be some change in the city council. The new men are Jos. Sally who was elected alderman at large, Geo. F. Hennings who was elected alderman in the first ward and Sam E. Hunt who was elected alderman in the second ward. The men who will retire when their terms of office expire are H. H. Hennemuth, alderman at large, Jos. Remick, alderman from the first ward, and Fred Borchers, aldermen from the second ward. Ovide Emard was re-elected city treasurer, defeating E. G. Buse by a small majority. Albany Deforge was elected assessor and S. A. Swanson and V. M. Higinbotham were elected justices of the peace.

COMMISSIONERS MEET

Petitions for County Ditches Considered Saturday.

The county commissioners were in session last Saturday, the purpose of the meeting being to consider petitions for county ditches. Viewers and engineer were appointed for the proposed new ditch in the towns of Mayfield and Kratka. County Surveyor C. H. Martz will make the survey and the viewers appointed are Jos. Belair, Daniel Patterson and Peter C. Wold. The ditch if constructed will be about five miles long. Action on the proposition to repair Thief River ditch No. 1 was postponed until a later meeting by which time Mr Martz will have prepared a supplemental report. The Terrebonne ditch No. 2 will come up for consideration at the next meeting of the board, on Nov. 6. The official proceedings will be published in the next issue of the Gazette.

LAND SALE MONDAY

Unredeemed Land in the County Will Be Offered.

The official notice of the sale of unredeemed land is published in this issue of the Gazette. The sale will open at 10 o'clock Monday morning. The lands to be sold are those parcels that have been bid in by the state at tax sales and that have not been assigned to purchasers or redeemed within three years from the date of the tax sale.

THIEF RIVER ELECTION

Was an Exciting Scrap.—Mayor Hamre Re-elected.

The city election at Thief River Falls is said to have been an exciting affair. Everybody turned out to vote and not a few were shouting, too, for one or another of the candidates. Mayor Hamre was re-elected, defeating Dr. Gambell. The aldermen at large are John C. Berg and Jens P. Jenson, both new men. A. H. Fasel, a new man, was elected alderman from the first ward. M. Forder in the second ward and Chas. Alexander in the third ward were re-elected. Ed. Evenson was re-elected city treasurer.

$23.00 FOR MEMORIAL

Red Lake Falls Contribution to Johnson Memorial Fund Sent In.

The Gazette has remitted sixteen dollars to the treasurer of the Johnson memorial committee, that being the amount of the voluntary subscriptions received by the Gazette. No one was asked personally to contribute to the fund and no subscription list was circulated, all of the contributions having been left at this office by those who felt that they would like to be contributors to the fund to be expended in the erection of a monument to the memory of the late governor Johnson. The public school children have also made a contribution Supt. L. V. Koos has sent in six dollars, the amount of that contribution. The school contributions were voluntory. A box was placed on the desk in each room and the scholars were advised that they could deposit in the box any contributions they desire to make. No record of the individual contributions was made and six dollars was sent in as the contribution of the school.

The Gazette will receive contributions for a week or two more if there are any Red Lake Falls people who forgot that they intended to give and want to do so now. Contributions received to date are as follows:

Dr. N M. Watson	$1.00
Marcus Johnson	1.00
H. E. Ives	1.00
A. A. Latendresse	1.00
C. R. C. Baker	1.00
W. A. Schreiter	1.00
J. A. Duffy	1.00

Rev. D. K. Laurie will conduct services at the Presbyterian church at the usual hours for church services next Sunday morning and evening.

LANDS WITHDRAWN FROM ENTRY

All Lands on Eleven Towns Withdrawn From Homestead Entry.

Lands Will Soon be Fffered for Sale to the Highest Bidder.

The following communication relative to the withdrawal of lands on the eleven towns in Red Lake county from homestead entry has been received from the land office officials at Crookston:

This office is in receipt of a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, under date of October 18, 1909, as follows:

"The act of February 20, 1904, (33 Stat., 46), which provided for the disposal of the lands in the 11 townships in the western part of the Red Lake Indian reservation, contained the following provision:

'That the lands above described which shall remain unsold at the expiration of five years from date of the first sale hereunder, shall be offered for sale at not less than $4.00 per acre (and lands remaining unsold after such sale shall be subject to private entry and sale at said price), without any conditions whatever, except the payment of the purchase price.'

The sale referred to closed October 8, 1904.

You will therefore discontinue the allowance of homestead entries for said lands from the date of receipt of this letter and will at as early a date as practicable transmit a list of the lands remaining unsold in said 11 townships. Respectfully (Signed) Fred Dennet, Commissioner."

In accordance with the instructions contained in the above letter all the lands unentered in the said 11 Red Lake townships have been withdrawn from entry, and no entries of any kind can be made thereon until further instructions have been received from the department.

ANNUAL FAIR IS ON

Today is the Last Day of the Annual Fair at St. Joseph's Church

The St. Joseph's church fair is now on and is being patronized by big crowds. Today is the last day, the fair having opened Tuesday morning. Meals, with chicken and a lot of other good things to go with it, are being served, and the booths at which articles are being disposed of are liberally patronized. This issue of the paper is published too early to give a statement of the p rofits accruing to the church to reward the ladies for their efforts.

Will Consider Petitions

Judge Wm. Watts who will be in Red Lake Falls for the opening of district court next Monday, will devote a part of that day to the consideration of applications for naturalization. Residents of the county who have filed applications with the clerk of court should bear in mind that next Monday morning is the date.

Killed a Bear

Last spring Nils O. Risen, of Rudell, purchased a fine full blooded Shorthorn Calf at Fosston, which grew to be a fine animal this fall. One night recently Nils heard a noise in the brush near his house, and on going out he saw a large animal which he took to be a bear, and going into the house and getting his rifle he took a shot at it, and saw it fall, but did not go to see what it was, until the next morning, when he found that he had killed his fine Shorthorn bull, the bullet having passed through his heart.—Eleven Towns

And don't that remind you of the hair-raising, nerve-testing experience of Buse and a bunch of fellows who killed a big black bear that had adopted a litter of pigs.

MARLON R. HALL

Died Saturday Afternoon after a Brief Illness.

Marlon R. Hall died Saturday afternoon, Oct. 30, at 4 o'lock after a brief illness from typhoid fever. Mr. Hall had been ill only a few days and his condition was not considered alarming until a short time before his death. Brief funeral services were conducted at the home at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon, Rev. D. K. Laurie officiating. The remains were taken to Decatur, Ill., Mr. Hall's former home, for burial. Mrs. Hall and son Preston accompanied the remains to Decatur and funeral services were conducted in that city. Deceased was fifty years, eleven months and ten days old. He was born Nov. 21, 1858. He is survived by his widow and two sons, Preston and Clifford.

Mr. Hall was a member of the local Woodman lodge and the members of that order acted as pallbearers and escort. Deceased had taken advantage of the insurance offered to members of the order and had a policy for three thousand dollars.

Paul Pry Talks About The Great Minnesota Drainage Project.

[Special Correspondence to the Red Lake Falls Gazette.]

St. Paul, Nov. 2.—There are some lucky ones both in St. Paul and Minneapolis; there are many more who found land-seeking unprofitable. For one who played to win, there were twenty or more who lost. They took the long chance with the usual result. Consequently they are in a mood to applaud Mr. Louis W. Hills's very emphatic declaration that the United States land lotteries are a swindle. But are they really? The government can't very well play favorites. When reservations are opened everyone should have an opportunity to get in on the ground floor. What fairer way than to apportion the lands by lot, giving everyone an equal chance. If Mr. Hill can suggest anything that looks more like an equal deal, no doubt Uncle Sam would be only too willing to adopt it.

THERE WAS NO DECEPTION.

It's an easy matter for the railroads now to forstall criticism directed against them, before it has become too outspoken, by an assault on the government officials, and by saying that railroad managers didn't want to earn the fares paid them that way. There was, however, no indication of that before the land drawings took place. Or no sign that Mr. Hill's road as well as the rest was not out for its share of the traffic. And after all didn't the people who went out to the reservations on a chance which they well understood, get the worth of their money? There were very few who went out either to the recent drawings or to those which preceded them who were not aware of the chances they were taking. Many looked upon the trip as a holiday jaunt. No attempt was made to deceive anyone. Mr. Hill's characterization of the part of the interior depart-

PREPARE FOR CONTEST

Farmers Should Bring In Samples for the School Exhibit.

There is to be a corn exhibit at the agricultural school at Crookston the last of the month and the farmers of the Red River Valley are invited to send samples of corn to be entered in the scoring contest. Red Lake county's good fortune in harvesting a big corn crop should be an inducement to the farmers to prepare good samples for the contest. The samples should be prepared and brought in at once. They may be left with P. B. Gaass who will see to it that the exhibits get to Crookston in good condition.

RED LAKE FARMERS SHOULD GET BUSY

The farmers of Red Lake county who harvested the big corn crop will have a chance to win some big prizes if they will take advantage of the opportunity to make exhibits at the National corn exhibit at Omaha Nebraska, to be held Dec. 6 to 18. One department of this exhibition will be devoted to Minnesota exhibits alone and in addition J. J. Hill offers special prizes to farmers tributary to the Great Northern and free transportation of the exhibits. Red Lake county farmers who enter exhibits will have chances on the general prizes, the prizes offered for Minnesota entries only and the Hill special prizes. Farmers who contemplate sending exhibits should prepare them at once. The competition for Minnesota farmer will be on various varieties of corn, wheat, oats, barley and tame grasses. The prizes are liberal and the expense of making an exhibit is practically nothing and it would be a profitable thing for the farmers who have harvested the best corn crop in the history of Red Lake county to get into this little game. To win some of the prizes at the exposition will be an excellent advertisement for the county.

TIMBER PRESERVATION

United States Government Conducting Some Extensive Experiments.

Millions of feet of timber and finished lumber rot every year in railroad ties, bridges, trestles, piles, farm buildings, fences, poles and mine props. The lumber consuming public of the United States pays perhaps thirty to forty million dollars a year to make good the losses from wood decay.

These great drains are a source of more and more concern each year. Chemists and engineers who have to do with the uses of wood are working unceasingly on the problem. The U. S. Forest Service has men who devote their whole time to it. The importance of the problem can not be overestimated. Millions of dollars are annually saved by preservative treatment of timbers, but much yet remains to be learned.

Wood decay is caused by fungus, a vegetable growth sometimes so small that it can be seen only with a microscope. Its roots or branches, like minute hairs, force their way into the wood tissues and absorb or eat away the solid parts. The collapse which results is called decay. Timber is artificially preserved by forcing into its cells and pores certain substances which prevent the growth of fungi. As long as this substance is present in a sufficient quantity, the germs of decay—the threads and spores of fungi—can not enter, and the wood is preserved. This often means doubling and sometimes trebling the life of the timber.

The United Strtes government considers the investigations of the preservative treatment of timber of such importance that the business of one office of the United States Forestry Service, that of Wood Preservation, with new headquarters at Madison, Wis., is given over entirely to the work of experiments in co-operation with railroad companies and other corporations and individuals in prolonging the life of railroad ties, mine props, bridge timbers, fence posts and transmission poles.

The lengthening of the life of timber means the saving of thousands of dollars annually through doing away with the heavy expense of labor and cost of material for renewals.

GAZETTE HAS EXHIBIT

Big Ears of Corn on Display in the Print Shop.

There is on display at the Gazette office some corn that would make the Iowa farmers, could they see it, turn green with envy. On Monday Swan Akenson brought to the print shop several ears of corn that for size he challenges any one to beat. This he does for the good of the couse and would like to have farmers who have grown good corn bring in an exhibit to beat his. So would the Gazette. Some of the ears are more than a foot long. Mr. Akenson left one stock of corn on which there are three ears nearly ten inches long within one foot of space, and he says he has a dollar for the farmer who can bring in a stock of corn that can beat the one he left at the Gazette office. Who wants the money?

TROUT AND CROPPIES

The Clearwater River Has Been Stocked With Fish Fry

Fifteen cans of fish fry were received in Red Lake Ealls Tuesday morning and deposited in the Clearwater river. The fish were supplied by the state game and fish commission and were brought here by Game Warden Munch. The fry were trout and croppies and it is believed that in a short time the Clearwater river will be an excellent trout stream. The fry arrived in excellent condition.

SPILLED JOY WATER

Cass Lake Saloon Keepers Did Not Get Good.

Some of the Cass Lake saloon keepers who had been ordered to close their places of business failed to comply with the order so the federal authorities paid them a visit this week and carried away quite a quantity of joy water. The saloon keepers had expected the raiders and made no resistance. The saloon keepers had reduced their stocks and only a limited amount of liquor was taken.

The officers also "appropriated" a quantity of bitters and other medicine that druggists are not allowed to sell at the drug stores.

SOME COWS IN COUNTY

Profits in Dairying Result in Big Herds in Red Lake County.

The personal property assessment list of Red Lake county reveals a significant fact regarding the dairy industry in Red Lake county. The remarkable development of this industry in recent years shows that in this branch of farming alone there is a large investment and there is no doubt that the investment pays greater returns than any like amount invested in any other undertaking on the farm.

The personal property assessment shows that there are 11,068 cows in Red Lake county. These are valued at $133,225. Nothing could indicate more clearly than these figures the remarkable growth of the dairy industry in Red Lake county.

Lambert is the banner town of the county, having 669 cows. Terrebonne is a close second with 650 cows. Rocksbury has 625 and Equality 547.

Shortage is Big.

Expert accountants are going over the books of A. A. Kremer, county treasurer of Itasca county, who was removed from office by Governor Eberhart. It is now believed that Kremer's shortage will exceed $50,000. Kremer invested the money in various securities many of which are good so that a large part of the money can be recovered. It is reported that insanity will be the defense. It is claimed that Kremer was ill two years ago and that since that time his mind has been effected.

EDUCATORS MEET

TWENTY IN DELEGATION THAT WILL INSPECT SCHOOL SYSTEMS.

12 STATES REPRESENTED

University of Minnesota Engages Attention of the Party, Which Is Investigating Rural School Conditions.

Minneapolis.—The city of Minneapolis was host to 20 of the most prominent educators of the country, including the state superintendents of 12 Southern states, besides Dr. Winship, of Boston, and Rolla C. Ogden, of New York, who made the trip possible for the others.

The party is on a tour of the leading educational institutions of the west, and northwest. Rural school conditions are also being carefully studied. The two special cars are carrying the visitors.

In the morning some little time was given to the St. Paul public school system. Most of the day, however, was spent in Minneapolis. The visiting educators were escorted by Prof. J. L. Coulter, of the University of Minnesota, with the state agricultural college as the first objective point. The forenoon was spent in a thorough inspection of this institution and the visitors were taken to the university campus in the afternoon.

Late in the day all were taken on a sightseeing trip of Minneapolis in automobiles furnished by the Commercial club.

Friday was spent at Menominee, Wis., on an inspection of the Trinity Stout Industrial school. The University of Wisconsin at Madison will claim their attention on the day following. After that the party will start south again.

In the party are:

Dr. Wickliffe Rose, Nashville, agent Peabody fund; Dr. P. P. Claxton, Univeysit of Tennessee, Knoxville; R. C. Stearns, Richmond, representing the Virginia state superintendent; Luther Holloway, representing his father, William M. Holloway, state superintendent of Florida, and the following state superintendents: H. C. Gunnels, Alabama; George B. Cook, Arkansas; Jere M. Pound, Georgia; J. C. Crabbe, Kentucky; T. H. Harris, Louisiana; J. N. Powers, Mississippi; J. Y. Joyner, North Carolina; J. E. Swearingen, Soupth Carolina; R. L. Jones, Tennessee; R. B. Cousins, Texas.

MAYOR STANDS BY CHIEF.

St. Cloud's Municipal Teapot Continues to Boil.

St. Cloud. — The second step in the municipal cleanup movement was taken by Mayor Hugh Evans, when he demanded the resignation of Patrolman William H. Gish. Gish, it is charged, had not hesitated to criticize Mayor Evans and Chief John Quinlivan.

This quasi removal, following so closely upon the heels of the removal of Police Sergeant Brick, is taken to mean that Mayor Evans is determined to keep John Quinlivan in office as chief of police in spite of the remonstrances of several citizens who, at a recent indignation meeting, demanded his removal. The action against Quinlivan grew out of his alleged negligence to arrest, or cause the arrest, of Frank Sullivan and Lindsay Garlock, implicated in the Swintek assault. Sergeant Brick published an affidavit directed against his chief, and his removal followed. Patrolman Gish apparently did not profit by his superior's misfortune, but continued to criticize the city's executive and the chief of police.

Governor Offers Athletic Cup.

St. Peter. — Governor A. O. Eberhart has stimulated interest in athletics at Gustavus Adolphus college by offering a silver cup which will be competed for by the basketball teams. Intercollegiate athletic contests were suspended three years ago as the result of action taken by the Augustana synod, but football, baseball and basketball games between class teams are permitted. Governor Eberhart, himself an alumnus of Gustavus Adolphus, counsels observance of the synodical order.

Predicts a Revolution.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Carl M. Melom, instructor in Spanish at the university, predicts the downfall of Alfonso, the present incumbent of the throne of Spain, and says he is surprised that the socialist party had not already taken the country by storm. Mr. Melom went through Spain four years ago and devoted his time to a study of social conditions.

WINONA MAN SWINDLED.

Loaned $3,000 to a Stranger in a Forged Dead to a Farm.

Winona.—Jacob Stirneman, of Winona, was cleverly swindled out of $3,000 by a fellow giving the name of Henry Schneider, who worked a bogus mortgage loan game, being really Henry Hoover, who has operated all over the country.

The man forged a deed to the farm of Theodore Vail in Fremont, and secured a $3,000 loan from Stirneman.

LEADS GRAIN PRODUCERS.

U. S. Census Figures Show Big Crops.

St. Paul. — Minnesota is blessed above its neighbor states, in production of grain, as shown in a report just issued by the state immigration department, reviewing, and comparing the crop situation in 10 central and northwestern states. The figures were taken from the United States government crop report for Oct. 1, 1909.

The comparison shows Minnesota first in wheat yield, with North Dakota a close second. The average yield in the North Star state was 16.5 bushels per acre. Wisconsin leads with an average of 19, but the total production was very small, hardly one-fiftieth of the Minnesota crop. This state is also first in production of barley.

Minnesota leads in average yield per acre in rye and hay, and is also first in condition of crops on Oct. 1, 1909 of corn, clover seed, Canada peas, tomatoes and grapes. This state is second on condition of crops of millet, potatoes and apples.

The hay yield here was 1,622 with an average of 1.75. Iowa and Illinois lead in yield, with 5,910 and 4,135 respectively. The Minnesota rye yield was 1.748 with an average of 19. Michigan leads in yield with 5,874, but with an average of only 15.5.

EBERHART IS HONOR GUEST.

Governor Speaks at Northwestern Agricultural Society Fair.

Crookston. — Governor Adolph O. Eberhart was the guest of honor at the first annual fair of the Northwestern Minnesota Agricultural society, and he proved an attraction which brought 10,000 people to this city.

At noon he reviewed a procession of 2,500 school children who then escorted him to the fair grounds where he delivered an address which was enthusiastically received.

Among the other speakers were: George Welch, commissioner of immigration; J. J. Furlong, vice president of the state fair association, and Secretary Cosgrove.

The event proved to be one of the most enthusiastic demonstrations of an agricultural nature that has been held in this section for years. There were many entries in the different classes and the exhibits were uniformly excellent.

The event was the first fair that been held in Crookston for many years and it proved a winner and a success in every particular.

ARBOGAST MURDER TRIAL.

Making Slow Progress in the St. Paul Courts.

St. Paul, Minn.—After three days, the trial of Mrs. Louis Arbogast for the murder of her husband has made little progress.

An important witness for the state was sprung when Isidore Abrahamson, the first outsider to reach the Arbogast home after the actual murder, told a straightforward story, showing that members of the family knew Louis Arbogast had been hurt when he arrived, very soon after 4 o'clock, and gave detailed facts, locking the door, it is said, against any possible theory of an outside assassin.

The witness stated that Arbogast was stark naked in bed; that the fire was fresh and that a bunch of feathers was burning on the back steps. He also testified that he met Mrs. Arbogast coming down stairs alone, dressed in a nightgown.

PRICA'S SLAYERS CONVICTED.

Three Austrians to be Sentenced Saturday for Chanhassen Tragedy.

Chaska. — The trial jury found out over eight hours, the jury found John Koresgoviz, Peter Kasomowicz and Steve Oreskowicz, Austrians charged with the murder of Sawa Prica, in Chanhassen on Aug. 20, guilty of manslaughter in the first degree.

Saves Car and Employer.

St. Paul.—But for the quick work of a porter on the private car of O. Cornelisen, general superintendent of the Great Western railway, the car would have been destroyed by a gas explosion and Mr. Cornelisen and his party of railroad officials either badly injured or killed in the St. Paul union station yards. The porter had entered a small closet in the car to see what was wrong with the lights. He struck a match and was blinded by a flash. He grabbed a patent extinguisher and succeeded in putting out the blaze.

BOMBS AT POLLS

LONDON SUFFRAGETTE CAUSES A SENSATION AT VOTING PLACE.

ELECTION OFFICERS HURT

Mrs. Chapin Tries Novel Way to Protest Against the Exclusion of Women From the Elective Franchise.

London, Oct. 28.—Mrs. Chapin, the suffragette, furnished an early morning thrill at the Bermondsry election today when she smashed a bottle containing corrosive acid upon the ballot box. Her intention evidently was to destroy the ballots in the box as a protest against the exclusion of women from the right of franchise. What she accomplished was the painful burning of some of the election officers and the assurance of her arrest.

Slipping into one of the booths, where perhaps a thousand ballots had been deposited, Mrs. Chapin drew from under her cloak a bottle in which ink had been mixed with corrosive acid and before she could be stopped, hurled the bottle upon the box. The bottle broke into many pieces and the flying acid splashed upon the election officers. A number of officers were so severely injured as to require medical attention.

About the same time a similar attempt was made in another booth by a young girl who wore suffragette colors. So far as could be ascertained not much acid reached the ballots in either case.

POSSIBLE BLUEBEARD.

Confessed Murderer May Be Guilty of Bigamy.

New York, Oct. 28.—The persistent efforts of the prosecution officers of Suffolk county, L. I., to learn whether or not Frederick Gebhardt, the confessed murderer of Anna Luther, had engaged in a series of bigamous marriages and desertions were rewarded in a measure today, by the finding of a woman who declares that Gebhardt, then known as Otto Mueller, married her in Russia fourteen years ago.

The woman, who is known under her maiden name of Minnie Rosenau attended the inquest held at Islip yesterday and positively identified Gebhardt as Mueller, who had married her in Russia.

"After gaining possession of the fair dowry which I brought him," she said. "Mueller deserted me and came to America."

The police have also brought into the case another woman who for a time was much in the company of Gebhardt, but who mysteriously disappeared a year ago.

JAIL NOT FOR WALSH.

Convicted Banker Will Not Be Locked Up in Cell.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—John R. Walsh, whose conviction of the misuse of the Chicago National bank was recently affirmed by the United States Appellate court, may remain at liberty under bonds pending an attempt to appeal his case to the supreme court of the United States.

The decision making this possible was referred in the appellate court today when Judge Grosscup denied the petition of the government to have Walsh's bond of $50,000 cancelled. Walsh, hitherto, allowed to travel about the country, must now, however, remain in Chicago.

ASSASSIN ONCE EDITOR.

Slayer of Ito Says Many Took Oath to Kill Ito.

Harbin, Manchuria, Oct. 28.—The assassin of Prince Ito was identified today as Ingan Antean, former editor of a newspaper at Seoul. He said that he was one of an organization of twenty Koreans who had taken an oath that they would kill the Japanese statesman.

The assassin used dumdum bullets which had been poisoned with cyanide.

STEAMING DOWN RIVER.

President Is Forging Ahead of Other Vessels of Flotilla.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 28.—President Taft and his party are steaming down the Mississippi river today en route to Vicksburg, Natchez and New Orleans. The steamer Oleander, carrying the president, left Helena last night two hours behind schedule time. It is believed the Oleander will make up some of the lost time as she is steaming ahead of the other vessels.

Vicksburg will probably be reached this evening.

HOT FROM THE WIRE.

Omaha, Neb.—The Women's Christian Temperance union today selected Baltimore, Md., as its 1910 meeting place.

Pittsburg, Pa.—One man was killed and four others seriously injured today by a train on a mountain tram road running away and going over an embankment at Dunbar, near here.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Alaska Fishermen's association at a meeting here last night pledged moral and financial support to the strikers of the great lakes. The sum of $3,000 was ordered sent to the strikers.

KILLED BY DESERTED WIFE.

Chicago Tailor Meets Death While In Jail.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—Two hours after causing the arrest of Abraham Levy on the charge of abandonment, Mrs. Esther Levy his wife, visited the cell room of Harrison street police station today and before Startling, the lockup keeper, had a chance to interfere, shot through the bars at Levy, inflicting a fatal wound.

She was taken to the woman's annex of the station. The victim of the shooting, who is a tailor, was removed unconscious to a hospital.

THIRTY-FIVE MISSING.

Yarmouth, N. S., Oct. 28.—Along the Nova Scotia coast of the Bay of Fundy, little groups of fishermen and others kept a vigilant watch today for the bodies from the steamer Hestia, wrecked across the bay on the ledges off Grand Manan island. There was little [illegible] surviving [illegible] The bodies of four victims had been [illegible]

IS PLANNING QUEER FARM

Mrs. George Cornwallis West, Former British Society Leader, Will Raise Frogs.

London. — Mrs. George Cornwallis-West, formerly Lady Randolph Churchill and mother of Winston Spencer Churchill, is reported to be planning a new shock for British aristocracy. This beautiful, talented American woman, whose ambition and ability made her first husband one of of England's foremost statesmen, and who, as a widow, married a man about the age of her son, according to the latest report is preparing to raise bullfrogs on a large scale for the London market.

MRS. GEORGE CORNWALLIS WEST.

Mrs. Cornwallis-West, it is said, has leased 40 acres of marshy land near one of the London suburbs and will inclose it with a fine-meshed wire fence. A large number of bullfrogs have been ordered from France with which this place will be stocked.

There is no more interesting character in England than Mrs. Cornwallis-West, formerly Miss Jennie Jerome of New York and afterward Lady Randolph Churchill. While Lord Randolph was alive she was his most devoted and helpful aid, and contributed largely to what of success there was in that brilliant, though impulsive statesman's carrer. Then she was a public personage and a great social figure.

Now Mrs. West is leading the life of a recluse at Salisbury hall, St. Albans, where she is writing her reminiscences, which will doubtless form one of the most delightful books of the time. The house is both historic and beautiful, and it is splendidly furnished.

Mrs. West's four sons frequently visit her, and they and her young husband and herself make the jolliest company imaginable.

SPEEDIEST OF TYPEWRITERS

Miss Rose Fritz Writes 1,425 Words in 15 Minutes and Makes New Record.

New York.—Congratulations were showered upon Miss Rose L. Fritz after she had made a new typewriting record, writing 1,425 words in 15 minutes from dictation, with no errors, at the business show in Madison Square garden. She wrote at the rate of 95 words a minute for 15 consecutive minutes. H. O. Blaisell wrote 92 words a minute, and F. H. Coombs followed with 87 1-5 words.

Mending Basket.

A most convenient and dainty trifle to hang near the mending basket is quickly and easily made at a small cost. One and one-half yards No. 3 ribbon in a dainty shade is cut into three strips and drawn through a white bone ring about one-half inch in diameter. These are arranged to hang at odd lengths. Fasten the white rings on three ends and put a few safety pins through each ring—large on one, medium on another, and small on the third. Draw another end through a spool of white darning cotton and also one through a spool of black, sewing a ring to the ribbon to prevent its slipping back. Last, fasten a small square of white flannel buttonholed in floss the shade of the ribbon, to the remaining end and stick in a darning needle and a few sewing needles. It is hung up by the center ring and is most attractive and acceptable.

Work of Practical Joker.

The Corriere of Rome, which published some time ago a copy of a document said to have been found in the library at Bergamo containing an account of "an airship voyage across the English channel in 1751," is receiving much attention at the hands of investigators. In the Tribune's notice of this alleged achievement, in which a monk named Grimaldi, of Civita Vecchia, was the chief actor, it was stated that there was nothing in the Italian paper's article to indicate that it was not written in good faith. "Now," writes an Englishman from Rome, "the records of Civita Vecchia are being searched in vain for a Grimaldi and [illegible] for the flight. The document may be in the library, but who was the practical joker who placed it there?"—New York Tribune.

LAUNCH NATION-WIDE MOVEMENT TO RESERVE OUR NATIONAL RESOURCES.

TAFT APPROVES WORK

National Conservation Association Under Leadership of Ex-President Eliot Opens Office for Campaign.

New York, Oct. 27.—Nation-wide in scope and backed with the enthusiastic endorsement of President Taft, a movement was launched today to appeal to the people of the United States for concerted action in preserving the natural resources of the country.

The National Conservation association with offices here and in Washington will carry on the proposed vigorous campaign under the leadership of Dr. W. Eliot, former president of Harvard university. This association is to be an active militant organization with the general object of procuring through legislative and administrative measures, by the states and by the federal government, practical application of the conservation principles adopted by the government of the United States at the conference with President Roosevelt in 1908.

The association is the outcome of a plan on which men of national prominence have been at work with former President Eliot for many months. President Taft evinced his interest by giving the organization his hearty approval and by enrolling as the first member. Included among the officers and membership are some of the most prominent men of affairs in the United States.

General offices were opened today in a Fifth avenue building where it was announced that the association already had the organization well under way and that applications for membership were pouring in from all parts of the country.

SCIENTIFIC FARMING.

Agriculturists at Billings Have Argument Over Name.

Billings, Mont., Oct. 27.—Article one of the report of the executive committee presented at this morning's session of the Fourth Dry Farming congress precipitated the first heated discussion of the meeting.

The article says:

There has been a sentiment developing for the past two years against the name. The principal objection is that the name is misleading. Advocates of a change say that they do not expect to farm dry lands but by applying scientific principles are making their land which they termed semi-arid, produce at least as well as land more favored with moisture. They assert that the term "dry" leads many to fear the prospects who might become settlers of the semi-arid districts.

James J. Hill, the great railroad builder, made a fine address today. He recommended that quality be considered in getting in settlers. He believes that the plain states will carry a very dense population. President Howard Elliot spoke yesterday as did Dean Shepperd of the North Dakota A. C.

There are over twenty states represented at the meeting and there is great enthusiasm.

VILAS' ESTATE HELD UP.

University Must Wait for Fixing of Widow's Interest.

Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 27.—The will of the late William F. Vilas, former United States senator from Wisconsin, has been admitted to probate and J. T. Gregory appointed minister. His bond was fixed at $70,000, covering property in Pierce, Thurston, Lewis and Skagit counties. The court orders the administrator to hold, subject to the order of the court, one-half of all moneys coming into his custody until the interest of Mrs. Anna M. Vilas, his widow, shall be fully determined.

NEWS NOTES CONDENSED.

Washington.—The Brownsville court of inquiry yesterday decided to visit Brownsville, Tex., late in November to hear any new material facts bearing on the famous "shooting up" of that city on the night of Aug. 13, 1906.

Aberdeen, S. D.—William J. Engel, the winner of claim No. 1, filed on a claim in Tripp county three days ago. He loses his right to file on the one drawn by him and Calvin Bowdry of Bismarck will be entitled to first choice.

St. Louis, Mo.—Officials of the St. Louis club deny President Taft fell from the water wagon by drinking a big cocktail while being entertained by them.

Bismarck, N. D.—Assistant Attorney General Zuger is at Napoleon, where he will appear for the state in the prosecution of a number of blind pig cases to be heard at this term of court.

Jacksonville, Fla.—A team picked from the ball players who are wintering in Jacksonville, met the Detroit American league champions, who are en route to Cuba and was defeated, 7 to 2.

CHEERS TAFT.

City of Memphis Gives Taft Enthusiastic Reception.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 27.—Thousands of throats called a loyal and true southern greeting to Pres. Wm. H. Taft on his arrival this morning at the wharf here. Hundreds of whistles and clanging of bells all over the city took up the refrain and in no city visited by the president, in his history-making trip across the continent, has he been given a more enthusiastic reception. All Memphis and thousands of visitors thronged the wharf bluffs long before the imposing flotilla made its appearance.

CONDITION PITABLE.

Survivors of Hestia Wreck Give Way Under Strain.

St. John, N. B., Oct. 27.—In the hope of being able to pick up some of the crew of the wrecked Donaldson line steamer, the Hestia, a number of tugs, vessels and other craft put out from this port early today for Seal Cove, Grand Manan Island, where the Hestia ran upon a ledge yesterday and where more than a score of persons are believed to have perished. The condition of the six men rescued by the life savers was pitiable in the extreme.

MOUNT·VERNON
SHRINE of AMERICAN·PATRIOTISM

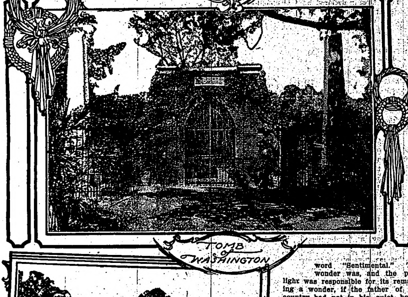
WASHINGTON'S HOME MOUNT VERNON



TOMB of WASHINGTON

MOUNT VERNON

WASHINGTON.—In the novel of "Ivanhoe," Isaac the Jew tells the knight that he knows it is the custom of the Christians to put on pilgrims' garb and to walk barefooted for miles to worship dead men's bones. There is something of a sneer in Isaac's tone and Ivanhoe rebukes him with a truly heroic, "Blasphemer, cease!" I don't know how many thousands of Americans go yearly to Mount Vernon to pay a visit to the repository of a dead man's bones, but the number is something enormous.

If George Washington never had lived at Mount Vernon, never had visited there, never had died there, and had been buried in the antipodes there would be excuse enough for the visits to the place of seventy times seven the number of the pilgrims who go yearly down the Potomac to stand on the towering hill and to look off down the valley.

It is with an utter shame that it is confessed that after four years' residence in Washington one man American born and with some lurking pride of patriotism in his makeup never until recently went to the place where the father of his country and the exponent of the American school teacher's ideal of truth lies buried.

Mount Vernon is the ultimate object of the voyage down the Potomac. There are other objects every paddle-wheel stroke of the way, for the hills on either side are hills of rare beauty crowned with trees that saw the revolution and that in the fall are wearing the raiment which belongs to the kings of the forest.

On the boat going down there was a young German gentleman, who had married an American wife. He was much more interested in the beauty of the Potomac's banks and in the history of the country beyond the banks and in the life history of George Washington than was she. The German asked his American wife if George Washington was born at Mount Vernon. She answered that he was; which he wasn't, not by many miles. He asked her many other questions, to each and every one of which, but with unerring inaccuracy, she made answers. This was a traveled American girl. There is a fairly well-grounded belief that she met and captivated her German husband while she was doing Europe in an automobile or was rhapsodizing on the Rhine.

Some day, perhaps—vedy likely, in fact—she will go back to her husband's land and will listen to his telling of his American trip, and in the enthusiasm of the nature which he made manifest on the Potomac he will tell the "historic truths" concerning George Washington which he learned from his American wife.

It may be that some of the Germans who know something of the life of the American general who was the friend and fellow soldier of Steuben will come to think, as some Americans have come to think before this, that a little American history might be included in the course of study of the average American girl, and that not a dollar should be spent on her passage money to Europe until she knows without stopping to think whether it was George Washington or Abraham Lincoln who crossed the Delaware, and who, something later, forced the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown. This may seem to be a matter that is beside the mark, but, while the listener had none too thorough a knowledge of American history, there were some things said on the boat plying down the Potomac that if they had been said by an eighth-grade schoolboy ought to have brought him a flogging.

Mount Vernon has been written about by pretty nearly everybody who has seen the place. It hasn't fallen to the lot of everybody to see it in the fall. It is a noble place, a fitting resting ground for the first American.

It seldom falls to man's lot to see such heroic trees. There is a giant oak which stands sentinel over the first burial place of Washington. The body was removed from the base of the oak about 75 years ago. It never should have been removed.

It is said that Washington selected the place where his body now lies and left instructions that one day the change of sepulcher should be made. The oak which guarded the first grave must have been standing for three centuries. The view from the place is inspiring enough to enkindle the eyes of a dead man. The view from the new tomb is fine in its way, but it is as nothing to the grand sweep of river, hilltops and forests which moves before the eye from the place where Washington slept for 30 years.

Hundreds of visitors go to Mount Vernon daily. They peer into the tomb and then straightway go to the house. There is an interest, of course, which must attach to any of the belongings of Washington, but it seems to be a legitimate matter of regret that of the thousands who go to Mount Vernon the interest in the mirror which Washington used when he shaved and in the spoon with which he ate his porridge, if he ate porridge, is far greater than in the forest trees under which he walked and in the garden whose hedges of formal cut were planted with his own hand.

Indoors at Mount Vernon everything is dead; outdoors everything is alive. The forest and garden are instinct with Washington; the contents of the house are as dust.

There is a real interest, however, in the library of the old home. In the main the books are simply copies of those which were on the shelves in Washington's time. The originals, as I understand it, are in several libraries of the country. There are two originals, however, which are open at the title page, so that if the light be good, one may read Washington's name written in his own hand and the title of the book which he thought worthy enough to buy.

The light wasn't good on the afternoon in mind and all that one pilgrim could make out of a book's title, above which was written Washington's name, was the word "Sentimental." The wonder was, and the poor light was responsible for its remaining a wonder, if the father of his country had not in his quiet hours been reading "A Sentimental Journey." If the gentle Martha had peeped into the pages and had reproved George because of what she saw there one can imagine his ready answer that the book was written by a holy priest of her own chosen church.

The man with the megaphone on the Washington "rubberneck" wagons tells his audience of passengers as they roll by the Metropolitan club house: "This is the club of the nobs." In another minute, as the big sightseeing bus passes another clubhouse the megaphone man says: "And this is the club of the cranks."

"The club of the cranks," as this information howler calls it, is the Cosmos club, and a most interesting organization it is. Its membership is composed of scientists, some physicians and clergymen, a few lawyers and two or three newspaper men. The scientists are in the great majority.

It costs a pretty penny to join the Metropolitan club and to pay the dues and to live the life of the organization. The initiation fee at the Cosmos club is rather small, and the dues are light, but there are scores of members of the Metropolitan club, "the club of the nobs," who willingly would pay twice or thrice the Metropolitan's initiation fee and the Metropolitan's dues if the expenditure could gain them admission to the club where the "cranks" foregather.

Every Monday night is called "social night" at the Cosmos club. Of course the clubhouse is open at all times, but on Monday evening the members make a special effort to be present and there is always a large gathering in the great, sweeping rooms of the house where once lived Dolly Madison.

They don't intrude "shop" upon you in the Cosmos club. The members are a genial body of men and they have many guests from all parts of the world. They find out what the guest likes to talk about and then some one who knows the subject is promptly introduced to him. There are few world subjects upon which you cannot get an expert opinion in the Cosmos club.

The members, of course, have their hobbies and they ride them. In one corner of a room there will be an astronomical group, and there will be another corner with a fish group and another corner with a bird group and another corner with, it may be, a mushroom group. It isn't all science, however, in the Cosmos club. The members play billiards and pool and bridge, and they have a fine time of it generally and at no great expense, for it is one of the hard facts of earth that men devoted to science have little money. Learning doesn't bring high pay in the market.

INVENTER OF GRAHAM BREAD

Sylvester Graham the First to Popularize Article of Diet That Bears His Name.

The housewives of America make many loaves of graham bread during the year, but few of them know the history of this article of food, nor have they ever taken the trouble to learn why and how it came to be first prepared.

Sylvester Graham, a native of Suffield, Conn., was the man who invented the bread, and it has borne his name ever since.

Graham was the pioneer "crank" on the food question, and he popularized his theories throughout the country.

While lecturing under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Temperance society in that state, about 1830, he conceived the idea that intemperance could be prevented and totally cured if the man who wanted alcoholic drink would confine himself to a purely vegetable diet.

He argued in public and private that by following up his course of treatment and using only vegetables in the diets, drunkards could shake off the clutch of alcohol and become proof against the habitual craving for strong drink.

Graham was himself in delicate health at the time he discovered his vegetable theory, so he started in to try his theories on himself. After practicing his preaching for some time he announced in public on various occasions he had met with remarkable results in his own case and detailed the improvement in his condition occasioned by his following a vegetable diet.

He followed up his studies along the line of dietetics, with the result that he finally advocated a strictly vegetable diet as a cure for all the diseases which human flesh is heir to

The KITCHEN CABINET

A MORNING glory at my window satisfies me more than the metaphysics of books."—Walt Whitman.

One impulse from a vernal wood
May teach you more of man,
Of moral evil and of good
Than all the sages can.
—Wordsworth.

"Order Is Heaven's First Law."

So many mothers find it very hard to teach children to be orderly, put away their belongings and keep their boxes neat. "The way to begin is at the beginning," when they are old enough to have playthings they should be taught to put them away when done with them. A child under two years can learn to do this. As they grow older the habit is formed of having a place for everything and putting it there. The school books and wraps should never be allowed to be dropped anywhere. We all know what a saving of nerves and temper a well-ordered household means. For in the hurry of starting to school there is no time to hunt for mislaid articles.

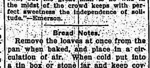
One mother is trying now to overcome some bad habits already formed by inspecting the belongings of her young hopefuls each day. If she finds everything in order she leaves a small piece of money on the dresser; if it is not there the aforesaid hopeful knows why.

It isn't always easy to put a thing away directly we are done with it. We want to do so many other things, but how glad we are that we may be able to put our hands upon our belongings in a hurry, only those know who have tried both ways.

Years ago there was a story published of a young lady away at a house party for a few weeks. In the party was a young man who was very much interested in this young woman and had made up his mind to ask her to share his salary and travel on his pass, but he happened to pass her room and looking in, saw such disorder and confusion that he changed his mind about wanting her. Whether true or not the moral is plain: "Be orderly."

Seasonable Recipes.

Quinces make such a nice addition to the winter's store that we would not leave them out in the gathering in.



T IS easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude."—Emerson.

Bread Notes.

Remove the loaves at once from the pan when baked, and place in a circulation of air. When cold put into a tin box or stone jar and keep covered closely.

Never wrap bread in a cloth, as it gives the bread an unpleasant taste.

Bread jars should be washed, scalded and sunned each time before using, and oftener in summer.

All dry bread may be used in countless ways in cooking and a crumb should never be wasted.

Bread may be brushed over with milk to make the crust hard.

Keep bread closely covered and in a warm place while rising.

If bread is ever overbaked and the crust needs softening, sponge with sugar and water and wrap closely for a few minutes.

Boiled Rice with Chocolate Sauce.

Here is something that will be new to many, and the combination is good. Take one cupful of rice, add one and one-half cupfuls of boiling water, cook until the water is absorbed, then add one and one-half cupfuls of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of butter.

Chocolate Sauce.—Make a syrup of one cupful of sugar and one-fourth of a cupful of water. Pour it over one square of melted chocolate, add one teaspoonful of butter and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of vanilla. Serve hot.

To Make Tough Steak Tender.

Lay the steak in a plate in which three tablespoonfuls of oil and one and a half of vinegar have been placed, turn often and let the meat lie at least four hours, before broiling.

Keep a microscope in the kitchen to examine dried fruits, cereals, etc., it will save much waste, as a glance will tell the condition, and anything not good may be at once returned to the grocer.

Beet Relish.

Take one quart of cabbage chopped fine, one quart of boiled beets chopped fine, two cupfuls of sugar, one tablespoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of pepper, one-half teaspoonful of cayenne, one cupful of grated horse radish, with vinegar to mix well. Can cold.

Peach Sherbet.

Boil one quart of water and two cupfuls of sugar together, add one quart of peach juice, the juice of a lemon and the well-beaten whites of two eggs. Freeze as usual.

Nellie Maxwell

Peach Chutney.

Pare and halve sufficient peaches to weigh three pounds. Put them in a granite saucepan, add one pint of cider vinegar and stew gently until tender. Pound together in a mortar four ounces of onions, two ounces of garlic and five ounces of fresh ginger root. Add these to the peaches with six ounces each of sugar, stoned raisins and white mustard seed. Add two ounces of dried chillies and one cupful of vinegar. Simmer ten minutes longer and bottle.

POULTRY HOUSE PLAN WITH SCRATCHING PEN

Best Located on the Side of a Hill to Avoid Standing Water During the Rainy Seasons—By John Sorham.

This is a poultry house which I think will stand the test of all climates. I think it well adapted to the cold climate of Alaska, or the hot climate of Australia, as well as all temperate regions, writes John Sorham in the Poultry Tribune.

It is best to first select a side hill on which to build, so that the water will not be standing around or under the house during rainy seasons. I have mine built on level ground, but shall remodel it soon, digging away about 12 inches of ground from under the house and replacing it with coarse sand. I shall also dig a trench around and close to it, two feet deep, one foot wide, and shall fill in one foot of loose stones, covering with one foot of ground. Tile would be much better than stones to keep the ground dry around the house.

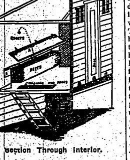
Poultry House with Sub-Scratching Pen.

The house which I have planned is 8 feet wide, 36 feet in length, consisting of three pens (although it can be divided into any number of pens) each pen being 8x12 feet. The house is 8 feet high in front and 6 feet at the back, and is built with a cheap grade of lumber which is not painted, but a layer of building paper is tacked on, over which is placed a two-ply roofing material. The roof is covered the same way, excepting the paper is covered with three-ply prepared roofing. The floor is double, with a two-inch dead air space, which contains also a layer of building paper; the lumber is good shiplap or tongued and grooved lumber. There is an opening in the floor through which the hens may pass up and down. The step (B) is hinged at the back, with a hook in front so it can be hooked up, completely covering the opening in the floors; each pen is arranged this way. The floor is built two feet from the ground and the hens are fed in this under story in winter. On this basement floor there should be at least six inches of scratching material to keep the fowls busy. This scratching shed under the building is closed up on all sides excepting the front. Each pen is 8x24 feet, making 192 square feet of floor space in which can be kept a flock of 60 hens. In summer I take out the litter and when it rains the fowls all go under the house for shelter.



Section Through Interior.

I have two windows in every pen (above the floor, of course), and when but one pen is built, I also have two windows (one on each side), on the sides. The windows should all be hinged at the top, so as to admit fresh air all over the house when needed, and there should also be a shutter for every window, to be shut on winter nights. These shutters should be made of tongued and grooved lumber and hinged with loose pin steel butts so they may be taken off in warm weather and put out of the way. I always like to have plenty of light and sunshine in the cold winter days, but you know the more windows in the poultry house the colder it is at night, thus you see here is where your shutters come handy. There is also another point in this house which should not be overlooked, that is, the covered roosts. A hinged hood projects over the roosts which keeps the fowls' combs from freezing in severe cold weather. This hood is fastened with loose pin hinges like the shutters and may be taken off in the spring. The hoods are also supplied with hooks and may be hooked up in day time if desired. The roosts (C) are above the nests, between which there is a large dropping board, which also makes a covered passageway (D) for hens to enter the nests. This passageway is open at both ends.

You will notice that in my plan I have only one entrance, this is in the middle pen, while the other pens have a small door for the hens to pass in and out. If you like you may have a door into each pen from single door at the end of the building.

MAKING GATE IN WIRE FENCE

Plan for Making Opening that Can Be Varied to Any Size to Suit—By H. H. Bryant.

In making a gate in a wire fence, use 6x6's for the gate posts and 4x4's for the rest of the posts in the fence. The brace shown at A should be a 4x4, and should be placed two-thirds of the height from the ground on the gate post and one-third of the distance from the ground on the second post. At B is shown a brace made of wire which should be placed around the bottom of the first post, and nailed so that it will not slide. The other end is placed near the top of second post from the gate. By placing a stick in the two strands they can be twisted and brought taut. The second brace shown at E should be made out of 4x4 fastened to the top of the second post from the gate and secured at the bottom of the third post. The gate frame shown at H, C and F should be made out of 3x3 well put together. Stretch the fence wire across the gate, and cut after stapling firmly to the frame of the gate. Of course, this plan can be varied to any size of length to suit the builder.

Cutting Gate in Wire Fence.

Manure Currants.

Were you dissatisfied with the size of your currants? Let us whisper a secret. You can improve the fruit greatly by heavy manuring. Now is a good time to apply it. The wood is ripe and is going into its long rest. You may pile straw manure about the bushes so heavily that the grass and weeds, if any, will be smothered, and all the better for the currants. This fruit needs mulching enough to keep the surface cool.

Troughs for Sheep.

If you can do no better by way of making troughs for the sheep to eat their grain out of, you can nail two boards together in the shape of a V, with a couple of short pieces across the ends to keep them right side up. This will save much grain, and grain is money.

Spraying Fruit Trees.

Don't spray only the trees from which you expect to get marketable fruit. Spray all the trees, otherwise the trees you go to the trouble to spray early in the season may become infected later by the unsprayed trees.

Corn and Pork.

The farmer who has a number of spring pigs ready for the fattening pens should devote a little time to the study of feeds and their influence on the quality of meat produced. When it is desired to produce pork, or rather fat, one kind of feed is necessary. When the desire is to have lard hogs for the market, no other kind of feed should be used.

Corn is pre-eminently a fat-forming feed, and when the feeder wishes to produce an animal with a great deal of fat to supply the lard trade nothing is better than corn. When the desire is to produce animals for meat alone nothing can be a poorer feed than corn.

The influence of corn on the percentage of fat should be borne in mind and the ration mixed to accomplish the best results.

Need of Cream Separators.

With average cows and using the cream separator it is estimated that from $50 to $75 per year can be saved in butterfat with ten cows. This amount will about pay for a good cream separator, and its usefulness will last for many years, making the buying of one a good investment. Being able to sell the cream without hauling the milk to the creamery also saves much time and labor.

Value of Potato.

On account of the starch they contain, potatoes are valuable as food. The potato tuber consists mainly of a mass of cells filled with starch and encircled by a thin, corky rind. As stated, the chief value of the potato as an article of diet consists in the starch it contains, and to a less extent in the potash and other salts. The quantity of nitrogen in its composition is small.

Aconite Weed.

A weed known to ranchmen of Montana as "the deadly aconite weed" causes heavy losses among stock. It is found about watering places, grows 18 inches high and is easily pulled out by the roots. Cattle relish it, roots and all, and the poison is found largely in the roots. One ranchman states that about 100 of his best four-year-old steers were killed by it. They have applied to the government for help in exterminating the pest.

Hog House Floor.

The hog house floor may be cement one part with six to eight parts gravel for a foundation and covered with one inch of a thin mixture containing one part cement with two of clean, sharp sand. Roughen the surface; otherwise it will be slippery.

Money in Sheep.

Some men have cleared 100 per cent. on their money in sheep for years; but these are the real shepherds. Not every man has the shepherd instinct; but we may all do better than we do.

The St. Paul Pioneer Press observes that it is a happy dispensation of Providence which makes it possible for every man to love the best woman in the world.

It is a safe rule for the taxpayers who have so often been deluded by broken premises to vote against any congressman who helped to perpetuate the Cannon dynasty.

The Johnson memorial fund has reached $16,000 and it is thought that when the returns are all in it will amount to $20,000. The committee will continue to receive contributions for the next two weeks, at the end of which it is thought the full amount of $25,000 will be raised.

The Princeton Union claims for Princeton the honor of being the greatest potato center in the state. Farmers near that city have harvested as high as 300 bushels of spuds per acre, and it is estimated that 1,800 car loads will be shipped from there, bringing in a cash return of about $500,000.

The sale of the Grasty interests in the Pioneer Press and Dispatch to George Thompson has created a great deal of surprise. Various explanations are offered, but none of them conclusive. Some argue that Mr. Grasty represented eastern leaders of the national Democracy, and that he was to lead the newspaper campaign in Governor Johnson's presidential aspirations. Others aver that the rehabilitation of Thompson means that the papers will return to the Republican camp. Still another version is that the Democratic city organization disliked the criticism of the papers and engineered a plan to dispose of Grasty. At any rate the Dispatch and Pioneer Press are great newspaper properties and are undoubtedly bringing good dividends, although the St. Paul people feel that the city would fare better under a devided ownership.

Frank A Day retired as private secretary to the governor last Saturday, after nearly five years of service. Mr. Day has been more than a secretary; he has been the recognized head of his party and the confidant and companion of John A. Johnson. He has performed his duties with ability and patience, and it will be a long time before the office from which he retires is graced with an occupant who gives to the state such excellent public service. The public will join in hearty accord with the sentiment of the Duluth Herald, which says:

"He has been faithful not alone to his chief, but to the state and its people. He has been loyal not only to Governor Johnson, but to Minnesota. It was a pretty thing, and a deserved thing, that a Republican newspaper siad the other day when it offered him tribute in the following play upon words: 'Minnesota has had five years of Democratic rule without a Day-break.' There have been no "Day-breaks" because Day doesn't make breaks. Tactful, astute, with a sympathy with the popular needs that comes not only from the brain but from the heart, with a broad knowledge of public affairs and the wit and diligence needed to make that knowledge effective, he brought to his office uncommon powers that he used without stint in the service of his chief and of his state. He was a good governor's private secretary, as before that he had been a good newspaper man, as before that he had been a good president of the state senate, and as before that he had been a good state senator."

HERE is a sermon on "Frankness," from Philosopher Gillilan, of the Chicago News: "It is all very well for the wise to tell us always to be frank and open as the noonday sun. It is fine to read the story of the boy who, captured by robbers and asked if he had money, replied brazenly that he had forty pieces of silver sewed up in his breeks. The story, by the way, goes on to say the robbers were so lost in admiration of the lad that they would not rob him. This may be explained on the theory that they thought he was crazy and didn't believe he had a sou markee."

HAMMOND FOR PRESIDENT.

Geo. F. Authier, the versatile political writer of the Minneapolis Tribune, has a clever story, discussing Hon. W. S. Hammond as a possible and probable nominee of the democratic party for president of the United States, says the Fairmont Sentinel.

There is much in the article to commend it to the thoughful consideration of the people of the west.

Gov. Johnson sounded the keynote of the next campaign when he declared that "the west must throw off the shackles of the east," and the logic of the situation with tariff reform as a dominant issue, is that the candidate should come from the middle west. President Taft recognized this fact when he came to Minnesota to defend the Payne-Aldrich bill. Had Gov. Johnson lived he was the inevitable leader of the national democracy; in fact in the minds of a large majority of that party he was already chosen as their standard bearer in the 1912 campaign.

The eyes of the country are already turned toward Minnesota, and it is conceded to be the storm center of the coming battle against special privileges.

Mr. Hammond, in two great campaigns, which have attracted national attention, has won signal triumphs against the chief exponent of the principle of high protection. He is a profound student not only of the tariff, but of every other economic question affecting the welfare of the people. As an orator and campaigner he has few equals. He is in the prime of life and possesses a rugged and stalwart physical manhood. His record is as clean as a hound's tooth and he is in every way equipped for a battle royal in a contest against organized greed and Cannon tyranny.

If Mr. Hammond should be elected for a third term or if he should be chosen Governor of Minnesota it is by no means beyond the pale of possibilities that he be selected as leader in the next great struggle for equal rights for all, special privilege to none.

Keep your eye upon Winfield Scott Hammond.

Echoes of Harmony.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: The wise republicans of Minnesota are counseling caution, but the hot heads seem determined to rush right in and give the party some more disruption, if possible.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: Governor Eberhart has more to fear from the two or three notorious politicians who are just now making it their business to tell him how to be governor than he has from other causes, conditions and cohorts.

Princeton Union: Some of the fellows who are now loudly clamoring for harmony among republicans were rank traitors to their party's nominees in 1904, 1906 and 1908.

Cannon Falls Beacon: The appointment of Ralph Wheelock as the governor's private secretary has again sent the Dunn faction into the sulks and the Collins party into ecstasies. Dunn refuses to be placarted, and has already declared war on young Governor Eberhart. It is evident the old wound has not even begun to heal, and there's sure to be "something doing" in the next republican convention.—Owatonna Tribune.

If there's anything doing in the Dunn-Eberhart line, it will be Mr. Dunn who will be done.

Cass Lake Times: Since 1904, when Governor Eberhart handed one to Bob Dunn, the editor of the Princeton Union has been growing a special variety of lemon which for acidity makes the ink-well of Editor Henry Watterson seem like gentle dew. That the presentation of this special variety of fruit may be as effective as possible, Bob has invited Ripley Brower to assist in the cermonies. Oh, you politicians!

Sauk Center Herald: With Bob Dunn, Jake Jacobson and Jim Tawney each seeking a "vindication," there ought to be something doing in Minnesota politics next year.

Anoka Union: It begins to look as though there might be a big scrap in the republican party in Minnesota again. Scraps hurt.

Hibbing Tribune: The republican party wouldn't mind so much having Dunn governor, but it would hate awfully to have him a candidate for governor.

Foley Independent (Rep.): Much has been said of late regarding who would be the logical man for the republicans to nominate for governor next year, and judging from the numerous conflicting views expressed, it is doubtful if it will be possible for the party to unite upon any one man, as the chasm now existing is too wide to be bridged. Therefore it appears to simmer down to the man who can at least command a respectable number in his own party and at the same time rally a large number of democrats to his standard.

Notice of Tax Sale of Unredeemed Lands in Red Lake County, Minnesota, Under Sections 936, 937 and 938, Revised Laws of 1905, as Amended by Chapter 430, General Laws 1907.

Pursuant to the provisions of Sections 936, 937 and 938 of Revised Laws of 1905, as amended by Chapter 430, General Laws 1907, notice is hereby given that on Monday, the 8th day of November, 1909, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at the office of the County Auditor in the County Court House at Red Lake Falls, Minn., in Red Lake County, Minn. all tracts or parcels of land situate in Red Lake county, bid in for the State, and not assigned to purchasers or redeemed within three years from the date of the tax sale at which said parcels were offered and so bid in by the state, will be offered at public sale, and will be sold to the highest bidder therefor. No parcel will be sold for a less sum than the aggregate taxes, penalties, interests and costs charged against it, unless the cash value thereof fairly determined by the State Auditor, shall be less than such aggregate, provided however, that all parcels bid in for the state, for the taxes of 1901, or prior years, and not assigned to purchasers or redeemed as aforesaid, may be disposed of for one-half of the total taxes as originally assessed. Purchasers shall forthwith pay the amount of their respective bids to the County Treasurer. Said sale will begin at the time and place named above and will continue from day to day until every such tract or parcel shall have been offered for sale, under the provisions of said statutes. The list of said real property, subject to said sale, and which will be so offered for sale, unless previously redeemed, is now on file in the office of said County Auditor, and of the State Auditor of said State.

Owners or interested parties may redeem their property by paying the full amount due to the County Treasurer, at any time before sale and within sixty (60) days after proof of service of the Notice of Expiration of Redemption has been filed with the County Auditor.

After the Notice of Expiration of Redemption has been served, as provided in Section 956, Revised Laws 1905, the Governor is authorized to issue a deed in the name of the State to the persons entitled thereto. (See Section 938 R. L.)

Dated at Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, October 13th, 1909.

Petition for Public Ditch.

The undersigned land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for, the expense of the contruction of the Public Ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare and the reclamation of wet and overflowed lands require the establishment and contruction of a Public Ditch along the following described route in the Towns of Star and Hickory in said County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said ditch is as follows: Commencing at Northwest corner of section two (2) in township No. one hundred fifty-three (153) North of Range No. thirty-nine (39) in Red Lake county, Minnesota, thence running south along the section line between sections two (2) and three (3), between sections ten (10) and eleven (11), between sections fourteen (14) and fifteen (15), between sections twenty-two (22) and twenty-three (23), between sections twenty-six (26) and twenty-seven (27) and between sections thirty-four (34) and thirty-five (35) to the south-west corner of the south-west quarter (S.W.¼) of section thirty-five (35) in said township No. one hundred fifty-three (153) north of range No. thirty-nine (39), thence, continuing due south from the north-west corner of the north-east quarter (N.E. ¼) of section three (3) township No. one hundred fifty-two (152) North of range No. thirty-nine (39) through said section three (3) in a southeasterly direction to a point on the Red Lake river one hundred rods west of the south-west corner of section two (2), township one hundred fifty-two (152) north of Range No. thirty-nine (39) and terminating at the Red Lake river in said township No. one hundred fifty-two (152) north of range No. thirty-nine (39) as its outlet.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such Drainage Ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by chapter two hundred thirty (230), of the general laws of Minnesota for 1905 and acts amendatory thereof.

THE JUDGE OF GOOD FOOTWEAR DECIDES ON "GITCHE GAMEES"

Because he knows that a shoe that shows signs of careful workmanship will stand the strain of service.

Even a casual inspection of the "GITCHE GAMEE" proves that exceptional care has been taken with every detail.

The "GITCHE GAMEE" is admittedly a beautiful shoe, but it is more than that, it is an honest shoe.

Honest labor and honest leather have made it and it will stand honest wear in consequence.

A shoe that can be used on all dress occasions, the "GITCHE GAMEE" can also be used day after day at the hardest kind of work, without losing it's style and shape.

The toe-caps will not fall in, the leather will not crack.

The leather is the best obtainable at any price and has been thoroughly preserved before leaving the factory.

The "GITCHE GAMEE" is manufactured by the Northern Shoe company, who's greatest care is QUALITY, not quantity.

A faulty shoe returned to them would not be merely a "Return," it would be a blot on the reputation of the house; therefore they do not make faulty shoes.

"GITCHE GAMEES" are made in a great variety of styles and shapes to suit the tastes of all ages.

Buy one pair from your dealer and the shoes themselves will convince you of their superiority, it will be the best four dollars you ever invested in footwear.

When you buy any of these Shoes of "NOSHCO-MAKE," you are getting the BEST Shoe of the kind that it is possible to procure. Ask for them!

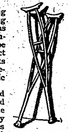
S.S.S. CURES RHEUMATISM



Rheumatism is a specific blood fermentation, a souring of the circulation from an excess of uric acid accumulating in the blood stream. This uratic impurity comes usually as a result of constipation, weak kidneys, indigestion and stomach disturbances. These systemic irregularities may not be of marked severity or of long duration, but each has a direct effect on the eliminative members of the body, which prevents the proper removal of the waste products. This refuse remains in the stomach and bowels, and souring forms uric acid, which the blood quickly absorbs.

Rheumatism is usually manifested in the joints and muscles. It is here its sharpest twinges of pain are felt, and stiffening of ligaments and tendons first commence. The pain of Rheumatism is caused by the contact of the sensory nerves with the gritty, acrid formation which uric acid causes to accumulate in the corpuscles of the blood about the joints. The stiffening of muscles and joints is usually gradual. Constantly the blood deposits the uric acid into the joints, and slowly the natural fluids are dried up and destroyed. Then Rheumatism becomes chronic and serious. Rheumatism is sometimes inherited, for like all blood diseases it can be transmitted to offspring. This explains why some persons are afflicted with the disease, and suffer its pains, who have otherwise been perfectly healthy.

RHEUMATISM FORTY YEARS.

I suffered with lumbago for a long time, and speaking of it to a friend one day he told me to try S. S. S. I did so, and soon found it was helping me. I had rheumatism for more than forty years, having contracted it in the army, but S. S. S cured me sound and well, and have had no return of the trouble. I think S.S.S. has no equal for curing rheumatism.

THOS. POTTS.
111 Main St., Johnston City., Pa.

S.S.S. cures Rheumatism and cures it permanently. It goes into the circulation, and removes the uric acid, purifies the blood, and in this way destroys the cause. S. S. S. changes the blood from a sour, acid-steeped stream to a rich, healthy fluid, which quiets the excited nerves, eases the throbbing muscles and painful joints, and filters out of the circulation the irritating matter which causes every painful symptom of the disease. When the blood has been purified and enriched by S.S.S., it nourishes the different members that have been weakened and starved because of imperfect blood. Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the sneeze stage—they break, or head off these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Nice for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Promptness may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child, if there is feverishness, night or day. Herein probably lies Preventics' greatest efficiency. Sold in 5c boxes for the pocket, also in 25c boxes of 48 Preventics. Insist on your druggists giving you

Preventics

It isn't so difficult to strengthen a weak stomach if one goes at it correctly. And this is true of the Heart and Kidneys. The old fashioned way of dosing the stomach or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is surely wrong! Dr. Shoop first, pointed out this error. "Go to the weak or ailing nerves of these organs," said he. Each inside organ has its controlling or "inside nerve." When these nerve fail them, then those organs must surely falter. This vital truth is leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. A few days test will surely tell! Sold by all dealers.

Read the pain formula on a box of Pink Pain Tablets. Then ask your doctor if there is a better one. Pain means congestion—blood pressure somewhere. Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets check head pains, womanly pains, pain anywhere. Try one, and see! 20 for 25c. Sold by all dealers.

A clergyman writes: Preventics, those little Candy Cold Cure Tablets are working wonders in my parish." Preventics surely will check a cold, or the Grippe, in a very few hours. And Preventics are so safe and harmless. No quinine, nothing harsh nor sickening. Fine for feverish restless. Box of 48 at 25c. Sold by all dealers.

Might Start a Forest.

A lady told a party of friends that she had quarreled with her husband and had planted a tree in memory of their first falling out.

"What a splendid idea," whispered another lady in her husband's ear; "if we had adopted that plan we might have had by now a fine avenue of trees in our garden."

Blind to Them.

"Never be critical upon the ladies," was the maxim of an old Irish peer, remarkable for his homage to the sex. "The only way that a true gentleman ever will attempt to look at the faults of a pretty woman is to shut his eyes."

Labor of Ants.

It would perhaps be pushing metaphors to an unwarranted extreme to speak of "dignity of labor" in connection with the occupations of ants. But if by the phrase we mean that labor is the honorable lot of all citizens and that all labors of whatever sort are upon the same level of respectability then we might venture to apply the saying even to the labors of an ant hill. For therein all are workers, from the newly fledged callow to the veteran of a second summer.—Harper's Magazine.

NOT MUCH DOING AT THE CAPITOL

ment took in the transaction indicates a somewhat serious misunderstanding of the meaning of the strong language he saw fit to use.

AS TO WATERWAYS.

The fad now is improved waterways. The president has a very ambitious program for the improvement of the Mississippi from St. Paul to the Gulf, to be followed later by the improvement of its tributaries and other waterways,—and we have talk of issuing bonds sufficient to cover the entire expenditure in fabulous amounts,—$500,000,000 is the least sum mentioned. Naturally the ambitious scheme has the unqualified endorsement of theories, visionaries and contractors. It might be well for those who are quite sure of the benefit to be derived from spending more money in this way to enquire as to the amounts which in the past have been exepnded in improving Mississippi river navigation, and concerning the practical benefits which have resulted from that expenditure. It might be also well to enquire to how great extent increased use has been made of this waterway as improved. Is the condition of the Mississippi such that it is impossible under present conditions to take care of the traffic seeking an outlet by that route? To what extent would the traffic be increased if half a billion dollars was spent on the Mississippi and its tributaries? It is easy to spend money trying to improve navigable rivers. All experience indicates that it is by no means so easy to get a profitable return on the investment.

MAKING THE MONEY FLY.

It is interesting to recall Cleveland's first administration. Some of us are old enough to remember his protests against piling up as surpluses in the United States treasury the money that ought to be in the pockets of the people. And some of us can remember the reply that was made, that all it was necessary to do in order not to be embarassed with a surplus was to elect a republican administration. So indeed its proved. Indeed in these piping times of peace, with prosperity at full flood, the problem which statesmen have to solve is not how to keep down the surplus but what else to tax in order to raise a revenue and make up for the successive deficits which have resulted from the lavish extravagance in which recent administrations have indulged.

INCREASING TAX BURDENS.

The tariff taxes about everything one uses from the cradle to the grave. That doesn't, it is true, all go into the treasury; but more from that source is collected now than at any previous period in the history of the country. Still at the next session the Minnesota legislature and other state legislatures will be asked to take such action as will give the federal government another source of revenue. It wants now to tax incomes. It is part of President Taft's polic to tax inheritances which are alread taxed for state purposes. And the nresident in this shows his prudence. There must be a credit as well as a debit side to the government accounts. If the people want to issue bonds for river improvements, they must submit to be taxed to pay the interest. If they want to endorse the president's shin subsidy policy, they must dig up the money. If they want to maintain a navy at the world's standard they must foot the bills. The policy of expansion, if glorious, costs money, and the people pay the freight.

STATE TAXES GROWING.

Nor are we much behind in this state when it comes to increasing the public expenditures and the taxes the people have to pay. The state taxes levied in this state in 1897 were $14,084,409; ten years later, 1907, the taxes were nearly twice as much, $27,162,153. Now they are talking about improved waterways in this state. A Chicago engineer, a Mr. Mershon who was here a year ago has evolved a project for a canal. One branch of it starts from the Lake of the Woods; another from Vermillion Lake in the iron range. They form a junction near Crookston. From there the route of the canal is down the valley of the Red River, through Lake Traverse and Big Stone Lake to the Minnesota River and down it to Granite Falls where it is proposed to build a dam 125 feet high. From this point the canal takes a northeasterly course to the St. Croix River by which it will reach Lake Superior, crossing the Mississippi to Sauk Rapids.

THE MERSON PROJECT.

Such a canal is a very attractive proposition to those sections of the state through which it would pass. The Lake Superior arm would be of sufficient capacity to carry lake freight vessels, which would find in Lake Traverse a great inland harbor The Vermillion Lake branch would tap the iron range region and furnish an outlet for ore and lumber to St. Louis, New Orleans and other southern markets. That part of the canal which traverses the valley of the Red River would furnish cheap transportation for one of the greatest agricultural districts in the world, and would put the farmers of that region in a position to dictate terms to the railroads, and prevent that extortion which in the past has xacted from them exorbitant local rates. Nothing could look better—on paper.

HOW TO PAY THE BILLS.

It wouldn't cost much money either, the way money is measured these days—a mere bagatelle of some $40,000,000 or $50,000,000, and the United States with its exhaustless resources might be induced to pay part of that. For the rest—to be sure its an internal improvement, and it is against the state constitution to spend the state's money constructing it,—but aren't we going to remedy that by adopting a constitutional amendment permitting the spending of future pork barrel bills? With an amendemnt permitting the spending of state revenues for internal improvements, and another, trifling one removing the absurdly low limits of bonds the state is authorized to issue, what's simpler than for the state to borrow some $25,000,000 or $30,000,000 dollars to construct the Mershon canal. Already there are those who are clamoring for an extra session of the legislature to take the necessary initial steps. Minnesota must keep up with the procession. We want to be in the fashion and have a resnectable and above board state debt, and not be content with the sneaking apology for one we have been able to incur under the guise of the few millions borrowed on certificates of indebtedness, which a sapient and just supreme court has formally declared is no debt at all.

WHEN THE CAT'S AWAY.

In the meantime we had last week an interregnum. Governor Eberhart was down to New Orleans boosting national waterways. Private Secretary Day was up in the wilds of Beltrami county inspecting state waterways, alias drainage ditches. Private Secretary Wheelock was about, looking indeed as pleasant as a prospective official with an anticipated salary ought to look, but equally without emoluments and the duties attached. So that there really was no one officially in the governor's office except the executive clerk, a couple of stenographers and a couple of messengers who had all anyone should be asked to do to put in their time. So that if there is no news in this letter from the state capitol I do not really feel as if I were the one to blame. It's up to the government and his aids to make copy, and if they are remiss, that furnishes only another reason to regret the change: for it was a cold day under the late administration when a receptive reporter left the capitol purlieus either empty-handed or empty-headed.

BRAY

A large number of Braylites went to St. Hilaire Friday to take in "market day" at that place.

Wm. Worstall has been on the sick list the last week.

E. J. Akerlund and Emil Larson drove to Thief River Falls, Thursday and investe l in a manure spreader each. This makes four spreaders that have been bought in this neighborhood this summer, which goes to show that we are getting more and more up-to-date in the farming business.

Gilbert Pederson came down from Adams, N. D., last week for a visit with his mother, Mrs. P. Pederson, who has been seriously ill but is now improving.

Peder Nelson of Sanders called on friends in Bray Saturday. He has just returned from a year's stay in the west.

Almost everybody has been busy the last week doing road work, which was delayed last summer by rain and the busy season.

W. H. Reker of St. Paul has been here this week looking after his farming interests.

Madam Rumor says that the merry tunes of wedding bells will soon be heard in our community. We hope that they will keep on ringing as there are a big bunch of rusty old bachelors around here.

August Crown was at Thief River Falls last Thursday.

F. Jacobson of Sanders called on friends in Bray Thursday.

Mrs. Ed. Crown called on Mrs. C. P. Swanson Saturday afternoon.

Miss Clara Anderson, Thomas and Richard Larson, entertained a large number of their young friends Saturday evening. A nice time was had by all present and everyone returned home well pleased.

P. Lindblom and Oscar Swanson took thirteen head of cattle to St. Hilaire Friday which they had sold to O. W. Brink of that place.

"That Is the Passage."

CHAPTER I.

There is a ruby mine hidden in the heart of the mountains near a remote little city of central Asia, unknown to European travelers; and the secret of the treasure belongs to the two chief families of the place, and has been carefully guarded for many generations, handed down through the men from father to son; and often the children of these two families have married, yet none of the women ever learned the way to the mine from their fathers, or their brothers, or their husbands, none excepting one only, and her name was Baraka, which may perhaps mean "Blessed;" but no blessing came to her when she was born. She was much whiter and much more beautiful than the other girls of the little Tartar city; her face was oval like an ostrich egg, her skin was as the cream that rises on sheep's milk at evening, and her eyes were like the Pools of Peace in the Valley of Dark Moons; her waist also was a slender pillar of ivory, and round her ankle she could make her thumb meet her second finger; as for her feet, they were small and quick and silent as young mice. But she was not blessed.

When she was in her seventeenth year a traveler came to the little city, who was not like her own people; he was goodly to see, and her eyes were troubled by the sight of him, for the stranger was tall and very fair, and his beard was like spun gold, and he feared neither man nor evil spirit, going about alone by day and night. Furthermore, he was a great physician, and possessed a small book, about the size of a man's hand, in which was contained all the knowledge of the world. By means of this book, and three small buttons that tasted of mingled salt and sugar, he cured Baraka's father of a mighty pain in the midriff which had tormented him a whole week. He brought with him also a written letter from a holy man to the chiefs of the town; therefore they did not kill him, though he had a good Mauser revolver with ammunition, worth much money, and other things useful to believers.

Satan entered the heart of Baraka, and she loved the traveler who dwelt in her father's house, for she was not blessed; and she stood before him in the way when he went out, and when he returned she was sitting at the door watching, and she took care to show her cream-white arm and her slender ankle, and even her beautiful face when neither her father nor her mother was near. But he saw little and cared less, and was as grave as her father and the other graybeards of the town.

When she perceived that he was not moved by the sight of her, she watched him more closely; for she said in her girl's heart that the eyes that are blind to a beautiful woman see one of three things: Gold, or power, or heaven; but her sight was fixed only on him. Then her throat was dry, her heart fluttered in her maiden breast like a frightened bird, and sometimes, when she would have tried to speak, she felt as if her tongue were broken and useless; the fire ran lightly along her delicate body, her eyes saw nothing clearly, and a strange rushing sound filled her ears; and then, all at once, a fine dew wet her forehead and cooled it, and she trembled all over and was as pale as death—like Sappho, when a certain god-like man was near. Yet the stranger saw nothing, and his look was bright and cold as a winter's morning in the mountains.

Almost every day he went out and climbed the foothills, and when the sun was lowering he came back bringing herbs and flowers, which he dried carefully and spread between leaves of gray paper in a large book; and he wrote spells beside them in an unknown tongue, so that no one dared to touch the book when he went out, lest the genii should wake and come out from between the pages to blind the curious and strike the gossips dumb, and cast a leprosy on the thief. At night he lay on the roof of the forehouse beside the gate of the court, because it was cool there. Baraka came to him, before midnight, when her mother was in a deep sleep; she knelt at his side while he slept in the starlight, and she laid her head beside his, on the sack that was his pillow, and for a little while she was happy, being near him, though he did not know she was there. But presently she remembered that her mother might wake and call her, and she spoke very softly, close to his ear, fearing greatly lest he should start from his sleep and cry out.

"The ruby mine is not far off," she said. "I know the secret place. Rubies! Rubies! Rubies! You shall have as many as you can carry of the blood-red rubies!"

He opened his eyes, and even in the starlight they were bright and cold. She stroked his hand softly and then pressed it a little.

"Come with me and you shall know the great secret," she whispered. "You shall fill this sack that is under your head, and then you shall take me with you to Egypt, and we will live in a marble palace and have many slaves, and be always together. For you will always remember that it was Baraka who showed you where the rubies were, and even when you are tired of her you will treat her kindly and feed her with fig paste and fat quails, such as I hear they have in the south all winter, and Frank rice, and coffee that has been picked over, bean by bean, for the great men."

She said all this in a whisper, stroking his hand; and while she whispered he smiled in his great golden beard that seemed as silvery in the starlight as her father's.

"That is women's talk," he answered. "Who has seen mines of rubies? And if you know where they are, why should you show them to me? You are betrothed. If you had knowledge of hidden treasures you would keep it for your husband. This is some trick to destroy me."

"May these hands wither to the wrists if a hair of your head be harmed through me," she answered; and as she knelt beside him, the two little hands held his face towards her very tenderly, and then one of them smoothed the thick hair back from his forehead.

"You are betrothed," he repeated, "and I am your father's guest. Shall I betray him?"

"I care nothing, neither for father, nor mother, nor brothers, nor betrothed," Baraka answered. "I will give you the riches of Solomon if you will take me, for I will have no other man."

"There are no rubies," said the stranger. "Show them to me and I will believe."

The girl laughed very low, and took from her neck a bag of antelope skin, no larger than her closed hand, and gave it to him with the thin thong by which it had hung.

"When you have seen them in the sun you will want others," she said. "I will take you to the place, and when you have filled your sack with them you will love me enough to take me away. It is not far to the place. In two hours we can go and come. To-morrow night, about this time, I will wake you again. It will not be safe to unbar the door, so you must let me down from this roof by a camel rope, and then follow me."

When Baraka was gone the stranger sat up on his carpet and opened the small bag to feel the stones, for he knew that he could hardly see them in the starlight; but even the touch and the weight told him something, and he guessed that the girl had not tried to deceive him childishly with bits of glass. Though the bag had been in her bosom, and the weather was hot, the stones were as cold as jade, and moreover he felt their shape and knew at once that they might really be rough rubies, for he was well versed in the knowledge of precious stones.

When the day began to dawn he went down from the roof to the common room of the fore-house, where guests were quartered, yet although there was no other stranger there he would not take the bag from his neck to examine the stones, lest some one should be watching him from a place of hiding; but afterwards, when he was alone in the foothills and out of sight of the town, searching as usual for new plants and herbs, he crept into a low cave at noon, and sat down just inside the entrance, so that he could see any one coming while still a long way off, and there he emptied the contents of the little leathern wallet into his hand, and saw that Baraka had not deceived him; and as he looked closely at the stones in the strong light at the entrance of the cave, the red of the rubies was reflected in the blue of his bright eyes, and made a little purple glare in them that would have frightened Baraka; and he smiled behind his great yellow beard.

He took from an inner pocket a folded sheet on which a map was traced in black and green ink, much corrected and extended in pencil; and he studied the map thoughtfully in the cave while the great heat of the day lasted; but the lines that his eye followed did not lead towards Persia, Palestine, and Egypt, where Baraka wished to live with him in a marble palace and eat fat quails and fig paste.

She came to him again that night on the roof, bringing with her a small bundle, tightly rolled and well tied up. He wrapped his blanket round her body, and brought it up under her arms so that the rope should not hurt her when her weight came upon it, and so he let her down over the edge of the roof to the ground, and threw the rope after her; and he let himself over, holding by his hands, so that when he was hanging at the full length of his long arms he had only a few feet to drop, for he wished to take the rope with him.

Baraka's house was at the head of the town, towards the foothills; every one was sleeping, and there was no moon. She followed the stony sheep-track that struck into the hills only a few hundred paces from the last houses, and the stranger followed her closely. He had his sack on his shoulder, his book of plants and herbs was slung behind him by a strap, and in his pockets he had all the money he carried for his travels and his letters to the chiefs, and a weapon; but he had left all his other belongings, judging them to be of no value compared with a camel's bag full of rubies, and only a hindrance, since he would have to travel far on foot before daylight, by dangerous paths.

The girl trod lightly and walked fast, and as the man followed in her footsteps he marked the way turn by turn, and often looked up at the stars overhead as men do who are accustomed to journeying alone in desert places. For some time Baraka led him through little valleys he had often traversed, and along hillsides familiar to him, and at last she entered a narrow ravine which he had once followed to its head, where he had found it ended abruptly in a high wall of rock, at the foot of which there was a clear pool that did not overflow. It was darker in the gorge, but the rocks were almost white, so that it was quite possible to see the way by the faint light.

The man and the girl stood before the pool; the still water reflected the stars.

"This is the place," Baraka said. "Do you see anything?"

"I see water and a wall of rock," the man answered. "I have been here alone by day. I know this place. There is nothing here, and there is no way up the wall."

Baraka laughed softly.

"The secret could not have been kept by my fathers for 14 generations if it were so easy to find out," she said. "The way is not easy, but I know it."

"Lead," replied the traveler. "I will follow."

"No," returned girl. "I will go a little way down the gorge and watch, while you go in."

The man did not trust her. How could he tell but that she had brought him to an ambush where he was to be murdered for the sake of his money and his good weapon? The rubies were real, so far as he could tell, but they might be only a bait. He shook his head.

"Listen," said Baraka. "At the other side of the pool there is a place where the water from this spring flows away under the rock. That is the passage."

"I have seen the entrance," answered the traveler. "It is so small that a dog could not swim through it."

"It looks so. But it is so deep that one can walk through it easily, with one's head above water. It is not more than 50 steps long. That is how I found it, for one day I wandered here alone in the morning for shade, when the air was like fire; and being alone I bathed in the clear pool to cool myself, and I found the way and brought back the stone, which I have hidden ever since. For if my father and brothers know that I have seen the treasure they will surely kill me, because the women must never learn the secret. You see," she laughed a little, "I am the first of us who has known it, since many generations, and I have already betrayed it to you! They are quite right to kill us when we find it out!"

"This is an idle tale," said the traveler. "Go into the pool before me and I will believe, and follow you under the rock. I will not go and leave you here."

"You are not very brave, though you are so handsome. If they come and find me here, they will kill me first."

"You say it, but I do not believe it. I think there is a deep hole in the passage and that I shall slip into it and be drowned, for no man could swim in such a place. I have but one life, and I do not care to lose it in a water-rat's trap. You must go in and lead the way if you wish me to trust you."

Baraka hesitated and looked at him.

"How can I do this before you?" she asked.

"I will not go alone," the man answered, for he suspected foul play. "Do as you will."

The girl took from her head the large cotton cloth with which she veiled herself, and folded it and laid it down on the rock by the pool; then she let her outer tunic of thin white woolen fall to the ground round her feet and stepped out of it, and folded it also, and laid it beside her veil, and she stood up tall and straight as a young Egyptian goddess in the starlight, clothed only in the plain shirt without sleeves which the women of her country wear night and day; and the traveler saw her cream-white arms near him in the soft gloom, and heard her slip off her light shoes.

"I will go before you," she said; and she stepped into the pool and walked slowly through the water.

The traveler followed her as he was, for he was unwilling to leave behind him anything he valued, and what he had was mostly in the pockets of his coat, and could not be much hurt by water. Even his pressed herbs and flowers would dry again, his cartridges were quite waterproof, his letters were in an impervious case, and his money was in coin. When he entered the pool he took his revolver from its place and he held it above the water in front of him as he went on. With his other hand he carried the sack he had brought, which was one of those that are made of Bokhara carpet and are meant to sling on a camel.

Baraka was almost up to her neck in the water when she reached the other side of the pool; a moment later she disappeared under the rock, and the traveler bent his knees to shorten himself, for there was only room for his head above the surface, and he held up his revolver before his face to keep the weapon dry, and also to feel his way, lest he should strike against any jutting projection of the stone and hurt himself. He counted the steps he took, and made them as nearly as possible of equal length. He felt that he was walking on perfectly smooth sand, into which his heavily shod feet sank a very little. There was plenty of air, for the gentle draught followed him from the entrance and chilled the back of his neck, which had got wet; yet it seemed hard to breathe, and as he made his way forward his imagination pictured the death he must die if the rock should fall in behind him. He was glad that the faint odor of Baraka's wet hair came to his nostrils in the thick darkness, and it was very pleasant to hear her voice when she spoke at last.

"It is not far," she said quietly. "I begin to see the starlight on the water."

The passage did not widen or grow higher as it went on. If it had been dry, it would have been a commodious cave, open at each end, wide at the bottom and narrowing to a sharp angle above. But the pool was fed by a spring that never failed nor even ebbed, though it must sometimes have overflowed down the ravine through which the two had reached the pool.

They came out from under the rock at last, and were in the refreshing outer air. The still water widened almost to a circle, a tiny lake at the bottom of a sort of crater of white stone that collected and concentrated the dim light. On two sides there were little crescent beaches of snow-white sand, that gleamed like silver. The traveler looked about him and upward to see if there was any way of climbing up; but as far as he could make out in the half darkness the steep rock was as smooth as if it had been cut with tools, and it sloped away at a sharp angle like the sides of a funnel.

Baraka went up towards the right, and the bottom shelved, so that presently the water was down to her waist, and then she stood still and pointed to a dark hollow just above the little beach. Her wet garment clung to her, and with her left hand she began to wring the water from her hair behind her head.

"The rubies are there," she said, "thousands upon thousands of them. Fill the sack quickly, but do not take more than you can carry, for they are very heavy."

The traveler waded out upon the beach, and the water from his clothes ran down in small rivulets and made little round holes in the white sand. He put down his revolver in a dry place, and both his hands felt for the precious stones in the shadowy hollow, loosening small fragments of a sort of brittle crust in which they seemed to be clustered.

"You cannot choose," Baraka said, "for you cannot see, but I have been here by daylight and have seen. The largest are on the left side of the hollow, near the top."

By the stars the traveler could see the pieces a little, as he broke them out, for the white rocks collected the light; he could see many dark crystals, but as to what they were he had to trust the girl.

"Do not take more than you can carry," she repeated, "for you must not throw them away to lighten the burden."

"You can carry some of them," answered the traveler. He broke up the crust of crystals with a small geologist's hammer and tore them out like a madman and his hands were bleeding, for though he was a philosopher the thirst for wealth had come upon him when he felt the riches of empires in his grasp, and the time was short; and although he knew that he might some day come back with armed men to protect him, and workmen to help him, he knew also that to do this he must share the secret with the over-lord of that wild country, and that his portion might be the loss of his head. So he tore at the ruby crust with all his might, and as he was very strong, he broke out great pieces at once.

"We cannot carry more than that, both of us together," said Baraka, though she judged more by the sound of his work than by what she could see.

He lifted the sack with both his hands, and he knew by its weight that she was right. Under the water it would be easy enough to carry, but it would be a heavy load for a man to shoulder.

"Come," Baraka said, "I will go back first."

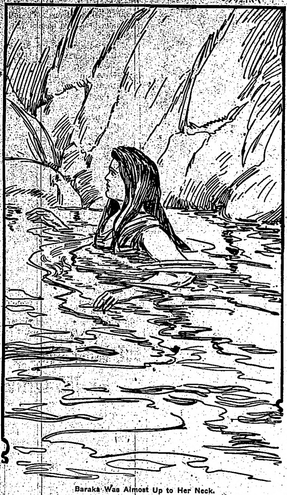
She moved down into the deeper water again, till it was up to her neck; and feeling the way with her hands she went in once more under the rock. The traveler followed her cautiously, carrying the heavy sack under water with one hand and holding up his revolver with the other to keep it dry.

"I begin to see the starlight on the water," Baraka said, just as before, when they had been going in.

When she had spoken, she heard a heavy splash not far off, and the water in the subterranean channel rose suddenly and ran past her in short waves, three of which covered her mouth in quick succession and reached to her eyes, and almost to the top of her head, but sank again instantly; and they passed her companion in the same way, wetting his weapon.

"Go back," Baraka said, when she could speak, "the rock is falling."

The traveler turned as quickly as he could, and she came after him, gaining on him because he carried the heavy sack and could not move as fast as she. He felt his damp hair rising with fear, for he believed that, after all, she had brought him into a trap. They reached the opening and came out into the pool again.



Baraka Was Almost Up to Her Neck.

"You have brought me here to die," he said. "Your father and your brothers have shut up the entrance with great stones, and they will go up the mountain and let themselves down from above with ropes and shoot me like a wolf in a pit-fall. But you shall die first, because you have betrayed me."

So he cocked his revolver and set the muzzle against her head, to kill her, holding her by her slender throat with his other hand; for they were in shallow water and he had dropped the sack in the pool.

Baraka did not struggle or cry out.

"I would rather die by your hand than be alive in another man's arms," she said quite quietly.

He let her go, merely because she was so very brave; for he did not love her at all. She knew it, but that made no difference to her, since no other woman was near; if they could get out alive with the rubies she was sure that he would love her for the sake of the great wealth she had brought him. If they were to starve to death at the bottom of the great rock wall in the mountains, she would probably die first, because he was so strong; and then nothing would matter. It was all very simple.

Realistic "Acting."

In full view of a fashionable assembly of playgoers a terrible tragedy was enacted the other night on the stage of the National theater at Saratoff, Russia. In the third act of the play which was being given the heroine is shot by a rejected suitor and dies in the arms of her sweetheart, who arrives on the scene soon afterward. On the night of the tragedy, to the astonishment of the audience, M. Tashnakoff, who was acting the villain, made no attempt to shoot the girl, but put a bullet through the heart of her lover, who was waiting for his cue to appear, then shot the girl and finally turned the revolver against himself and fired. Several women in the audience fainted and a great many other spectators sustained injuries in the panic that ensued while endeavoring to force their way out of the theater. The motive of the crime appears to have been jealousy, the actors having really represented the parts they played.

The First Standing Army

Historians Agree That It Was Made Necessary by Building of the Chinese Wall.

To describe the war-like use of the wall properly, a military historian is needed, who can set forth accurately and technically all the strategy involved and the weapons employed. In default of him, a lay view may help the general reader.

The very conception of a chain of thousands of strong blockhouses, linked by a rampart, and stretching over more than a thousand miles, betokens a mind that can conceive great measures. Vast resources were needed to execute the idea and to defend the wall when once erected. A wall would need an army of workmen to erect it, an army of soldiers to defend it. The trowel might be laid aside in a few months; the sword must be ever ready. A mere wall without men behind it can not delay an invader for a day. The wall of China involved a standing army, and historians say it numbered 3,080,000 men.

There are signs in the brickwork that the towers were designed and finished first before any wall was erected. The order was not, therefore, wall first and then towers on it; but towers, and then a curtain between them. In China and in South Africa there was a time when it was found wise to erect rows of blockhouses near enough together to command the intervening space by rifle fire, and numerous enough to stretch for miles. The line of Chinese defenses apparently began in the same way; only, as they had no missiles that could be thrown far and swiftly, a solid line of wall became needful at an early stage. We can imagine that each garrison would be charged to build a section of wall on to meet the builders from the next forts and thus the time would not be idly spent in mere watching.—W. E. Geil, in Harper's Weekly.

WRIGLEY'S

For Lame Back

An aching back is instantly relieved by an application of Sloan's Liniment.

This liniment takes the place of massage and is better than sticky plasters. It penetrates—without rubbing—through the skin and muscular tissue right to the bone, quickens the blood, relieves congestion, and gives permanent as well as temporary relief.

Here's the Proof.

Mr. James C. Lee, of 1100 9th St., S.E., Washington, D.C., writes: "Thirty years ago I fell from a scaffold and seriously injured my back. I suffered terribly at times; from the small of my back all around my stomach was just as if I had been beaten with a club. I used every plaster I could get with no relief. Sloan's Liniment took the pain right out, and I can now do as much ladder work as any man in the shop, thanks to

Sloan's Liniment

Mr. J. P. Evans, of Mt. Airy, Ga., says: "After being afflicted for three years with rheumatism, I used Sloan's Liniment, and was cured sound and well, and am glad to say I haven't been troubled with rheumatism since. My leg was badly swollen from my hip to my knee. One-half a bottle took the pain and swelling out."

Sloan's Liniment has no equal as a remedy for Rheumatism, Neuralgia or any pain or stiffness in the muscles or joints.

FIGHT COTTON SCALE

Injurious Insect Causing Much Damage to Crop in Peru.

Charles H. Townsend, Government Entomologist, Will Investigate Pest and Inaugurate Peruvian Entomologist Service.

Boston, Mass.—Charles H. T. Townsend, government entomologist, who has been connected with the experimental laboratory at Melrose Highlands has been granted a year and a half leave of absence in order that he may accept a position with the government of Peru to investigate the cotton scale which is giving that country trouble. Mr. Townsend, with his wife and two children, leave this country on October 15.

Mr. Townsend is considered an authority in entomology, and this, together with his superior knowledge of the Spanish language, is largely responsible for his selection to investigate the insect pests in Peru.

Mr. Townsends' trip to Peru has a double purpose, for, besides his investigation of the cotton scale, he will be called upon to inaugurate a Peruvian entomologist service. He will choose two or more graduates from the school of agriculture in Peru and train them in entomological work.

In speaking of his trip Mr. Townsend said: "There is a great deal of agriculture carried on in Peru and they raise a superior grade of cotton. The scale insect is causing a great deal of injury to this cotton, so the government of Peru has decided to stamp out, if possible, the pest.

"The scale insect is a new problem in economic entomology and has proven a very difficult insect to cope with. The Peru scale attaches itself to the bark on the trunk and branches. Owing to the fact that the plants are perennial the scale increases very rapidly each year.

"In Peru there are many other pests to investigate, and these are found ravaging in the orange and citrus fruit groves, in the sugar cane, also the grapes. These will be taken up by me."

The future work at the Melrose Highlands labratory will be carried on by William R. Thompson under the direction of W. F. Fiske.

HID FOUR DAYS IN RATS' DEN

Boy, Victim of Overstudy, Secretes Himself in Damp Cellar While Parents Search for Him.

Stamford, Conn.—With rats as large as the average sized cat scampering about him, Michael Florin, Jr., 14 years old, lay for four nights and four days in a dark, damp cellar at his home, East Meadow and Jefferson streets, here. The police had sent out a general alarm concerning the boy, his father had sought him in all the near-by cities, and every child in the neighborhood was engaged in the search.

The boy's hiding place was about as repulsive a place as could be imagined. The floor was damp, and even in the daytime scarcely any light penetrated the place. By night the boy slept in an isolated corner between beams in a bed of rags he made for himself. In fact, he spent most of the four days and four nights in this little hole. He had little food during the period, and that little came from an icebox in the front of the cellar. Often the rats stole this, but they never attacked the boy, and he apparently did not fear them. He was found by a younger brother leaning against the icebox so weak from hunger that he could scarcely stand. He was put to bed and a physician was called. He did not explain his strange prank.

"My son is a victim of overstudy," said the father. "He is devoted to books and spends every minute he can get poring over them. Six weeks ago he was ill, and I had a physician from New York. He said the boy's brain was affected from overstudy. He advised me to keep him out of school and to take him to New York for a course of treatment. He told me he went into the cellar to sleep, and when I asked him why he did not come out when he awoke, he just yawned and said he was too tired."

Sorry Went to Doctor.

New Castle, Del.—Feeling twinges of pain in his left arm for several days, Alexander Terry thought that he was suffering from rheumatism until the other day the member began to show a swelling. He then consulted a surgeon, who found that a bone in the forearm was broken and at once set it and placed it on a board. Terry said he was sorry that he had gone to the surgeon, because putting the arm on a board prevented him from working.

Coinage at Mints.

Washington.—The total coinage at United States mints during the month of September consisted of 16,918,875 pieces, valued at $929,269. Of this amount $315,330 was in gold, $454,085 in silver and $159,854 in minor coins.

There was also coined 108,000 pesos, 36,000 fifty centavo and 313,199 ten centavo pieces for the Philippine government.

Kill Rats by Bushels.

York, Pa.—Troubled by rats and mice which infested a corn crib, Curtis Laughman of North Codorus township called his bulldog and two house cats to his assistance, and in a few hours had 169 carcasses, which filled two bushel baskets. In spite of this he thinks several hundred of the rodents escaped.

Deer Damage Eastern Farms

New Law to Permit Killing of Animals May Be Necessary in State of Massachusetts.

Boston, Mass.—The state legislature at its next session may have to let down the bars and permit the killing of deer, for the deer money is being exhausted. The deer seem to be multiplying and the damage to farms is correspondingly on the increase.

Boston suburbs seem to be a sort of happy gathering place for the deer, and only recently individual animals have been seen in Stoneham, Chelsea, Cambridge, Blue Hills and Middlesex Fells. They have multiplied in such manner that they are overrunning farms in the country, and have become so bold at the apparent immunity with which they are being treated that they have walked the streets of same of the smaller towns.

The law of the state permits the killing of deer when in the act of destroying crops, but the farmers seem to prefer to have the state pay the damages done by the deer. In 1909 the legislature appropriated $4,500 to pay for such damages, but from indications this will not be sufficient.

Domenico Grandoami, of Oxford, in Worcester county, wants the state to pay him $175. Grandoami claims that one deer not only ate up a cabbage patch within 100 yards of his doorstep, but destroyed a number of fruit trees and beans, trampling in all about 12 acres of planted ground.

The town of Bernardston claims to have been twice visited by a strawberry-eating deer and handed in a bill of $160.

Franklin county has claims of $800 and Middlesex of $100. In Ashfield a farmer has collected $50 for damage to apple trees, while in Great Barrington a farmer has secured $20 for damages to his crop of rye.

Of course a guilty man never gets a fair trial—from his viewpoint.

OXYGEN AIDS WORK

Athletes Derive Benefit from This Source After Exercise.

Dr. Anderson of Yale Gymnasium Gives Results of Experiments in Relieving Heart and Lung Distress in Physical Exertion.

New Haven, Conn.—The experiments which have been carried on for a year by Dr. William G. Anderson, director of the Yale gymnasium, prove that there is a new field for the use of oxygen in relieving heart and lung distress in physical exertion, according to the report Dr. Anderson has just made public.

The report is divided into two parts. One relates to the extensive experiments performed on Yale athletes. More than 600 were examined and the effects of oxygen on their hearts was studied. This report is now in the hands of Prof. Russell H. Chittenden, director of the Sheffield scientific school, and will not be published in details for several weeks.

Its conclusions are not so decisive as those from the experiments made on athletes in mountain climbing. The series is detailed in the story of the ascent of the three Mexican volcanic mountains—Orizaba, 17,879 feet in height; Popocatapetl, 17,784 feet, and Ixtacchuitl, 17,476 feet.

Eleven persons took part in the trip, which was made in the last Christmas vacation. Joel Ellis-Fisher, Jr., of New York city, a Yale student, financed the undertaking. Use was made of oxygen during the ascent and it signally relieved the distress, so that the climb was made with much greater ease than would have otherwise been possible.

Two sets of experiments were made in the use of oxygen during athletic contests. The contests were held first at the "Huts of Pallegallinas," about 12,000 feet above the surface of the sea, and then at the "Caves of Cholula," 13,400 feet above the sea. In the first contest it was not deemed advisable to try anything more strenuous than the 100-yard dash, although the athletes upon whom the tests were made wore the heavy uniform of a traveler. As a result of the tests Dr. Anderson reports:

I have no hesitation in saying that the dyspnoea caused by high altitudes is very materially alleviated by oxygen.

Oxygen reduces the pulse rate it taken before the run or if taken before and after the exertion. The gas greatly relieved the dyspnoea which was evident after each run. If oxygen is not taken, the heart rate is quickened, and does not return to normal beat so quickly.

His report on the second series which consisted of walks follows:

Oxygen given before walking reduces the heart rate. Taken afterwrad, it also reduces the number of heart beats quickly. The walk, without the use of oxygen, quickens the action of the heart noticeably. If the gas was not inhaled after this effort, the heart did not return to its normal beat so quickly.

Dr. Anderson throws light on the use of chocolate as a food by his experiments. He used it in climbing one mountain, and found that it afforded decided nourishment. This report upsets the claim of several students of an athletic diet.

General use of oxygen in the handling of athletes is expected to follow the publication of Dr. Anderson's report. The experiments are expected to revolutionize mountain climbing, and to make accessible many peaks never yet climbed.

BRUSH FIRE STARTS SNAKES

Farmer Sees Whole Treeful of Squirming Reptiles While Cleaning the Meadow.

Clinton, N. J.—John Bendig set fire to a heap of brush in his meadow to clean it up, and when he was on the way back to the barn he was startled by a tremendous hissing and whistling.

Looking back, he saw scores of long blacksnakes gliding from the burning brush and wriggling up into the branches of a dead oak tree. They kept coming as long as he looked, till the huge trunk of the tree itself seemed to squirm with life.

Bendig hurried to Jacob Zacher's place and got Jacob's two boys, Milton and Warty, to go back with him to the meadow and take their rifles along with them. They blazed away at the snakes as fast as they could load and fire, and when they got through there were 93 dead reptiles.

Cure for Sleeping Illness.

Paris.—Dr. Laveran has announced to the Academy of Sciences a new cure for the sleeping sickness. It consists of subcutaneous injections of an aniline emetic. This remedy was suggested by experiments conducted by Dr. Evans, an American physician, and worked out in Senegal by Dr Thiroux with remarkable results.

Steal Gun from Fort.

St. Petersburg.—The theft of a big gun from the St. Petersburg artillery barracks has caused a great stir in military circles.

Notwithstanding the strict supervision and many sentries, the whole of the heavy gun completely vanished in one night.

Pieces of it were found later in different rag and old iron shops. Four private soldiers and a noncommissioned officer were arrested, but mystery still surrounds the robbery.

Man Lives Without Stomach.

New York.—William Smith, whose stomach was removed three weeks ago in the Bushwick hospital, Brooklyn, has left that institution cured, the surgeons say. There is no reason why Smith cannot live, it is said, and his only handicap will be that he can eat nothing except predigested foods.

Worldliness is a thing we should fight as if it were a fever, as soon as we see it taking a firm stand with us. It leads to nothing but unhappiness and heartache; the deeper we sink into it [illegible]

Big, Painful Swellings Broke and Did Not Heal—Suffered 3 Years.

Tortures Yield to Cuticura.

"Little black swellings were scattered over my face and neck and they would leave little black scars that would itch so I couldn't keep from scratching them. Larger swellings would appear and my clothes would stick to the sores. I went to a doctor, but the trouble only got worse. By this time it was all over my arms and the upper part of my body in swellings as large as a dollar. It was so painful that I could not bear to lie on my back. The second doctor stopped the swellings, but when they broke the places would not heal. I bought a set of the Cuticura Remedies and in less than a week some of the places were nearly well. I continued until I had used three sets, and now I am sound and well. The disease lasted three years. O. L. Wilson, Puryear, Tenn., Feb. 8, 1908."

Their Advantages.

"So you have made up your mind to be a specialist. What line are you going to take up?"

"I don't know. I have been considering various advantages in different branches. A chiropodist can generally get a foothold, no matter how bad business is; a manicurist has usually something on hand; a beauty doctor can usually play a skin game and an eye and ear doctor can often get a hearing when there is anything in sight. I haven't dwelt on the possibilities of throat specialists and dentists or hair experts, because the two former always look down in the mouth and the latter may get but a bald living or be expected to dye for his patients."—Baltimore American.

Try This in November.

Thousands upon thousands of families who have not been regular eaters of Quaker Oats will begin on the first of November and eat Quaker Oats once or twice every day for thirty days of this month; the result in good health and more strength and vigor will mean that every other month in the year will find them doing the same thing.

Try it! Serve Quaker Oats plentifully and frequently for the thirty days of November and leave off a corresponding amount of meat and greasy foods. You'll get more health, more vigor and strength than you ever got in thirty days of any other kind of eating.

United States Leads in Good Work.

In Germany there are 99 public sanatoria for adult consumptives with 10,539 beds, besides 36 private sanatoria with 2,175 beds. In 18 sanatoria for children with tuberculosis there are 837 beds, a total of less than 13,000 beds. The United States has provided over 309 sanatoria with 15,000 beds, showing that this country is in the lead in the anti-tuberculosis war. France has only 12 sanatoria for adult consumptives, with a total capacity of 148 beds. All of these institutions are private except the sanatorium at Agincourt.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Never Opened His Mouth.

"Not infrequent rays of unconscious humor illumine the otherwise impossible stories that come to my desk from amateurs," says a reader for one of the magazines. "Recently I chanced upon this choice bit:

"'John, the husband, and Grace, the wife, ate on together in silence. There was indubitably an ill feeling between them. The husband devoured a plate of soup, half a fish, an entree or two, a piece of roast beef, together with a sweet, without ever once opening his mouth.'"

"'The archbishop wore Highland dress.'"

Peruna Secrets You Should Know

Golden Seal Root.

Golden Seal, the root of the above plant, is a very useful medicine. Many people gather it in our rich woodlands during the summer. Few people know how valuable it is in dyspepsia, catarrh, and as a general tonic.

Many thousand pounds of this root are used each year in the famous catarrh remedy, Peruna. This fact explains why everybody uses Peruna for catarrh.

Sheriff Nelson has as his guest a man who gives his name as C. J. McGuire of Virginia, Minn. Mr. McGuire came to town last week and appeared to be very flush from statements of his financial condition made by himself. However, he overlooked the formality of paying his board bill at the Grand View hotel. As he was about to board the train to leave town Sheriff Nelson asked him to wait a while. He waited. He was taken before Judge Toupin and asked to answer to the charge of "jumping" his board bill. His answer was not satisfactory, so the court told him he might stay with the Sheriff for thirty days.

Mrs. W. A. Schrieter left last Friday for Oshkosh, Wis., being summoned to that city by news of the serious illness of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Hoernig. On Sunday Mr. Schrieter received a message announcing the death of Mrs. Hoernig. He drove to Crookston Sunday afternoon and left at once to be present at the funeral. Mrs. Hoernig's death was due to a stroke of paralysis suffered a few days before her death. Mr. Hoernig is now very ill having suffered a stroke of paralysis about three weeks ago. Mrs. Hoernig was well known in Red Lake Falls, having often visited here, and friends here will regret to learn of her death.

A. L. Brunelle, Clem Brunelle and Theo. LaBissioniere went to Thief Lake on a hunting trip last week. They armed themselves with all the hunting toggery the market affords and a limitless quantity of ammunition and supplies. These they loaded into a boat and rowed up the river several miles. Soon they heard something making a noise like a flock of honkers going over their heads. LaBissioniere reached for his gun and banged away in a flow of language that was as picturesque as the scenery. But that didn't do any good, for the gun wasn't there and in a few minutes the honkers were as many miles away as were the guns. It took a long time to row back to camp, but it gave them a lot of streuous out door exercise and that's what they were hunting for, anyhow.

A BAD FIRE TODAY

Beaulieu Residence On the North Side Burned to the Ground

The residence of Joseph Beaulieu on the north side was burned to the ground this forenoon. The alarm was turned in a little before ten o'clock. The fire had made such headway when discovered and the building was located so far from the fire house that it was impossible to do anything to prevent the distruction of the property. However, practically all of the household goods and other articles of personal property were saved. The origin of the fire is unknown, though it is thought that it may have been caused by a defective chimney. The building was worth $1000 and was insured for $850.

Ben Puschinsky Dead

At the hour of going to press news of death of Ben Puschinsky is received. He died at Crookston this afternoon. An obituary will be published next week.

Miss Mayme Ericson entertained the F. and F. B's. Wednesday evening.

FROM HELLSO'S PEN.

Things Are on the Hum In Giveadam Gulch.

WHY FIGHT WAS POSTPONED.

Editor of the Grass Valley Tribune Thought It Over and Sent Note In the Form of an Apology to the Kicker's Czar.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

A READER in Massachusetts writes us to ask if this town is a good place for a rising young doctor. It is not. What we want here is an old practitioner, a doctor who can feel of a man's pulse and tell pretty near where the next bullet is going to hit him. This saves time and guesswork.

Three men were shot in Lone Jack last week during a Biblical discussion. If they had been discussing poker they would still be alive.

No Duel Fought.

The editor of the Kicker did not fight a duel two weeks ago with another editor of this state, as recorded in various eastern papers. We had occasion to call the editor of the Grass Valley Tribune an unmitigated jackass. On the impulse of the moment he challenged us to mortal combat.

"WE RODE TO THE SPOT APPOINTED FOR THE BLOODY STRUGGLE."

We rode to the spot appointed for the bloody struggle, but no Grass Valley man appeared. After waiting four hours we received a note from him to the effect that on taking time to think things over he had come to the conclusion that we were right, as usual, and that we might return home. It's curious how some of those eastern dailies do twist things around.

The flying machine has not yet reached Arizona. When it does, look out to see the fliers come tumbling down. The man who can't get somewhere by straddling a cow pony had better stay away.

Some of our thin skinned residents want the name of Giveadam Gulch changed to Floraville. When the mighty west is ready to exchange its independence for boiled shirts this may come to pass, but not until.

In lying about the circulation of the weekly Kicker last week we made an error. We gave it as 3,254,827. It should have been exactly 4,000,000. We hope our readers will excuse us and accept the apology.

If ex-Judge Barnaby entered our editorial rooms one day last week and fired six shots at us, as he claims, all we can say is that we did not know it. There are days when we are absentminded and pay little attention to things of earth, and this was probably one of them. It wasn't fair of the judge to catch us on an off day.

At the last meeting of the common council Henry Jordon handed in his resignation as city marshal. Henry has been hit by bullets thirteen different times during the last four months and had become discouraged. The place is open to a good man at $12 per week, and there is no day or night [illegible]

Mr. Hiram Jackson of Denver was here one day last week to make inquiries about his son Claudius, who was last heard of in this neighborhood. We were pleased to be able to inform Mr. Jackson that Claudius was hanged on the Wolf creek road seven weeks since by cowpunchers for horse stealing.

Mr. James Peterkin brought us in a bone found on his ranch the other day and doubtless belonging to prehistoric man. It is a jawbone and three feet long and evidently belonged to a champion liar of his time. If that man were alive today he'd chase half the editors out of business.

The trifling shooting affray at the Bald Eagle saloon the other day was brought about through a misunderstanding. A customer thought free hides in the tariff schedule meant free drinks in Givedam Gulch, and the bartender differed with him. The bartender is sorry, and the mistaken customer will live on.

A naturalist from a Chicago college was here last week to experiment on the rattlesnake and see if whisky would really cure his bite. He got a Digger Indian to play the part of victim and prove the remedy, but as it took a whole barrel, and as it was not paid for, and as the professor got lost and is supposed to have been devoured by a cinnamon bear, it may be doubted if science is much ahead of the game.

A fire that started in Lawson's stables one night last week threatened for half an hour or so to destroy the forty-eight saloons and poker parlors in the town. We have only one church here, and the benches in that are mighty hard, but Providence was with us. The wind changed, and the peril passed away. Can it be argued that one church is enough for the average town?

Colonel Hennessey, the old crank who owns and runs the Squaw ranch, has stopped his copy of the Kicker because we refused to adopt a warlike attitude toward Japan. We never slept two in a bed with the mikado, but we'll be hanged if we are going to pick a fuss with a man who hasn't had a show yet to learn that a flush beats three aces. Colonel Hennessey can go to. We shan't even take the trouble to ride out to his place and fusillade him out of his old adobe.

We have been criticised by a Montana editor for holding the positions of editor, postmaster, mayor, game warden, colonel of the militia and chief of the fire department at the same time. That's the trouble with some folks—they don't understand how a man can swell and enlarge and absorb. We are prepared to take in a dozen other offices and not crowd ourself. "Room inside" is our motto. We didn't get a presidential nomination last year, but we are growing for it. The Hellso family can't be kept down.

The cowboy of the west has been thinned out in numbers the past three years, but his monumental cheek still remains. Last Sunday night, as mayor, we had to shoot a Mr. Bill Henderson through the shoulder to interrupt his fun of shooting up the town, and next morning he rode into town to ask us to foot the doctor's bill for extracting the bullet. We recommend Bill to all subscription book publishers.

Mine host of the Royal hotel has gracefully given way to popular sentiment, and he announces in this issue that no more guests will be shot for finding fault with holes in the tablecloth or the dilapidated state of bedsteads. Shooting will take place only where there is an argument over his bill. It makes us a bit lonesome to see old customs gliding away one by one, but the world must progress.

What Troubled Pat.

An old Irish laborer walked into the luxurious studio of an artist and asked for money to obtain a meal, as he was too weak to walk.

The artist gave him a quarter and then, seeing possibilities for a sketch in the queer old fellow, said:

"I'll give you half a dollar if you'll let me paint you."

"Sure," said the man; it's an easy way to make money, but—but I'm wondetrin' how I'd get it off."—Lippincott's Magazine.

The New Primer.

See the young man with the hap-py look! He pre-sent-ed a pret-ty girl with a pound box of can-dy, and now he is it.

How long will he be it with the pret-ty girl?

Un-til an-oth-er young man comes a-long and pre-sents her with a two pound box.—St. Louis Republic.

Chicago, Ill., October 6, 1909.

Hunt Hardware Co,
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Gentlemen:—You are authorized to sell the Original Cole's Hot Blast Heater this year on the most rigid guarantee ever made by any stove manufacturer. Our guarantee to every customer of yours is:
1—A saving of one-third in fuel over any lower draft stove of the same size, with soft coal, slack or lignite.
2—That Cole's Hot Blast will use less hard coal for heating a given space than any base burner made with same size fire pot.
3—That the rooms can be heated from one to two hours each morning with the soft or hard coal put in the stove the evening before.
4—That the stove will hold fire with soft coal from Saturday night until Monday morning.
5—A uniform heat day or night with soft coal, hard coal or lignite
6—That every stove will remain absolutely air-tight as long as used
7—That the feed-door is and will remain smoke and dust-proof.
All we ask is that the stove shall be operated according to directions and connected up with a good flue.

It isn't so difficult to strengthen a weak stomach if one goes at it correctly. And this is true of the Heart and Kidneys. The old fashioned way of dosing the stomach or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is surely wrong! Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. "Go to the weak or ailing nerves of these organs," said he. Each inside organ has its controlling or "inside nerve." When these nerve fail them then those organs must surely falter. This vital truth is leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. A few days test will surely tell! Sold by all dealers.

GOOD PRIZES FOR GOOD CORN EXHIBITS

Corn Exhibit Will be Held in Red Lake Falls Tuesday, Nov. 30.

The Harvesting of a Big Corn Crop Will be Appropriately Celebrated.

The harvesting of a bumper crop in southern Red Lake county is going to be appropriately celebrated in Red Lake Falls on Tuesday, Nov. 30. On that day there is going to be a corn exhibit and all farmers are urged to prepare samples of corn for the exhibit. Liberal prizes will be given to the farmers who bring in the best exhibits. The corn and other grains will be placed on exhibition at the Metropolitan opera house where forenoon and afternoon meetings will be held Good speakers have been secured for the occasion and will address the meetings. The corn contest will be an interesting feature of the exhibit. The corn will be judged by Supt. Wm. Robertson of Crookston experimental farm. Prizes for exhibits of corn will be awarded as follows: Flint—First $6, second $3, Yellow Dent—First $6, second $3; White Dent—First $6, second $3. Each contestant should bring in ten ears of one variety, for the different varieties are to be judged separately and prizes awarded for each. In addition to the prizes enumerated above there will be a sweepstake prize, or first and second prizes of $6 and $3. These prizes will be given for the best exhibits containing at least four kinds of grain. This exhibit may contain one kind of corn and three kinds of small grains, but not more than one kind of corn. Those entering this contest may use their own judgment in preparing the exhibits. Corn and smaller grains for the exhibit should be left with P. L. Malvin, buttermaker at the Red Lake Falls creamery, who is general manager of the show and who will see to it that the exhibits are properly arranged. Besides the exhibits, the contests and the addresses there will be some special entertainment features. The Red Lake Falls concert band and orchestra will furnish music for the occasion and a special program for the evening is planned. The whole show is free to every one and all are invited to attend the celebration and the farmers especially are urged to prepare for the exhibits. The program more in detail will be published in the next issue of the Gazette.

SEVEN PEOPLE BURNED

Gasoline Sold for Kerosene by Warroad Clerk.

Nels Jensen, his wife and five children were burned to death at their farm home near Warroad Tuesday. Jensen bought five gallons of oil from the Warroad Mercantile company. He believed he was buying kerosene, but the clerk gave him gasoline by mistake. Mr. Jensen used some of the oil to start a fire. There was a terrific explosion and the house was burned to the ground. Mrs. Jensen and five children were cremated. A neighbor got Mr. Jensen and two children out of the building, but Mr. Jensen was so badly burned that he died.

KANKEL STORE SOLD

E. A. Mittwer of Minneapolis is the Purchaser and is in Possession.

On Tuesday of this week a deal was completed transferring the Kankel hardware stock to Mr. E. A. Mittwer of Minneapolis. Since the death of Mr. Kankel the store has been operated in the name of the Kankel estate and the sale was made this week so that the estate may be closed up. The trade has been carefully looked after and no doubt Mr. Mittwer has acquired a good stock and business. The new proprietor comes with many flattering recommendations. Though a young man he is experienced in the business and no doubt will make a success of the venture here.

EDUCATIONAL MEETING

Northwestern Minn. Educational Association at Crookston

The annual meeting of the Northwestern Minnesota Educational association is being held at Crookston this week. The first session was held today and there will be sessions tomorrow and Saturday. A number of prominent educators of the state are on the program to address the meeting. Several Red Lake Falls and Red Lake county teachers have gone to Crookston to attend the meeting.

Commissioners Meet.

The members of the board of county commissioners were in session last Saturday. Ditch No. 33 was accepted and the engineer's report on Terrebonne ditch No. 2, the petition for the repair of which has been on file, was accepted. School district petitions from Thos. Moreau and Roch Lefebre were placed on file and will be considered later. Mr. Moreau asks that his lands be taken from district No. 7 and made a part of Dist. No. 144. Mr. Lefebre asks that his lands be taken from No. 7 and annexed to No. 126.

It was voted to repair the register's vault and a number of bills were allowed. The official proceedings will be published in the next issue of the Gazette.

DISTRICT COURT NOW IN SESSION

Not Much More Work and Court Will Probably Adjourn Last of Week.

District court, Judge Wm. Watts presiding, has been in session all of the week. It is probable that by the end of the week all of the cases on the calendar will have been disposed of and that court will adjourn Friday afternoon or Saturday.

The grand jury was organized Tuesday morning by the election of J. J. Padden as chairman and L. T. Berg as clerk. The jury reported that the county jail was found to be clean, in good repair and generally in good condition. The different county offices were found in as good condition as can be expected under present conditions.

The case of the City of Thief River Falls vs. Andrew Erickson, an appeal from muncipal court, was dismissed on motion of the city attorney.

In the case of Sortedahl Land Loan and Abstract company vs. E. G. Buse a settlement was stipulated, plaintiff to pay all costs except the statutory costs. And the case of E. G. Buse vs. Sortedahl was settled in a similar manner the plaintiff to pay all cost except costs of appeal. The case of Amelia Bergit vs. M. O. Sortedahl was also settled.

The case of Clair Baker vs. K. J. Weeks, A. M. Nelson and C. W. Nelson was stricken from the calendar.

The case of Harm and Oeschger vs. Andrew Erickson was settled out of court.

In the case of Arthur Diebel vs. Geo. Diebel and Diebel and Lang, an action to recover for services, plaintiff got judgment for $16.

The Case of Alex A. Sweas vs. Olaf Ramstad was continued over the term, the plaintiff to give bond for $75.

ONE CRIMINAL CASE.

Lewis E. Johnson Acquitted of Charge of Assault.

The grand jury returned one indictment, that against Lewis E. Johnson of Silverton charged with assault in the second degree. The case was tried yesterday and at five o'clock yesterday afternoon the jury brought in a verdict for acquittal.

Charles Helm had his collar bone broken in the personal encouter with Johnson which resulted in the latter's indictment and Helm started civil suit against Johnson for damages for personal injuries. That case has been on trial today and at the time of going to press is in the hands of the jury.

OPPOSITION TO JUDGE O'BRIEN

Politicians Would Like to Select Members of the Supreme Court.

Paul Pry's Interesting Comment About Politics and Other Things.

[Special Correspondence to the Red Lake Falls Gazette.]

St. Paul, Nov. 9—Judge Elliott's term as Judge of the Supreme Court if he had not resigned, would not have expired until January, 1912. Judge O'Brien, who was appointed to succeed him only serves, however, until his successor is elected and qualified, and such successor must be elected at the next general election. Query: Will Judge O'Brien's successor be elected to serve out Judge Elliot's unexpired term, or will he be elected for the full term of six years?

A Long and Short Term.

If, as I anticipate, a judge must be elected to serve out Judge Elliott's unexpired term, or until January, 1912, provision must be made at the forthcoming election to fill both this short term and the succeeding long term of six years, as between November, 1910, and January, 1912, no general election will be held. The natural thing to expect would be that the same candidate would be nominated for both terms, though of course there is nothing compulsory about this.

Judges To Be Elected.

Assuming, therefore, that a candidate will have to be elected in 1910 for the long and short term, there will be five positions on the supreme bench to fill. These two, that one occupied by Judge Jaggard whose term expires January, 1911, and those of Judges Lewis and Brown, whose terms expire January, 1912. If Judge O'Brien's successor is elected for six years only four candidates need be nominated.

Opposition To O'Brien.

The matter is of interest. Opposition has developed against two of the retiring members. Judge O'Brien's re-election will be opposed on grounds alleged to be political. He is a Democrat. Republican leaders will take the ground that it is not incumbent upon them to endorse him. There are those among the faithful quite as well qualified, it will be argued,—why sacrifice worthy Republicans to reward Democrats? To the victors belong the spoils.

It's Real Animus.

That's the way some of the leaders talk; as far as the rank and file of Republicans are concerned they would be well enough satisfied to keep Judge O'Brien, who is held in high esteem, on the bench. But the rank and file have not been accustomed to make Republican nominations, which for some years have been dictated from less disinterested quarters. What's the matter with O'Brien? For one thing he has been fighting the railroads in the courts since the inception of the rate cases. His personal sympathies it is well known, have been on the people's side. A judge like that might make trouble on the bench. Why select him when there are so many "safe" men to be had? That's the railroad side, and that accounts for the opposition set up to Judge O'Brien, ostensibly on the grounds that he is a Democrat.

Out To Beat Judge Lewis.

Judge Lewis isn't a Democrat. I don't know what excuse will be trumped up for opposing him. They may say nothing about it; just take him out in the back yard and knife him. The only pretense so far advanced is that Minneapolis is entitled to be represented on the supreme bench. Therefore to give color to this Judge Simpson of Hennepin county is being groomed for Lewis' place. Judge Lewis' trouble isn't the same as Judge O'Brien's, but it's akin to it. It will be remembered that in 1906 a wide-open tax amendment was submitted to the people. It was declared by the election authorities to have been carried. Dissatisfaction with this decision originated in Duluth. There was a partial recount. The wide-open amendment had in some way got mixed up with the amendment to the section relating to the road fund. A recount indicated a possibility that the wide-open tax amendment was defeated. The matter was put up to the supreme court and Judge Lewis wrote the decision. It was to the effect that the courts could only interfere to reverse the finding of the election board on conclusive evidence that the votes had been improperly counted and such evidence had not been submitted. The wide-open tax amendment thus became a part of the state constitution. It would admit among other things of levying a tax on iron ore. The decision therefore was obnoxious to the United States Steel corporation and to the people of the iron range. And hence the movement against Judge Lewis which is now in progress.

HORTICULTURAL EXHIBIT

Prizes for Exhibits of Corn at Agricultural School

The annual meeting of the Red River Valley Horticultural society will be held at the agricultural school at Crookston Friday, Nov. 19. One of the features of the meeting will be the judging of samples submitted in the young people's corn growing contest. Valuable prizes are offered for the six best exhibits. Exhibits should contain ten ears, any variety. The corn may be left with P. B. Gaass or may be sent to L. P. Harrington at Crookston.

Announcement.

To the people of Red Lake Falls and vicinity: I have taken over the stock of hardware formerly conducted under the firm name of G. A. Kankel, and take this means of informing you of the fact.

It is my intention to locate in Red Lake Falls permanently and strive to conduct the store on business principles that will insure my customers the best the market affords in hardware, etc. Fair treatment and a square deal to all. Good services and lower prices, should serve as an inducement to call at my store. Watch my show windows.—E. A. Mittwer.

BIG IMPROVEMENT FOR RESERVATION

Forty-two Miles of Ditches in Highlanding, Kratka and Star.

Engineer Martz Says Ditch Work Will Benefit Country Greatly.

County Surveyor C. H. Martz was in town last Saturday, in attendance at the meeting of the county commissioners. Mr. Martz has just completed a big job of surveying in the towns of Highlanding, Kratka and Star and is now fixing up his notes and preparing his report to the county commissoners. The work on which he has been engaged is the survey for forty-two miles of county ditches. This is the biggest county ditch job yet undertaken. There are five separate petitions for ditch work but it is practically one job, the scheme being to construct a network of ditches in those towns. Mr. Martz says that though it is a big job it is a practical scheme and the ditch work will pay for itself many times over even though the cost will be many thousands of dollars.

He says that some families in these towns do not know their near neighbors, less than a mile away in some cases, for in order to communicate with them it is necessary to go into the "next county" and return. This is due to the impassable low land. There is much fine land in the country and much of the low land will be valuable when the ditch work is completed. The drainage of the land will make possible the construction of good roads where good roads are now impossible. Though a very expensive piece of work, Mr. Marta says, that no people in the county will get more for their money than those whose property will be assessed to pay the expense of this ditch work. There is no doubt that the report of Mr. Martz and that of the viewers will be so favorable that the ditches will be established and constructed.

MUNCH MADE BIG HAUL

Trappers Violating Law Lose Property and Are Doing Time.

Game Warden Munch made a big catch of game law violators in Marshall county last Friday. He arrested Wm. Graves and Ed. Albertson who were trapping. The men were arraigned before Judge Greer at Middle River. They plead guilty and were offered the alternative of paying a fine of $30 or serving thirty days in jail. They didn't have the price so are putting in time. The men lost considerable property, 116 furs, two guns, axes, traps and other articles being confiscated. The men were nonresidents.

ST. JOSEPH'S FAIR A GREAT SUCCESS

Receipts were About One Thousand Dollars; Expenses Two Hundred.

Church and School Now Nearly Free From All Indebtedness.

St. Joseph's fair held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week was a big success. The receipts were about $1000. The expenses were about $200, so there is a good balance to be turned into the treasury. The church and school finances are now in excellent condition. A few years ago St. Joseph's school building was erected at a cost of $800 and yet the total indebtedness on all of the church property is now only $750, an insignificant sum compared with the value of the church property. The Gazette has been requested in the name of Father Fayolle and his congregation to thank all those who by their donations and good will have contributed to the success of the fair. Father Fayolle thanks in a very special manner those who do not belong to his denomination.

COUNTY AUDITOR OUSTED

Governor Eberhart Removes Beltrami County Official

John Wilmann, county auditor of Beltrami county, was ousted from his position Tuesday by Governer A. O. Eberhart for nonfeasance in office. Wilmann is absolved from any charge of dishonesty, but is held to have been neglectful of his duty.

Arthur Diebel of Duluth was in town this week, being one of the parties to case in district court.

Mahlon R. Hall.

The funeral of Mahlon R. Hall was held from the Christian church at Hallsville yesterday afternoon, Nov. 4, at 2 o'clock, the services being conducted by Rev. T. T. Holden of Bloomington. Interment was made at McCliman's cemetary. Mahlon R. Hall was born in Dewitt county at what is known as the Judge Hall place, on Nov. 21, 1858. He was married to Mary Harkrader and two sons were born of this union. These were Preston who accompanied the remains to Hallsville, and Clifford who remained at Red Lake Falls to look after the home. Mr. Hall is survived by two sisters and three brothers, Mrs. S. W. Summers of Clarion, Iowa; Mrs. Mary A. Irwin of near Hallsville; Geo. W. Hall of Kirkella, Manitoba, and Luther and William of near Hallsville. Mahlon Hall removed from this county to Clay Center, Neb., and from there to Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, where he resided at the time of his death. He did not realize that he was sick until complications arose and united with typhoid fever, from which he was suffering. Death came Oct. 30, after a short illness. Rev. Holton, who preached the sermon, spoke very tenderly of Mr. Hall whom he has always held in the highest regard, for it was here he first made his home when coming to this county. Rev. Holton has preached the funeral sermons of Mr. and Mrs. Judge Hall and Mrs. Della Bartley. The old friends and playmates of Mr. Hall acted as pall-bearers at the funeral which was one of the largest ever held in Hallsville.

Lost—6 calves, 3 red, 1 brown, 2 red and white. One of the red ones has short tail. Left my place, one half mile north of Louisville post office, about four weeks ago.—Jule Lizotte.

STATE AID FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Money Is For Red Lake Falls. Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire Schools.

State Aid in Addition To Apportionment Has Been Received.

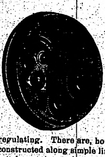
County Auditor A. A. Latendresse this week received the state aid money for the high schools at Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls and the state graded school at St. Hilaire. The high schools receive $1900 each. This is $150 more than the regular amount of state aid for schools, but there was a deficiency of $50 in 1907 and $100 in 1908 and the deficiency is made up at this time. Thief River Falls gets an additional $750 because of the maintenance of a normal department. The amount of the state aid for the graded school at St. Hilaire is $655.

The state aid received at this time is in addition to the apportionment money received recently. A few weeks ago $11,400 was received. All of the schools of the county will be benefitted by the apportionment money, each school receiving $3 for each pupil attending school the required number of days.

The apportionment money is received semi-annually, the stase aid for high schools and graded schools annually.

Among the out of town attorneys who were here for the session of the district court were County Attorney Wilhelm Michelet and Attorneys G. Halvorson, Ira C. Richardson and E. M. Stanton of Thief River Falls, Attorney A. A. Miller of Crookston and Attorney Rasmusson of East Grand Forks.

The First Consideration

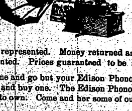


In selecting a watch is to get a reliable time keeper. It makes no difference how little you spend for a watch, it is money wasted unless you can depend upon it to keep somewhere near the correct time. In the manufacture of a watch one of the chief expenses is the final adjusting and regulating. There are, however, inexpensive watches of real merit. These are constructed along simple lines and are dependable time keepers. Other cheap watches gotten up in a showy way, are not worth carrying. I have learned from years of experience to distinguish between the good and poor makes, and I will not sell a watch at any price that I cannot guarantee. Call and get my prices.

7 Jewel Elgin or Waltham, $4.25
21 Jewel Hampden, $18.50
17 Jewel Elgin or Waltham, 20 year gold filled case, $14.
Ladies' 000 size, 15 Jewel, 25 year case, handsome and reliable, $18.

Special attention given to watch repairing. If you have any trouble in having your watch repaired, bring it or send it to me and I'll guarantee to repair it right.

With returning prosperity the price of diamonds is almost sure to advance. Already an increase of 5 per cent on the more desireable grades has been announced and there is every indication that the phenomenal record of 1898 to 1908 will be repeated. During that time the price of diamonds increased over 100 per cent and those who purchased diamonds ten years ago can sell them today for almost double what they paid for them. No bank will pay such dividends and the next ten years are likely to show a like increase in the value of diamonds over what they cost today.



Latest styles in belt pins, collar pins, hat pins, lockets, waist pins, neck chains, cuff buttons, stick pins, bracelets, cut glass, silverware. Engraving done free on articles purchased from me. Souvenier spoons engraved to order.

Everything guaranteed as represented. Money returned any time if the article proves to be not as represented. Prices guaranteed to be as low as the lowest.

HAS FIERCE FIRE

DAMAGE WILL REACH OVER THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS.

WAS PARTIALLY INSURED

Brainerd.—The most destructive fire known in Brainerd for many years is still raging, although under control. The total loss is estimated at fully $300,000.

The flames broke out in the basement of the Columbian block on Sixth street about 5:30 a. m. At 9 the building, a three-story brick, and all its contents the whole valued at $100,000 or more, was in ruins. Clark's hardware store and Schwartz's drugstore occupied the main rooms on the ground floor. On the second were offices of business and professional men, and on the third floor were the quarters of various fraternities.

The Odd Fellows' building, adjoining the Columbian block, was then gutted by the flames. The postoffice was next to follow. All the letter mail was saved and a large part of the fixtures were taken out, although in a badly damaged condition.

At 9:30 the fire attacked the Ransford hotel, which is three stories in height and occupies half a block. The firemen made their fiercest fight at this time, realizing that if the big building could not be saved, many others adjacent to it would have to go also.

The hotel was thoroughly drenched on every floor with water and the loss of furniture and fixtures, chiefly caused by the water, is estimated at over $100,000.

The Jameson building in which was the saloon of Warren & Co., and Lauer's restaurant and saloon, and Dilling's restaurant, were burned.

The Columbian block was occupied by the Black Haw club and was also used as residence and flats. The Masonic and Red Men lodges lost all their paraphernalia as did the Grand Army and Modern Brotherhood, Hibernians and Machinist lodges. Several dwelling houses on the north side caught fire from sparks, but were saved.

The insurance will run from one-half to two-thirds of the individual losses.

PHILLIPS HEADS TEACHERS.

Sessions of State Association Draw Big Crowds.

Minneapolis.—The annual primary election of the Minnesota Educational Association concluded with the following results: President, E. M. Phillips of Albert Lea; secretary, John M. Guise, St. Paul; W. F. Webster, Minneapolis, the retiring president, becomes vice president under the rules. F. J. Sperry of Mankato, the treasurer, holds over.

Every available seat in the Auditorium was filled, standing room was at a premium and more than one hundred teachers waited in the street for a thinning out of the audience at the second general session of the Minnesota Educational association.

Best Convention Ever.

"This is undoubtedly the best convention we have ever held," said President W. F. Webster. "I am sure that every one in attendance feels repaid for coming and the schools of the state are certain to reap big rewards. The teachers who were permitted to close their schools to attend the convention are attending every session possible, and the only trouble is that the Auditorium is not large enough."

The opening address was by Superintendent S. L. Heeter of the St. Paul public schools, on "The Lagging Half." His address was along the line of the general theme of the convention, economy in education.

GREAT LOGGING CONTRACT.

Swan River to Get Out Weyerhaeuser Timber.

Duluth. — The Swan River Logging Company has taken a contract from the Weyerhaeuser syndicate to log about 3,000,000,000 feet of pine in the Sturgeon river district twenty-five miles north of Hibbing; also 15,000,000 feet near Beauty lake, south of Hibbing. The logging company has about six years' work in the one contract.

Impersonated Game Warden.

Waconia.—Hubert Dohman, Otto Gentz and Martin Aretz of this city, who were brought before a justice, charged with having personated game wardens and holding up Julius Klammer for $1, were found guilty.

New Minn. Railroad Planned.

Duluth.—Chicago and Duluth men plan to build a railroad from the head of Lake Superior to the Rainy River country, which will cross the Messaba range near Mt. Iron, and open up the Bear river, Sturgeon river and the Big and Little Forks valleys. The name of the corporation is "Lake Superior and Manitoba Railway company." Beaudette would be the northern terminus of the road, with a branch to International Falls. It is believed to be a Grand Trunk project to get a Winnipeg connection.

MURDER AT CANON LAKE.

Two Fishermen Killed in Their Hut by Tramps.

Faribault.—Thomas Murray, an inoffensive old fisherman living in a hut near the shore of Canon lake, four miles west of Faribault was shot to death.

At the same time Joseph LaRosse, his partner, was attacked and repeatedly cut with a knife. LaRosse is still living, but is so weak from the loss of blood and the shock that he is unable to tell who committed the bloody deed.

INDIANS FIND RED EYE.

Onigum Reds Celebrate Prohibition With Big Jag.

Cass Lake.—The Indians turned a trick on the government, despite the campaign to prohibit the sale of liquor to them.

After drawing their pay at Onigum and failing in every attempt to secure liquor at Walker, seventy-two of the "redskins" boarded a train for Park Rapids. Every one of the band returned dead drunk.

Indian Agent Frater and County Commissioner Burns witnessed the men and their squaws as they staggered off the train. When the expressman was unloading a trunk an Indian yelled at him to be careful for it contained, he said, real booze. Upon an investigation it was found to hold fifty-two bottles of whisky.

The officials were dumfounded at the nature of the disclosures and will move for an early investigation of the situation at Park Rapids and other towns.

Cass Lake has set out to obey the orders of the authorities. Tuesday was the day fixed for the closing of the saloons, and all of them, except the two which have a special license and permit from the government men, promptly removed their intoxicating liquors. Two of the places will be continued as pool halls. Two have been closed. Not a drop of intoxicants is being sold at any of the five places ordered closed. There was no sign of any trouble or excitement.

ONE LICENSE REVOKED.

Liquor Dealer at Bemidji Shown to Have Sold to Indians.

Bemidji.—Without a single dissenting voice, the city council voted to revoke the license granted T. Dugas, the revocation being made at the request of H. A. Larson, special agent of the Indian department, who charged Dugas and F. Gagnon, from whom Dugas leased his building, with selling liquor to Indians.

The special agent produced affidavits from three special agents who stated positively that Mr. Dugas and Mr. Gagnon had sold intoxicatting liquor to Red Lake Indians.

TAWNEY VISITS THE CANAL.

With Congressional Committee On Appropriation.

Winona. — Congressman James A. Tawney has left for Washington, where he will spend a few days before sailing next Tuesday with the other members of the appropriations committee of the lower house to the Panama canal zone to secure information concerning the appropriations to be made by congress for the carrying on of canal work.

The congressman is in receipt of the estimates submitted by the secretary of war through the treasury department for canal appropriations for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1910. The estimated appropriations for the next fiscal year for canal expenditures aggregate $48,063,524. This amount is $15,000,000 in excess of the appropriations for the current fiscal year, and is the largest estimate submitted for any fiscal year since the work of canal construction was begun.

The principal item making up this increase is the estimate for the purchase and delivery of material, supplies and equipment and such other expenses not in the United States as the commission deems necessary to promote the construction of the Isthmain canal, for the departments of construction, engineering, quartermasters' subsistence, disbursements and examination of accounts.

HURT AS ENGINE HITS AUTO.

Four Men Hurled From Machine Near Bemidji; Three Are Injured.

Bemidji.—While Mayor J. G. Pogue of Bemidji, G. Meyer, of St. Paul, T. R. Symons of Bemidji, local manager for Minneapolis Brewing company, and a gentleman whose name cannot be learned, were crossing the railroad track at Wilton, the automobile in which the party was riding was struck by an engine of a freight train and the entire party hurled into the air.

The auto was demolished and Pogue and Symons were lodged on the pilot of the engine, otherwise they would have been thrown under the wheels and ground to pieces.

PROFESSOR JOHN MACNIE DEAD.

He Had Been Head of Modern Languages in University of N. D.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Professor John Macnie, for 20 years head of the department of modern languages at the University of North Dakota, Grand Forks, died at the home of his son, Dr. John S. Macnie. He was 74 years old.

CASS LAKE SALOON CLOSED UP.

Liquor Confiscated by United States Indian Agents.

Cass Lake.—H. A. Larson, H. J. Coggeshall and C. C. Brannon, deputy special United States Indian agents, entered the saloon of Archie Siddon, with drawn revolvers, ordering all those present out except the proprietor, and locking the doors. Siddon had been running, contrary to the wishes of William E. Johnson, who ordered the saloon closed Oct. 27.

BLOOD POISON FROM PIMPLE.

Wife of Locomotive Engineer Dead at East Grand Forks.

East Grand Forks. — Mrs. Joseph La France, wife of a Northern Pacific engineer, died from blood poisoning, resulting from a mere scratch of a pimple on her face several weeks ago. About ten days ago the spot became inflamed and blood poison showed its effects, soon spreading over her entire face and assuming virulent character.

SEATS COME HIGH

PARISIANS PAY TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS TO HEAR FAMOUS MURDER TRIAL.

A PARISIAN SENSATION

Woman Is Accused of Murdering Her Mother-in-law and Her Husband—Wanted to Marry Rich Merchant.

Paris, Nov. 3.—Not since 1902, when Frederick and Theresa Humbert were convicted of a $12,000,000 swindle, has a trial in Paris excited the intense interest exhibited in the case of Mme. Adolphe Steinheil, which was opened before Judge DeValles in the Seine Assiza court today. Mme. Steinheil is on trial for her life charged with the murder of her husband and her mother-in-law, Mme. Japy.

The alleged motive is found in the defendant's hatred for her mother-in-law, and desire to rid herself of her husband in order that she might marry Maurice Borderel, a wealthy merchant who had become infatuated with her.

In the hope of securing one of the coveted places, many men and women stood before the court entrance throughout last night. Places of advantage in line commanded as high as $200.

Most of today's session was occupied with the selection of a jury and the reading of the indictment, the examination of the prisoner beginning late in the afternoon.

GOMPERS TO FIGHT.

Labor Leader Not Impressed With Court Decision.

New York, Nov. 3.—President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor issued the following statement today in regard to the decision of the circuit court of appeals of the District of Columbia, upholding the decision of the lower court in sentencing Mr. Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison for contempt of court in connection with the Buck Stove & Range Co. case:

"With all due respect to the majority of the court, I cannot surrender constitutionally guaranteed rights because a judge will issue an injunction invading and denying these rights. Chief Justice Sheppard's dissenting opinion is in defense of the constitutional and inherent rights.

"The minority opinion of courts in the past when human rights were invaded have ultimately prevailed, become the law of the land and the generally accepted rule of life, and I have an abiding faith that the rule in this case will be no exception.

"If I must go to jail I shall have the consciousness of the fact that other men have in the past been compelled to suffer in defense of justice and right in the cause of humanity and for the maintenance of human liberty.

ELECTION SUMMARY.

Results of Tuesday's Election Briefly Told.

William J. Gaynor elected mayor of New York by 73,016, but all other Tammany nominees for important offices were defeated.

Union labor elects its candidate for mayor in San Francisco and Francis J. Heney is defeated for district attorney.

Virginia goes democratic.

Pennsylvania carried by republicans by 150,000 plurality, and regular republican machine in Philadelphia gives reform element an awful beating.

Republicans gain in New York state assembly.

Rhode Island republican.

TO CLIMB MT. M'KINLEY.

Five Alaskans Will Make Winter Ascent.

Fairbanks, Alaska, Nov. 3.—A party of five Alaskans, all familiar with Mt. McKinley has been organized to climb the peak this winter, it was announced today, and put an end to the controversy as to whether Dr. Cook reached the summit. The party will start Nov. 15. The expedition is being financed here.

HOT FROM THE WIRES.

Washington.—Commander Robert E. Peary was voted a gold medal by the National Geographic society for having reached the north pole.

Northome, Minn.—The lifeless body of Nels Olson was found yesterday in the woods seven miles west of here, by a searching party that had been at work three days. A bullet hole through his head and a 38-caliber revolver still clutched in the dead man's right hand plainly told the tragedy that had been enacted in the lonely spot. Olson had been married but three days.

Denver.—Mrs. Helen Lareine Baker of Spokane arrived here on her way to Manitou and the summit of Pike's Peak, where she will plant an equal suffrage flag which was brought from England.

CLIMBS MOUNTAIN.

Roosevelt and Party Scale Mount Kenia.

Nairobi, British East Africa, Nov. 3.—J. Alden Loring, naturalist, and Maj. Edgar A. Mearnis, both of the Roosevelt hunting party, returned here today from their expedition to Mount Kenia. The climbers ascended the mountain to a height of 16,500 feet, reaching the highest point which it was possible to attain without the aid of alpenstocks.

This was within 700 feet of the summit. They collected specimens of more than 200 birds and animals and made photographs of the mountain.

RACING MAN STABBED.

Robert L. Thomas Fatally Cut by His Jockey.

New York, Nov. 1.—Little hope was held out today for the recovery of Robert L. Thomas, the Kentucky lumberman and racing man, who was stabbed in the stomach yesterday afternoon by Carroll Shilling, one of his jockeys, in an altercation over matters said to relate to the contract between the two men.

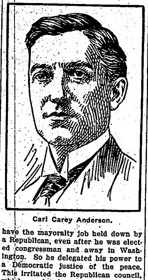
Shilling asserts that he and his employer went to the stable at Sheepshead Bay to talk over turf matters, and that a quarrel followed.

LEAVES TOWN FIVE MAYORS

Congressman Anderson of Fostoria, O., Will Hold National Job After Unusual Tangle.

Columbus, O.—Carl Carey Anderson, who was twice elected mayor of Fostoria, O., and once congressman, and followed this by attempting to hold down both jobs at once, evetually giving the town a five "mayors" puzzle, has decided to keep his congressional job and let the other one go, without waiting for the decision of the Ohio supreme court.

Anderson, who was a Democrat in a Republican town, didn't want to have the mayoralty job held down by a Republican, even after he was elected congressman and away in Washington. So he delegated his power to a Democratic justice of the peace. This irritated the Republican council, which appointed a mayor itself. Then the Republican president of the council rose in his wrath and declared that in the absence of the real mayor in Washington, he was mayor, so there. That made four. Then Congressman-Mayor Anderson, hoping to simplify matters, wrote back from Washington "deposing" the justice of the peace he had first named and substituting a Republican. But the Democrat said he had no right to depose him without coming back to town.



Carl Carey Anderson.

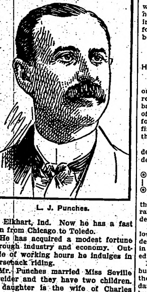
At this point the riddle was good enough to take into court. Congressman Anderson, aside from his attempt to provide the town with superfluous mayors and a real political comedy, has had an interesting career. Like Senator Lorimer, the "blonde boss" of Illinois, he began his career as a bootblack in Fremont, (O.) streets. That was at ten years of age. At 16 he had saved enough to buy a home for his mother. In 1904 he moved to Fostoria and opened an underwear factory, which he still owns.

TRAVELED 2,000,000 MILES

Railroad Conductor in 37 Years' Service Rides Distance 80 Times Around Earth.

Chicago.—L. J. Punches, who began his railroad career 37 years ago at Elkhart, Ind., has traveled more than 2,000,000 miles. He was born in Akron, O., and began railroad work as a wiper in the shops. Later he became a brakeman and freight conductor.

In 1886 he was made passenger conductor and given a run from Chicago to Elkhart, Ind. Now he has a fast run from Chicago to Toledo.



L. J. Punches.

He has acquired a modest fortune through industry and economy. Outside of working hours he indulges in horseback riding.

Mr. Punches married Miss Seville Kreider and they have two children. A daughter is the wife of Charles Clark of Elkhart.

Mr. Punches is a member of the Order of Railway Conductors.

Hindoo Beliefs Strange.

The uneducated Hindoo (and he is in the great majority) believes that the ghost of a man killed by a tiger rides on the head of the beast that slew him, to warn him of danger and to guide him to new victims. It is declared that God provides for the tiger's daily wants to the amount of one rupee a day; that is to say, if the tiger kills a calf worth six rupees he will not be allowed another victim for five days.

Eating the flesh of a tiger is supposed to give one great courage and alertness, but the whiskers must first be singed off the beast or his spirit will haunt the man who fed off him and he is likely to be turned into a tiger in the next world.

In a small Indian village in the interior a villager was killed by a tiger. The police investigated the accidental death and rendered the verdict: "Pandu died of a tiger eating him; there was no other cause of death. Nothing was left of him save his bones and some fingers, which probably belonged to either the right or left hand."

Family Connection a La Mode.

"Well, yes, we are related in a way."

"By marriage?"

"Yes. My first wife's third husband is married to his wife's second husband's fourth partner in matrimony."

LOSES IN APPEAL

GOMPERS, MITCHELL AND MORRISON LOSE IN CELEBRATED BUCKS CASE.

CHIEF JUSTICE DISSENTS.

Washington, Nov. 2. — The District Court of Appeals today affirmed the decree of the supreme court of the district of Columbia, adjudging Pres. Samuel Gompers, Sec. Frank Morrison and Vice Pres. Mitchell, of the American Federation of labor guilty of contempt of court in the Bucks Stove and Range case.

The court held that the fundamental issue was whether the constitutional agencies of the government should be obeyed or defied. The mere fact that the defendants were officers of organized labor in America, said the court, lent importance to the case and added to the gravity of the situation, but it could not be permitted to influence the result.

"If an organization of citizens, however large," the court held, "may disobey the mandate of the court, the same reasoning would render them subject to individual defiance. Both are subject to law and neither is above it. If a citizen, though he may honestly believe that his rights have been invaded, may elect when and to what extent he will obey the mandates of the court and the requirements of the laws, as interpreted by the court instead of pursuing the orderly course of appeal, not only the courts but the government itself would become powerless and society would be reduced to a state of anarchy."

WANT MORE PROOF.

Peary's Papers Held Insufficient by Two Members of the Board.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The evidence which Commander Peary submitted to substantiate his claim of having reached the north pole is incomplete and not sufficient to convince the members of the National Geographic society. The committee consists of Henry Gannett, of the geological survey; Admiral C. M. Chester of the bureau of equipment of the navy department, and O. H. Tittman of the coast and geodetic survey.

Mr. Gannett and Admiral Chester examined informally the records which the commander forwarded, and, without calling a meeting of the full committee decided that Commander Peary should be requested to send on more documentary evidence.

Mr. Gannett and Admiral Chester refuse to comment upon the papers in their possession, and will not say wherein Commander Peary's proof is insufficient.

SHOT BY ROBBER.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 2.—"Pat" Hatton, city marshal of Carroll, Ia., was shot and killed by one of a pair of robbers today near Glidden, seven miles east of Carroll.

Hatton had followed the robbers from Carroll and had captured them. While covering them with a gun, Hatton turned toward his team. Instantly one of the men shot him in the back.

A posse of seventy-five men armed with shot guns and rifles formed an hour later and captured the robbers in a corn field. A mob is reported forming at Carroll to lynch the robbers.

BALLOTS DESTROYED.

House Containing Ballots Burned to the Ground.

Jackson, Ky., Nov. 2.—Two attempts one successful, to steal ballots were reported from Crockettsville and Sebastian Branch early today. The home of Mary Dealin, who held the ballots for that precinct, was destroyed by fire, and the ballots were burned with the house.

At Sebastion Branch precinct, the democrats are reported to have hidden the ballots.

NEWS NOTES CONDENSED.

Deadwood, S. D.—It is now believed that the forest fires which have been raging through the Black Hills are under control.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Mrs. William Marlow and four children were burned to death by the upsetting of an oil lamp in their home. A fifth child was saved by the mother.

Pittsville, Pa.—Daniel Schoke, a butcher at Pine Grove, near here, cut the heads off his wife and 12-year-old daughter and then committed suicide by shooting himself.

Washington. — Chief Justice Fuller created a sensation in the supreme court of the United States today by announcing that papers in the case of the Yellow Poplar Lumber Co. vs. S. B. Chapman would be stricken from the records of the court, because of the scandalous nature of the documents.

YEGGS BLOW SAFE.

Kenwood Park Store Suffers From Safe Blowers.

Minneapolis, Nov. 2.—The safe in the Kenwood grocery store, in the heart of the aristocratic Kenwood park residence district, was blown about 4 o'clock this morning by unknown men and $500 in cash stolen. The cash register in the store also was robbed.

The men, of whom it is supposed there were two or three, entered the store through a rear door. It is supposed they rifled the cash register first, and then drilled a hole in the door of the store safe and inserted a charge of nitroglycerine.

FOUR PERSONS MURDERED.

Entire Family Killed and Missing in Saskatoon.

Winnipeg, Nov. 3.—A sensational crime was unearthed near Quill Lake, Sask., in the finding of the murdered body of George Thoburn in a cellar on the farm and it is believed Mrs. Thoburn and her mother were also killed with the 2-year-old child of the former. Later the missing boy, 5 years of age, was found badly clubbed. The hired man, who committed the crime, is being pursued in the direction of Regina by the mounted police.

SYNOPSIS.

Baraka, a Tartar girl, became enamored of a golden bearded stranger who was prospecting and studying herbs in the vicinity of her home in central Asia, and revealed to him the location of a mine of rubies hoping that the stranger would love her in return for her disclosure. They were followed to the cave by the girl's relatives, who blocked up the entrance, and drew off the water supply, leaving the couple to die.

CHAPTER I.—Continued.

The traveler fished up the sack and waded out upon the tiny beach. He looked up rather anxiously, though he could not have seen a head looking down from above if there had been any one there. There was not light enough. He understood also that if the men were going to shoot at him from the height they would wait till it was daylight. Baraka stood still in the water, which was up to her waist, and he paid no attention to her, but sat down to think what he should do. The night was warm, and his clothes would dry on him by degrees. He would have taken them off and spread them out, for he thought no more of Baraka's presence than if she had been a harmless young animal standing there in the pool, but he could not tell what might happen at any moment, and so long as he was dressed and had all his few belongings about him, he felt ready to meet fate.

Baraka saw that he did not heed her, and was thinking. She came up out of the water very slowly, and she modestly loosened her wet garment from her, so that it hung straight when she stood at the end of the beach, as far from the traveler as possible. She, also, sat down to dry herself; and there was silence for a long time.

After half an hour the traveler rose and began to examine the rock, feeling it with his hands wherever there was the least shadow, as high as he could reach, to find if there was any foothold, though he was already sure that there was not.

"There is no way out," Baraka said at last. "I have been here by day. I have seen."

"They will let themselves down from above with ropes, till they are near enough to shoot," the traveler answered.

"No," replied Baraka. "They know that you have a good weapon, and they will not risk their lives. They will leave us here to starve. That is what they will do. It is our portion, and we shall die. It will be easy, for there is water, and when we are hungry we can drink our fill. You will die first. You are not as we are, you cannot live so long without food."

The traveler wondered if she was right, but he said nothing.

"If we had got out with the treasure," continued Baraka, "you would have loved me for it, because you would have been the greatest man in the world through me. But now, because we must die, you hate me. I understand. If you do not kill me you will die first; and when you are dead I shall kiss you many times, till I die also. It will be very easy. I am not afraid."

The man sat quite still and looked at the dark streak by the edge of the pool where the water had wet it when the falling boulder outside had sent in little waves. He could see it distinctly. Again there was silence for a long time. Now and then Baraka loosened her only garment about her as she sat, so that it might dry more quickly; and she quietly wrung out her thick black hair and shook it over her shoulders to dry it, too, and stuck her two silver pins into the sand beside her.

Still the traveler sat with bent head, gazing at the edge of the pool. His hands were quite dry now, and he slowly rubbed the clinging moisture from his revolver. Some men would have been thinking, in such a plight, that if starving were too hard to bear, a bullet would shorten their sufferings in the end; but this man was very full of life, and the love of life, and while he lived he would hope.

He still watched the same dark streak where the sand was wet; he had not realized that he had been so far from it till then, but by looking at it a long time in the starlight his sight had probably grown tired, so that he no longer saw it distinctly. He raised himself a little on his hands and pushed himself down till it was quite clearly visible again, and he looked at the rock opposite and up to the stars again, to rest his eyes. He was not more than a yard from the water now.

The place was very quiet. From far above a slight draught of air descended, warm from the rocks that had been heated all day in the sun. But there was no sound except when Baraka moved a little.

Presently she did not move any more, and when the traveler looked he saw that she was curled up on the sand, as eastern women lie when they sleep, and her head rested on her hand; for her garment was dry now, and she was drowsy after the walk and the effort she had made. Besides, since there was no escape from death, and as the man did not love her, she might as well sleep if she could.

He had been certain of the distance between his feet and the water's edge as he sat; it had been a yard at the most. But now it was more; he was sure that it was a yard and a half at the least. He rubbed his eyes and looked hard at the dark belt of wet sand, and it was twice as wide as it had been. The water was still running out somewhere, but it was no longer running in, and in an hour or two the pool would be dry. The traveler was something of an engineer, and understood sooner than an ordinary man could have done, that his enemies had intentionally stopped up the narrow entrance through which he had to come, both to make his escape impossible, and to hasten his end by depriving him of water. The fallen boulder alone could not have kept out the overflow of the spring effectually. They must have shoveled down masses of earth, with the plants that grew in it abundantly and filled it with twining threadlike roots, and they must have skillfully forced quantities of the stuff into the openings all round the big stone, making a regular dam against the spring, which would soon run down in the opposite direction. They knew, of course, that Baraka had led him to the place and had gone in with him, for she had left all her outer garments outside, and they meant that she should die also, with her secret. In a week, or a fortnight, or a month, they would come and dig away the dam and pry the boulder aside, and would get in and find the white bones of the two on the sand, after the vultures had picked them clean; and they would take the traveler's good revolver, and his money.

He thought of all these things as he sat there in the dim light, and watched the slow receding of the water-line, and listened to the girl's soft and regular breathing. There was no death in her dream, as she slept away the last hours of the night, though there might not be many more nights for her. He heard her breath, but he did not heed her, for the water was sinking before him, sinking away into the sand, now that it was no longer fed from the opening.

He sat motionless, and his thoughts ran madly from hope to despair and back again to hope. The water was going down, beyond question; if it was merely draining itself through the sand to some subterranean channel, he was lost, but if it was flowing away through any passage like the one by which he had entered, there was still a chance of escape—a very small chance. When death is at the gate the tiniest loophole looks wide enough to crawl through.

The surface of the pool subsided, but there was no loophole; and as the traveler watched, hope sank in his heart, like the water in the hollow of the sand; but Baraka slept on peacefully, curled up on her side like a little wild animal. When the pool was almost dry the traveler crept down to the edge and drank his fill, that he might not begin to thirst sooner than need be; and just then day dawned suddenly and the warm darkness gave way to a cool light in a few moments.

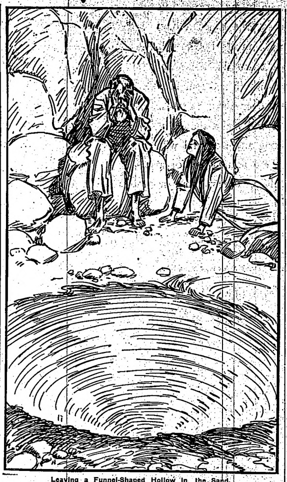
Immediately, because it was day, Baraka stretched herself on the sand and then sat up; and when she saw what the traveler was doing she also went and drank as much as she could swallow, for she had understood why he was drinking as soon as she saw that the pool was nearly dry. When she could drink no more she looked up at the rocks high overhead, and they were already white and red and yellow in the light of the risen sun; for in that country there is no very long time between dark night and broad day.

Baraka sat down again, on the spot where she had slept, but she said nothing. The man was trying to dig a little hole in the wet sand with his hands, beyond the water that was still left, for perhaps he thought that if he could make a pit on one side, some water would stay in it; but the sand ran together as soon as he moved it; and presently, as he bent over, he felt that he was sinking into it himself, and understood that it was a sort of quicksand that would suck him down. He therefore threw himself flat on his back, stretching out his arms and legs, and, making movements as if he were swimming, he worked his way from the dangerous place till he was safe on the firm white beach again. He sat up then, and bent his head till his forehead pressed on his hands, and he shut his eyes to keep out the light of day. He had not slept, as Baraka had, but he was not sleepy; perhaps he would not be able to sleep again before the end come. Baraka watched him quietly, for she understood that he despaired of life, and she wondered what he would do; and, besides, he seemed to her the most beautiful man in the world, and she loved him, and she was going to die with him.

It comforted her to think that no other woman could get him now. It was almost worth while to die for that alone; for she could not have borne that another woman should have him since he despised her, and if it had come to pass she would have tried to kill that other. But there was no danger of such a thing now; and he would die first, and she would kiss him many times when he was dead, and then she would die also.

The pool was all gone by this time, leaving a funnel-shapped hollow in the sand where it had been. If any water still leaked through from without it lost itself under the sand, and the man and the girl were at the bottom of a great natural well that was quite dry. Baraka looked up, and she saw a vulture sitting in the sun on a pinnacle, 800 feet above her head. He would sit there till she was dead, for he knew what was coming; then he would spread his wings a little and let himself down awkwardly, half-flying and half-scrambling. When he had finished, he would sit and look at her bones and doze, till he was able to fly away.

The hours passed, and the sun rose higher in the sky and struck deeper into the shady well, till he was almost overhead, and there was scarcely any shadow left. It became very hot and stifling, because the passage through which the air had entered with the water was shut up. Then the traveler took off his loose jacket, and opened his flannel shirt at the neck, and turned up his sleeves for coolness, and he crept backwards into the hollow where the ruby mine was, to shelter himself from the sun. But Baraka edged away to the very foot of the cliff, where there remained a belt of shade, even at noon, and as she sat there she took the hem of her one garment in her hands and slowly fanned her little feet. Neither he nor she had spoken for many hours, and she could see that in the recess of the rock he was sitting as before, with his forehead against his hands that were clasped on his knees, in the attitude and bearing of despair.



Leaving a Funnel-Shaped Hollow in the Sand.

He began to be athirst now, in the heat. If he had not known that there was no water he could easily have done without it through a long day, but knowledge that there was none, and that he was never to drink again, parched his life and his throat and his tongue till it felt like a dried fig in his mouth. He did not feel hunger, and indeed he had a little food in a wallet he carried; but he could not have eaten without water, and it did not occur to him that Baraka might be hungry. Perhaps, even if he had known that she was, he would not have given her of what he had; he would have kept it for himself. What was the life of a wild hill-girl compared with his? But the vulture was watching him, as well as Baraka, and would not move from its pinnacle till the end, though days might pass.

Baraka was not thirsty yet, because she had drunk her fill in the morning, and was not used to drink often; it was enough that she could look at the man she loved, for the end would come soon enough without thinking about it. All day long the traveler crouched in the hollow of the ruby cave, and Baraka watched him from her place; when it grew dark the vulture on the pinnacle of rock thrust its ugly head under its wing. As soon as Baraka could not see any more she curled herself up on the white sand like a little wild animal and went to sleep, though she was thirsty.

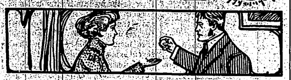
It was dawn when she awoke, and her linen garment was damp with the dew, so that the touch of it refreshed her. The traveler had come out and was lying prone on the sand, his face buried against his arm, as soldiers sleep in a bivouac. She could not tell whether he was asleep or not, but she knew that he could not see her, and she cautiously sucked the dew from her garment, drawing it up to her mouth and squeezing it between her lips.

It [illegible] little enough refreshment, but it was something, and she was not afraid, which made a difference. Just as she had drawn the edge of her shift down and round her ankles again, the man turned on his side suddenly, and then rose to his feet. For an instant he glared at her, and she saw that his blue eyes were bloodshot and burning; then he picked up the heavy camel bag, and began to make his way round what had been the beach of the pool, towards the passage through which they had entered, and which was now a dry cave, wide below, narrow at the top, and between six or seven feet high. He trod carefully and tried his way, for he feared the quicksand, but he knew that there was none in the passage, since he had walked through the water and had felt the way hard under his feet. In a few moments he disappeared under the rock.

Baraka knew what he meant to do; he was going to try to dig through the dam at the entrance to let the water in, even if he could not get out; but she did not move, for in that narrow place and in the dark she could not have helped him. She sat and waited. By and by he would come out, drenched with sweat and yet parching with thirst, and he would glare at her horribly again; perhaps he would be mad when he came out and would kill her because she had brought him there.

After some time she heard a very faint sound overhead, and when she looked up the vulture was gone from his pinnacle. She wondered at this, and her eyes searched every point and crevice of the rock as far as she could see, for she knew that the evil bird could only have been frightened away; and though it fears neither bird nor beast, but only man, she could not believe that any human being could find a foothold near to where it had perched.

For some seconds, perhaps for a whole minute, she saw nothing, though she gazed up steadily, then she saw that a small patch of snowy white was moving slowly on the face of the cliff, at some distance above the place where the vulture had been. She bent her brows in the effort to see more by straining her sight, and meanwhile the patch descended faster than it seemed possible that a man could climb down that perilous steep. Yet it was a man, she knew from the first, and soon she saw him plainly, in his loose shirt and white turban, and with a long gun slung across his back. Nearer still, and he was down to the jutting pinnacle where the vulture had sat, and she saw his black beard; still nearer by a few feet and she knew him, and then her glance darted to the mouth of the cave, at the other end of which the man she loved was toiling desperately alone in the dark to pierce the dam of earth and stones.



It was only a glance, in a second of time, but when she looked up the black-beared man had already made another step downwards. Baraka measured the distance. If he spoke loud now she could understand him. She knew him well, and she knew why he had come, with his long gun. He was her father's brother's son, to whom she was betrothed; he was Saad, and he was risking his life to come down and kill her and the man whom she had led to the ruby mines for love's sake.

He would come down till he was within easy range, and then he would wait till he had a fair chance at them, when they were standing still, and she knew that he was a dead shot. The traveler's revolver could never carry as far as the long gun, Baraka was sure, and Saad could come quite near with safety, since he seemed able to climb down the face of a flat rock where there was not foothold for a cat. He was still descending, he was getting very near; if the traveler were not warned he might come out of the cave unsuspiciously and Saad would shoot him. Saad would wish to shoot him first, because of his revolver, and then he would kill Baraka at his leisure. If he fired at her first the traveler would have a chance at him while he was reloading his old gun. She understood why he had not killed her yet, if indeed he wanted to, for it was barely possible that he loved her enough to take her alive.

After hesitating for a few moments, not from fear but in doubt, she gathered herself to spring, and made a dash like an antelope along the sand for the mouth of the cave, for she knew that Saad would not risk wasting his shot on her while she was running. She stopped just under the shelter of the rock and called inward:

When she had given this warning she went out again and stood before the mouth of the cave with her back to it. Saad was on the rock, not 50 feet above the ground, at the other side of the natural wall, but looked as if even he could get no farther down. He was standing with both his heels on a ledge so narrow that more than half the length of his brown feet stood over it; he was leaning back, flat against the sloping cliff, and he had his gun before him, for he was just able to use both his hands without falling. He pointed the gun at her and spoke:

"Where is the man?"

"He is dead," Baraka answered without hesitation.

"Dead? Already?"

"I killed him in his sleep," she said, "and I dragged his body into the cave for fear of the vulture, and buried it in the sand. Be not angry, Saad, though he was my father's guest. Come down hither and I will tell all. Then you shall shoot me or take me home to be your wife, as you will, for I am quite innocent."

She meant to entice him within range of the stranger's weapon.

"There is no foothold whereby to get lower," he answered, but he rested the stock of his gun on the narrow ledge behind him.

"Drag out the man's body, that I may see it."

"I tell you I buried it. I killed him the night before last; I cannot dig him up now."

"Why did you run to the mouth of the cave when you saw me, if the man is dead?"

"Because at first I was afraid you would shoot me from above, therefore I took shelter."

"Why did you come out again, if you were in fear?"

"After I had run in I was ashamed, for I felt sure that you would not kill me without hearing the truth. So I came out to speak with you. Get down, and I will show you the man's grave."

"Have I wings? I cannot come down. It is impossible."

Baraka felt a puff of hot air pass her, just above her right ankle, and at the same instant she heard a sharp report, not very loud, and more like the snapping of a strong but very dry stick than the explosion of firearms. She instinctively sprang to the left, keeping her eyes on Saad.

For a moment he did not move. But he was already dead as he slowly bent forward from the rock, making a deep obeisance with both arms hanging down before him, so that his body shot down perpendicularly to the sand, where it struck head first, rolled over and lay motionless in a heap. The traveler's was a Mauser pistol that would have killed as surely at 500 yards as 50; and the bullet had gone through the Tartar's brain.

Baraka sprang up the sandy slope and ran along the narrow beach to the body. In an instant she had detached the large brown water-gourd from the thong by which he it had hung over Saad's shoulder, and she felt that it was full. Without a thought for herself she hastened back to the mouth of the cave where the traveler was now standing. His face was dripping with perspiration that ran down into his matted golden beard, his eyes were wild, his hands were bleeding.

"Drink!" cried Baraka joyfully, and she gave him the gourd.

He gripped it as a greedy dog snaps at a bit of meat, and pulling out the wooden plug he set the gourd to his lips, with an expression of beatitude. But he was an old traveler and only drank a little, knowing that his life might depend on making the small supply last. A gourd of water was worth more than many rubies just then.

"Are you very thirsty yet?" he asked in a harsh voice.

"No," answered Baraka bravely; "keep it for yourself."

His hand closed round the neck of the gourd and he looked up towards the rocks above. The vulture had come back and was circling slowly down.

"You had better bury the body, while I go on working," said the traveler, turning back into the cave and taking the gourd with him.

Baraka had marked the place where he had tried to dig for water and had almost disappeared in the quicksand. She took from the body the wallet, in which were dates and some half-dry bread, and then dragged and pushed and rolled the dead man from the place where he had fallen. The vulture sat on the lowest ledge where his claws could find a hold, and though he watched her with horrible red eyes while she robbed him of his prey, he did not dare go nearer.

The body sank into the moving sand, and Baraka had to roll herself back to firmer ground in haste to escape being swallowed up with the dead man. The last she saw of him was one brown foot sticking up. It sank slowly out of sight, and then she went to the hollow where the ruby mine was and took up a piece of the broken crust, full of precious stones, and threw it at the vulture as hard as she could. It did not hit him, but he at once tumbled off the ledge into the air, opened his queer, bedraggled wings and struck upwards.

Then Baraka sat down in the shade and slowly brushed away the dry sand that had got into the folds of her linen garment, and looked steadily at the mouth of the cave and tried not to realize that her throat was parched and her lips almost cracking with thirst, and that the traveler had a gourd almost full of water with him. For she loved him, and was willing to die that he might live a little longer; besides, if he succeeded in digging his way out, there would be plenty to drink, and when he was free she was sure that he would love her because she had made him so rich.

The sun rose higher and at last shone down to the bottom of the chasm, and she sat in the narrow strip of shade, where she had passed most of the previous day. She was very thirsty and feverish, and felt tired, and wished she could sleep, but could not. Still the traveler toiled in the darkness, and from time to time she heard sounds from far away as of stones and loose earth falling. He was still working hard, for he was very strong and he was desperate.

Baraka thought that if he was able to dig through the dam the water would run in again, and she watched the sand for hours, but it was drier than ever. The shadow broadened again, and crept up the rock quickly as the afternoon passed.

WHIMSICALITIES.

TONGUE EVIDENCE.

A most forgetful man was he,
Although contrite and meek;
If letters he was told to post,
He'd hold 'em for a week.

One day he was off to town
His wife this warning flung:
"Now, if you love me, don't forget
To bring me home a tongue!"

When he returned without the meat
There was a pretty row;
His wife exclaimed: "That only proves
You do not love me now!"

"Fie, fie, dear wife; dry up your tears,
They ne'er become you well;
You ought to know I love you now
Far more than tongue could tell!"
—Yonkers Statesman.

And Other Things.

"He gave her everything that money could buy."

"What did she do with her monkeys and boa-constrictors when she left him?"

"Why, who ever told you that she ever had any such absurd things as those?"

"You told me that he gave her everything money could buy and money could easily buy monkeys and boa-constrictors."

THE ENVIABLE.

How poor is he who urges men
To splendid deeds on land or sea,
If she be cold and silent when
He seeks her, flushed with victory.

How poor is he, who, after all
The perils the successful share,
Turns with his riches, but to fall
Beside a little mound somewhere.

How rich is he who turns at night,
With empty pockets and unknown,
Still simply happy in the right
To claim her love who keeps his own.
—S. E. Kiser.

The Practical Life

Mr. Smith—What's the matter? Here are the elder children fighting in the streets, the younger ones crying in the nursery, no sign of dinner, and I'm as hungry as a bear. Where's my wife?

Maid—She gave orders not to disturb her, sir. She's upstairs in the library, writing an article for her club on how to make the home folks contented.

In Doubt.

I think that lady winked at me,
But, O, doggone it! [illegible]
Her eyes I couldn't plainly see
Beneath her bonnet.

THE PITCHER.

Oh, say, the pitcher is the cheese, and he
Is fine to hang your lamps on when he stands
Out there and twirls the leather in his hands
Before he squirms and puts it up to be
A strike or ball or any other thing, by gee!
His umps, the lobster, thinks he understands
Ain't like it looks to all the bunch of fans;
But gaff him, Birdie, what's the mutt to you and me?
And, say, there's nothing punk about the pitch;
It's him for what's the hot; he's got the nerve
To bang 'em at the batter, straight, or curve,
Or rush 'em out to where the baggers stand,
And they won't find him sleeping at the switch.
Oh, Birdie, keep your eyes off; ain't he grand?

Her Mistake.

"Maggie, run for the phone and call the doctor!"

"Yessum; what for?"

"My husband looks awful!"

"Oi know it, mum; but they don't be amputatin' faces these days, do they?"

The Melodrama.

Willie Wink—It's the most patriotic play in town. In the third act the heroine goes around on the fly wheel 20 times.

Billy Blink—But where does the patriotism come in?

Willie Wink—Oh, when she gets around the last time she waves a flag and announces that she is a "Daughter of the Revolution."

The Melodrama.

The villain still pursued her yet
They were a puffing pair;
The villain puffed a cigarette,
The heroine puffed her hair.

Just Possible.

Were men as smart as they think,
And women as sweet as they deem,
Our sojourn on this dull old earth
Would be like a midsummer dream.

After the Elopement.

For wedded haste, with one consent,
At leisure now they would repent;
But still for food they have a taste—
So they haven't any time to waste.

The Garden Zoo.

"Let's set up a circus," cried Willie,
"Of the flowers we see growing here,
There're the dandelions, striped tiger lilies, [illegible]
And the great big elephant's ear."

KILL REVOLUTIONIST

Execution of Ferrer Causes Trouble in Europe.

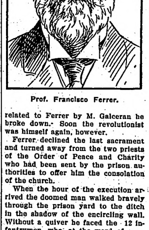
Barcelona.—The execution of Prof. Francisco Ferrer, the Spanish educator and convicted revolutionist, has thrown many of the countries of Europe into a state bordering on civil war and made more dangerous the lives of the monarchs. Especially is it an added menace to King Alfonso of Spain.

Prof. Ferrer was shot October 13 at the fortress of Montjuich, in which he had been since his condemnation by a court-martial. The doomed man faced the firing squad without flinching and fell dead at the first volley. Except for a momentary expression of emotion immediately preceding his death Ferrer retained his composure to the last. His attorney, M. Galceran, who had defended the prisoner so loyally as to bring about his own arrest for improperly addressing the court, had obtained permission for a brief talk with the revolutionist before he was led to the ditch in which he was to die.

After Ferrer's arrest his family was dependent on his daughter, who at once found employment in a biscuit factory. When her father had been sentenced to death the daughter made a personal appeal to King Alfonso, calling upon him in the name of his generosity and chivalry to spare her father's life. When these facts were related to Ferrer by M. Galceran he broke down. Soon the revolutionist was himself again, however.



Prof. Francisco Ferrer.

Ferrer declined the last sacrament and turned away from the two priests of the Order of Peace and Charity who had been sent by the prison authorities to offer him the consolation of the church.

When the hour of the execution arrived the doomed man walked bravely through the prison yard to the ditch in the shadow of the encircling wall. Without a quiver he faced the 12 infantrymen, who, at the word of command, fired. When the report of the volley had died away Ferrer lay dead on the ground.

The firing squad was drawn by lot and the command to fire was given by Gen. Eserin. Just before his eyes were bandaged Ferrer examined his will.

Previous to the execution precautions had been taken to prevent a possible attempt at rescue by doubling the sentinels on the walls of the fortress.

How I Found the Pole.

In the summer of 1908, accompanied only by my mother-in-law, I started out in search of the pole. I thought it best at this time not to make any premature announcement of my intentions, as my mother-in-law was not feeling well and I was afraid that the notoriety might unnerve her.

We passed the winter in Greenland, where my mother-in-law knitted me some worsted neckties and a pair of sealskin suspenders. In the dead of winter we started north.

We both felt very confident of winning, as we had been practicing every winter for years by going sleighing in an old-fashioned New England sleigh. Having survived that, the pole had no terrors for us.

On the 31st we reached the pole. The journey was rather tiresome, as my mother-in-law insisted on waking me up at four o'clock every morning and reading family prayers.

She is there now.—Life.

King Is Yacht Racing Recruit.

King Alfonso of Spain is the latest recruit to the ranks of royal racing yachtsmen, of whom King Edward, the German emperor and Prince Henry of Prussia are among the chief representatives to-day. But although these royal yachtsmen have won many prizes, few of them have steered their boats to victory, says the Westminster Gazette. Unquestionably the most expert royal helmsman is Prince Henry of Prussia are among the chief reer of conquest as long ago as 1885 at the tiller of his small rater Nelly at a Kiel regatta, and for some seasons carried all before him in the Clyde-built cruiser racer Irene, so called after its owner's consort. In Gudruda, "Irene's" successor, he proved equally invincible.

John's Vindication.

"Who," asked his wife, directing a suspicious look at him, "was that woman who just bowed to you?"

"I don't know. She must have bowed to you. I can't remember ever having seen her before."

"John, don't lie! You have a guilty look. You and that woman—"

"I beg your pardon," the woman said, after having hurried back, "I just want to tell you, Mrs. Widgekin, that I will not have your dress ready to try on until next Monday."

As soon as he could decently break away John hurried into a convenient place and treated himself four times in rapid succession.

There is not much encouragement for standpatters in the recent elections.

There is more than one road to success, but one never gets there by trying them all.

"One thing is certain," a political correspondent writes. He probably means trouble.

It is announced that furniture is to go up 10 per cent on January 1. Better hurry up those Christmas marriages.

In political circles it is generally conceded that Governor Eberhart will be given the Republican nomination, but not without a fight.

The will of the late Governor Johnson has been admitted to probate. The estate is valued at $30,000 and goes to Mrs. Johnson.

As between Cannon and Towney for speaker we don't know but the old sinner from Illinois is preferable. It never pays to fly to troubles we know not of.

Clarence Dinehart is not only a splendid official, but has a promising political future. He ought not endanger it by going down to defeat in the Second district congessional fight.

President Taft appears to have been more generously received in the south than he was in the wild and wooly west. The people down there seem to be more susceptible to flattery.

Senator Aldrich, whom President Taft characterizes as a highminded statesman, is to be in St. Paul and Minneapolis this week, but the Roosevelt clubs are not arranging any demonstrations in his honor.

Mr. Cleveland used to tell a story of an old colored man who risked his life when out fishing to save a small boy of his own race. He was asked whether the boy was his own. "Oh, no, sah; he not my son." "Well, was he some relative, that you risked your life for him!" "No sah; he no relative; no, sah." "Then why did you plunge in in that reckless way and fetch him out!" "Well, sah, the fact is, sah, that that boy had the bait."

The St. Paul Pioneer Press tells of an Iowa editor, who has practiced thrift and industry during many years, and has just retired on a fortune of $75,000. It is announced that anuncle in the old country recently died and left him $74,550.

A "down east" school ma'am is introducing a new feature in her school. When one of the girls misses a word the boy who spells it gets permission to kiss her. The result is the girls are getting to be poor spellers while the boys are improving right along.

Judge Landis fined a Rockford man one cent for sending an obscene letter through the mails. After his experience with the higher court in the matter of the $29,000,000 fine against Rockefeller, the judge is evidently determined to hand out a line of fines that cannot be set aside as exorbitant and confiscatory.

John A. Hartigan, insurance commission of Minnesota, in his annual report calls attention to the inadequate rates of many fraternal insurance orders. He warns the members of such orders that the rates will not protect them, and they must prepare to pay higher rates. He also calls attention to the expenses of these orders and reminds the members that they should give the matter their attention.

The Northfield News thinks that there is scarcely a village in the State in which there is a lawyer, no matter how indifferent that lawyer be, from which a State ticket could not be selected which would compare favorably, both in character and ability, and in the political strength it would bring to the party, with the ticket the last Republican convention asked the people of the State to endorse.

Here is a tariff admission from the Republican Northfield News that the farmer ought to study and digest:

"The LeSueur New is inclined to the opinion that a tariff has little to do with increasing the prices on agricultural products. We believe the News is about right on this point. All the tariff in the world will not increase the price of wheat in the United States simply because we import no wheat, and it is practically the same with barley and other farm products."

Incendiarism seems to be on the increase, and the comparative immunity from punishment makes this crime easy of accomplishment. If people would only realize that the fire-bug doesn't "sell out to the insurance company" but to the community there would be more vigorous effort made to apprehend and prosecute offenders. It is estimated that ten per cent of the fires in Minnesota are incendiary and as the insurance companies charge as much for expenses and profit as they do for fire losses it is easy to figure that the fire-bug increases the insurance rate at least twenty per cent. If rates continue to advance it will be the duty of the government or state to go into the fire insurance business. In that event expense of management would be materially increased and there would be more competent and aggressive investigation of causes of fire.

A TRIBUTE TO ALDRICH.

The increase in prices of necessities since the passage of the Aldrich-Taft tariff has been general, says the Chicago Journal. The latest addition to the tax on the necessities of life is by the salt trust. On coarse grades prices have just been marked up from 75 cents to $1.25 a ton, while table and dairy grades are advanced from $2 to $2.25 a ton.

The approximate consumption of salt in this country is 2,500,000 tons each year, so that if the average increase is only $1 per ton the trust will add $2,500,000 to its annual profits. For which the trust can give thanks as the consumer should give the blame, to Senator Aldrich and the complaisant president of the United States.

Gunderson in The Race.

Two weeks ago I made mention of the fact that Senator Gundersen aspired to a seat on the bench. It was then supposed that he was not eligible, having voted for the increase in the judges' salaries made two years ago. It is true he is not eligible to fill the vacancy on the bench which occurs in 1911. He is eligible however to succeed those judges whose terms expire in 1912. His candidacy therefore may be considered by the Republican convention in choosing a successor to Judge Brown or Judge Lewis. It is expected that he will have strong backing for one or the other of the positions about to become vacant.

A Proposed Combine.

In respect to the county option movement which the Republican convention will have to reckon with a movement is on foot which may make it even more formidable than at present it appears to be. This movement has its inception in the northeastern part of the state, and is being engineered by a number of popular and astute politicians. It contemplates an alliance between those who are opposed to a tonnage tax on iron ore and the temperance forces. Politicians assuming to represent Northeastern Minnesota profess a willingness to join in the county option movement, and aid in forcing the adoption by the Republican convention of a county option plank, if in return the temperance forces will agree to make the fight solely on the county option issue and pass up any movement looking to a change in the method of levying a tax on iron ore properties or their product.

An Aching Void.

It's mighty lonesome and mighty dull up at the state capitol these days without Frank Day. He filled a big place up there and he's missed, as no other official would be missed. Possibly the crowd will get used to it by and by, but just now there's a big blank. Mr. Day's term of office expired the first of November, and gloom settled down at once. Before his going the official family met in solemn conclave for the last time to take leave of the head of the house, and presented him with a handsome and valuable silver service. Suitable things were said on both sides and the Kitchen Cabinet met for the last time at the state capitol.

Governor Johnson's Life.

Mr. Day, however, has not left town. He has opened an office in the First National Bank building at the corner of Fourth and Jackson streets. He will there, with the assistance of Theodore Knappen, complete the life of Governor Johnson, already well under way. No one else is quite so well qualified to do this work as Mr. Day. His intimate association with the governor, his recognition of those qualities which made the governor's character so well rounded and complete, no less than the fact that he wields a forcible and a graphic pen and is master of a lucid literary style, peculiarly fit him to undertake a work of this character, which with him will be a labor of love. Nor need we doubt that the story of the governor's life as Mr. Day and Mr. Knappen will tell it will not only do full justice to an inspiring theme but will prove an incentive and an inspiration to its tens of thousands of readers. The life of this good and great man is one that should find a place in every home where fine talents, gentle and kindly manners, conscientious effort and unselfish devotion to the public interest are appreciated.

Grasty Vacates.

What is to be the ultimate outcome of the kaleidoscopic changes in the St. Paul newspaper world does not yet appear. A year ago Tams Bixby was looked to to reorganize the Republican party and to be its official spokesman. Yesterday Charles A. Grasty was thought to dominate the local situation. Today George Thompson reigns. No one seems to know what tomorrow will bring forth but it is freely predicted that before long the Dispatch will disgorge the Pioneer Press which it swallowed and has been unable to digest and assimilate. At all events the present situation is far from affording satisfaction. It is generally felt in St. Paul that in the matter of morning newspaper service we haven't yet come into our own.

New Candidate For Governor.

They aren't yet done mentioning the names of possible candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Frank Glotzbach's is the latest. Mr. Glotzbach is the Democratic member of the senate from Republican Rice county, has served several terms as mayor of Faribault, and has for a long while been regarded as a possible candidate for congress from the Third District. He is of German extraction and has in every contest proved a successful vote getter. If the Democratic party wants him he expresses a willingness to make the contest.

Minnesota Butter Wins.

Minnesota again won the banner this year at the National Creamery Buttermakers' Association Convention which met at Milwaukee. It was a close call. Wisconsin was only a tenth of a point behind. She would have been ahead if all exhibits had entered into the test. The average of all Wisconsin entries was higher than the average of all Minnesota entries. In awarding the prize, however, the average of the ten best tubs of butter from each state were only considered, and as has been said, Minnesota's ten graded better than Wisconsin's ten.

Demoralizing Competitions.

There is little doubt that the competition set up by the centralizer creameries is resulting in the deterioration of the quality of Minnesota creamery butter. The buyers for the centralizers in the county will take any kind of cream. If the small creamery want's to retain patrons it can't, with opposition like this, be as particular as it ought and would like to be. Without pure cream no buttermaker can make gilt-edged butter.

S.S.S. CURES OLD SORES

Every old sore is an infected spot on the flesh, kept open by constant drainage of impure blood into the place.

One of the principal constituents of blood is plasma, a healing property. Where the circulation is pure this element of the blood, which is of a glutinous or sticky nature, performs the necessary work in healing all sores, wounds and lacerations. It does this by sticking or joining the parts together, while nature causes a knitting of the tissues and solidifies the place.

This healing property is frequently destroyed by impure accumulations in the blood, and this vital fluid not only loses its power to heal, but becomes a source of irritation and disease to any open sore or ulcer on the body. Constantly it discharges its morbid matters into the place, and gradually it causes the infection to spread and the sore enlarges. The morbid matter in the blood comes from different causes. A long spell of debilitating sickness, which breeds disease germs in the system, the retention of the refuse matters of the body because of a sluggish condition of the eliminative members, a continued malarial state of the system, inherited bad blood, etc., are usually responsible.

CURED OF EATING SORE.

Dear Sirs:—I was suffering greatly from a sore on my left breast, which had begun to eat, and at times deep, shooting pains would pass through it, and the ulcer was discharging yellow and rather offensive matter. I consulted physicians, but their treatment did not benefit me very much. My condition seemed hopeless, and I had almost despaired of getting well. I knew that the disease was hereditary in my case, as an only sister, my mother and two of her sisters had died of Cancer of the breast. After I had finished the first bottle of S.S.S. I felt some better, so continued it until I was cured.

MRS. JAMES CASSELL,
Belton, Mo.

S. S. S. heals sores and ulcers in the very simplest way. It just goes into the circulation, and removes the impurities and polluted matter that are the means of keeping the ulcer open; then the sore is bound to heal. S.S.S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and not only does it cleanse the circulation, but it adds every necessary property to it to promote good health. It is of the very greatest tonic value, and those who have been weakened and run down by the constitutional drainage of an old sore will find it the very remedy needed. S.S.S. does not simply cause a scab to come over an old sore, but beginning at the bottom it heals the place permanently by building new tissue and filling in the place with firm, healthy flesh. Weak Kidneys

Weak Kidneys, surely point to weak kidney Nerves. The Kidneys, like the Heart, and the Stomach, find their weakness, not in the organ itself, but in the nerves that control and guide and strengthen them. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is a medicine specifically prepared to reach these controlling nerves. To doctor the Kidneys alone, is futile. It is a waste of time, and of money as well.

If your back aches or is weak, if the urine scalds, or is dark and strong, if you have symptoms of Brights or other distressing or dangerous kidney disease, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative a month—Tablets or Liquid—and see what it can and will do for you. Druggist recommend and sell

It isn't so difficult to strengthen a weak stomach, if one goes at it correctly. And this is true of the Heart and Kidneys. The old fashioned way of dosing the stomach or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is surely wrong! Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. "Go to the weak or ailing nerves of these organs," said he. Each inside organ has its controlling or "inside nerve." When these nerve fail them then those organs must surely falter. This vital truth is leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. A few days test will surely tell! Sold by all dealers.

Petition for Public Ditch.

To the County Board of the County of Red Lake State of Minnesota:

The undersigned land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for, the expense of the contruction of the Public Ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare and the reclamation of wet and overflowed lands require the establishment and contruction of a Public Ditch along the following described route in the Towns of Star and Hickory in said County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said ditch is as follows: Commencing at Northwest corner of section two (2) in township No. one hundred fifty-three (153) North of Range No. thirty-nine (39) in Red Lake county, Minnesota, thence running south along the section line between sections two (2) and three (3), between sections ten (10) and eleven (11), between sections fourteen (14) and fifteen (15), between sections twenty-two (22) and twenty-three (23), between sections twenty-six (26) and twenty-seven (27) and between sections thirty-four (34) and thirty-five (35) to the south-west corner of the south-west quarter (S.W.¼) of section thirty-five (35) in said township No. one hundred fifty-three (153) north of range No. thirty-nine (39), thence continuing due south from the north-west corner of the north-east quarter (N.E. ¼) of section three (3) township No. one hundred fifty-two (152) North of range No. thirty-nine (39) through said section three (3) in a southeasterly direction to a point on the Red Lake river one hundred rods west of the south-west corner of section two (2), township one hundred fifty-two (152) north of Range No. thirty-nine (39) and terminating at the Red Lake river in said township No. one hundred fifty-two (152) north of range No. thirty-nine (39) as its outlet.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such Drainage Ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by chapter two hundred thirty (230), of the general laws of Minnesota for 1905 and acts amendatory thereof.

Whereas, A petition bearing date the 24th day of September 1909, signed by Carelius Peterson, Ole Anderson Dahle, Gunder Asbjornson, Torgei O. Langei, John G. Carlson, Halvor Olson, Andrew Myrum, Salve T. Myrum, R.T. Hagen, Henry Quirk and John Quirk praying for the establishment of a certain Drainege Ditch in said County, designated and numbered by the County Auditor as County Ditch No. 42 the route of which is more fully described in said petition, and a proper bond accompanying the same, have been filed with the County Auditor of said County, as by law required,

And, Whereas, It appears by satisfactory proof to the County Board of Red Lake County, that due notice of the pendency of said petition, and the time and place at which the same would be heard has been given as required by law;

Now, Therefore, We, the County Board of said County, at a special session held this day, do hereby appoint C. H. Martz as a competent and experienced engineer to make an accurate survey of the line of said Drainage Ditch from its source to its outlet, as provided and specified in and by Chapter 230 of the General Laws of 909, and acts amendatory thereof and after completing his duties as such engineer to make and file his report with the County Auditor of said County, on or before the 81st day of December 1909,

Dated October 30th, 1909.

By the Board,
C. A. Lindquist,
Chairman of County Board.
of Red Lake County

Attest:

On motion made by Commissioner Johnson and seconded by Commissioner Pigeon and carried unanimously the following order appointing Viewers on County Ditch No. 42 was made:

In the Matter of the Petition of Carelius Peterson and others for County Ditch No. 42 in the County of Red Lake State of Minnesota:

State of Minnesota, }
County of Red Lake } SS.

Whereas, A petition bearing dat the 24th day of September A. D, 1909., signed by Carelius Peterson and ten others praying for the establishment of a ditch in said county, designated and numbered by the County Auditor as County Ditch No. 42 the route of which is fully described in said petition, together with a proper bond accompanying the same, has been filed with the County Auditor of said County; and said County Auditor has given due notice of the pendency of said petition, and the said notice has been published and served as by law required; and hearing had on said petition pursuant to said notice; and the said County Board of said County have heretofore duly appointed a competent engineer, to-wit: C. H. Martz to make a survey of said ditch.

Now Therefore, We, the County board of said County, at a Special session held this day, do hereby appoint Joseph Belair and Daniel Patterson and Peter C. Wold three resident freeholders of said County, who are not interested in the construction of said proposed work, and not of kin to any of the parties known to be interested therein, to be viewers of said proposed work and of the route thereof.

The said viewers shall first take an oath to faithfully perform their duties as such viewers and thereafter, having received a certified copy of petition for said ditch and of the order appointing them such viewers and of the order of the County Auditor of said County designating the time and place of the first meeting of said viewers, shall meet at the time and place specified in the order of the county auditor aforesaid and shall proceed to view said proposed work and the land damaged or benefited thereby, and having completed said view and examination of said work, shall make and file their report thereof with said County Auditor of said County within thirty days from the date of their first meeting. In said report they shall in tabular form give the names of the owners of each tract of land to be benefitted or damaged by said proposed work, the description of each tract of land so benefitted or damaged (said names of owners to be the same as appear on the County tax duplicates of said County, and the description to be given in legal form), and the total number of acres in each tract of land to be benefitted or damaged (as the case may be), the number of acres added to any tract by the total or partial drainage of any meandered lake, or the change of any water course and the location and value of such added land; the damage, if any to riparian rights pertaining to any tract, and the amount that each tract of land will be benefited or damaged by the construction of said work. In case said ditch drains, either in whole or in part, any public or corporate road or railroad, or benefits any such road so that the roadbed or traveled track of any such road will be made better by the construction of said ditch, said viewers shall estimate the benefits arising therefrom to said road, roadbeds or railroads, and report said benefits, together with the names of roads and other particulars necessary to identify the corporations, private or public, to be benefited thereby, and amounts of benefits to each; they shall report as part of such tabular statement the damages awarded to each muncipal or other corporation for injury to any road or roadbed, and from the necessary construction and maintenance of any bridge, culverts or other works rendered necessary by the establishment of such ditch, stating the same separately. They shall also report the total estimated benefits in respect to said ditch entire, and branches thereof, if any, and also whether or not, in their opinion, the estimated expense of the construction of said ditch including the damages assessed therefor, is greater than the utility of said proposed ditch; and whether or not said proposed ditch is impracticable for any reason, and if so, stating reason why it should not be constructed. In making said view and survey of said proposed work and their report thereon, the said viewers shall proceed according to Chapter 230 of the General Laws of 1905, and acts amendatory thereof.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Louisville, Ky.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has certainly done me a world of good and I cannot praise it enough. I suffered from irregularities, dizziness, nervousness, and a severe female trouble. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored me to perfect health and kept me from the operating table. I will never be without this medicine in the house."—Mrs. SAM'L LEE, 3523 Fourth St., Louisville, Ky.

Another Operation Avoided.

Adrian, Ga.—"I suffered untold misery from female troubles, and my doctor said an operation was my only chance, and I dreaded it almost as much as death. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me without an operation."—LENA V. HENRY, R. F. D. 3.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases. The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

Typographical Union Led.

The first tuberculosis sanitarium to be erected for the benefit of the laboring men was built by the International Typographical union in connection with its home at Colorado Springs. The International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' union have recently decided to erect a similar sanitarium, and steps are now being taken to open such an institution. The International Photo-Engravers' union, while not conducting a sanitarium of its own, pays for the treatment of its tuberculous members in institutions in various parts of the country. The International Boot Workers' union are recommending to their members that they ally themselves with the various organizations united in the fight against tuberculosis.

The Rare Gift of Courtesy.

Courtesy includes not merely social kindness, graces of speech, absence of rudeness, but honorable treatment of business associates and of all the fellow citizens with whom a man of affairs may have business to transact. It is not American to keep one citizen waiting all day at the door because he is poor, and to grant another citizen an interview because it is believed he is rich. Wisdom is not confined in a purse, and frequently much wisdom may be learned from a poor man.

How to Care for the Child.

Perplexed mother writes: "My child has sneezing fits after the morning sponge bath. What would you advise?" Some mothers give their babies a hypodermic of morphine for sneezing. But we have always felt that this was too harsh a remedy. Give the baby about three tablespoonfuls of Old Tom gin with a little sugar and a pinch of lemon peel. The sugar makes this remedy more grateful to the child. Be sure to keep this prophylactic away from father.

Anti-Climax.

"How's yer wheat?"

"First rate."

"Pigs doin' well?"

"Fine."

"That puny colt come 'round all right?"

"He sure did."

"Glad to hear things is so likely, Bill. How's your wife?"—Washington Herald.

Heartless Parent Again.

Beautiful Girl—Gardener, don't make a flower bed there. It will spoil our croquet ground."

Gardener—Can't help it, miss. Them's my orders. Your father says he is going to have this garden devoted to horticulture, not husbandry.

Fools in glad rags are often permitted to rush in where unlaundered hobos would be knocked down and dragged out.

THE DIFFERENCE

Coffee Usually Means Sickness, But Postum Always Means Health.

Those who have never tried the experiment of leaving off coffee and drinking Postum in its place and in this way regaining health and happiness can learn much from the experience of others who have made the trial.

One who knows says: "I drank coffee for breakfast every morning until I had terrible attacks of indigestion producing days of discomfort and nights of sleeplessness. I tried to give up the use of coffee entirely, but found it hard to go from hot coffee to a glass of water. Then I tried Postum.

"It was good and the effect was so pleasant that I soon learned to love it and have used it for several years. I improved immediately after I left off coffee and took on Postum and am now entirely cured of my indigestion and other troubles all of which were due to coffee. I am now well and contented and all because I changed from coffee to Postum.

"Postum is much easier to make right every time than coffee, for it is so even and always reliable. We never use coffee now in our family. We use Postum, and are always well."

"There's a reason" and it is proved by trial.

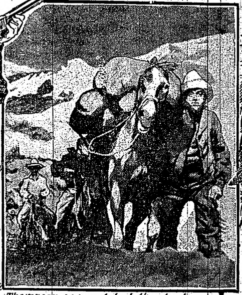
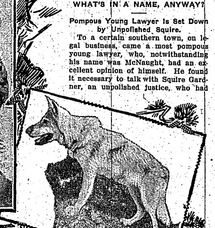
HUNTING BIG GAME IN NORTHWEST

AT THIS season of the year hardly a train leaves any of the railroad stations of a great city but what it bears half a dozen enthusiastic sportsmen in search of the thrills to be found only in the woods of the far north and northwest. Thousands of dollars are spent for the purpose of securing a chance to shoot an antleerd buck as he roams over his native heath. Preparations for these trips are made long in advance. As an old friend said one time about fox hunting, "Half the fun in the sport is getting ready, hacking to the meet and the long ride home with plenty of good tobacco." So are the days spent on the trail, getting into the big game country, nearly always from 90 to 200 miles from the end of the railroad.



Thompson as usual led the train



Hard to Hit

We followed them for three days

I Took A Quick Shot

After making camp in the open along the Yellowstone river on one of these nights, supper being over, and Thompson, our guide, starting one of his Indian tales with Gen. Miles and himself as the heroes, two cow punchers rode up with a pack horse and asked if we objected to them making camp with us, saying several others were coming later with some cattle. Several others did come and with them 6,000 head of cattle, so we slept with the herd surrounding us on all sides; some grazing, while others would stand over one and look at the fire, while the cowboys were continually riding around the herd to keep tab on the stragglers.

By breakfast time all were gone and our party was also in the saddle by six o'clock, making for the game country.

After three more days of traveling we made camp near the foot of saddle mountain, on Bannock lake and about 15 miles from the national park line, a line at times quite hard to discover, as it may run from the top of one mountain to a bronze plate in a rock some six or eight miles away.

After resting a day in camp we started for the hunting ground with Thompson and had gone only a couple of miles when we came to some fresh elk tracks, which we followed cautiously for some time, until we could see far below us in a park (a small clearing with long grass, on which elk are fond of feeding), a small band of elk, three bulls and six cows. Getting within range noiselessly was no easy matter, owing to the dry condition of the forests, but after an exciting crawl on hands and knees, we found ourselves within about a hundred yards and unseen by the elk. I picked my bull and took a shot for the near shoulder, while my guide shot the next largest; both bulls dropped, but mine was up an off again immediately, following in the rear of the herd as best he could with a broken shoulder and a bullet in his lungs. He was going slowly and easy to follow and another shot some 500 yards further on, in very dense timber, ended his roving career. The remainder of that day was spent in skinning and cutting up the meat and hanging it high above the ground, out of reach of prowling animals at night. For dinner that evening we had elk's liver and steak and quite a celebration over our early success. Packing the meat, hides and heads back to camp consumed the next day and kept the three of us busy.

As my companions from the east shot a fine bull several days later on, we took a rest from hunting and devoted some time to fishing. Trout rose well, so all were satisfied and on returning to camp on one of these days I had a quick shot from my pony at a coyote that was galloping across the brow of the hill. It always seemed to me to have been more good luck than good marksmanship, for these little things are always hard to hit, but his skin now lies over the back of a chair before my fireplace.

After hunting without any luck for perhaps a week, we finally came on some rather fresh sheep tracks and decided immediately to go after them. It was quite the hardest climbing and hunting I ever did without any success, but we followed them for three days and at times must have been within a couple of hundred yards of them, although we never had a shot.

Menacing clouds had been gathering for some days, with litle snow flurries, and Thompson said a good deal about getting back to the ranch, which was a two days' trip, and as he said if we didn't cross the divide before the snow came, we never would. Therefore we planned to start the following morning, but when morning came we found our tent entirely covered with drifted snow, the wind blowing a gale and the air full of blinding, cutting snow.

It was a hard task to catch 17 horses and ponies and pack them in the snow and rain, so it was noon before we were on the go, while the cold made the train hard to manage and keep in line; one pony especially tried to buck the elk head off that was packed on him. He did manage to get it twisted around so the prongs of the antlers stuck him in the side, and such capers as he cut then I have never seen, besides delaying the outfit for nearly an hour. The divide had to be crossed by daylight, but on reaching it a dense fog settled over the whole country, which, added to the snow, made it impossible to see more than 10 feet in front of one. Thompson, as usual, led the train, and after going on the narrow ridge that formed the divide, stopped to call and see if all were following, when there was a great scrambling and crashing of branches and one of the horses disappeared over the precipice, which was anywhere from 600 to a thousand feet deep on either side and only about 30 feet on top. After counting noses we found he was an unruly fellow that we had not been able to pack, but was following the others all right until he started to do a little reconnoitering on his own account. Undoubtedly he was dead long before he reached the bottom of the precipice, so we felt our way along very cautiously and anxiously until suddenly the cloud we were in lifted, when the going was moderately fair until we made camp for the night, all very thankful that we had not encountered more serious disaster.

Later, several short excursions were made from the ranchhouse, on one of which I shot a good blacktail deer, and another time a young bull elk, with only spikes. The blacktail was standing in the snow with three does, sheltered behind a clump of scrub pines, and he had evidently seen me first, for I was then attracted by the does running off. I took a quick shot and the buck made a tremendous leap of at least 30 feet, but it was his last, as my first soft-nosed bullet had mushroomed considerably on going through the shoulder and completely torn his lungs away.

The spike elk was much harder to kill, or our marksmanship was poor, owing to our having to run across a valley and up the side of a mountain to head him off. At any rate it took four of my guide's 45-70's and three of my 30-30 bullets to bring him down. Every ball had hit him, but none in a vital spot until the last.

Sage hen shooting and coursing jack rabbits with a greyhound and a collie dog offer good sport for the hunter in this country.

WHAT'S IN A NAME, ANYWAY?

Pompous Young Lawyer Is Set Down by Unpolished Squire.

To a certain southern town, on legal business, came a most pompous young lawyer, who, notwithstanding his name was McNaught, had an excellent opinion of himself. He found it necessary to talk with Squire Gardner, an unpolished justice, who had no good opinion of anything, and especially of anyone who had a good opinion of himself. The squire had never heard of his visitor till he called and he was a poor hand at remembering names, but he was an expert in human measurements. The young lawyer proceeded promptly to say what he had to say, the squire listening, but watching. Presently he thought it was time for him to say something.

"Hold on, Mr. McCipher," he began.

"My name is McNaught," the lawyer stiffly corrected him.

"Excuse me, excuse me," apologized the squire and finished his remarks.

It was not long until the squire again felt called upon to speak.

"Well, now, Mr. McZero," he started in.

"I said my name was McNaught," the lawyer interrupted sharply.

Again the squire apologized, apologized profusely, and the lawyer concluded his consultation. He was not feeling very kindly toward the squire, but he thought it wise not to manifest his feelings and said goodby with a fair degree of politeness.

"Goodby, Mr. McNothing," said the squire as innocent as a lamb, and as the visitor walked pompously out of the office the squire chuckled.

PINEAPPLE AS A CURATIVE.

It has long been known that the pineapple is one of the healthiest of fruits, but its real medicinal qualities probably have never been realized. In Hawaii experiments have been made to determine something of these properties. It has been found that the fruit of the pineapple contains a digestive principle closely resembling pepsin in its action, and to this is probably due the beneficial results of the use of the fruit in certain forms of dyspepsia. On the casein of milk pineapple juice acts as a digestive in almost the same manner as rennet, and the action is also well illustrated by placing a thin piece of uncooked beef between two slices of fresh pineapple, where in the course of a few hours its character is completely changed.

In diphtheritic sore throat and croup pineapple juice has come to be very largely relied upon in countries where the fruit is common. The false membranes which cause the closing of the throat seem to be dissolved by the fruit acids and relief is almost immediate.

Concrete Buildings in China.

The construction of houses and walls of concrete in China was instituted several centuries ago, and is peculiarly common and extensive in Swatow, where it originated in the building of a chapel by a French priest. The absence of any brick structures or walls gives ample proof of the stability of the concrete.

NARROW HIGHWAYS OF CHINA

Many of the Roads in Empire Have No Wider Gauge Than a Wheelbarrow Track.

The most ancient and honorable means of travel is by the highway, and writers on China extol the splendid roads built by earlier dynasties. So far as I can learn, however, there is not, outside the neighborhood of the large cities, a single main road which could pass the inspection of so easily convinced an expert as say a county commissioner in Pennsylvania. In the 800-miles stretch from Pekin to Hankow; the railway does not cross a single wagon road equal to the trails of southern Texas. Chinese farmers have a way of enlarging their fields by digging into the sides of any roads that may be made, and most of the highways that you see are gullied tracks, sometimes winding across tilled fields in a new course each year. There are many small stone bridges and a few of considerable span.

Wheeled traffic in many parts of China knows no wider gage than a wheelbarrow track. North and Central China have the two-wheeled cart of a strength and solidity which can stand the jolting, and transfer it to the passenger, and a few four-wheeled carts navigate in dry weather. Unlike Japan, China abounds in beasts of burden. The commonest carriage in the south is the pack animal. The camel in north China is still locomotive, baggage wagon and trolley car; out of Pekin every morning move many hundreds of these big, fat, two-humped beasts, looking down with the contempt of their country on the foreign devil. The traveler who penetrates into that China which has not yet known Europe, must use these primitive roads and means of transportation; the more casual visitor chooses quicker methods.—From Hankow (China) Letter to the Boston Transcript.

SUFFERED TERRIBLY.

How Relief from Distressing Kidney Trouble Was Found.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wolf, 388 W. Morgan St., Tipton, Mo., says: "Inflammation of the bladder reached its climax last spring and I suffered terribly. My back ached and pained so I could hardly get around and the secretions were scanty, frequent of passage and painful. I was tired all the time and very nervous. I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, and after taking a few boxes was cured and have been well ever since."

AS UNDERSTOOD IN BOSTON

The Traditional Episode of "Little Miss Muffet" Brought Into Every-Day Cognizance.

A diminutive specimen of juvenile femininity yclept Miss Muffet had placed herself in a sitting posture upon an article of household furniture ordinarily termed an ottoman or hassock—

Ministering to the gratification of her gustatory organs by ingurgitating the coagulated portion of bovine lacteal fluid mingled with the watery serum of the same which remains after the coagulated portion has been segregated and withdrawn.

Happening to glance downward she observed that a specimen of the genus Aranea, class Arachnida, remarkable for its ability to produce filaments of extraordinary tenuity from its own interior, had taken a position upon the ottoman or hassock in immediate proximity.

Which totally unexpected incident aroused her apprehension to such an extent that she immediately, not to say precipitately, arose from her sitting posture and departed from the locality, leaving the intruder in undisputed possession of the apartment.

ADDED TO THE MISFORTUNE

Discarded Auto Simply Acted as Decoy to Bring Other Undesirables.

Asa Paine, vice-president of the American Automobile association, said in St. Augustine of the automobile industry:

"Cars are now made to last. The rich man no longer finds his 1907 car unfashionable, like his 1907 coat, in 1909,

"At the beginning of the industry a car was antiquated in no time—so antiquated that people laughed at it.

"They tell a story in Detroit about a dealer who had, in 1900, an antiquated 1895 car. He tried vainly to sell this car. He put lower and lower price tags on it—$100, $50, $10—and finally he put on a tag to the effect that the car was to be given away.

"Even then there were no takers.

"So one evening, desperate, the dealer left the 1895 car in a vacant lot beside his shop, hoping that some one would steal it in the night. But when he came down to work the next morning, not only was the old car still there, but another one of similar pattern had been placed beside it."

A theatrical manager delighted in taking a rise out of conceited or vain members of his company.

"I see you are getting on fairly well," he remarked.

"Fairly? I am getting on very well," replied the hero of the play, promptly. "I played Hamlet for the first time last night. You can see by the papers' glowing criticisms how well I got on."

"I have not read them," replied the other, quietly, "but I was there."

"Oh, you were. Well, you noticed how swimmingly everything went off? Of course, I made a bungle of one part by falling into Ophelia's grave, but I think the audience appreciated even that."

"I know they did," said the manager, with a slight smile; "but they were frightfully sorry when you climbed out of it again!"

A Clean Man

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh.

It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs.

Constipation is the most unclean uncleanliness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. They never gripe. Easy to take as candy.

FINE RECIPE FOR COLDS.

Any druggist can supply these ingredients or will get them from his wholesale house.

HONOLULU COWBOYS

Learn Art in Rounding Up Wild Cattle on Mountain Peaks of Little Island in the Pacific Ocean.

Honolulu.—Since a dusky Hawaiian rode out into the arena at Cheyenne in the Frontier day contests and beat the best of all the ropers in the world, and since Irkua Purdy's cousins, Archie Kaaua and Jack Low, won third and sixth places in the contest, many have wondered how these men from a group of tiny islands in the middle of the Pacific were able to come to Wyoming and show the best of the plainsmen how to rope a steer.

The answer is simple. Ever since these men have been old enough to straddle a horse, they have been used to riding over rough country and roping cattle under conditions such as the average prairie cowboy never saw nor imagined.

The island of Hawaii contains a mountainous and rugged land through which the wildest of wild cattle roam. High up above the level of the sugar plantations the mountains are well wooded and the task of rounding up and roping cattle in such country requires the greatest skill and coolness in the saddle and with the rope. Only once in a thousand times will it happen that the animal to be roped lays itself open on a level piece of land. The throw is almost always made on the slope of a hill, sometimes with a sheer precipice at one side, and for this reason the Hawaiian cowboy never makes his rope fast to the saddle horn before throwing. It would be as much as his life is worth to do so, for the steer is liable to break away when the horse is on ground that makes it impossible to throw the animal, and so the roper must let go of his rope to save himself and his horse. These Hawaiians are accustomed to throw from all angles and up or downhill indiscriminately. The advantage of being used to this kind of work was well demonstrated at the recent championship contests in Cheyenne.

The three Hawaiians naturally enough, did not have their own horses, and depended on what they could borrow to ride during the contests. Purdy selected one that looked about right for the work, but a few seconds after he started for the steer he found to his disgust that the horse was not well neck broke and he had difficulty in guiding the animal right, and it looked as if it were impossible for him to make the throw successfully. But Purdy was used to that kind of work, and without any hesitation he threw from one side. As the noose rose and fell cleanly over the steer's neck a shout of derision went up from the crowd. They thought it impossible for any man to throw a steer in that way. But, quick as a flash, Purdy made fast the rope to the horn of the saddle, and almost before the spectators knew what had happened, the steer was struggling on the ground. The final result of that tie is famous. Purdy ran to the steer and had it properly tied in one minute and three seconds, making the best time of the day and beating Archie Kaaua's time by six seconds. When the finals came off Purdy was more used to his horse and tied his steer in 56 seconds.

The man to whom much of the credit for the Hawaiian's victory is due is Eben Low, brother of Jack Low, half-brother to Archie Kaaua, and cousin to Purdy. Mr. Low is a retired rancher, who now lives in Honolulu. He it was who started the fund to pay the cowboy's expenses to Cheyenne.

Purdy's first appearance in public was made in Honolulu a year ago, when Eben Low produced a wild west show at Kapiolani park. Angus McPhee, then champion of the world, was present and took part in the competition, beating Purdy and Kaaua, but using a tied rope instead of a loose one, to which the Hawaiians had been accustomed.

Purdy is a typical Hawaiian of the mountains. Lithe as a Greek god, the symmetry of his well-muscled limbs is something to wonder at. His face is dark and has many of the features of a Wyoming Indian, but he has none of their characteristics, for he is well educated and speaks three languages with ease and fluency. In manner he is quiet and talks but little. He is in no way conceited about his wonderful victory, but chats of his trip and his doings in the easiest and most modest way in the world.

SEES HER SON IN DREAM

Boy Had Been Missing for More Than Ten Years.

Mother's Vision Impels Her to Write Naval Authorities in Washington for Information Regarding Lad.

San Francisco, Cal.—Mrs. Hannah Friedman, a resident of this city, saw in her vision her eldest boy, who had been missing for ten years, in the uniform of a blue jacket of the United States navy. So vivid was the impression upon her by the dream that she obeyed an inexplicable impulse to write to the naval authorities at Washington. The officials not only substantiated the vision, but were able to bring the mother and son together.

The finding of one son led to the finding of another. Both young men now are working in this city, striving to save sufficient money to pay their mother's railroad fare from New York.

Mrs. Friedman and her husband were living happily together ten years ago. Their two boys, Mervyn, eight years old, and Jesse, six, were attending school. The little family had little or nothing to worry them.

Then Friedman began to neglect his wife for other company. He gathered together whatever funds he could, and in company with his affinity and the two children, he went to New York.

At the age of 16 Mervyn was entered in the United States navy by the father. Jesse, who had some talent as an amateur actor, appeared successfully in theaters in New York.

The mother never gave up hope of seeing her boys. Had she not moved she would have heard from them, for the boys, never forgetting their parent, wrote to her at various times, but the letters were returned. This led them to think she was dead.

Mrs. Friedman dreamed that her eldest boy was in the United States navy. He stood before her as in real life, grown stalwart, looking every inch a blue jacket. Then she awoke.

The more Mrs. Friedman thought of the vision the more she felt that it was true. She wrote to the navy department at Washington in the hope of ascertaining whether a boy named Mervyn Friedman was in the ranks. The letter was referred to the bureau of navigation. The roll was examined, with the result that the boy was found.

The tidings were sent to the mother, who was overjoyed at her good fortune. She sold the few effects she had, and with barely enough money to pay her fare, she hurried on to New York. She went to the home of her sister, Mrs. E. Schumacher, and at the first oportunity visited the navy yard.

With her heart full of expectation, she boarded the Prairie and asked to see young Friedman. The boy came on deck. Mother gazed upon son, son upon mother. There was no recognition. The mother yearned to take the boy of her dream in her arms, but she feared that she might be mistaken.

Her voice trembled as she asked if he were Mervyn Friedman and whether he came from San Francisco. Then the boy quickly identified himself. When the mother told of her own life he mingled his tears with hers.

Young Friedman then told of his brother Jesse and of his father. Jesse, through his aid, was soon found. Then there was a joyful reunion.

Having found his mother, Mervyn declared he wanted to return to civil life that he might be with her. He did not want her to work any more. Jesse also joined in the idea.

As Mervyn had two more years to serve in the navy, it was impossible for him to get his release unless influence was brought to bear on the authorities at Washington. Mrs. Friedman enlisted the services of Senator Bourne of Oregon and Congressman Julius Kahn of this city. She wrote letters to each, telling of her need for her boy. Congressman Kahn, touched by her apepal, submitted the correspondence to the secretary of the navy.

After some delay the navy department acquiesced in the recommendations of the Pacific coast representatives. Young Friedman was given an honorable discharge. Bidding his mother good-by, he hurired to San Francisco to find employment. He was accompanied by his younger brother. Mrs. Friedman remained with her sister in New York.

HORSE KNOWS DINNER TIME

All Business Engagements Are Off the Instant This Animal Hears Noon Whistle.

Columbus, Ind.—Howard J. Tooley, a local grocer, may have to get rid of the horse he uses with his delivery wagon. No matter where that horse may be, when the factory whistles blow at noon the horse starts for the barn, and all the pulling that drivers can do will not change the horse's purpose.

The other day the horse was in a distant part of the city when the factory whistle blew at noon, and the animal seemed to know it was time to eat. The driver was delivering some parcels at a rear door, but the horse did not stand on ceremony. Instead, it wheeled suddenly with the intention of going home. The wagon was overturned and demolished, and the horse was thrown in the mix-up.

As soon as the horse could get on its feet it again made an effort to go to the barn, demolishing wagon and all.

LAVA FOR RAILROAD BALLAST

Bend, Ore.—The railroad survey south from Bend has now reached the lava fields, distant some eight miles up the Deschutes. It has just become known that this lava, which has hitherto been regarded as entirely useless, will supply the very best ballast for the new road and will probably be used on the entire central stretch of the line. Not only will it fill this purpose excellently well, but contrary to the belief that has previously existed, obtaining it will be an economical task.

The experts declare that no "shooting" will be necessary, but that a steam shovel will be able to scoop up the half disintegrated rock and dump it into cars, practically prepared by nature for its new field of activity. If such be the case it is the very first time that the lava has ever served a useful purpose, according to the people who have had most to do with it.

ORIGINAL POLES NOT FOUND

If One Believes the Theories of Geologists as to the Shifting of Heat Zones.

Washington.—The reports that Dr. Cook and Commander Peary have both succeeded in reaching the north pole have renewed scientific interest in the theory that was so prevalent some thirty years ago—that the first habitation of man was in the region of the north pole, and that there was located the true Garden of Eden. Geologists hold that the earth was originally a huge molten mass, and that the cooling process was more rapid at the poles than anywhere else. Hence the two extremities would have been the first parts of the earth's surface to sustain animal life. It was argued that as the surface gradually cooled and became habitable man migrated southward, and that after the lapse of many centuries the cold at the poles was too extreme for man.

As far north as man has been able to make any research the bones of prehistoric mammals have been found. The remains of mastodons have been found imbedded in the ice of Siberia and Alaska, furnishing proof that at some time those animals ranged over those regions. The vast coal fields of Spitzbergen and Alaska are cited as another instance that at some time in ages past rank vegetation must have existed there. It is known that the coal measures of Alaska cover a vast area of territory. If vegetation once covered the area around the pole, why should it not have been the home of man?

Cows Vanish with Wife.

Washington, Pa.—James Edmonds of Manifold reported to local officers that his wife and four cows disappeared simultaneously after he had left to go to work in a mine. No trace of the woman has been discovered. Edmonds says his wife shipped a sewing machine, three trunks and a barrel containing household goods to Pittsburg.

The Best Food for Workers.

The best food for those who work with hand or brain is never high priced.

The best example of this is found in Quaker Oats. It stands at the top among foods that supply nourishment and vigor, without taxing the digestion, and yet it is the least expensive food one can eat.

This great food value and low cost make it an ideal food for families who want to get the greatest good from what they eat.

Laborers, factory or farm hands, fed plentifully on Quaker Oats will work better and with less fatigue than if fed on almost any other kind of food. All of these facts were proved and very interesting information about human foods were gathered by Professor Fisher of Yale University in 1908. In addition to the regular package Quaker Oats is packed in large sized family packages either with or without china dishes. 8

Awful, Crusted, Weeping Eczema on Little Sufferer—A Score of Treatments Prove Dismal Failures.

Cure Achieved by Cuticura.

"My little boy had an awful rash all over his body and the doctor said it was eczema. It was terrible, and used to water awfully. Any place the water went it would form another sore and it would become crusted. A score or more physicians failed utterly and dismally in their efforts to remove the trouble. Then I was told to use the Cuticura Remedies. I got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and before we had used half the Resolvent I could see a change in him. "Did he find out its reputation?"

"That's the very thing that decided him to take the house."

"Rather surprising!"

"He said it would be such a comfort for him to get inside of a house where the ghost walked every night."

Snake Story.

"Before he went fishin'," said the town story teller, "he swallowed 'bout a pint an' a half of snakebite remedy, an' of course you know what that is. Well, after the snake bit him the reptile cut all sorts o' capers, kaze the remedy went straight to its head. Malvin Complimented.

At the annual meeting of the Red River Valley Dairymen's association held at Crookston last week one of the prominent speakers paused in his remarks to say that there is one buttermaker in the valley who is entitled to "special mention" even though he should never win another prize. P. L. Malvin of Red Lake Falls is "the man," said the speaker. Mr. Malvin, the speaker said, took charge of the Red Lake Falls creamery when it was scarcely able to make a struggle for existence. He has since won a first prize in a state butter scoring contest, but he has done bigger things than that. He has made the creamery a thriving institution and dairying is now a leading industry in southern Red Lake county. Of course Mr. Malvin is not alone responsible for this condition but he has supplied a whole lot of the "push".

WORTH GOING AFTER

Opportunity For Farmers To Win Valuable Prizes at Big Corn Exposition.

BENJAMIN PUSCHINSKY

Death of Well Known Citizen Causes General Regret in the City.

Benjamin Puschinsky, brief announcement of whose death was made in the last issue, died at Crookston, where he had gone for hospital treatment, at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon, Nov. 4. Though Mr. Puschinsky had been in ill health for many months his condition was not considered alarming and the news of his sudden death came as a shock to relatives and friends. Deceased had been afflicted with a throat trouble and only a few days before his death had gone to Crookston for hospital treatment. An operation was to have been performed soon. A nurse, under whose care he was, upon returning to the room after a brief absence found him dead. Death was due to strangulation. No doubt Mr. Puschinsky's weakened physical condition because of long illness made it impossible for him to resist the unfavorable turn which he might have survived had he had more vitality.

Funeral services were held Monday afternooon. There was a short service at the home and a longer service at the Presbyterian church at 2:30 o'clock conducted by Rev. D. K. Laurie. Mr. Puschinsky was a member of the M. W. A., I. O. O. F. and Masonic lodges and members of the first two named orders attended in a body and acted as escort and poll bearers. A large number of old friends and neighbors were in attendance at the funeral to pay a last tribute of respect to the memory of one whom all held in high esteem. During the hour of the funeral the business places of the city were closed.

Benjamin Puschinsky was born March 1, 1865, and died Nov. 4, 1909, at the age of forty-four years, eight months and three days. On April 20, 1897, Mr. Puschinsky and Miss Ida Carlson were married at Minneapolis. After a residence of a number of years in southern Minnesota they came to Red Lake Falls to reside nine years ago and the family home has since been in this city. Deceased is survived by his widow and four little boys. His parents also are living, residing in Michigan, and there are a number of other relatives. It is indeed a sad affliction that has came to Mrs. Puschinsky and the children and the sympathy of the people of the community is extended to them.

Cattle Taken up.

THE QUEST OF THE RED SLIPPER.

Dickey Secured the Prize and Got His Reward.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

An hour after dinner on that first Saturday evening Dicky Ames left his comfortable chair in the smoking room and made his way to the great entrance hall, where the younger guests were gathered about a roaring driftwood fire.

He leaned against the high chimneypiece and from his shadowy corner watched the light and sparkle of Kitty Austin's lovely dark face. Once her soft eyes met his wistful glance, and she threw him a smile that set his heart to beating heavily.

"Kitty says she shall not dance until her slipper has been found," laughed Edith Bolter, with a mischievous glance at Dicky.

He leaned forward and glanced down at the hearth, where a little red slipper rested lightly on the fender. The other foot was hidden amid the soft fluffiness of Kitty's red skirts.

"Where did you lose it?" asked Dicky eagerly.

Kitty blushed, and a distressed look came into her beautiful eyes. Dicky remembered that he had met a similar glance across the dinner table earlier in the evening.

"Miss Austin won't tell," drawled Chambers lazily, "but it is a fact that she has not stirred from her chimney corner since dinner."

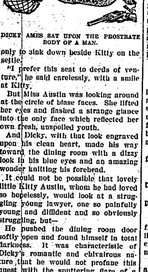
A laugh went around the circle, but Dicky winced at the air of quiet possession which Mark Chambers had assumed toward Kitty. He drew a long breath and turned away.

"I will find the slipper," he said, coloring boyishly.

"And Kitty shall give you the first dance," bantered Edith.

Dicky paused. "I will be honored," he said stiffly. "But the service is its own reward."

The men stirred uneasily, and Chambers half rose from his seat, only to sink down beside Kitty on the settle.



DICKY AMES SAT UPON THE PROSTRATE BODY OF A MAN.

"I prefer this seat to deeds of venture," he said carelessly, with a smile at Kitty.

But Miss Austin was looking around at the circle of blase faces. She lifted her eyes and flashed a strange glance into the only face which reflected her own fresh, unspoiled youth.

And Dicky, with that look engraved upon his clean heart, made his way toward the dining room with a dizzy look in his blue eyes and an amazing wonder knitting his forehead.

It could not be possible that lovely little Kitty Austin, whom he had loved so hopelessly, would look at a struggling young lawyer, one so painfully young and diffident and so obviously struggling, but—

He pushed the dining room door softly open and found himself in total darkness. It was characteristic of Dicky's romantic and chivalrous nature that he would not profane this quest with the sputtering flare of a prosaic match or the white light of the electroliers.

He took a few steps forward and touched the polished edge of the table. Then he dropped to his knees on the soft rug and crawled under the big piece of furniture.

His fingers groped over the floor and suddenly closed upon a bit of soft kid which as suddenly wriggled out of his grasp. The next instant a pair of long arms were twined about him, and he was writhing in silent combat with an unseen foe.

Over and over they rolled, the strange man panting heavily and muttering angry imprecations under his breath as Dicky strove with him for the possession of the red slipper.

It was snatched from Dicky's grasp and the high heel came in sharp contact with his temple, and he felt the blood trickling down into his eyes There was a jeweled buckle that tore his fingers as he fought for the prize.

The man laughed exultingly at Dicky's involuntary exclamation of pain, and then they clutched one another savagely, and Dicky Ames got the upper hold.

A heavy chair toppled over with a crash on the parquet floor, and almost instantly a door opened, and Saunders, the butler, snapped on the lights.

His shout of surprise brought a chorus of shrieking maid servants, while through the opposite door the guests streamed into the room.

In the midst of wild disorder Dicky Ames sat upon the prostrate body of a man, a being with sullen eyes and heavy jowl, who glared at them savagely. Near him on the rug lay a gleaming revolver and a black mask and a burglar's jimmy.

Dicky Ames, with blood stained face and one eye rapidly discoloring, with torn clothing, the white expanse of shirt front stained an ominous crimson, minus collar and tie—Dicky Ames gory, slightly bewildered, but smiling, was holding the twitching hands of his captive in a strong grip, while in his other hand dangled a tattered red slipper!

"Has wicked a-lookin' speciment has Hi care to know, sir," wheezed Saunders as he carefully disposed his bulk upon the unfortunate burglar. "Hif one of you gentlemen will kindly telephone to the police Hi will relieve Mr. Hames."

Dicky got stiffly upon his feet and looked dazedly about him. Chambers was eying him with jealous distrust.

"Where did you find him, Ames?" he sneered.

"Under the table," returned Dicky shortly.

"In the dark?"

Dicky nodded and peered about for a sight of Kitty.

Silently they opened ranks to let the victor through, and more than one man stared enviously after him.

Some one had sped the news to Kitty, and she was sitting on the settle with bright, tearful eyes and very pink cheeks when Dicky came marching down the long hall, the red slipper swinging from one bleeding hand. He dropped on his knees before her.

Kitty thrust out a timid silk stockinged foot, and Dicky tenderly fitted the little torn slipped to its place. She touched his broad shoulder with her fan.

"Rise, Sir Knight of the Slipper!" she said, with a tremulous little laugh.

Dicky sat beside her on the high backed settle, in her tender, compassionate eyes a bleeding and scarred veteran. Soft strains of a waltz came from the drawing room.

"Kitty," said the struggling young lawyer, with strange diffidence, "I suppose you couldn't—er—you couldn't care enough about me—to"— His voice failed, and he looked down at the soft mist of dark hair beside him.

"Indeed, indeed, I could!"

True Stories About Large Feet.

The conversation turned on big feet, remarks a writer in Tit-Bits, when one of the company said he believed his pal, Smith, would take some beating in that line.

"I was out walking with Smith one day when he slipped down with the soles of his boots pointing to a grocer's window. The grocer rushed out to inquire who was putting the shutters up."

"That's pretty fair," said a soldier who was present, "but a fellow in our company beat it hollow. After a sharp fight with the enemy we were obliged to retreat, when on looking back we saw one of our men standing upright on the field. The fact was the poor fellow had got such feet that he never fell down when he was shot."

"Well," said a horse dealer who sat in the corner, "that's rather tall. But let me have a try. A fellow came down to our stables the other day in a hurry to hire a horse for a journey he was going on. 'I'll have that one,' said he, pointing to a horse in the yard. 'Why, there isn't a man in the world can ride that animal,' I said. 'He'll work in a cart or plow, but no one can stay on his back.' 'I'll try him anyway,' said the stranger as he sprang into the saddle. I expected to see him pitched off, but the horse looked around, saw the man's feet and trotted quietly off. He thought he was between a pair of shafts."

An Exciting Situation.

It was the ninth inning, and the visiting team was at bat. The score was a tie, and every spectator in grand stand or bleacher was on edge. To make it more exciting the bases were full, with two men out, and the team's best swatter was up, with three balls and no strikes to his credit.

In this trying moment the pitcher flung one straight at the plate.

"Str-r-r-ike one!"

A yell broke from thousands of throats.

Again the ball darted toward the plate.

"Str-r-r-ike two!"

Another unearthly yell wafted up from the assemblage. Then a deathlike stillness fell over all as the pitcher carefully adjusted himself for the next and last effort.

In the midst of this pervading hush a young lady just back of the catcher loudly appealed to her escort:

"Will, I do hope the Giants win."

"They'll stand a good show if they put this man out."

"Everybody here seems to want to have him put out, don't they, Will?"

"They certainly do."

Just Like a Man.

"Isn't that just like a man?" exclaimed the arctic explorer's wife.

"What's the matter?"

"He's eaten nothing but pemmican for two years, and today he kicked just because I had a warmed over dinner."—Detroit Free Press.

More Urgent.

Miss Bronx—I understand she canceled the engagement when she found he had spent all his money on her.

Miss Harlem—Yes, and the poor fellow's broken pocketbook has made him forget about his broken heart.—Judge.

Just a Way They Have.

"Wealth," quoted the moralizer, "does not bring happiness."

"That may be," rejoined the demoralizer, "but, just the same, none of my millionaire friends seem anxious to get rid of their coin."—Chicago News.

A Phrase Exemplified.

"Been abroad, I hear."

"Yep."

"I understand that living is very cheap in Europe. How about it?"

"Can't say. We only hit the high places."—Washington Herald.

BUILDING THE NEW SOO LINE

Grand Forks—Duluth Line Through Red Lake Falls a Probability

Grand Forks and Duluth Commercial Clubs are On the Job

There has been much railroad "news" of interest to Red Lake Falls people in Grand Forks and Duluth papers during the past few days and it's all about the proposed Soo line that if constructed will pass through this city. The Grand Forks and Duluth commercial clubs are taking active steps to bring about the consrtuction of the connecting line and it is believed by many that the Soo officials have already decided to construct the line, though their plans are yet unannounced. The proposed line is the continuation of the line now building into Plummer westward to Grand Forks. There is little doubt that the line will be built some time, but there are many who believe that it will be done within a year and the Grand Forks and Duluth people are working with that end in view. The advantage of connecting Duluth and Grand Forks by this short cut is apparent.

There is no doubt that the line will be built through Red Lake Falls. In fact it is reported that the Soo is now negotiating for the purchase of the Northern Pacific line from this city to Grand Forks. Whether or not there is any truth in the rumor there is no doubt of the advantage of such a transaction to both roads.

MRS. FRANK A. DAY DEAD.

Wife of Late Governor's Private Secretary Passes Away.

Mrs. Frank A. Day, wife of the secretary to the late Governor Johnson and chairman of the state Democratic committee, died Sunday evening at her home, 1930 Iglehart avenue, Merriam Park. Mrs. Day had been critically ill for several weeks.

Lucia Howland Day was born at Roscoe, Ill., Aug. 20, 1854. With her parents she moved to Charles City, Iowa, at an early age, later going to Grinnell in the same state. She went to college at Grinnell, graduating at the age of 19 years. Later she taught at Fairmont and Sherburn, Minn. She was married to Frank A. Day July 17, 1883. Until five years ago the family resided at Fairmount.

Mrs. Day was a member of the Congregational church, the Daughters of American Revolution, the Eastern Star, and a leading church and charitable worker.

Funeral services were held at the home Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and also at Fairmont on Wednesday. Interment at Fairmont.

THE EXHIBITS GO FREE

No Expense To Get Grains and Grasses to the Omaha Exposition.

To all those who may be interested in the sending of exhibits of corn, grains or grasses to the National Corn Exposition, I am authorized to state that farmers living within the twenty-five mile limit of any Great Northern road will have their exhibits carried free of charge to the Exposition at Omaha, by directing the same to the agent at their nearest point and marking on the address tag, "For the National Corn Exposition." The Great Northern road is accumulating these exhibits in an especially prepared room in St. Paul. All exhibits received there by the 20th of November will be carried free of charge.

Premium lists and information regarding the preparation and shipment of exhibits may be had by writing to the undersigned, or to the Exposition at Omaha.—C. P. Bull, Supt. of Grains Dept., St. Anthony Park, Minn.

Notice to the Public.

You are hereby notified that my son, Pat Morin, is a spendthrift and is selling furniture and other things he has no right to sell, and you are requested and notified not to buy anything from him unless you are sure he has a good title and reason to sell. Dated November 12, 1909.—Mrs. August Morin.

PREPARING FOR BIG SHOW

Corn Contest and Dairy Show in Red Lake Falls Tuesday, November 30, Will Be a Big Event.

Hon. Andrew French, Supt. Wm. Robertson, Prof. F. L. Washburn and Joel Winkjer Will Speak.

Arrangements are being completed for the big corn exhibit and dairy show to be held in Red Lake Falls Tuesday, Nov. 30, and it's going to be a big day that day.

P. L. Malvin, buttermaker at the local creamery and general manager of the show, is getting a bunch of star performers for the occasion. Hon. Andrew French, state dairy commissioner, is to deliver an address. Supt. Wm. Robertson of the Crookston experimental farm will talk about hogs. Joel Winkjer of the dairy division at the Washington, D. C., will talk on some subject that will be of special interest to farmers. A number on the program that ought to interest everybody is an address to be delivered by Prof. F. L. Washburn, state entomologist. Mr. Washburn is the state's best authority on "bugs." The value of his service to the farmers of the state in helping them to wage war on all kinds of insect pests cannot be overestimated. Mr. Washburn will talk about grasshoppers—and that's a timely subject to talk on, for the grasshoppers did some damage here the past season and threatened to do more. No doubt everybody will be glad to know what dose Mr. Washburn will prescribe for the grasshopper.

But the show is not going to be all talk. A big feature will be the corn exhibit and contest. Valuable prizes are to be given for the best exhibits of corn. These exhibits are to be displayed in the opera house where they may be inspected by people attending the show. The corn will be judged by Supt. Wm. Robertson and prizes will be awarded to the winners.

The exhibits should be left with Mr. Malvin not later than Nov. 27 so that he will have time to arrange them in the hall. Each entry should contain ten ears of one variety. There will be three first prizes of $6 and three second prizes of $3 for different varieties of corn. Besides these there will be sweepstake prizes of $6 and $3 for the best entries containing four kinds of grain, three of small grain and one of corn. In preparing the entries for the contest for the sweepstake prizes farmers may follow their own inclinations, but each entry in the corn contest proper must contain ten ears of one variety. At noon the farmers are to be the guests of the people of Red Lake Falls at a banquet. There will be music by the band and orchestra and a jolly good time for everybody. It is appropriate that the good fortune of the people of southern Red Lake county in harvesting a bumper crop be appropriately celebrated and the townspeople desire to join the farmers in the celebration. Everything will be free and it will be a big day.

AFTER THE TRUANTS

State Truant Officer Will be On the Job in Red Lake Falls.

Geo. M. Walz, the state truant officer who has been doing such effective work at Thief River Falls in securing the enforcement of the compulsory education law, dropped in on Red Lake Falls Friday. He believes he can do some good work here. He stated the case to the local school authorities who approved of the purpose of his visit.

He is going to get all of the children of school age into the schools. There is no doubt that he will succeed. He has a very effective method of accomplishing results. It is lamentable of course that it is necessary to enforce education, but that is all that can be done when children do not attend school and parents, who are themselves responsible for the condition, do not insist upon attendance.

The school authorities, both of the public schools and St. Joseph's school, will co-operate with Mr. Walz and give him any assistance he may desire.

The law applies to children under sixteen years of age, but children between the ages of fourteen and sixteen may be excused under certain conditions. If it can be shown that the family needs the support of those children they will be excused from school attendance upon application to the superintendent of schools. Incapacity, mental or physical, is of course always a sufficient excuse, but that condition must be shown.

Red Lake's Contribution.

The following communication received from C. W. Ames, secretary of the John Albert Johnson Memorial Commission, will be a guarantee to the individual contributors that proper disposition has been made of the fund raised in Red Lake Falls.

"Your favor of the 9th is at hand enclosing check for $17.00 as the contribution of Red Lake Falls citizens to the Johnson Memorial Fund. Please accept my thanks for your interest in receiving and forwarding the collections and for the complete and systematic manner in which you have made your report. I have forwarded the check to the treasurer of the commission. [illegible]

WILL BE FINE CONCERT

The Band Boys Will Give Excellent Program Wednesday Evening

The second concert of the season by the Red Lake Falls concert band will be given at the Metropolitan opera house next Wednesday evening, Nov. 24. Director Brunelle has prepared a fine program and everybody should attend the concert. It will cost only twenty-five cents and will be worth much more. The band concerts are always pleasing, but the one to be given next Wednesday evening will be better than usual as will be noted by reading the program. After the program there will be a dance for which the concert orchestra will furnish the music.

Following is the concert program:

Part I

March—Love and Honor, Alberti
Overture—Apollo, Laurendeau
Baritone Solo— Rollinson
Joseph Harren
Waltz—Love Kiss, Pryor
Cornet Duet—Romance, Losey
Masters Philion and Hennumuth
March—Toast Master, Orth

Part II

Quartette, Voice— Selected
Misses Latendresse and Zeh,
Messrs. Garceau and Zaiser,
Miss Cora Paul, Pianist,
Overture—Gems of Stephen Foster, Tobani
Serenade—Cupid's Charms, Miller
Cornet Solo— Rollinson
Clement Brunelle
Selection—Operatic Perls, Laurendeau
March—Motor Cycle, Laurendeau

WAS BIG MEETING

Big Crowd of Pedagogues at Crookston Last week.

There was a big attendance of teachers at the annual meeting of the Northwestern Minnesota Educational association held at Crookston last week. The attendance broke all records and it is said to have been the most successful educational meeting ever held in northern Minnesota.

The following new officers for the association were elected unanimously: President, Supt. A. M. Dunton, McIntosh; Vice President, Prof. H. M. Stanford, Moorehead Normal; Secretary Treasurer, Mrs. Kate Kranz Munch, Crookston.

Patrons Should Get Busy.

I want to call the attention of the patrons of Rural Route No. 1, to the fact that business on this route is dropping off. The department has established this service at an annual cost of $900 and in order to retain it, there must be a required amount of business done. The amount of business is based on the sales, the number of pieces of mail deposited in and collected from the mail boxes.

If it is a convenience and a comfort to have your mail brought to your door, do all you can to help maintain the service by patronizing your own post office—your mail carrier. Stop the carrier at any time and place on the route and buy your stamps, postal cards, envelopes and money orders. He is ready and willing to serve you any time. The service is yours as long as it is self-supporting and it is up to you patrons to retain it. See that your mail boxes are kept in good condition and the roads open leading to them.—A. F. Marshall, P. M.

Have Opened Store.

The Healy Piano company held its opening yesterday and was busy all day showing its new and beautiful line of pianos and music to the number of people who called during the day.

The Healy Piano Co. is a new music house in Missoula, and judging from the interest manifested in its initial opening Missoula and especially Missoula music lovers will give it a much deserved welcome.

The store of the new company is in the [illegible] theatre building and in charge of Messrs. [illegible] Healy. Both of these gentlemen are accomplished musicians. They formerly conducted a music house in Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Mr. H. B. Healy is an artist on the piano and in concert and band music, and Mr. [illegible] Healy has exceptional ability on the piano and has given lessons on the instrument for a number of years.

Missoula should be justly proud to welcome two such accomplished young men into her commercial circle [illegible] Healy Piano company [illegible]

PROCLAMATION

DESIGNATING THANKSGIVING DAY

The people of this state are ever mindful of the source from which comes all their blessings. Cosmopolitan as they are, blending here the blood, the hearts and the consciences of all that is best in old world civilization, they approach the Thanksgiving period with sincere appreciation that "All good cometh from on High."

Of material reasons for spiritual thanksgiving and praise there are abundant causes—our unity as a people, our enjoyment of peace, our increasing opportunities for industrial advancement, our splendid school system that guarantees to every child the right to liberal educational advantages, our peaceful journey in the direction of higher ideals of civilization and society. These are blessings that our people will do well to remember and raise their voices in praise and gratitude therefor. Let us each and everyone, whether in the quiet of our homes or in the places of public worship, give thanks to almighty God for these, our privileges and blessings, and with fervent resolutions and reverent mien, let us testify the faith of our fathers by consecrating ourselves anew on this autumnal day to service in the cause of the Great Giver.

Thankful indeed that fire and flood have not devastated our dominion, that public health and public morals are both on a high plane, that our harvests are not only bountiful but our products command a premium in all the marts of the world, we, of Minnesota, do give thanks for these signs of the heavenly beneficence and devote ourselves to works of highest attainment, not forgetting that through service to others is the road to universal happiness and the accomplishment of the ideal.

Now, therefore, I, Adolph O. Eberhart, governor of the state of Minnesota, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the laws of the state and a custom honored since the admission of the state into the union, do hereby appoint Thursday, the 25th day of November in the year 1909, as a day of general thanksgiving.

Done at the capitol in the city of St. Paul, this 12th day of November, in the year 1909.

ADOLPH O. EBERHART,
Governor.
JULIUS A. SCHMAHL,
Secretary of State.

MONEY IS REFUNDED

Fire Sufferers at Chisholm Did Not Need All of Money Subscribed.

Mayor J. A. Duffy this week received a check for $29.82 from H. M. Peyton of Duluth, treasurer of the Chisholm fire sufferers' relief commission. The check was in payment of a refund of money contributed by Red Lake Falls citizens for the relief of the fire sufferers last fall. Not all of the money subscribed by the people over the state was needed for the assistance of the people of Chisholm and about sixty per cent of the money is returned. It would be almost an impossible task to return the money to the individual contributors and the suggestion made by Mr. Duffy at a meeting of the business men Tuesday night that the money be turned into the fund to pay the expenses of the corn exhibition to be held in Red Lake Falls Tuesday, Nov. 30, was approved.

BRIEF SESSION OF COURT

Cases Argued in Red Lake Falls Yesterday.

Judge Wm. Watts was in Red Lake Falls yesterday for a brief session of court. Arguments were made in the case of G. A. Grusendorf vs. David Delonais, an action to determine title to some land in Louisville township. The case was continued until Nov. 26 when court will be in session again.

Arguments were made in the case of Mary [illegible] vs. Merchants State Bank as garnishee. This case was also continued until Nov. [illegible]

TWIN CITIES WANT BIG CONVENTION

Will Make Big Effort To Get The National Republican Convention.

Convention in the West Will Be An Advantage For The Insurgents.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 12.—It may be a little bit early, but St. Paul and Minneapolis are both getting ready to go after the next Republican national convention. As far as yet appears on the surface the movement is purely local. That is not all there is to it, however. The scope of the movement is much wider. It is a phase of the struggle already well under way between the Republican progressives and the reactionaries,—between the insurgents and the standpatters for the control of the Republican organization and of the national convention itself. Behind the movement are some of the most influenital Republican leaders of the Middle West.

An Interesting Situation.

It is natural that the Twin Cities should be the center around which such a struggle should be fought out. It has come to pass that party ties sit lighter on Republicans in Minnesota than any other state. This state represents to the nation at large the hotbed of insurgency. With a single exception its representatives have refused to vote at the snap of the whip. The decision to hold the national convention here would naturally be regarded as a victory for progressive Republicanism. To defeat the movement would be taken to mean that the reactionaries had got the upper hand. The outcome of insurgent ascendancy would be the nomination of a candidate pledged to immediate and radical tariff revision and the adoption of a platform fully in line with what are known as the Roosevelt policies. A convention held here would be surrounded by a progressive atmosphere which could not fail to influence its deliberations.

Reactionary Victory at Chicago.

The story of the Chicago convention has never been fully told. Everything that has since happened in the Republican party is a natural sequence to it. Conjuring with Roosevelt's name, and with Taft as a stool pigeon, the reactionaries captured it. They were not strong enough to prevent Taft's nomination. They were strong enough to control its organization and to write its platform. They were strong enough when Taft was elected to surround him with their creatures. They filled his cabinet with corporation attorneys who represented the interests. They eliminated the Roosevelt principles from the cabinet deliberations. His friends were driven from office. Work he had undertaken was abandoned; his policies were pigeon-holed. The standpatters organized the House of Representatives. The reactionaries controlled the Senate. In defiance of public sentiment Cannon was elected speaker and a tariff bill was passed which, while adhering to the letter of the Republican platform, broke faith with the people who in electing Taft delegates, imagined they were sending men to the national convention whose action would insure a radical revision downward.

The Frost Taft Met With.

Since that time there has been what amounted to an open rebellion on the part of the rank and file of the Republicans on every state in the Union. In his journey through the country President Taft found himself surrounded by unfriendly audiences whose hostility, while cloaked, was not concealed by the respect everyone feels impelled to pay to the head of the Nation. Taft's laudation of Aldrich in Boston was resented in the East as promptly and as bitterly as was his defence of Tawney and his covert

IMPORTANT DECISION

One Section of Drainage Law Held Unconstitutional.

In an opinion given a few days ago, the state supreme court holds section 26 of chapter 230, general laws of 1895, the drainage act of the state, to be void and unconstitutional.

The section held unconstitutional confers upon county commissioners the right to enlarge a previously constructed ditch without giving the property owners benefited the right to be heard. Assessments so made the court holds are void.

The court holds that any ordinary repairs may be made without consulting the owners of the property benefited, but the improvement cannot extend beyond that. The case was appealed from Renville county.

$1.00 Per Year in Advance

It is about as easy to buy the Christmas presents as the Thanksgiving turkey this year.

C. G. Schulz, state superintendent, is suggested as the Democratic candidate for governor. Mr. Schulz is high-grade material.

A Crookston paper last Saturday made the gentle suggestion "why go to California to spend the winter!" And the next day it snowed.

Along with their position on Connonism and the tariff, candidates for congress next year will be asked to explain their attitude toward ship subsidy and the proposed central monopoly bank.

Governor Eberhart is too optimistic in believing the Republican state convention will adopt a platform on which "every Republican congressman can stand." The platform committee will need the the services of a prestidigitator.

Who would have expected this from the New York Journal of Commerce: "There appears to be a considerable group a senators. with Aldrich at their head, who arrogate to themselves a superior wisdom in matters of legislation and government admistration, which they feel entitled to impose upon the country regardless of the sentiment or the wishes of the people."

J. A. Hartigan, state insurance commissioner, in his annual report calls attention to the inadequate rates of many fraternal insurance orders. He warns the members of such orders that the rates will not protect them, and they must prepare to pay higher rates. He also calls attention to the expenses of these orders and reminds the members that they should give the matter their attention, for the time is near when they will be up against it, so to speak.

The prediction made that within twenty years New York would be the world's first million dollar a day city seems likely to be fulfilled. The tentative budget for municipal expenses during the coming year calls for $184000000, which is at the rate of a trifle more than a half a million a day or $21,000 an hour and $350 a minute. New York has for years held undisputed title to being the world's most expensive city, not only so far as its administrative expenses are concerned, but in many other respects. The increase of more than $28,000,000 over last year, however, indicates an expansion in city "house keeping" expenses undreamed of before. Of the $184,000,000 asked for next year's running expenses the chief item is that of $50,000,000 to pay the annual interest on the city's debt which now amounts to about $600,000.000.

There is said to be a scheme on foot to make the state fair association a political machine, and as the first step to that end it is proposed to elect John J. Furlong president. Mr. Furlong is the friend of Tawney and standpatism, and as dispenser of the vast patronage and favor of the fair would be as great assistance to his political friends and at the same time bring the fair into disrepute. The friends of the state fair should be on guard.

Andrew Jackson builded for all time when he smashed the government bank. In the minds of the American people there is an inborn prejudice to bank monopoly and political control of the people's money. When Senator Aldrich and the Wall Street emissaries of special privilege have overcome every other obstacle to their plans for a central bank, the shade of Andrew Jackson will rise to defeat them. "Old Hickory" and "by the eternal" have not lived in vain.

The Appleton Press remarks that the tariff outrage is an accomplished fact. We should not be so earnest in condemning that evil which has been done that we may fail to warn of that which is treatened. A central bank and steamship subsidies are the two other members proposed to complete the Aldrich-Taft trinity of infamies. However much we are opposed to the tariff monstrosity, we will have to put up with it for a good many years, but there is a bare chance of escaping the central bank and the tax to benefit a steamship trust. Our merchant marine has been ruined by the exorbitant tariff on iron and other ship materials, and now Taft proposes to overcome this not by removing the cause, but by placing an additional tax on the already overburdened consumer. Like the colonists of 1775, we may be addressing our protests and entreaties to deaf ears but they should be made, if only to arouse the people.

SENATOR GORE'S REPLY.

"The enemies of good government everywhere will approve the president's denunciation of our constitution. It must be opposed by all who favor special privileges, gifts and graft to the few at the expense of the many, and by all who believe that the jeweled hand of greed should be licensed to rob the threadbare pockets of the needy."

This is the reply of United States Senator Gore to President Taft's criticism that the constitution of Oklahoma "is a zoological garden of cranks."

Continuing, Senator Gore said:

"The present tour of the president has been a comedy of errors—a tragedy of bludders—ever since the curtain went up and probably will be until the curtain comes down.

"I regret the president so far forgot both his dignity and duty to assail the fundamental law of a sovereign state over whose destiny he has been called temporarily to preside. It seems to me his denunciation was undignified as it was undeserved, and as unnecessary as it was unavailing.

"I was opposed to appropriating $25,000 to the president to carry on this crusade against progress and the progressive republicans and it seems against the constitution of my own state.

"I have reversed my views. The money has been well invested. It will probably lead to the defeat of Mr. Taft by Roosevelt, LaFollette, Cummins, or some other progressive republican, or else by a democrat. As between Roosevelt and Taft, I confess that I prefer the former. If Roosevelt did not sway, he did not serve Aldrich and Cannon."

OKLOHOMA'S CONSTITUTION

In a recent article in the Chicago Socialist, Robert Hunter, the well known New York author and publicist, says:

President Taft, on his recent tour of the west, spoke at the city hall in Phoenix, Ariz.

His words had a curious, imperial sound, such as one world expect Edward to use to the people of Egypt or of India.

He spoke as "the little father" of Russia might speak to the peasants and workmen of his vast dominions.

The president has instructed the Filipinos in republican government.

Speaking as a father to his children, he told them that they might have statehood on one condition, "You have got," he said, "to formulate a Constitution after congress says you shall come in."

He then warned them against preparing a constitution similar to that of Oklahoma which he called a "Zoological garden."

Perhaps our readers have not a very clear idea of the legislative freaks in Oklahoma's "zoological garden." Well here are a few:

The railroads are forced to give 2 cent passenger fares.

The initiative and referendum is established as a part of the legislative system.

The state is expressly given the right to engage in any business or occupation for public purposes.

Trial by jury is granted in contempt cases for violation of injunction or orders of restraint. No one can be punished for contempt of court before trial.

Records, books and files of all corporations shall be subject to full visitation and inquisition.

The railroads are declared public highways.

Campaign contributions from corporations are forbidden.

Watered stock is prohibited.

Constitutional protection is given to workingmen, to women and to children.

That list includes the chief freaks in Oklahoma's "zoological garden." The trouble with Oklahoma is that human beings are given some protection. Labor is granted some rights, and capital, the god of Mr. Taft, is hampered and hobbled a little.

attack upon the insurgents in the West. Dissatisfaction with his administration became so plain that Taft could no longer ignore it. Hence the professed change of policy announced as he approached Washington on his return trip. Public sentiment became so strong that the President was impelled to assume to bow to it. In consequence we have a declaration which is every where taken to mean that the President is at least going to make a show of a return to those policies he was elected to put into effect.

Minnesota The Battleground.

The insurgents and progressive Republicans however, have no confidence that with the cabinet, the house and senate constituted as they are, that Taft, crediting him with every good intention, can make any headway. That is what gives significance to the movement to hold the next Republican national convention in Minnesota. On the part of both progressives and reactionaries it is recognized as a manoeuver for position. The progressives will move heaven and earth to have the convention held in the west. The reactionaries and standpatters will leave no stone unturned to have an Eastern city selected where they can centralize their forces and pack the convention with their partizans.

Prospects of St. Paul Not Bright.

The outlook for the Twin Cities can not be said to be of the brightest. True we have in St. Paul the best convention hall the nation affords. The location is the most central, railroad facilities considered, that could be chosen. With St. Paul's new hotel in readiness, ample entertainment for delegates and visitors could be found in the Twin Cities. The trouble is that the national committee to which appeal must be made is the creature of the reactionaries. It was selected by them. It has up to the present time been dominated by the spirit of standpatism. So far as possible Roosevelt partizans were elimated from it. This is the tribunal to which St. Paul and Minneapolis must appeal. Of course it is amenable to public opinion and its complection is liable to change. But the leopard's spots are not easily eradicated. The struggle will be well worth watching. Its outcome will decide whether Aldrich and Cannon and the things they represent are to continue to dominate the Republican organization, or whether the party is going to turn its back on the leaders recognized as the controlling force both by the President and by Congress.

County Option Talk.

Politicans of both parties are in a good deal of quandary as to the attitude to take toward the county option movement. Republicans especially are in a blue funk. It goes without saying that the so-called leaders don't want to have anything to do with it. If they had their way they wouldn't touch it with a twenty foot pole. Candidates could easily be named who expect to be nominated by the next Republican convention who have defended, on influences to secure friendly delegates which are bitterly opposed to county option and without which they would be shorn of their strength. It would mean for them the construction of an entirely new machine to take the place of the one they hoped to have in a good working order. And if there's anything to the talk of the county option sentiment in the county they might not be able to do it.

Foxy Work.

It may not be worth while noting that the county option people aren't talking candidates. They show no sign of endorsing any of the state capitol Barkises who are getting the slate ready. They're simply talking delegates. It is delegates they will go after—men pledged to county option. When the convention meets any candidate who is short will have to go to them if they come up in anything like the strength they anticipate. They don't even have to have a majority to make it certain they must be reckoned with. Even 200 or 300 delegates who agree to act together can do all kinds of things with the [illegible]

Sounding The Timber.

Then there's that convention the county option people are going to have in January. What's the time of year people in the county have plenty of leisure and long evenings to talk over things. Suppose 3,000 representative men came up to Minneapolis. Suppose they have an enthusiastic gathering. Suppose they get some of the foremost men in public life, politicians, preachers lawyers and what not to come along and boost. What effect is such a gathering going to have? That's it. You can't tell. But this is quite sure, once wake the people up thoroughly to a great moral issue, there'll be things doing every minute. No one knows where it will end up.

Where are the Democrats at?

That the long-headed ones anticipate a possible shaking up of the dry bones is apparent from the waiting attitude of politicans, both Democrats and Republicans. For the Democrats are not disposed not to take advantage of any position they may have assumed. "It is well to bear in mind the fact," says the Albert Lea Standard, edited by a recognized leader of Democracy, "that the right of the people to decide by direct vote as to the adoption of any law is a fundamental principle of the Populists as of Progressive Democrats. The referendum is real and practical Democracy. It drives straight for rule by the people." The writer concludes that strange things may happen than a declaration by the Democratic state convention in favor of an appeal to the people of the county option issue.

Not Playing Politics—Just Sawing Wood.

The governor has appointed a Mr. Preus of Ada, Norman county, to be his executive clerk, vice Harvey Grimmer, resigned. Mr. Preus is a protegee of Senator Nelson, and was assistant secretary in one of his senate committees. He had charge of the speaker's bureau of the last Republican State Committee. He is quite young, and has recently entered upon the practice of law which he studied at Washington during his spare time. The governor is evidently bent on getting on the good side of the federal crowd. At the same time he is courting Tawney's support by boosting his speakership aspirations. The following extract from a recent interview with the governor is of interest in this connection:

"This talk of Congressman Tawney and the speakership is not new to me. I heard it discussed several days ago. Mr. Tawney does not appeal to the extremists, but just the same he is a big man at Washington and has done much for Minnesota."

There is nothing like catching them coming and going. Backed by Nelson on the one hand and Tawney on the other, Eberhart ought to get somewhere.

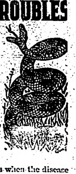
S.S.S. CURES OLD BLOOD TROUBLES



Contagious Blood Poison is at the bottom of a great many old blood troubles. The disease may have been contracted years ago and some treatment used that removed the outward symptoms and shut the virus up in the system to slumber in the blood, but it only awaited a favorable opportunity to break out in some form again.

Certain forms of catarrhal troubles, especially where the bones are affected, scrofulous affections, non-healing sores, ulcerated membranes, etc., are due to this specific poison. Perhaps many who are afflicted in this way are ignorant of the fact that the seeds of this mighty poison are still hidden in the blood. Like the deadly serpent, which is dangerous as long as the faintest spark of life is left to enable it to sink its poisonous fangs, this powerful disease will corrupt and defile while the least particle of its insidious virus remains in the blood.

The best time to get rid of Contagious Blood Poison is when the disease is first contracted, and before its virus so penetrates the blood as to cause ulcerated mouth and throat, copper-colored spots, falling hair, etc. Then of course the victim is saved much humiliation and suffering; but even after the poison has become established in the system it can be removed and a cure effected if the blood be thoroughly purified with S. S. S.

A PERFECT CURE.

"Some eight years ago I was inoculated with poison by a nurse who infected my babe with blood taint. I was covered with sores and ulcers from head to foot. No language can express my feelings of woe during these long years. I was advised by friends who had seen wonderful cures made by it, to try S.S.S. We got some and I improved from the start, and a complete and perfect cure was the result. S.S.S. is the only blood remedy which reaches desperate cases of old blood troubles.

MRS. T. W. LEE.
Isle of Hope, Savannah, Ga.

S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers. It possesses penetrating powers that enable it to go down into the blood, and remove the last trace of blood poison. It cures all blood troubles simply and solely because it removes the cause from the circulation. Not only does S. S. S. cure cure Contagious Blood Poison when first contracted, but reaches it in any of its stages, even where the trouble has been inherited. S. S. S. is made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, and does not contain the slightest trace of mineral in any form. You can get rid of your old blood trouble if you will take S. S. S. and allow it to purify the blood. Book on the blood and any medical advice free.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend

HOWELL PLANER AND MATCHER

We Also Have Second-Hand Machinery
Established 1879

You no doubt find it a hard matter to sell your rough lumber to advantage because most of your customers want it finished. Furthermore you can get twice as much for your lumber by planing it, making it up into flooring, drop siding, window casing and mouldings, for which there is an unlimited demand at big prices. The Howell Planer and Matcher does all this work to perfection.

You can also make big money by working up all your slabs and waste material into Lath and Shingles. All you need for this purpose is our Lath Mill and Shingle Machine. We build the best and most up-to-date machines of this kind on the market which we can furnish you at manufacturers prices. Keep your plant running all the time. Remember we build complete Saw Mill Plants from top to bottom, all of our own manufacture. Our new Catalog B is just now out. If you have not received it, write to-day. Manufactured by

It isn't so difficult to strengthen a weak stomach if one goes at it correctly. And this is true of the Heart and Kidneys. The old fashioned way of dosing the stomach or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is surely wrong! Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. "Go to the weak or ailing nerves of these organs," said he. Each inside organ has its controlling or inside nerve. When these nerves fail them then those organs must surely falter. This vital truth is leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. A few days test will surely tell! Sold by all dealers.

A clergyman writes: Preventics, those little Candy Cold Cure Tablets are working wonders in my parish." Preventics surely will check a cold, or the Grippe, in a very few hours. And Preventics are so safe and harmless. No quinine, nothing harsh nor sickening. Fine for feverish restless. Box of 48 at 25c. Sold by all dealers.

Read the pain formula on a box of Pink Pain Tablets. Then ask your doctor if there is a better one. Pain means congestion—blood pressure somewhere. Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets check head pains, womanly pains, pain anywhere. Try one, and see! 20 for 25c. Sold by all dealers.

Petition for Public Ditch.

To the County Board of the County of Red Lake State of Minnesota:

The undersigned land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for, the expense of the contruction of the Public Ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare and the reclamation of wet and overflowed lands require the establishment and contruction of a Public Ditch along the following described route in the Towns of Star and Hickory in said County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said ditch is as follows: Commencing at Northwest corner of section two (2) in township No. one hundred fifty-three (153) North of Range No. thirty-nine (39) in Red Lake county, Minnesota, thence running south along the section line between sections two (2) and three (3), between sections ten (10) and eleven (11), between sections fourteen (14) and fifteen (15), between sections twenty-two (22) and twenty-three (23), between sections twenty-six (26) and twenty-seven (27) and between sections thirty-four (34) and thirty-five (35) to the south-west corner of the south-west quarter (S.W.¼) of section thirty-five (35) in said township No. one hundred fifty-three (153) north of range No. thirty-nine (39), thence continuing due south from the north-west corner of the north-east quarter (N.E. ¼) of section three (3) township No. one hundred fifty-two (152) North of range No. thirty-nine (39) through said section three (3) in a southeasterly direction to a point on the Red Lake river one hundred rods west of the south-west corner of section two (2), township one hundred fifty-two (152) north of Range No. thirty-nine (39) and terminating at the Red Lake river in said township No. one hundred fifty-two (152) north of range No. thirty-nine (39) as its outlet.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such Drainage Ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by chapter two hundred thirty (230), of the general laws of Minnesota for 1905 and acts amendatory thereof.

His wife looked at him and shook her head reproachfully.

"Well, what's the matter now, George—another windmill?"

He frowned darkly.

"I don't like to hear you speak in that trifling way," he said. "This is something really serious. You know, of course, that they are asking a lot of well known men to climb Mount McKinley. Suppose they ask me?"

"Well?"

"Can't you see what the result would be?"

"That's easy. I can see that you wouldn't climb it."

"But you don't understand. I would have to offer an excuse. It must be a satisfactory excuse. I couldn't say that I was stiff in the joints, or that I never climbed anything higher than a four story flat, or that I interfered when I got nervous, or that I'd be sure to skid if the ground was wet. Can't you see the embarrassing position I'm in?"

"But nobody has asked you to do any climbing."

"Did I intimate that anybody had asked me?"

"Well, if anybody should ask you to crawl up an unclimbable mountain tell them you'd be only too glad to do it but for one thing."

"What's that?"

"Your wife won't let you."

Whereupon, being overcome with rage, he snatched up his hat and stamped heavily from the house.—W. R. Rose in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The seeker for household help had just shown the candidate for domestic honors a flashlight picture of the interior of her kitchen.

"You see," she smilingly said, "that we have every possible convenience and all the fittings are new."

"Mesure of head from ear to ear over top of head, 12 inches; from ear to ear under my chin, 9½ inches; from forehead to back hair, 7 inches. I want a black lase bonnet with streamers and rosetts of red or yellow satting ribbon and would like a bunch of pink Rozes or a blue plume with a black jet buckel. If artifishele air still the stile I want a bunch of grapes or a bird's tale somewhere. I do not want anything too fansy, but if you think a reath of pansies would look good why put one on. I have some good pink ribbon hear at home, so you need not put on strings."—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Question Resented.

"Were you ever arrested before?" asked the magistrate, whose principal business is imposing fines for speeding.

"What do you think I've been doing all these years," asked the chauffeur—"pushing a wheelbarrow?"—Washington Star.

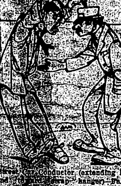
Affinity.

"You would suppose that sailors would have a natural liking for baseball."

"Why sailors especially?"

"Because the tar has a natural affinity for the pitch."—Baltimore American.

Couldn't Pay.



Street Car Conductor (extending his hand toward strap hanger)—Fare, please.

The Latter—Nothing doing. Can't you see I'm strapped?

Conservative Counsel.

"I want a little advice from you about going into politics."

"There's only one piece of advice I can give you," answered Senator Sorghum, "and that is never to give advice."—Washington Star.

Ill Timed.

"You say my remarks were ill timed," said the natural born orator.

"Yes," replied his colleague. "They lasted over an hour when they shouldn't have occupied ten minutes."—San Francisco Examiner.

A BIG SAVING IN FUEL
IF YOU USE A
Cole's Original Hot Blast Heater

The following is a copy of a letter just received from the Cole Manufacturing Co. The original can be seen at our store.

Chicago, Ill., October 6, 1909.

Hunt Hardware Co,
Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Gentlemen:—You are authorized to sell the Original Cole's Hot Blast Heater this year on the most rigid guarantee ever made by any stove manufacturer. Our guarantee to every customer of yours is:

1—A saving of one-third in fuel over any lower draft stove of the same size, with soft coal, slack or lignite.

2—That Cole's Hot Blast will use less hard coal for heating a given space than any base burner made with same size fire pot.

3—That the rooms can be heated from one to two hours each morning with the soft or hard coal put in the stove the evening before.

4—That the stove will hold fire with soft coal from Saturday night until Monday morning.

5—A uniform heat day or night with soft coal, hard coal or lignite.

6—That every stove will remain absolutely air-tight as long as used.

7—That the feed-door is and will remain smoke and dust-proof.

All we ask is that the stove shall be operated according to directions and connected up with a good flue.

COLE MANUFACTURING COMPANY,
E. C. Cole, President.

We have these stoves in all sizes at from $13 to $20

There will be a Thanksgiving ball at the Woodman hall, Terrebonne, next Thursday evening Nov. 25.

The Gazette's general news service failed to be of any services this week—and that's why the paper is so thin.

Leo Spillane, who has been doing linotype composition work in North Dakota print shops, is home again for a few days.

Mrs. J. J. Liberty, who was the guest of her cousin, Mrs. A. A. Letendresse, left Tuesday afternoon for her home at Medford, Wis.

Mrs. M. R. Hall and son Preston have returned from Hallsville, Ill. to which place they had gone to take the remains of the late Mr. Hall.

Mrs. Hertz, who has been here with her sister, Mrs. B. Puschinsky, for several days, left for her home at Seattle, Wash., yesterday.

Mrs. Boleau of Fosston was the guest of friends in town this week. She left today for Thief River Falls where she will visit with relatives.

Highest price paid for hides, furs, wool, scrap iron. Bring to my place on the north side, Red Lake Falls, and get the highest cash price.—J. E. Remick.

There will be no services at St. Mary's church next Sunday, Nov. 20. Rev. Fr. Ambrose has gone to St. Thomas, N. Dak., and will not return until next Tuesday.

Advertising or other matter for the next issue should be left with the Gazette early. The paper is to be published earlier than usual on account of the Thanksgiving holiday.

All those knowing themselves indebted to B. Puschinsky are requested to come in and settle at once. Settlements may be made either at the house or at Merchants State Bank.—Ida Puschinsky, Special Administrator.

Mr. A. W. Zins, who recently moved here from Marshall, Minn., has purchased the Wadekemper residence recently vacated by S. M. Sivertson. Mr. Zins is very favorably impressed with this city and as is shown by his purchase intends to make this his future home.

Helen Sivertson, a student in the eighth grade of the public schools, has won a prize offered by the Minneapolis Journal. A prize-winning essay of her composition was published in the Journal Junior on Oct. 17. The prize, a beautiful picture, is hung in the eighth grade room.

Proceedings to foreclose the chattel mortgage on the Red Lake River Transportation company's boat were instituted last week. The debts against the boat amount to nearly $1,000, and a meeting of the stockholders will be held next Sunday at Kratka to consider the matter.—Plummer Pioneer.

Geo. M. Walz, the state truant officer who is on the job in Red Lake Falls this week, during his recent "crusade" at Thief River Falls secured the attendance of seventy-five children who had not been attending the public schools. Nine people, who persisted in violating the compulsory education law were arrested.

The stage of water in the rivers has fallen considerably since the snow fall and cold weather by reason of the ice and slush impeding the flow at the several rapids up river. The mill was closed down for a time this week for lack of power. The fall of the water has not been sufficient to bother the electric light plant yet but the company are holding their steam plant ready for possible emergency as more or less trouble is usually experienced at this season of the year.

Jens Jensen, the farmer near Wa[illegible] road, whose wife and five children were burned to death as the result of an explosion in his cook stove owing to the use of gasoline instead of kerosene in lighting a fire, was taken to Crookston last Friday and taken to [illegible] hospital where he is receiving treatment for his terrible burns. The attending physicians believe that he may recover though his condition is very critical. It was reported this morning that Mr. Jensen is dead.

A number of farmers in the vicinity of Red Lake Falls have prepared exhibits of corn and small grains for shipments to Omaha to be entered in the [illegible] at the exposition [illegible]. More farmers should [illegible] will be an excellent advertisement for Red Lake County [illegible]

Life of Governor Johnson.

Frank A. Day, private secretary of the late Governor Johnson, has undertaken to write and publish a biography of the lamented Governor. He does this at the request of Mrs. Johnson, and as the most intimate friend, perhaps, that the late Governor had, he is undoubtedly peculiarly qualified for the task. There are thousands of friends of the late Governor who would like to have some permanent record and memorial of his life and works. It would seem as if there should be a great demand for such a biography as Mr. Day proposes to issue. The book will be about four hundred pages and will be well bound and typographically perfect. The book will be profusely and handsomely illustrated, and will be in every respect a publication worthy of a place in every Minnesota home. Governor Johnson's life was an inspiration to every ambitious boy and girl, and a record of that life on the library table will be a valuable contribution to the education of the children. We understand that Mr. Day will distribute the book through the medium of agents to be appointed in every county of the state.

To The Highest Bidder.

I am the owner of the following described land situate in the county of Marshall, Minnesota, viz: The south west quarter(SW¼) of the north east quarter(NE¼), the north west quarter of the south east quarter (NW¼SE¼), and lots one(1) and two(2) of Section one(1) in Township number one hundred fifty four(154), Range forty five(45) west, containing 159.89 acres. 70 acres of this has been cultivated up to last two years. There is a small house, log granary and well. 20 acres timber and 20 acres fenced to pasture. All can be cultivated except the timber land. Rich black loam soil. Well drained by county ditch along north line. 2¼ miles southeast of Viking and 11½ miles northwest of Thief River Falls. There is a mortgage on same for $800, due one year from January 16th next, 6½ per cent interest. To be sold either clear or subject to mortgage. Terms cash. Sealed bids for this land received up to December 10, 1909. Abstract showing merchantable title. Look this up at once and send your sealed bids to me at Stewartville, Olmsted County, Minn.—O. E. Hammer.

Card of Thanks.

I hereby desire to express my heartfelt thanks to the neighbors and friends and also to the members of the different lodges for their sympathy and assistance during my late bereavement; also for the flowers so aboundantly and thoughtfully provided. Words fail to express my appreciation.

Ida Puschinsky

PUBLIC EXAMINER NOT A PARTISAN

Has No Interest in County Seat Scrap in Red Lake County.

So His Report Does Not Please the Thief River Committee.

The Thief River people responsible for the wild and wierd stories of wrongdoing on the part of Red Lake county public officials are now throwing a few fits because the public examiner failed to find anything out of the way in the management of public affairs.

These self-constituted censors even intimate that the public examiner's report is a "whitewash," and that "its tone is one of condonation rather than criticism." The public examiner evidently is not interested in the county seat war, and is content to state actual conditions rather than pose as a partisan of the Thief River side of the constroversy. This is les majeste, and naturally brings down upon his defenseless head the virtuous indignation of the Thief River committee.

The public is aware of the causes leading up to the examination of Red Lake county affairs, but perhaps a repetition will do no harm. In the early days of September there was presented to Governor Johnson a petition signed by twenty-five citizens of Red Lake county charging malfeasance on the part of the county auditor, county treasurer and three of the commissioners. Before the governor had the opportunity of considering the petition the tragedy at Rochester intervened, and it was not until several weeks after Governor Eberhart was installed that the governor's office took action. The petition was referred to the public examiner with a request that a thorough examination be made of all the county offices. This was done a few weeks later, and the examiner reports that county affairs are conducted properly, that there has been no malfeasance, and in effect that the specifications of the petition were, like the report of Mark Twain's death, greatly exaggerated.

The examiner finds, it is true, that a number of illegal bills, aggregating possibly $150, have been allowed and a demand for restitution is made. As it is not always possible for a laymen to distinguish the fine points of law, and, moreover, as these bills were all "o. ked" by the county attorney, it is self-evident that there could be no criminal wrongdoing in the matter.

We are very sorry for the chagrin and disappointment of the Thief River petitioners, but we are glad that the honesty and good name of Red Lake county and its officers is preserved.

WILL GO AFTER PRIZES

A Number of Red Lake County Farmers Ship Exhibits to Omaha.

A number of the farmers residing in the vicinity of Red Lake Falls have shipped corn and small grains to Omaha to be entered in the contests at the exposition to be held Dec. 6 to 18. Valuable prizes are to be offered and if Red Lake county farmers can carry off some of them it will be an excellent advertisement for the county. Besides the regular prizes there will be special prizes for Minnesota products and in addition J. J. Hill offers $2,500 in prizes to contestants residing within twenty-five miles of the Great Northern road.

Prizes will be offerd for threshed grain(one peck to each exhibit) as follows; Spring wheat, fife. blue stem or durum; winter wheat red or white; oats, any variety; barley, any variety; field peas, any variety; corn flint(10 ears), dent(10 ears); timothy seed; common red clover seed; alsike clover seed; alfalfa seed.

Prizes will be offered exhibits in sheaf as follows: Wheat in sheaf, any variety; oats in sheaf any variety; barley in sheaf any variety, timothy in sheaf, common red clover, alsike and alfalfa.

The first, second and third prizes for any class of threshed grain exhibits are $15, $7 and $3. The prizes for each class of sheaf exhibits are $6, $4 and $2.

FELL FROM SCAFFOLDING.

Jos. Gamache Quite Seriously Injured Tuesday.

Jos. Gamache was seriously injured Tuesday while employed at Gentilly. A scaffolding on which he was working broke and he fell to the ground. He struck on his feet, but a heavy piece of timber struck him in the chest and for a time it was feared that he had been very seriously injured. Upon examination it was found that no bones were broken, and though he is now unable to move and suffers considerable pain, it is believed there are no internal injuries and that he will recover.

CHANGE AT WYLIE.

Smidesang, Wylie Merchant, Sells to Cruzen Brothers.

T. P. Smidesang, postmaster and merchant at Wylie, has sold his stock of general merchandise to Cruzen Bros. One of the members of the new firm, C. B. Cruzen, is well known in the territory in which he will do business, he having been manager of the farmers' elevator at Wylie for some time. His brother, J. L. Cruzen, comes from Colorado. There is no doubt that the new firm will do a good business.

BIG DAY NEXT TUESDAY

Corn Exhibit and Dairy Show---Fine Program Prepared---Valuable Prizes Offered for Exhibits of Grain and Corn---Big Banquet at Noon

Arrangements have been completed for the corn exhibit and dairy show to be held in Red Lake Falls next Tuesday, Nov. 30. The program in full is published on another page of this issue.

The program contains some interesting features. One number that ought to be of interest to everybody is the address to be delivered by Prof. F. L. Washburn, state entomologist, whose subject will be "The Grasshopper and the Dairyman." Mr. Washburn as the state's champion "bug exterminator" has gained a great reputation and every farmer who knows of the value of Mr. Washburn's services to the farmers of the state will be anxious to hear Mr. Washburn's address.

The first meeting will be held at 10 o'clock. Mayor J. A. Duffy will deliver an address of welcome and Rev. Fr. Fayolle will respond. Before the noon hour Supt. Wm. Robertson of the Crookston experimental farm will deliver an address on "Hog and Corn Raising." Supt. Robertson has the reputation of being a very entertaining speaker and an excellent authority on the subject he will handle. Everyone should hear his address. To lend diversion to the program there will be some good musical numbers.

At noon the farmers attending the meeting will be the guests of the people of Red Lake Falls at a banquet. The townspeople as well as the farmers are invited to attend the banquet and assist in making it a jolly good time. The modest charge of 25 cents a plate will be made. Of course the farmers will not be allowed to pay for the banquet. They are to be Red Lake Falls guests that day and their money wont be any good.

Joel Winkjer, of the dairy division at Washington and an authority on dairy subjects, will deliver an address at the afternoon session on "Farmer's Duty to the Creamery." Hon. Andrew French, state dairy commissioner, will also be here and will deliver an address. His subject will be "Why Winter Dairying Pays."

At the afternoon session the entries of corn and other grains will be judged by Supt. Wm. Robertson and the prizes awarded. There will be three first prizes of $6 and three second prizes of $3 for different varieties of corn and there will be sweepstake prizes of $6 and $3. The entries of corn should contain ten ears of one variety. The entries in the contest for the sweepstake prizes must contain four kinds of grain, three of small grain and one of corn, arranged in any manner that the exhibitor may desire.

Red Lake county has harvested a bumper crop and all farmers are invited to prepare exhibits for the show. Exhibits should be left with P. L. Malvin not later than Saturday, Nov. 27, that he may have time to arrange them in the Metropolitan opera house where the show will be held.

Every farmer for miles around is invited to come to the corn exhibit and he is urged to bring the whole family with him. This is to be the best farmers' meeting ever held in Red Lake Falls and there is to be something of interest to everybody.

Spelke-Hennings.

At noon on Monday, Nov. 22, occurred the marriage of Miss Minnie Spelke of Wylie, and Mr. Will Hennings. The wedding occurred at the German Lutheran church at Wylie, Rev. Lude officiating. The bride was attended by Miss Natalie Kriehl and F. F. Freund was best man. Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spelke. The young people have gone to housekeeping in the Henning residence on the north side in Red Lake Falls. Mr. Hennings and his bride have many friends who will be glad of the opportunity to offer congratulations and best wishes.

WAR AT E. G. FORKS.

Outgoing City Council Fix Things for New Officials.

At a special meeting of the city council of East Grand Forks it was voted to establish a commission for the control of water, light and building. This will take the power and control over these utilities out of the hands of the council.

Aside from having complete power and control over water, light, and building, the commission will fix rates on lighting and water.

The resolution was passed by the present administration to give it complete control over the principal factors of the city government. At the last election the opposing faction was elected to a man, and the present council took the action to wrest the power from them.

The recent city election at East Grand Forks was hotly contested and the action of the retiring councilmen in appointing men who were behind their administration has stirred up a big fight.

WINS MORE PRIZES.

Gentilly Cheese Scores Highest Again in State Contest.

The Red River Valley as a dairy country has received a whole lot of good advertising during the past few years. This is due not only to the quality and quantity of the good stuff turned out by local creameries and cheese factories, but also because of the fact that local cheesemakers and buttermakers have been going after prizes and have bee getting them. Malvin of Red Lake Falls, Austin of St. Hilaire, Clement of Terrebonne and others have been winning honors for Red Lake county.

Perhaps the cheese factory that has made the greatest reputation in the valley is that located at Gentilly, Polk county. The product of that factory always figures in the scoring and usually takes the first prize. The success of the industry there is due more to the efforts of Rev. Fr. Theillon, who is the manager of the institution, than to any other cause. He has urged upon the farmers there the necessity of right methods in the conduct of the dairy business and as a result the products of the dairy are sold at a premium and the farmers are prospering.

The Gentilly factory has recently won two more prizes daving recently won the six months monthly contest carried on by the dairy and food department of the state of Minnesota, and also won the sweepstakes at the recent convention held at Mankato with a score 97 per cent.

ENTERTAINMENT DEC. 3

Drama and Program by Students of St. Joseph's School.

The students of St. Joseph's school will give an entertainment at the Metropolitan opera house Friday evening, Dec. 3. The principal feature of the program will be a four act drama, "Through Darkness to Light." There will be a song by a chorus, other musical numbers and the orchestra will play. Much effort has been expended in preparing the program for presentation to the public and there is no doubt that the entertainment will be greatly enjoyed. The program in full will be published in the next issue of the Gazette. Reserved seat tickets will be 35 cents, general admission 25 cents.

There will be a matinee for the children Friday afternoon, Dec. 3, at three o'clock. Admission ten cents.

STORES WILL CLOSE.

So Everybody Can Attend the Corn Contest Tuesday.

From 1:30 until 3:30 o'clock next Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 30, the business places in town will be closed so that everybody will have an opportunity to attend the afternoon meeting of the corn exhibit and dairy show.

"INSURGENTS" ARE SEEING THINGS

Not So Rebellious as They Were a Few Months Ago.

Governer Eberhart Expresses Views on Questions of State Gouernment.

[Special Correspondence to Red Lake Falls Gazette.]

St. Paul. Nov. 23.

Insurgent republican congressmen have already begun to crawfish on the tariff. In this Senator Clapp is taking the lead. A few days ago he delivered a specially rambunctious speech at Northfield. For that, it is said, he has been hauled over the coals, and it has been put up squarely to him whether he really intends to break with the administration. Now he is busy explaining that he didn't mean it, and outlining a program for the indefinite postponment of effective action looking towards an honest revision of the tariff in the interest of commerce. Senator Clapp and the other insurgents are not half so anxious as they were to carry out the will of the people. Their object now is to devise some way by which the stalwarts and the insurgents may be got together, party solidarity maintained, and the congressional and state ticket elected.

Tariff Commission the Excuse

It was before the Credit Men's association of Minneapolis that Senator Clapp began to hedge. Presumably they formed a more sympathetic audience than the Northfield grangers. "The moment the tariff bill passed," Senator Clapp told the Minneapolis credit people, "I made up my mind that, obnoxious as it was, it would be useless to take up the schedules again until we were equipped with the proper machinery to deal with it in an intelligent manner; that at the opening of the December session we would renew the fight for a commission to the end that congress and the public might be advised as to the real difference in cost and a revision of the tariff be at least relieved of the pork barrel faction."

How Clapp "Fights."

Senator Clapp is always about to do something. When he was elected the first time he was going to begin a fight for the election of senators by a popular vote. Has anybody heard of Senator Clapp doing anything in this direction since he secured a seat in the United States senate? He did all his "fighting" before election. Not even a ripple on the surface of the senate indicated he had begun his maneuvres at Washington. Now he tells us he is again going to "fight" for a tariff commission. Perhaps he will. Perhaps Aldrich may not sit down on him and induce him again to go way back and sit down, or perhaps he will forget all about it as he forgot about the other reform he was going to bring about. It doesn't much matter, so far as the present congress is concerned; nor so far as the next congress is concerned, to those who are looking for relief from a robber tariff. A tariff commission never yet served any purpose, and it is not now intended to serve any purpose, except to pacify indignant taxpayers and put them off. It furnishes a convenient subterfuge by which to excuse congressional inaction.

Tariff Reform—When?

Stretching the imagination to a sufficient extent to suppose that Aldrich and Cannon, raw and sore from public criticism, will in Janu-

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt entertained a score of friends at the Hotel Beausite in Rome, among them J. E. Parrett and C. S. Wilson, respectively first and second secretary, and Major Landis, the military attache, and Commander Long, the naval attache, of the American embassy.

The Turkish ministry will urge upon the Ottoman parliament soon after it convenes November 15 the adoption of a naval program, providing for the expenditure within the next seven years of $100,000,000. According to this program, it is learned here, seven battleships of the North Dakota type will be constructed together with a number of torpedo boat destroyers and one hospital ship.

The house of commons passed the third reading of the finance bill by a vote of 379 to 149. The scene in the house was a memorable one. Seldom has there been a larger attendance of members and peers and the diplomatic galleries were crowded to capacity.

It is reported that Ardabil, in Azerbajan province, about ninety miles from Tabriz, has been captured by the Shasevan and Karadaghi tribesmen, who have taken the field in behalf of the deposed shah. Both the Persian and Russian governments are hurrying troops to the point, as it is feared the small Russian forces and many Russians just in Ardabil are in danger.

A general election was held throughout the Philippine islands for members of the assembly and provincial and municipal offices. Little interest was shown and it is doubtful if the total vote will equal that of two years ago, when only about one in thirty of the Filipinos registered.

An immense crowd attended a meeting at the Unitarian church in Salt Lake, called to honor the memory of the late Prof. Ferrer, executed at Barcelona. The resolutions adopted "protest against the attempt to suppress education in Spain," and against what were termed "the criminal methods," employed in the arrest, trial, conviction and execution of Ferrer.

Mrs. Augustus E. Stetson, formerly head reader of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in New York, was exonerated of charges of "mental malpractice."

The Indian paymaster at Red Store, Oklahoma, began the semi-annual payment of $250,000 to the Kiowa and Comanche tribes. Each member of a family receives from $50 to $100, according to the amount of land leased.

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, who is in New York after a lecture tour in the West, began to assemble the data of his polar exploration, which he intends to submit to the University of Copenhagen.

Two alleged kidnapers, Antonio Treferio and Givanni Gangi, caught after a two years' chase to the west and back, were held for trial in a police court at New York in $10,000 bail. Rose Gardano, seven years old, who was kidnaped in 1907, identified the prisoners, and her mother, Mrs. Gardano, declared that she had paid Gangi $800 when he threatened to cut the girl up in small pieces and return her by mail if a ransom was not paid. Eight days after the kidnaping the girl was picked up in the street near her home.

SUPREME COURT

CASES INVOLVING MINNESOTA GROSS EARNINGS LAW FINALLY ARE CONSIDERED.

GT. NORTHERN THE FIRST

Validity of Contract of Territory of Minnesota With Predecessor of Great Northern Is Involved.

Washington, D. C. — After waiting the entire week for an opportunity, Minnesota attorneys were able to present the Minnesota gross earnings taxes cases to the United States supreem court. The Great Northern case was called by Chief Justice Fuller about 12 minutes before time for adjournment, and W. R. Begg, attorney for the Great Northern road, spent 10 minutes in briefly outlining the case. The arguments will be taken up again Monday morning.

Attorney General Simpson and Geo. W. Peterson, assistant, will divide the time for the state when Mr. Begg has concluded his argument. The court exhibited a keen interest in the case when it was brought up. Mr. Begg stated the position of the Great Northern to be substantially this: That the company operates the road built under the contract made by the territory of Minnesota in 1857 with the old Minnesota and Pacific.

This provided for a 3 per cent tax, and the company has refused to comply with the 4 per cent tax law passed in Minnesota in 1903. The case now before the court involves only the taxes for 1905, the one per cent in dispute amounting to $120,000.

The state of Minnesota has a total of over $800,000 at stake in the case, however, representing the disputed taxes for 1905 and succeeding years in the Great Northern and Chicago Great Western cases.

Definite Ruling Expected.

The United States supreme court, when it finally passes upon the Minnesota gross-earnings tax cases, will decide definitely, it is believed, whether or not the charters issued for the Territory of Minnesota to the Great Northern and Great Western main lines, contracted away the state's right to levy future taxes. Although these charters have been the obpect of former decisions in the Minnesota courts, the attorneys for the state declare that the real question of contractual rights has never been passed upon.

The territory of Minnesota granted a charter to the Minnesota and Pacific railroad in 1857. The rights given by this charter are supposed to have descended through many foreclosures and assignments to the St. Paul and Pacific and later to the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway Company, from which the Great Northern now leases its main line. The Great Northern claims that the territory bound the future state to a 3 per cent gross-earnings tax on this line, and refuse to pay the 4 per cent tax now in effect. The state of Minnesota claims that the Great Northern has no contract that prohibits the state from exercising its full taxing powers.

The gross-earnings tax cases are brought to the United States supreme court by the railroads from the Minnesota supreme court, where the rights of the state were upheld. In the original action of the district court of Ramsey county, the right of the Great Northern to a 3 per cent tax and the Great Western to a 2 per cent tax were declared valid, and these decisions were reversed by the state supreme court. The Great Western claims to have a charter granted to the Minnesota and Northwestern roads in 1854, and amended in 1856 providing for a 2 per cent tax. This case is submitted to the United States supreme court on briefs and will probably not be argued.

ELECTION CLERKS ARRESTED.

Three Charged With Perjury by Officers of St. Louis County.

Duluth.—Louis M. Hooper, Charles Charles Stark and Frank Schultz, election clerks last November in the Sand Lake precinct, Itasca county, were arrested by order of County Attorney Price on a charge of perjury.

The arrest came about through their testimony in the case of a government scaler named Charles Dahlgren, charged with illegal voting. Dahlgren was said to have voted at Sand Lake under the name of Frank Hues.

The election clerks testified that they did not know Dahlgren, whereas, it is asserted, they testified in the sheriff contest in Itasca county last fall that Dahlgren voted under the name of Hues.

MINNEAPOLIS TAGS 'EM.

Mill City Raises $19,000 by Popular Method.

Minneapolis.—Tag day receipts here were close to $19,000. This, while short of the $20,000 aimed at by the promoters, is considered by them as satisfactory from many viewpoints.

The amount collected this year is far in excess of that of last year's Tag day, when $14,367.33 was raised to carry on the work of the Visiting Nurses.

ARRESTED AS SLAYER OF TWO.

Faribault, Nov. 5.—Sheriff William Geiger has received a message from Elk Point, S. D., stating that the sheriff at that place has captured a man answering the description of Whitie, who is wanted for murdering his partner and Thomas Murray last week in a shack at Cannon lake. The sheriff and a deputy have gone to Elk Point to bring the suspect to this city.

FOUR CENTS ON DOLLAR.

Report of the Lund Executor Shows $21,799 to Meet $500,000.

Minneapolis.—Jesse Van Valkenburg, executor of the estate of the late John G. Lund, filed his report in the probate court, showing that only $21,799.60 is available to meet debts amounting to more than $500,000. This is about 4 cents on the dollar.

Altogether the report contains 375 claims, aggregating nearly $700,000. Of this amount $157,388.62 has been paid out on a basis of 20 cents to the dollar.

Of the remaining assets of the estate the Security National bank of Minneapolis has on deposit $21,796 and the First National bank of Hopkins, Minn., $3.50.

The report contains a statement showing that Lund had owned real estate in Minneapolis valued at $44,057.50 and property in the following counties: Yellow Medicine, Lincoln, Lac Qui Parle, Sherburne, Marshall, Aitkin, Otter Tail, Morrison, Stearns and Houstan and in the states of Wisconsin and North and South Dakota.

DON'T GIVE UP THE FIGHT.

Citizens of Mankato Will Vote Again on Commission Plan.

Mankato.—The charter commission held a meeting and decided to remodel the new charter recently defeated by 28 votes and to submit it again. The changes are not expected to be radical, as the commission voted unanimously to retain the commission feature, which is considered the strong point in the charter. A sub-committee will draft the amendments and report at a meeting to be held later. Last week the commission held an open meeting and listened to suggestions of citizens who were not satisfied with the last new charter. All favored the commission plan with modifications.

The city council Monday night sold $40,000 of waterworks refunding bonds, to mature in twenty years, and to draw 4½ per cent interest. A dozen or more bids were submitted, but the bonds went to Coffin & Crawford, of Chicago, for $41,708.

TO PRISON FOR MANSLAUGHTER.

Cambridge Young Man Given 16 Years in Stillwater.

Cambridge.—Alfred Anderson was sentenced to sixteen years in Stillwater for manslaughter in the first degree by Judge Giddings at an adjourned session of the September term of the district court.

Last January Ethel Grant, Anderson's fiance, died under peculiar circumstances. The authorities showed death to be due to phosphorous poisoning. Last April the grand jury indicted Anderson for manslaughter, the specific charge being that he had procured the poison and administered it to the girl. Since that time he has been under $7,500 bail furnished by his father, a wealthy retired farmer, during which time he has been in Minneapolis. Anderson is 24 years old and, Miss Grant was 17 at the time of her death.

COPPER STOCK BROKER ACCUSED

Duluth Man Charged With Withholding Shares.

Duluth.—W. J. Holman, the local copper stock broker, was arraigned before Judge Dibell in district court on an indictment charging grand larceny in the second degree.

He waived the reading of the indictment and was held for trial, with bonds in the sum of $1,000. He was immediately released on a bond, which was signed by Alfred Merritt, Thomas A. Merritt, Lewis T. Merritt, Nicholas E. Lugoff, Martin Rosendahl and Lee W. Farmer.

Holman is charged with withholding from Mrs. Marie Weissmiller, with the intention of appropriating to his own use, 150 shares of Butte and Superior and 100 shares of Chief Consolidated, valued at $284.75.

CORN CARNIVAL FOR LE ROY.

Superintendent A. D. Wilson to Deliver Address to Farmers.

Le Roy.—Charles C. Palmer, a merchant, has arranged to repeat, on Nov. 15, the corn carnival which proved a success last year, and has offered prizes for the best ten ears of white corn and the best ten ears of yellow corn brought in by farmers and raised within fifteen miles of Le Roy. After the prizes have been awarded the visitors will be given a free lunch, and Superintendent A. D. Wilson, of the Minnesota Farmers' Institute, will deliver an address, he also having been selected to judge the entries. The corn carnival is helping to stimulate interest among the farmers in the county.

Davidson Looks Over Harbor.

Duluth. — James A. Davidson, of Wisconsin, congressman and member of the rivers and harbors committee, made a tour of the Duluth and Superior harbor. The trip was made in the launch Vidette, and Congressman Davidson was accompanied by Lieut. Col. Graham D. Fitch, in charge of the government work in the harbor. A number of Duluth citizens were in a party. The need of further appropriations for the carrying on of work of harbor improvement was Memorial Services for Cotter.

Winona.—On Nov. 19, the anniversary of the birth of the late Bishop Joseph B. Cotter, memorial services will be held in the chapel of the Winona seminary. A bronze tablet erected in the chapel in memory of the bishop will be unveiled. On All Souls' day this week Rev. Father F. T. English, chaplain at the seminary, celebrated mass for the repose of the soul of the late bishop. The Gregorian chant of the requiem was sung by the seminary choir in the afternoon the students drove to St. Mary's cemetery.

SENATOR NAMED

GOVERNOR'S OWN CHOICE

Democrats and Progressive Republicans Hopelessly Divided on Selection—Burke Cuts Knot and Ends Suspense.

Bismarck, N. D., Nov. 10.—At a late hour this afternoon Governor Burke named Judge F. L. Thompson of Cando, as United States senator for North Dakota, to fill the unexpired term of Senator M. N. Johnson, deceased.

The appointment comes at the close of nearly two weeks consideration by the governor, during which he has listened to advice from hundreds of his constituents. At the close of the pperiod there seemed no hope of his party uniting upon a candidate for the office and the governor made his selection upon the ground of personal fitness as judged from many years of intimate acquaintance and personal friendship with the appointee.

Judge Thompson's Biography.

Fountain L. Thompson, the newly appointed United States senator, was born on a farm near Scottsville, Ill., Nov. 18, 1854, and resided at Scottsville until he was 11 years old, when his family removed to Girard, Ill., in 1865 and lived there until 1888. He received his education in the high school at Girard and was admitted to the practice of law, but never practiced, engaging in merchandising instead. He was for two years a member of the Macoupin county board of supervisors.

In 1874 he was married to Fannie Walker, the result of the union being three sons—Harry, aged 30, who is now in business with his father at Cando; Lester, aged 27, who is now in Mexico; and Roy, aged 20, now attending the university at Grand Forks.

In 1888 Senator Thompson moved to Towner county, this state, and farmed until 1891. In 1890 he was elected county judge of Towner county and served in that capacity for eight years. Coincident with his duties as county judge he engaged in the real estate business at Cando, establishing the Thompson Realty company, of which he is president. He is also vice-president of the First National bank of Cando and president of the First National bank of Rock Lake. He has large farming interests in Towner county.

THREATENS SCANDAL.

Chicago Woman Says She Holds the Key to the Situation.

Cincinnati, Nov. 11.—While maintaining that the sum of $643,000 is the maximum of the shortage charged against Chas. L. Warriner, the deposed local treasurer of the Big Four railroad in this city, it is known that the railroad officials are continuing the investigation. The report that at least one high official of the Big Four here had tendered his resignation as a result of the Warriner disclosures went the rounds of railroad circles today.

Mrs. Jeanette Stewart, (Mrs. Ford), gave out an additional statement today promising interesting developments in the Warriner case. Mrs. Stewart declares she holds letters from a Chicago man who has been named as one of the blackmailers of Warriner. "Those letters will tell why they don't arrest me," she said.

PLANS NAVAL STATION.

Taft, Gives His Approval to Pearl Haroor Project.

Washington, Nov. 11.—The president has approved the recommendation of the joint army and navy board for making Pearl harbor in the Hawaiian islands, a great naval station in the Pacific. In doing this it was decided that a temporary naval station only would be constructed at Olongapo and that the proposed improvement in Manila harbor be abandoned. This will save the protection of the Philippine islands to the army.

NEWS NOTES CONDENSED.

Washington, D. —President Taft is home in good health and well pleased with his long trip.

St. Paul.—Jas. J. Hill says that every acre of North Dakota land that will produce $20 per annum will one day be worth $100 per acre.

Wilmington, Del.—By an explosion in the Hegley yard of the Duelort Powder Co., today three men were killed and several injured. Two mills were destroyed.

New York.—Twelve persons were reported injured in a fire today in a shirt waist factory and tenement at Thirty-first Thirty-first street and Seventh avenue.

Paris, Nov. 11.—The state today rested its case against Mme. Steinheil. The consensus of opinion is that she will not be convicted owing to prevaricating testimony.

Nakuru, East Africa.—Word has been received that the Roosevelt party is now on the Guas Ingishu plateau and the illness of Col. Roosevelt is denied.

SCRAP IN FEDERATION.

Big Sum Involved in Electrical Workers' Dispute.

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 11.—Protests and appeals which have been made to the executive council of the American Federation of Labor from the state and central bodies whose charters have been revoked as the result of harboring seceding organizations of the international Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and which have been referred to the appropriate committees for action, promise to intensify the bitter feeling which exists among the warring factions of the electrical workers, before the present convention adjourns.

SHOT BY ROBBER.

Cashier Killed and President of Bank Wounded in Holdup.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 11.—J. Garry Fawcett, cashier of the Merchant's National bank in New Albany, Ind., was shot and killed and Pres. J. W. Woodward, of the same institution, seriously wounded by an unknown man, who entered the bank today and attempted to hold up the officials and their assistants.

The assailant, a young man of about 21, ran quickly to the Ohio river and started for the Kentucky side in a skiff.

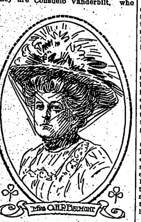
MRS. BELMONT AN AUTHOR

Wealthy Society Woman Gives Mothers Advice on the Proper Raising of Children.

New York.—Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, who has entered the lists as an author, talked with a reporter recently about her book for children, which probably will be published next spring.

The story, that of her own children, gives parents the benefit of her experience and the volume will contain many valuable pointers for them as well as entertainment for the younger generation.

In the talk with the reporter Mrs Belmont has thrown interesting sidelights on the lives of her children. They are Consuelo Vanderbilt, who was married to the duke of Marlborough; W. K. Vanderbilt II., married to Virginia Fair, and Harold S. Vanderbilt. Mrs. Belmont's grandchildren, the two sons of the duchess of Marlborough, John Marquis of Blandford and Lord Ivor Charles Spencer-Churchill, have been made acquainted with many of the incidents in the book by their grandmother, and it was the keen interest they displayed in the narrative which led Mrs. Belmont to believe that others would find the same enjoyment in the story of the young Vanderbilts and the manner of their life on Long Island.



MRS O.H.P. BELMONT

Mrs. Belmont sounds this note of warning: "Don't give over the care of your children to hired attendants. They can never take the place of a mother."

"You see I have my own theory as to the proper bringing up of children," she said, "and I've tried to shadow it forth in this little story of the lives of my own children. I've tried to make that book not just a story for boys and girls to enjoy, but a real help for fathers and mothers who care for their children, but don't know how best to take care of them.

"My children were brought up on such an entirely different plan from those of most of my friends. While they were little I never lunched away from them. I was with them constantly.

"It is the usual fashion to banish children to the third floor in charge of their nurses. My children were always on the second floor with me. They slept in a room opening off mine. The youngest was always in a crib beside my bed.

"Of course I had nurses for them and governesses and tutors; but I was always the one in charge. My daughter was educated entirely at home. I kept two governesses in the house for her. When it came time for her to pass examinations I sent to Oxford and got them. And she passed in Latin, German, French and English without a condition.

"I believe that the solution of the problem of the children of the rich lies in just the constant association of them with the mother and father, particularly the mother. She should oversee every detail of her family's welfare.

"Of course, the parents must be educated. I have seen people whose children certainly wouldn't be benefited by association with their fathers and mothers. But to all the sensible, intelligent people I know, I say, don't give over your children to the care of hired attendants. Many of these are, of course, excellent and trustworthy, but they can never take the place of a mother.

"I've mean my book to prove this and to serve as a guide to perplexed parents who don't realize just what are the best things for their boys and girls. I have planned to devote all the funds obtained from its sale to my hospital that is already being built at Hempstead, L. I., in memory of my husband, and will be known as the Belmont Memorial hospital.

"It will hold about 40 patients and the cost of the building alone is estimated at $40,000. All my book money will swell the fund of this institution."

Uses for Old Parchments.

Good prices are paid for old parchments of all descriptions. Certain dealers have a process for removing the ink and eventually the cleaned stuff comes back to us as the finest French kid gloves. The clippings left when the gloves are made are not wasted. Mixed with vellum and leather, they are boiled down for size. The coarse shavings, with odds and ends of seal and other skins, come in handy for filling cheap tennis balls.—Exchange.

Cost of Modern War.

The Anglo-German crisis is only one phase of the question in which every nation, America included, is vitally concerned. The impoverishment of the world by war—even by war which is never fought—is the most imminent peril now threatening the race.

It costs $10,000,000 to build a warship of the latest type. Each broadside fired by such a vessel in practice or at an enemy costs $10,000 and her guns are capable of discharging six rounds a minute.

The construction of these marine monsters is proceeding at the utmost capacity of the dockyards and gun foundries of the entire world. The peace taxes of the present are already heavier in the aggregate than the burden imposed to carry on any of the great wars of history.—McClure's Magazine.

HYPNOTIST KILLS

LAST EFFORTS TO AROUSE HYPNOTIZED SUBJECT ENDS IN FAILURE.

HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER

Somerville, N. J., Nov. 10.—An interesting question is the sequel today of the autopsy performed last night on the body of Robert Simpson, the hypnotis subject whom Arthur Everton, hypnotist, failed to restore after placing him in a trance.

The autopsy disclosed that Simpson's death was due to a rupture of the aorta. To just what measure of responsibility if any, Everton will finally be held by the law is a question which is puzzling legal experts. The prosecutor of this district is credited with the intention of holding Everton on a technical charge of manslaughter until his case can be passed upon by a grand jury next month.

The autopsy last night was delayed until the professional hypnotist had had an opportunity to make one last effort to restore animation in Simpson's body. There was not the slightest response, and the examination following indicated to the physicians that death had resulted immediately after the collapse of the subject from the rigid state in which the hypnotist had placed him.

FIGHTS FOR MISTRESS.

French Servant Is Loyal to Mistress on Trial.

Paris, Nov. 10.—No servant ever fought more loyally for her mistress than did Marietta Wolf, a cook in the Steinheil household when called in court today as a witness against Mme. Steinheil.

The defendant is on trial for the murder of her husband and stepmother. The judge had led the cook through a labyrinth of contradictory statements and then suddenly challenged the witness with this abstract from her original deposition:

"When Mme. Steinheil learned that her husband was dead she ejaculated, 'at last I am free!'

Without the least hesitation the servant replied:

"No I have been misquoted. What Mme. Steinheil said was, 'at last I am alone!' "

CULEBRA CUT HALF DONE.

Thirty-Nine Million Cubic Yards Have Been Removed.

Washington, Nov. 10.—The cut at Culebra, the backbone of the Isthmus of Panama, was half completed on Oct. 23, according to reports from the canal zone just forwarded to the offices of the Isthmian commission in this city. At that time 39,002,299 cubic yards had been excavated and a like amount of digging remained to be done.

This gigantic cut will be nine miles long and will have a width of 300 feet at the bottom, which will be forty feet above sea level, the normal level of the water being fixed at eighty-five feet above the sea. Its completion is said to be assured within four years.

DIE IN MINE FIRE.

Flames Follow Explosion in Pennsylvania Mine.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 10.—Nine men lost their lives in a fire following an explosion yesterday afternoon in the Auchincloss colliery of the Hardware Lackawanna & Western Co., at Nanticoke, near here. A large force of men worked all night to rescue the living men entombed. Several were taken out badly injured. Today it was believed that all the men have been accounted for. The fire was still burning today but was under control.

FOURTEEN DIE IN CRASH.

Vancouver Interurban Car Crashes Into Passenger Car.

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 10.—A runaway car crashed into a crowded passenger car on the British Columbia Electric Railway Co.'s interurban line today. Fourteen persons were killed, including the motorman and conductor of the freight car. The passengers were mostly workmen bound for New Westminster. Several were injured, two perhaps fatally.

HOT FROM THE WIRE.

Cincinnati, O.—The honorary Japanese commerce commissioners who are touring this country left shortly after midnight for Indianapolis, Ind. They will visit many western cities en route to San Francisco, whence, on Nov. 30, they will sail for Japan.

Jamestown, N. D.—Fifteen head of horses, 100 tons of hay, a number of valuable vehicles, harness, etc., were destroyed by fire at an early hour this morning at Kensal.

Terre Haute, Ind.—Three men, two of them firemen, were seriously injured early today in a fire that destroyed the Coliseum theatre, and June Harlan's livery stable.

SMASH WINDOWS.

English Suffragettes Adopt Carrie Nation's Tactics.

London, Nov. 10. — Alice Paul and Amelia Brown, window smashing suffragettes, were today sentenced each to one month at hard labor. Both are members of Mrs. Emelie Pankhurst's organization. During a banquet at Guild hall, in honor of the king's birthday last night, stones were thrown through a window of the banquet hall, the crash of glass startling the company and interrupting the speech of the lord mayor. The affair proved to be suffragette demonstration and two offenders were arrestetd.

WILL APPEAL LABOR CASE.

Council Recommends Appeal to Supreme Court.

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 9.—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor, in its report to the convention recommended, that an appeal be taken to the United States supreme court from the jail sentence imposed on President Gompers, Vice President Mitchell and Secretary Morrison, for contempt in the Buck Stove and Range Co. boycott case.

The council recommends also that an appeal be taken in the original injunction case.

THE DIVA'S RUBY

SYNOPSIS.

Baraka, a Tartar girl, became enamored of a golden bearded stranger who was prospecting and studying herbs in the vicinity of her home in central Asia, and revealed to him the location of a mine of rubies hoping that the stranger would love her in return for her disclosure. They were followed to the cave by the girl's relatives, who blocked up the entrance, and drew off the water supply, leaving the couple to die. Baraka's cousin Saad, her betrothed, attempted to climb down a cliff overlooking the mine; but the traveler shot him. The stranger was revived from a water gourd Saad carried.

It was a long time since she had heard any sound from the cave; she went to the entrance and listened, but all was quite still. Perhaps the traveler had fallen asleep from exhaustion, too tired even to drag himself out into the air when he could work no longer. She sat down in the entrance and waited.

An hour passed. Perhaps he was dead. At the mere inward suggestion Baraka sprang to her feet, and her heart beat frantically, and stood still an instant, and then beat again as if it would burst, and she could hardly breathe. She steadied herself against the rock, and then went in to know the truth, feeling her way, and instinctively shading her eyes as many people do in the dark.

A breath of cool air made her open them, and to her amazement there was light before her. She thought she must have turned quite round while she was walking, and that she was going back to the entrance, so she turned again. But in a few seconds there was light before her once more, and soon she saw the dry sand, full of her footprints and the traveler's, and then the hollow where the mine was came in sight.

She retraced her steps a second time, saw the light as before, ran forward on the smooth sand and stumbled upon a heap of earth and stones, just as she saw the sky through an irregular opening on the level of her face. Scarcely believing her senses she thrust out her hand towards the hole. It was real, and she was not dreaming; the traveler had got out and was gone, recking little of what might happen to her, since he was free with his treasure.

Baraka crept up the slope of earth as quickly as she could and got out; if she had hoped to find him waiting for her she was disappointed, for he was nowhere to be seen. He had got clear away, with his camel-bag full of rubies. A moment later she was lying on the ground, with her face in the stream, drinking her fill, and forgetful even of the man she loved. In order to deprive them of water the men had dug a channel by which it ran down directly from the spring to the ravine on that side; then they had blocked up the entrance with stones and earth, believing that one man's strength could never suffice to break through, and they had gone away. They had probably buried or burnt Baraka's clothes, for she did not see them anywhere.

She ate some of the dates from the dead man's wallet, and a bit of the dry black bread, and felt revived, since her greatest need had been for water, and that was satisfied. But when she had eaten and drunk, and had washed herself in the stream and twisted up her hair, she sat down upon a rock; and she felt so tired that she would have fallen asleep if the pain in her heart had not kept her awake. She clasped her hands together on her knees and bent over them, rocking herself.

When nearly an hour had passed she looked up and saw that the sun was sinking, for the shadows were turning purple in the deep gorge, and there was a golden light on the peaks above. She listened then, holding her breath; but there was no sound except the tinkling of the tiny stream as it fell over a ledge at some distance below her, following its new way down into the valley.

She rose at last, looked upward, and seemed about to go away when a thought occurred to her, which afterwards led to very singular consequences. Instead of going down the valley or climbing up out of it, she went back to the entrance of the cave, taking the wallet with her, dragged herself in once more over the loose stones and earth, reached the secret hollow where the pool had been, and made straight for the little mine of precious stones. The traveler had broken out many more than he had been able to carry, but she did not try to collect them all. She was not altogether ignorant of the trade carried on by the men of her family for generations, and though she had not the least idea of the real value of the finest of the rubies, she knew very well that it would be wise to take many small ones which she could exchange for clothing and necessaries with the first women she met in the hills, while hiding the rest of the supply she would be able to carry in the wallet.

When she had made her wise selection, she looked once more towards the quicksand, and left the place for ever. Once outside she began to climb the rocks as fast as she could, for very soon it would be night and she would have to lie down and wait many hours for the day, since there was no moon, and the way was very dangerous, even for a Tartar girl who could almost tread on air.

High up on the mountain, over the dry well where Baraka and the stranger had been imprisoned, the vulture perched alone with empty craw and drooping wings. But it was of no use for him to wait; the living, who might have died of hunger and thirst, were gone, and the body of dead Saad lay fathoms deep in the quicksand, in the very maw of the mountain.

CHAPTER II.

There was good copy for the newspapers on both sides of the Atlantic in the news that the famous lyric soprano, Margarita da Cordova, whose real name was Miss Margaret Donne, was engaged to Mons. Konstantin Logotheti, a Greek financier of large fortune established in Paris, and almost as well known to art collectors as to needy governments, would-be promoters, and mothers of marriageable daughters.

The engagement was made known during the height of the London season, not long after they had both been at a week-end party at Craythew, Lord Creedmore's place in Derbyshire, where they had apparently come to a final understanding after knowing each other more than two years. Margaret was engaged to sing at Covent Garden that summer, and the first mention of the match was coupled with the information that she intended to cancel all her engagements and never appear in public again. The result was that the next time she came down the stage to sing the Waltz Song in "Romeo and Juliet" she received a tremendous ovation before she opened her handsome lips, and another when she had finished the air; and she spent one of the happiest evenings she remembered.

Though she was at heart a nice English girl, not much over 24 years of age, the orphan daughter of an Oxford don who had married an American, she had developed, or fallen, to the point at which very popular and successful artists cannot live at all without applause, and are not happy unless they receive a certain amount of adulation. Even the envy they excite in their rivals is delicious, if not almost necessary to them.

Margaret's real nature had not been changed by a success that had been altogether phenomenal and had probably not been approached by any soprano since Mme. Bonanni; but a second nature had grown upon it and threatened to hide it from all but those who knew her very well indeed. The inward Margaret was honest and brave, rather sensitive, and still generous; the outward woman, the prima donna whom most people saw, was self-possessed to a fault, imperious when contradicted, and coolly ruthless when her artistic fame was at stake. The two natures did not agree well together, and made her wretched when they quarreled, but Logotheti, who was going to take her for better, for worse, professed to like them both, and was the only man she had ever known who did. That was one reason why she was going to marry him, after having refused him about a dozen times.

She had loved another man as much as she was capable of loving, and at one time he had loved her, but a misunderstanding and her devotion to her art had temporarily separated them; and later, when she had almost told him that she would have him if he asked her, he had answered her quite frankly that she was no longer the girl he had cared for, and he had suddenly disappeared from her life altogether. So Logotheti, brilliant, very rich, gifted, gay, and rather exotic in appearance and manner, but tenacious as a bloodhound, had won the prize after a struggle that had lasted two years. She had accepted him without much enthusiasm at the last, and without any great show of feeling.

"Let's try it," she had said, and he had been more than satisfied.

After a time, therefore, they told their friends that they were going to "try it."

The only woman with whom the great singer was at all intimate was the Countess Leven, Lord Creedmore's daughter, generally called "Lady Maud," whose husband had been in the diplomacy, and, after vainly trying to divorce her, had been killed in St. Petersburg by a bomb meant for a minister. The explosion had been so terrific that the dead man's identity had only been established by means of his pocket-book, which somehow escaped destruction. So Lady Maud was a childless widow of eight-and-twenty. Her father, when he had no prospect of ever succeeding to the title, had been a successful barrister, and then a hard-working member of parliament, and he had been from boyhood the close friend of Margaret's father. Hence the intimacy that grew up quickly between the two women when they at last met, though they had not known each other as children, because the lawyer had lived in town and his friend in Oxford.

"So you're going to try it, my dear!" said Lady Maud, when she heard the news.

She had a sweet low voice, and when she spoke now it was a little sad; for she had "tried it," and it had failed miserably. But she knew that the trial had not been a fair one; the only man she had ever cared for had been killed in South Africa, and as she had not even the excuse of having been engaged to him, she had married with indifference the first handsome man with a good name and a fair fortune who offered himself. He chanced to be a Russian diplomatist, and he turned out a spendthrift and an unfaithful husband. She was too kind-hearted to be glad that he had been blown to atoms by dynamite, but she was much too natural not to enjoy the liberty restored to her by his destruction; and she had not the least intention of ever "trying it" again.

"You don't sound very enthusiastic," laughed Margaret, who had no misgivings to speak of, and was generally a cheerful person. "If you don't encourage me I may not go on."

"There are two kinds of ruined gamblers," answered Lady Maud; "there are those that still like to watch other people play, and those who cannot bear the sight of a roulette table. I'm one of the second kind, but I'll come to the wedding all the same, and cheer like mad, if you ask me."

"That's nice of you. I really think I mean to marry him, and I wish you would help me with my wedding gown, dear. It would be dreadful if I looked like Juliet, or Elsa, or Lucia! Everybody would laugh, especially as Konstantin is rather of the Romeo type, with his almond-shaped eyes and his little black mustache! I suppose he really is, isn't he?"

"Perhaps—just a little. But he is a very handsome fellow."

Lady Maud's lips quivered, but Margaret did not see.

"Oh, I know!" she cried, laughing and shaking her head. "You once called him 'exotic,' and he is—but I'm awfully fond of him all the same. Isn't that enough to marry on when there's everything else? You really will help me with my gown, won't you? You're such an angel!"

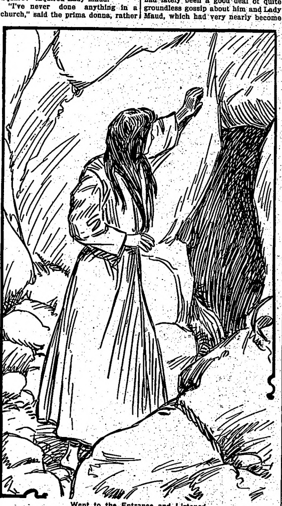
"Oh, yes, I'll do anything you like. Are you going to have a regular knock-down-and-drag-out smash at St. George's? The usual thing?"

Lady Maud did not despise slang, but she made it sound like music.

"No," answered Margaret, rather regretfully. "We cannot possibly be married till the season's quite over, or perhaps in the autumn, and then there will be nobody here. I'm not sure when I shall feel like it! Besides, Konstantin hates that sort of thing."

"Do you mean to say that you would like a show wedding in Hanover Square?" inquired Lady Maud.

"I've never done anything in a church," said the prima donna, rather enigmatically, but as if she would like to.



Went to the Entrance and Listened.

"'Anything in a church,'" repeated her friend, vaguely thoughtful, and with the slightest possible interrogation. "That's a funny way of looking at it!"

Margaret was a little ashamed of what she had said so naturally.

"I think Konstantin would like to have it in a chapel-of-ease in the Old Kent Road!" she said, laughing. "He sometimes talks of being married in tweeds and driving off in a hansom! Then he suggests going to Constantinople and getting it done by the patriarch, who is his uncle. Really, that would be rather smart, wouldn't it?"

"Distinctly," assented Lady Maud. "But if you do that, I'm afraid I cannot help you with the wedding gown. I don't know anything about the dress of a Fanariote bride."

"Konstantin says they dress very well," Margaret said. "But of course it is out of the question to do anything so ridiculous. It will end in the chapel-of-ease, I'm sure. He always has his own way. That's probably why I'm going to marry him, just because he insists on it. I don't see any other very convincing reason."

Lady Maud could not think of anything to say in answer to this; but as she really liked the singer she thought it was a pity.

Paul Griggs, the veteran man of letters, smiled rather sadly when she met him shopping in New Bond street, and told him of Margaret's engagement. He said that most great singers married because the only way to the divorce court led up the steps of the altar. Though he knew the world he was not a cynic, and Lady Maud herself wondered how long it would be before Logotheti and his wife separated.

"But they are not married yet," Griggs added, looking at her with the quietly ready expression of a man who is willing that his indifferent words should be taken to have a special meaning if the person to whom he has spoken chooses, or is able, to understand them as they may be understood, but who is quite safe from being suspected of suggesting anything if there is no answering word or glance.

Lady Maud returned his look, but her handsome face grew rather cold.

"Do you know of any reason why the marriage should not take place?" she inquired after a moment.

"If I don't give any reason, am I ever afterwards to hold my peace?" asked Griggs, with a faint smile on his weather-beaten face. "Are you publishing the bans? or are we thinking of the same thing?"

"I suppose we are. Good-morning."

She nodded gravely and passed on, gathering up her black skirt a little, for there had been a shower. He stood still a moment before the shop window, and looked after her, gravely admiring her figure and her walk, as he might have admired a very valuable thoroughbred. She was wearing mourning for her husband, not because any one would have blamed her if she had not done so, considering how he had treated her, but out of natural self-respect.

Griggs also looked after her as she went away because he felt that she was not quite pleased with him for having suggested that he and she had both been thinking of the same thing.

The thought concerned a third person, and one who rarely allowed himself to be overlooked; no less a man, in fact, than Mr. Rufus Van Torp, the American potentate of the great Nickel Trust, who was Lady Maud's most intimate friend, and who had long desired to make the prima donna his wife. He had bought a place adjoining Lord Creedmore's, and there had lately been a good deal of quite groundless gossip about him and Lady Maud, which had very nearly become a scandal. The truth was that they were the best friends in the world, and nothing more; the millionaire had for some time been interested in an unusual sort of charity which almost filled the lonely woman's life, and he had given considerable sums of money to help it. During the months preceding the beginning of this tale, he had also been the object of one of those dastardly attacks to which very rich and important financiers are more exposed than other men, and he had actually been accused of having done away with his partner's daughter, who had come to her end mysteriously during a panic in a New York theater. But his innocence had been proved in the clearest manner, and he had returned to the United States to look after the interests of the Trust.

When Griggs heard the news of Margaret's engagement to Logotheti, he immediately began to wonder how Mr. Van Torp would receive the intelligence; and if it had not already occurred to Lady Maud that the millionaire might make a final effort to rout his rival and marry the prima donna himself, the old author's observation suggested such a possibility. Van Torp was a man who had fought up to success and fortune with little regard for the obstacles he found in his way; he had worked as a cowboy in his early youth, and was apt to look on his adversaries and rivals in life either as refractory cattle or as dangerous wild beasts; and though he had some of the old-fashioned ranchero's sense of fair play in a fight, he had much of the reckless daring and ruthless savagery that characterize the fast-disappearing western desperado.

Logotheti, on the other hand, was in many respects a true oriental, supremely astute and superlatively calm, but imbued, at heart, with a truly eastern contempt for any law that chanced to oppose his wish.

Both men had practically inexhaustible resources at their command, and both were determined to marry the prima donna. It occurred to Paul Griggs that a real struggle between such a pair of adversaries would be worth watching. There was unlimited money on both sides, and equal courage and determination. The Greek was the more cunning of the two, by great odds, and had now the considerable advantage of having been accepted by the lady; but the American was far more regardless of consequences to himself or to others in the pursuit of what he wanted, and, short of committing a crime, would put at least as broad an interpretation on the law. Logotheti had always lived in a highly civilized society, even in Constantinople, for it is the greatest mistake to imagine that the upper classes of Greeks, in Greece or Turkey, are at all deficient in cultivation. Van Torp, on the contrary, had run away from civilization when a half-educated boy, he had grown to manhood in a community of men who had little respect for anything and feared nothing at all, and he had won success in a field where those who compete for it buy it at any price, from a lie to a life.

Lady Maude was thinking of these things as she disappeared from Griggs' sight, for she was a little afraid that she had made trouble. Ten days had passed since she had last written to Rufus Van Torp, and she had told him, amongst other things, that Mme. de Cordova and Logotheti were engaged to be married, adding that it seemed to her one of the most ill-assorted matches of the season, and that her friend the singer was sure to be miserable herself and to make her husband perfectly wretched, though he was a very good sort in his way and she liked him. There had been no reason why she should not write the news to Mr. Van Torp, even though it was not public property yet, for he was her intimate friend, and she knew him to be as reticent as all doctors ought to be and as some solicitors' clerks are. She had asked him not to tell any one till he heard of the engagement from some one else.

He had not spoken of it, but something else had happened. He had cabled to Lady Maud that he was coming back to England by the next steamer. He often came out and went back suddenly two or three times at short intervals, and then stayed away for many months, but Lady Maud thought there could not be much doubt as to his reason for coming now. She knew well enough that he had tried to persuade the prima donna to marry him during the previous winter, and that if his passion for her had not shown itself much of late, this was due to other causes, chiefly to the persecution of which he had rid himself just before he went to America, but to some extent also to the fact that Margaret had not seemed inclined to accept any one else.

Lady Maud, who knew the man better than he knew himself, inwardly compared him to a volcano, quiescent just now, so far as Margaret was concerned, but ready to break out at any moment with unexpected and destructive energy.

Margaret herself, who had known Logotheti for years, and had seen him in his most dangerous moods as well as in his best moments, would have thought a similar comparison with an elemental force quite as truly descriptive of him, if it had occurred to her. The enterprising Greek had really attempted to carry her off by force on the night of the final rehearsal before her first appearance on the stage, and had only been thwarted because a royal rival had caused him to be locked up, as if by mistake, in order to carry her off himself; in which he also had failed most ridiculously, thanks to the young singer's friend, the celebrated Mme. Bonanni. That was a very amusing story. But on another occasion Margaret had found herself shut up with her oriental adorer in a room from which she could not escape, and he had quite lost his head; and if she had not been the woman she was, she would have fared ill. After that he had behaved more like an ordinary human being, and she had allowed the natural attraction he had for her to draw her gradually to a promise of marriage; and now she talked to Lady Maud about her gown, but she still put off naming a day for the wedding, in spite of Logotheti's growing impatience.

This was the situation when the London season broke up and Mr. Van Torp landed at Southampton from an ocean greyhound that had covered the distance from New York in 5 days 12 hours and 37 minutes, which will doubtless seem very slow traveling if any one takes the trouble to read this tale 20 years hence, though the passengers were pleased because it was not much under the record time for steamers coming east.

Five hours after he landed Van Torp entered Lady Maud's drawing room in the little house in Charles street, Berkeley Square, where she had lived with the departed Leven from the time when he had been attached to the Russian embassy till he had last gone away. She was giving it up now, and it was already half dismantled. It was to see Van Torp that she was in town in the middle of August, instead of with her father at Craythew or with friends in Scotland.

London was as hot as it could be, which means that a New Yorker would have found it chilly and an Italian delightfully cool; but the Londoners were sweltering when Van Torp arrived, and were talking of the oppressive atmosphere and the smell of the pavement, not at all realizing how blessed they were.

The American entered and stood still a moment to have a good look at Lady Maud. He was a middle-sized, rather thick-set man, with rude hands, sandy hair, an over-developed jaw, and sharp blue eyes that sometimes fixed themselves in a disagreeable way when he was speaking—eyes that had looked into the barrel of another man's revolver once or twice without wavering, hands that had caught and saddled and bridled many an unridden colt in the plains, a mouth like a carpet-bag when it opened, like a closed vice when it was shut. He was not a handsome man, Mr. Rufus Van Torp, nor one with whom any one short of a prize-fighter would meddle, nor one to haunt the dreams of sweet 16. It was not for his face that Lady Maud, good and beautiful, liked him better than any one in the world, except her own father, and believed in him and trusted him; and it was assuredly not for his money. The beggar did not live who would dare to ask him for a penny after one look at his face, and there were not many men on either side of the Atlantic who would have looked forward to any sort of contest with him without grave misgivings.

"Well," he said, advancing the last step after that momentary pause, and taking the white hand in both his own, "how have you been? Fair to middling? About that? Well—I'm glad to see you, gladder than a sitting hen at sunrise!"

Ruskin on Railways.

One can imagine perhaps the feelings with which Ruskin, had he been alive, would have heard the news that a new Alpine railway is now in course of construction. His most withering sarcasms were directed against those "travelers through the Alps by tunnels" who "go to balls in Rome, or hells at Monaco." And he was vehemently opposed to all attempts to beautify the railway station. "The railroad," he writes, in "The Seven Lamps of Architecture," "is in all its relations of earnest business, to be got through as soon as possible. It transmutes a man from a traveler into a living parcel. For the time he has parted with the nobler characteristics of his humanity for the sake of a planetary power of locomotion. Do not ask him to admire anything. You might as well ask the wind. Carry him safely, dismiss him soon—he will thank you for nothing else."

One Question Always Asked

Employer of Labor Wants to Know if Formation of Jaw is Natural or Acquired.

"There is one question I always ask a man who wants a job," remarked the business man who has to hire several hundred men for different positions each year.

"The question I always ask them is: 'Do you smoke a pipe much?' Of course the answers are various. Some of them smoke a pipe a great deal and others not at all. Some smoke cigarettes, although I seldom can get a man to admit it. There seems to be a general guilty feeling when a man is a cigarette smoker. Some of them smoke cigars. My business is such that it makes very little difference to their availability to me no matter what they smoke.

"Why do I ask about the pipe? Well, not that I have the least interest in their habits, or that I have any prejudice one way or another in the matnater. The reason is that I want to know whether the formation of their lower jaws is natural or acquired.

"A man with a firm lower jaw is always a man of parts and of will. I say always, anyway, most always. If he does not smoke a pipe his square jaw, back near where it hinges on to the upper one, is natural. If he is a pipe smoker, the looks are decaying, and I have to judge his caliber some other way.

"Pipe smokers always have strong muscles back on the face about the place a man stops when he makes the first stroke downward in shaving. These are the muscles that hold the jaws together. They often give a square-jawed effect to a man who hasn't any square-jaw characteristics. My men think I ask funny questions, but there's a reason."

Designed to Check Burglars.

Burglars are expected to have difficulty beating an alarm invented by a German genius. The appliance is very simple, consisting of a curtain or portieres, wired with fine conductors. At certain places on it are fixed small metal knobs, which are connected with the wire conductors. The curtain is then drawn across the window or door, or around a safe, and the slightest disturbance breaks the circuit, as the knobs are thrown out of contact with each other.

Real "Home Body."

Miss Harriet Nicklin, whose funeral took place at Folehill, England, recently, had never, during the 62 years of her life, passed a night out of the house in which she was born, and slept for 14,000 nights in the same bedroom.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

"IT IS not hard to toil when friends are ready
To smile upon the humble work you do;
For sympathy will make a weak hand steady,
A wavering purpose true.

"But it is hard to toil with none to love you,
With none whose help you wish or care to ask—
No faces bent with kindly looks above you,
To glorify your task.

"Ah, then, when work has lost its robe of beauty,
And none about you care for what you do,
It is most noble then to do the duty
That God has given you."

—Jessie H. Brown.

System in Housekeeping.

We all know that "order is heaven's first law," and it is vitally important that the said law should be carefully kept; but do not let us be like the woman who would wash on Monday "whether or no." A funeral of a relative must needs be arranged in due regard for washday in her family.

We admire the philosophy of the other old lady who had several things to do, but a nap was on the list and she would take that first "to get it off her mind." It is a wise woman who knows when she has worked enough and when it is time to play. A housekeeper and mother of a family needs recreation as much or more than any other worker, and the reason of so many breakdowns is the lack of change and rest which the nerve-worn body should have.

Would there were more people in the world who relax and rest both body and mind as the old gentleman did who said: "Sometimes I set and think, and sometimes I just set."

Barbecued Lamb.

Cut cold roast lamb in thin slices and reheat in a sauce made by melting two tablespoonfuls of butter, adding three-fourths of a tablespoon of vinegar, one-fourth of a cup of currant jelly, one-fourth of a teaspoon of made mustard, and salt and cayenne to taste.

Veal, lamb or mutton is nice served on toast. Season the chopped meat with butter, celery salt, salt and pepper, moisten with stock, dredge with flour and cook until thick. Pour over small slices of buttered toast.

"IT IS easy enough to be prudent
When nothing tempts you to stray,
When without, or within no voice of sin
Is luring your soul away.

But it's only a negative virtue
Until it is tried by fire,
And the life that is worth the honor of earth
Is the one that resists desire."

SEASONABLE DISHES.

Roast Wild Duck.

Dress, clean and truss a wild duck. Place on a rack in a dripping pan, sprinkle with salt and pepper and cover the breast with two very thin slices of salt pork. Bake 20 to 30 minutes in a hot oven, or broil 25 minutes. Serve with orange sauce.

If the ducks are stuffed, let them be seasoned with apples or celery, or onions, and remove the stuffing before serving.

Cleaning Hints.

Use clear water, without soap, to wash windows, and when rubbed with paper they will be perfectly clear.

To clean graniteware when mixtures have burned on. Half fill the pan with cold water, add washing soda and heat gradually to the boiling point, when the dish may be easily washed.

Water bottles or carafes, are hard to keep looking bright, especially if the water used leaves a deposit of lime. One method is to fill the bottle half full with soapsuds, add bits of newspaper, and let stand, shaking occasionally. Another method: Save the peeling from potatoes, add to soapsuds and shake occasionally until clean.

Cranberry Conserve.

Pick over, wash and chop coarsely, five pounds of cranberries. Put two pounds of seeded raisins through a meat grinder. Boil the thin, yellow rind of four oranges, in water until tender, then chop fine. Add all the ingredients, and ten cupfuls of sugar, the pulp and juice of five oranges. Cook slowly until it is reduced to a jam, then seal for winter use. This conserve is excellent with meat.

Cranberries may be made into sherbet, frappe, or served in combination with custard and creams. One need not tire of the sameness of serving the berry as there are many ways of serving it attractively.

Health Hints.

Damp shoes, ankles or skirts will cause colds unless the extremities are rubbed until all aglow. Dry stockings and shoes should replace the damp ones.

The evil of adult life is overeating. In declining years food should be diminished to correspond to the declining energies.

Nellie Maxwell.

Another Collision.

Venus was observed to be rising from the sea.

"How in the world did you lose your arms?" asked the inquisitive mermaid.

"Don't ask me," sobbed Venus, "ask these abominable motor boats. Now I won't be able to button my waist at the back."

A Rough Estimate.

"What horse power is Jilkin's new auto?"

"Don't know exactly, but two mules were hauling it home the other day."

The Doctor's First Question

"How are your bowels?" This is generally the first question the doctor asks. He knows what a sluggish liver means. He knows what a long list of distressing complaints result from constipation. He knows that headaches, bilious attacks, indigestion, impure blood, and general debility are often promptly relieved by a good liver pill. We wish you would talk with your own doctor about this subject. Ask him at the same time if he approves of Ayer's Pills. Do as he says. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

The Taft verdict is—a finer people never owned a finer country.

Says a Georgia philosopher: When you roll down a hilltop, never get up growling, but tell the laughing citizens of the valley that you were only trying to beat thunder rolling."

An old soldier contributor to the National Tribune says: "The old vets that did the real fighting get the least pensions; those who have the hospital record are all right for big pensions." The criticism comes with better grace from a veteran than from an onlooker.

"There is no question but that Senator Cummins has voiced Iowa and western sentiment," says the Cedar Rabids Gazette, referring to the Senator's Chicago address. "From every source one hears encouragement for the insurgent cause and condemnation of many of the provisions of the new tariff bill."

Under the headline of "The Wisdom of Silence," the Success Magazine prints the following story: "The late Judge Slias Bryan, the father of William J. Bryan, once had several hams stolen from his smokehouse. He missed them at once but said nothing about it to anyone. A few days later a neighbor came to him. 'Say, Judge,' he said, 'I hear'd yew had some hams stole t'other night.' 'Yes,' replied the Judge, very confidentially, 'but don't tell any one. You and I are the only ones who know it.' "

IS MINN. REPUBLICAN?

We must not lose sight of the fact that Minntsota is still a republican state by a comfortable majority and unless there are exceptional conditions that party's candidate is sure of an election—St. Peter Free Press.

Bro. Miller ought to tell this to the primer class. Anyone interested in the study of election figures can easily prove the falsity of the claim. In the last six state elections the democrats have won four times, and the combined democratic plurality is 126,510 as against a combined republican plurality in the two Van Sant campaigns of 57,741. In the aggregate of all the elections since 1886 the republicans not only do not have a majority but not even a plurality. In the present state of general upheaval in the republican party it is almost certain that no governer nor congressman can be elected unless he stands on a platform opposed to President Taft and the national organization. Tell your story to the marines!

NECESSARIES; LUXURIES.

One of the claims made for the new tariff bill by Senator Aldrich and other sponsors was that it bore down strongly upon the luxuries, thus making the rich who consume them, pay more for them, while at the same time it greatly reduced the rates on the necessaries, the things the great middle class use, thereby reducing the prices upon them.

The Lincoln, Neb., News(Rep.) was curious to know whether this was true or not. It listed eight articles that are distinctly luxuries, and it also listed eight other articles which are distinctly necessaries. Here they are:

NECESSARIES	Per Cent	LUXURIES	Per Cent
Sugar	78.87	Diamonds	10
Blankets	165.43	Automobiles	44
Yarn	138.12	Champagne	50
Carpets	66.78	Furs	35
Stockings	97.95	Paintings and Statuary	20
Clothing	86.91	Jewelry	60
Dress Goods (wool)	105.95	Jewel Boxes	32
Shirts	60.15	Yachts	45

ANDERSCH BROS., Dept. 66, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

ary permit the appointment of the tariff commission which they refused to allow in July; assuming that President Taft, who regards the Payne-Aldrich law as the best tariff measure congress ever passed, will appoint a tariff commission without bias and earnest only to secure the facts; assuming also that it scoured the world for cost of manufacturing abroad and reported at the earliest possible moment which could scarcely be within two years, what prospect would there be, assuming that it reported in favor of the reduction of every disputed schedule, that such a congress as that which Aldrich and Cannon dominates, would not make the same fight in 1909 for the interests for whose benefit the people are taxed? Commission or no commission tariff reduction in this country can only be secured when a congress is elected which favors tariff reduction.

The Insurgents Know the People.

For the insurgents and near-insurgents to go around now clamoring for a tariff commission is illogical. In doing it they stultify themselves in opposing the Payne-Aldrich bill. They didn't have to wait for the report of a tariff commission to know that the schedules were too high. They clamored for free lumber. Why? They wanted a reduction in the duties on woolen goods. They were indignant that a tariff on sugar permitted the sugar barons to wax fat on tribute levied on the necessities of life. They did not then profess ignorance. They were not then looking for a tariff commission to tell them that the tax on cotton, the tax on woolens, the tax on lumber and the tax on sugar was legalized robbery. Why do the insurgants want a tariff commission now to tell them of things of which in July they were cocksure? The solution is simple enough. To vote against the tariff they had to break with their leaders. They are facing another session of congress, They are afraid of what Aldrich and Cannon will do to them. The tariff commission is simply a device to pull the wool over the eyes of the people and enable insurgent congressmen, without outraging public sentiment, to get in out of the wet. They want again to be welcomed at the White House and have pleasant places on good committees. With party solidarity again assured a place will be set at the table for them where not merely with loves and fishes but with marrow and with fat their souls will be satisfied. If they can fix up the tariff commission job the fatted calf will be killed for them.

Making Cannon Their Scapegoat.

There has been talk recently,—it originated, I believe, in Iowa,—of dropping everything else and making the fight on Cannon. The Lord, it is said, hates a coward; he surely has no use for a sneak. For it should not be forgotten that if Cannon rules, the action of the Minnesota near-insurgents made his rule possible. If they had stood out against him he would have been beaten. If they had not sold out to the standpatters, the rules would have been so modified that he could no longer exercise arbitrary power. The men who elected Cannon speaker and voted to put in his hands the power he has exercised are responsible for Cannon and for what Cannon has done. Among these men are the congressmen who in Minnesota are passing as insurgents. Why can't they be honest with the people? Why blame Cannon for what is as much their fault as Cannon's? Why do they seek to make Cannon a scapegoat to carry off their sins?

The State Capitol Crowd.

The state capitol people are an important factor in the bringing together of the wings of the republican congressional delegation which appear to diverge. Secretary of State Schmahl has never made any attempt to hide his entire approval of the tariff and of the action of the men who forced it through congress. The governor is not quite so outspoken, although in an unguarded moment he referred to the insurgents as "extremists." But he has taken occasion to back Mr. Tawney with executive influence. More recently he has been casting oil on the troubled waters and suggesting a tariff plank in the republican platform on which every Minnesota congressman can squarely stand. His advice comes at about the same time as Senator Clapp's change of front. It is simultaneous with the President's return to Washington, with Senator Aldrich's visit to the Twin Cities and with Steven's arrival in the city. It isn't difficult for anyone who doesn't keep both his eyes shut to see the preparations that are being made for a love feast or to note the signs of the complete abandonment by the so-called insurgents of any attempt to secure for years any modification of the taxes which Aldrich and Cannon have fastened on the people's shoulders.

The Governor Writes a Platform.

The governor also appears to have changed his mind about playing politics. At first he wasn't going to have any political program. He thought a candidate for governor ought to wait the action of the convention before airing his views. But he has changed his mind Here are some of the things he wants to see done:

Abolishment of the state oil and boiler inspection department.

Necessitate medical inspection before marriage license is granted.

More money for the advancement of agricultural education.

Install a course of agriculture in eash high school and rural school in the state.

Develop interest to keep farmers in the country.

Decided development of the state's water power.

Conservation of all natural resources.

Urge church people to identify themselves more with legislation and matters of state.

Promote lobbying among business men for the proper laws.

Lessen drudgery connected with farm labors.

The Governor's Figures.

There were some curious things about the speech in which the governor outlined these "reforms." For instance, he spoke about the state paying every year $60,000 for oil inspection and nearly that amount for boiler inspection. The money wasted on these, he said he would put at the disposal of the state board of health, and he deplored the fact that while the state spends $85,000 a year for protecting game and fish, only $35,000 a year is expended in protecting the public health.

Also His Facts.

Inquiry has revealed the fact with which the governor does not appear to have been familiar that both the boiler inspector and the oil inspector's department are fee offices. So far from oil inspection being s source of expense to the state it brings in revenue. Fees are collected amounting to $50,000 annually. Expenses are $40,000. The surplus $10,000 is paid into the state treasury. The governor says $85,000 are expended for protecting fish and game. The figures given for this service for 1908 in the state auditor's report are $63,367. Of the governor's figures with respect to the money spent in conserving the public health, State Auditor Iverson says:

"I do not want be taken as criticising the governor, but my books show that the state health department spent a little over $44,000 last year. It has to its credit $53,000 for 1910 and the same amount for 1911.

"Then there is the state inspection of live stock, which was formerly a part of the health department. It cost in 1908 nearly $110,000. In 1908 the expenditure was a little over $54,000."

Millions for Public Health.

So far as the public health is concerned the governor's statement is particularly misleading. Many millions are spent annually with a view to preventing the spread of disease. Water supply, sewerage, the steps taken in the cities to preserve the public health, vaccination, quarantine, etc., all come under this head. Other millions are spent for medicines and doctor's bills. Possibly more might be advantageously spent by the state. It's up to the governor to show how.

S.S.S. CURES MALARIA

Malaria is a species of blood poverty known as anaemia. It is a condition in which the circulation is so weak and impure that it is unable to supply the system with sufficient nourishment and strength to preserve ordinary health.

The medical profession is divided in opinion as to the manner in which malarial poison gets into the blood. Some take the position that it is an atmospheric poison, the specific germs of which are breathed into the lungs and thus transmitted to the circulation. Others advance the opinion that persons become inoculated with the poison through the bites of mosquitos. All however agree that MALARIA is a blood affection, and any treatment to successfully overcome it must not only purify this vital fluid, but at the same time add the necessary qualities of richness and strength to the circulation.

The malarial poison destroys large numbers of the rich, red corpuscles of the circulation, and the peculiar paleness of anaemic persons is due to this fact. In the first stages of Malaria there is a bilious condition of the system, constant bodily weakness, poor appetite, and a "no account," tired feeling.

A PHYSICAL WRECK.

During 1900 I was running a farm on the Mississippi River, and became so impregnated with malaria that for a year afterwards I was a physical wreck. I took a number of medicines recommended as blood purifiers, chill cures and malaria eradicators, but nothing did me any good until I began to use S.S.S., which I did about a year ago. The result was that after taking several bottles of the large size I was as well and strong as I ever was, and have never had a chill since. I expect to take S.S.S. every year as a preventive, and would advise everybody else to follow my example.

S. R. COWLEY,
Amory, Miss.

S. S. S. searches out and destroys every particle of malarial infection and builds the blood up to a healthy, nourishing condition. Then the system receives its required nutriment, the bright red corpuscles begin to multiply in the circulation, sallow complexions grow ruddy and flushed with health, the liver and digestion are righted, the appetite improved, and the system vitalized and refreshed in every way. S.S.S. is a safe and pleasant remedy as well as an efficient one. If you have Malaria we will be glad to have you write us describing the case. We will send free our book on the blood and at the same time our physicians will give you some medical advice that will be of great service to you in curing yourself with S. S. S. No charge for the book or advice.

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more stability, more controlling, more power, more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing Hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is alone directed to these weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds; it strengthens; it offers real, genuine heart help.

If you would have strong Hearts, strong digestion, strengthen these nerves—re-establish them as needed, with

It isn't so difficult to strengthen a weak stomach if one goes at it correctly. And this is true of the Heart and Kidneys. The old fashioned way of dosing the stomach or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is surely wrong! Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. "Go to the weak or ailing nerves of these organs," said he. Each inside organ has its controlling or "inside nerve." When these nerve fail them then those organs must surely falter. This vital truth is leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. A few days test will surely tell! Sold by all dealers.

Petition for Public Ditch.

To the County Board of the County of Red Lake State of Minnesota:

The undersigned land owners, whose lands will be liable to be affected by, or assessed for, the expense of the contruction of the Public Ditch hereinafter described, would respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare and the reclamation of wet and overflowed lands require the establishment and contruction of a Public Ditch along the following described route in the Towns of Star and Hickory in said County of Red Lake and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said ditch is as follows: Commencing at Northwest corner of section two (2) in township No. one hundred fifty-three (153) North of Range No. thirty-nine (39) in Red Lake county, Minnesota, thence running south along the section line between sections two (2) and three (3), between sections ten (10) and eleven (11), between sections fourteen (14) and fifteen (15), between sections twenty-two (22) and twenty-three (23), between sections twenty-six (26) and twenty-seven (27) and between sections thirty-four (34) and thirty-five (35) to the south-west corner of the south-west quarter (S.W.¼) of section thirty-five (35) in said township No. one hundred fifty-three (153) north of range No. thirty-nine (39), thence continuing due south from the north-west corner of the north-east quarter (N.E. ¼) of section three (3) township No. one hundred fifty-two (152) North of range No. thirty-nine (39) through said section three (3) in a southeasterly direction to a point on the Red Lake river one hundred rods west of the south-west corner of section two (2), township one hundred fifty-two (152) north of Range No. thirty-nine (39) and terminating at the Red Lake river in said township No. one hundred fifty-two (152) north of range No. thirty-nine (39) as its outlet.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such Drainage Ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by chapter two hundred thirty (230), of the general laws of Minnesota for 1905 and acts amendatory thereof.

TEST CASE DECIDED.

Liquor Cannot Be Sold Anywhere in Indian Territory.

Last week at Fergus Falls the case in the U. S. Court against Fred Anderson, the Calloway saloon keeper, was decided and Anderson was found guilty of selling liquor in the "Indian Country."

This was a test case. The villages where the raids took place—Calloway, Mahnomen and Waubun—are inside the boundary of the Indian reservation, but on land the title to which has passed entirely from the government. The liquor which Anderson sold was consigned to Detroit and delivered there, and Judge Amidon, in his charge to the jury, instructed that body that Detroit and other territory outside the reservation were Indian territory quite as much as the land that actually lies inside the reservation boundaries.

The court stated that a verdict of guilty should be returned in case it was found that Anderson had had liquor shipped to Detroit, as this was introducing liquor into "Indian territory" within the meaning of the treaty of 1855, under the terms of which the whole northern part of the state is included in this definition.

The jury promptly returned a verdict of guilty, but sentence was deferred until Nov. 22. As soon as sentence is pronounced, the case will be appealed to the United States supreme court direct, the right of direct appeal being granted in all cases where treaties are involved. It is thought the case can be advanced, the United States being a party to the suit, and that a decision can be secured in about a year.

Presumed To Be Dead.

A mystery surrounds the fate of Sigvart Kittlesby, a former resident and farmer of Flom township. Years ago while operating his farm there, which he owned, he went insane and was committed to the asylum at Fergus Falls. But he managed to escape from that institution over seven years ago and nothing has been seen or heard of him since as far as anyone here knows. As he had no relatives in this country little was said about the affair, although neighbors looked after his farm. But now relatives in Norway, acting through the Norwegian consul at St. Paul, have asked that the estate be probated as the law presumes a person dead who has disappeared for seven years, and Tuesday Judge Matson granted the petition and appointed Alfred Knudson, the Norwegian consul, as administrator.—Ada Index.

Tells of Methods.

H. J. Beardsmore who got first prize for oats in a contest recently conducted in Polk county, had the following to say regarding the methods employed in cultivating the crops:

"The land on which these oats were raised was seeded to timothy and clover in the spring of 1907, but very little clover came up. I believe the seed was not good. In June, 1908, the land was plowed two and one-half inches deep.

"In the latter part of July and the fore part of August it was again plowed to a depth of five inches.

"In April, 1909, the land was smooth-harrowed and drilled, using eleven pecks of seed to the acre; then smooth-harrowed again; and harvested Aug. 16th and 17th, and yielded seventy and one-half bushels per acre on twenty-eight acres and totalling 47½ lbs. to the bushel by the brass kettle."

More Work for Uncle Sam.

The Beltrami county board of commissioners turned down the request of Special Officer Larson of the Indian department, that the saloon licenses of Chris Rogers of Shotley, and Carl Saterlee, be revoked because they have been selling liquor to the Indians. This precipitates a sort of a clash between the federal and the state officers and some interesting developments are expected.

The commissioners contended that Larson's charges against the two men were not substantiated. Larson has reported the refusal to the department.

A Domestic Tragedy.

"You seem a little stiff this morning," said the next door neighbor as they walked to the car line.

"Yes," replied the other man. "I had to bring in the confounded house plants before breakfast, and there's a rubber tree among 'em that weighs a ton. My wife told me to bring 'em in last night, and I wish I had."

"Forget 'em?"

"No, didn't forget 'em. I left 'em out in hopes the frost would nip 'em, but there's no such luck!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Not Changed at All.

A westerner who claimed a lifelong acquaintance with James J. Hill had just returned from St. Paul and was describing his meeting there with the railroad magnate.

"He hasn't changed a particle," said the traveler, "and he's got the same spots on his vest that he had when he was a boy."—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Paradox.

"It's a downright nuisance; that's what it is," growled the pessimistic man.

"What's a downright nuisance?" queried his better half—or perhaps two-thirds.

"That upright piano in the adjoining flat," answered the p. m.—Houston Post.

ANOTHER IMPORTANT VICTORY FOR THE CARTER MEDICINE COMPANY IN THE UNITED STATES COURT.

The United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York—sitting in New York City—has just awarded to the Carter Medicine Company a decree which again sustains the company's exclusive right to use the red package for liver pills.

By the terms of the decree, it is, among other things:

Adjudged that the Carter Medicine Company is the owner of the sole and exclusive right to the use of red colored wrappers and labels upon said small, round packages of liver pills of the style described in the bill of complaint; said right having been acquired by the prior adoption of said style and color of package for liver pills by the complainant predecessors more than thirty years ago, and established by the continuous and exclusive use of the same in constantly increasing quantities by said predecessors and by the complainant, the Carter Medicine Company, itself, from the time of their said adoption until the present day.

The decision just announced is perhaps the most important and far-reaching of all, by reason of the character of the tribunal which rendered it. No Court in the country stands higher.—National Druggist, St. Louis, Mo.

Lost in Antiquity.

A little fellow who had just felt the hard side of the slipper turned to his mother for consolation.

"Mother," he asked, "did grandpa thrash father when he was a little boy?"

"Yes," answered his mother, impressively.

"And did his father thrash him when he was little?"

"Yes."

"And did his father thrash him?"

"Yes."

A pause.

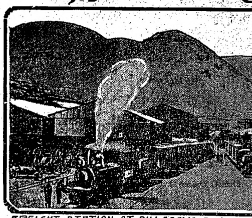
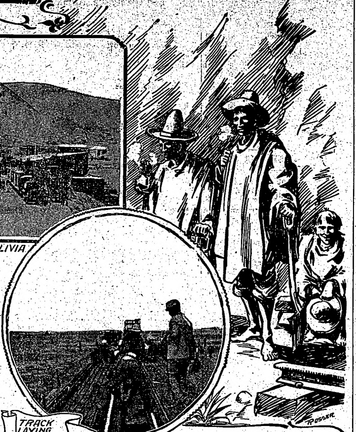
RAILWAYS IN BOLIVIA

BY DANIEL P. WILES



FREIGHT STATION AT PULACAYO, BOLIVIA



TRACK LAYING NEAR ORURU

UNLOADING RAILS AT GUAQUI, BOLIVIA

LAKE TITICACA AT GUAQUI

As a result of having lost its Pacific seaboard province of Antofagasta, following the war with Chile in 1879, Bolivia found itself shut off from the sea and dependent upon its neighbors for an outlet to the great world.

Great as was the blow to national pride, for the Bolivians felt the loss of Antofagasta more keenly than even the French that of the Rhine provinces, and serious as was the loss to the national treasury of the revenues derived from the rich nitrate fields of the lost province, yet the blow was perhaps less heavy than the Bolivians themselves then thought.

It changed entirely the country's economic outview and pushed it forward into lines of development which in all probability would otherwise have been delayed for many years. Even prior to 1879 the nitrate fields were for the most part owned by foreigners, the Bolivians themselves being engaged in gold and silver mining. But the taxes from nitrate production paid in a large measure the expenses of government and with the loss of this revenue the state was forced into consideration of the economic development of the country in other lines than gold and silver production alone.

The settled part of Bolivia was then and is to a large extent yet, that high table-land, one of the most spacious and elevated plateaux to be found on the globe, which lies between the western and the eastern Andes. This table-land extends from about the Argentine border in the south into Peru on the northwest, and is from 60 to 150 miles in width.

On the Chilean border the western Cordillera is in reality less a mountain range than a line of huge cliffs. The table-land is itself 12,000 to 13,000 feet above sea level and slopes gradually 2,000 or 3,000 feet up to the crest of the western hills and then falls away abruptly nearly three miles down, 15,000 feet, to the desert land lying between the foot of this immense line of cliffs and the Pacific ocean. To the east of the table-land lies the high Andes, the Cordillera Real, rising in Illampu, Illimani, Ancochuma and Sajama over 21,000 feet. North, east and south from the Cordillera Real the land falls away to the great Amazon and Parana plains. This country, three-fourths of Bolivia in area, is but little settled, but is in natural resources and soil one of the richest parts of the world.

It could easily sustain an agricultural population greater than the whole present population of South America.

The first and most pressing need to Bolivia is railways. This need was recognized to a certain extent prior to the war with Chile. As far back as June, 1863, the national assembly authorized the president to enter into contracts for the building of railways, and in 1868 a concession was granted to a citizen of the United States to build a railway from Cobiji to Potosi with a government guaranty of seven per cent. on the capital invested. In addition, the concession carried a grant of land one league on each side of the line. A number of other concessions were made in 1869, 1873, 1874, 1877, 1878 and 1879.

In 1904 the Bolivian national office of immigration and statistics issued a volume of nearly 400 pages containing the acts, decrees and concessions in aid of railways, covering the years 1880 to 1904. Every effort was made by the government during this period to induce capital to invest in railway construction in the country. Perhaps nowhere else in the world were such inducements held out by any country to secure the end sought as by Bolivia, following the termination of the war with Chile. These inducements were offers of land, mines, exemption from taxation and customs duties, government guaranties, financial aid and exclusive privileges. But unfortunately for Bolivia the offers were not made in the right quarter. In its eagerness to secure results, concessions were granted to and contracts made with the most irresponsible parties, in many cases mere adventurers without capital or influence. The net result was naturally to retard rather than to help railroad construction.

In 1904 all that Bolivia had to show in railways as a result of 40 years' legislation and innumerable contracts were the Guaqui and the Antofagasta roads. The former gave an outlet from La Paz to Lake Titicaca, whence passengers and freight were transported across the lake by boat to the Peruvian port of Puno and thence by the Peruvian railway to Mollendo on the Pacific. The total length of the road from Alto of La Paz to Guaqui on Lake Titicaca was 87 kilometers (54 miles). The gauge was one meter (39.37 inches) and the rails weighed 18 kilograms per meter—about 12 pounds per foot.

The Antofagasta, Bolivia's first railway, had a total mileage of 925 kilometers (573 miles), a gauge of 75 centimeters (29.53 inches) and rails weighing 17.40 kilograms per meter, or about 11 pounds per foot.

It was not until 25 years after the outbreak of the war with Chile and 20 years after the signing of the agreement of April 4, 1884, which marked the close of that war, although it did not conclusively settle all the questions arising therefrom, that on October 20, 1904, at Santiago, plenipotentiaries of the two countries signed the treaty of peace and friendship which put a final end to all disputes between Bolivia and Chile and secured in addition concessions to the former.

In the preceding year, 1903, was signed the treaty of Rio de Janeiro with Brazil. Under this treaty an exchange of territories between the two countries was effected. Bolivia acquired on the southeast the strip of territory lying between its boundary and the Paraguay river, and Brazil acquired Bolivia's claim to the Acre region on the northeast. The latter territory being considered the more valuable, Brazil stipulated to pay a cash indemnity of £2,000,000 sterling.

These two treaties were of immense consequence to Bolivia: first, in relieving her from the old railway and mining entanglements; second, in securing the construction of the Arica-La Paz railway; third, through the loan of Chilean credit in internal railway construction; and, fourth, in providing a cash fund of £2,300,000 with which to guarantee or to begin the actual construction of the trunk lines.

Following the ratification of the treaties negotiations were opened with prominent European and American capitalists and on May 19, 1906, a contract was signed with the National City bank and Speyer & Co., of New York. The contract was signed in La Paz by a representative of the concessionaires and additional stipulations were made on May 22.

Under article III of the contract the concessionaires oblige themselves within a period of 10 years to construct the following railway systems:

(a) From Oruro to Viacha, with a branch to the river Desaguadero, connecting with the Arica line.

(b) From Oruro to Cochabamba.

(c) From Oruro to Potosi.

(d) From Potosi to Tupizi, by Caisa and Catagaita.

(e) From Uyuni to Potosi.

(f) From La Paz to Puerto Pando.

All of these roads are to be one-meter gauge except the last two mentioned, which, in the discretion of the concessionaires, may be of 75 centimeters gauge.

The cost of the railways is estimated at £5,500,000 sterling, including £1,200,000 allowed for the La Paz-Puerto Pando line.

The concessionaires are authorized to issue two classes of bonds—first mortgage and second mortgage, or income bonds. The first mortgage bonds, which are a first lien, are authorized to the amount of £3,700,000 sterling, bear five per cent. interest and are payable in 20 years. The interest for 20 years is guaranteed by the government of Bolivia.

A further issue of additional first mortgage bonds to the amount of £2,000,000 sterling is authorized in case the sum of £5,500,000 proves insufficient to build the lines. These bonds will bear six per cent. interest and the interest will not be guaranteed by the government. The second-mortgage or income bonds run for 25 years, bear five per cent. interest and are a second lien on the roads.

Under an agreement made in London in 1907 by the Antofagasta and Bolivia Railway Company, which is a British corporation, and Speyer & Co., the Antofagasta Railway Company agreed to guarantee the interest on the line from Oruro to Viacha and in addition to make a payment to the concessionaires for a majority of the line's stock. This agreement made necessary the law, mentioned above, signed by President Montes on December 1, 1908. The purpose of this agreement is to make the new lines serve as feeders to the Antofagasta line instead of playing the part of competing lines, as would have been the case had the original program of construction been carried out.

The Oruro to Potosi line of the original plan would partly parallel the Antofagasta line. It is very probable that a complete merger of the interests of the Antofagasta and Bolivia Railway Company and the American concessionaires will be made.

A STOUT THING

Miss Burden was not devoid of good sense, but she had brooded over her neighbor's treatment of her until it seemed both intolerable and lawless. It involved a question of shares in the privileges of a certain spring of water and of rights in a certain path, and disagreement over these had led to other differences, small and large, until the main issue seemed hopelessly confused.

Finally Miss Burden resolved to consult a lawyer, to ascertain if there might not be comforting relief for her feelings in a lawsuit. When a woman's exasperation reaches the point where she is ready to resort to the law, she is to be dreaded, and Miss Burden went to Lawyer Fairman's office with a long and spirited story of her wrongs.

Unfortunately for her plan, these wrongs were rather of word than of deed, and rather of fancy than of record. What the neighbor wanted to do and talked about doing, and even what he meant to do at some future time, did not greatly impress Mr. Fairman. He gently suggested to the angry client that her mood was unjustified by what had actually happened and concluded his advice with some words which she never forgot.

"Don't go to law, my dear lady, until you have some facts to take with you. Law by itself is a poor friend; but a fact's a stout thing—a fact's a stout thing!"

The country lawyer's wisdom is sound philosophy for every day in the year. Fancy gives birth to a long train of children, good and bad, and they all have legs and arms of characteristic slenderness and a grasp on life too gentle to be controlling. Set them in line of battle and Master Fact will scatter them all like dry leaves—for in deed and in truth a fact is a stout thing!—Youth's Companion.

Rebuilding the Campanile at Venice

The construction of the new Campanile at Venice is proceeding apace, and 1911 should see its completion. It has been fortunate in being relieved of all pecuniary embarrassment—a fate which our tottering cathedrals have not avoided—and the originally estimated £72,000 and later calculation of £80,000 have already been supplied, together with a comfortable surplus for emergencies. The new Campanile will resemble the old in appearance, though iron clamps and girders will in reality make it entirely safe. The only proposed alteration is the removal of a pillar which stood in the center of the tower, in favor of a passenger lift. For the most part, too old associations are being preserved, the stone being quarried in Istria, the cement coming from Montferrat, & the sand from Brenta—places all famous in Venetian history. Magnificent work is being done, an excellent example of reconstructive skill being the piecing together of the Madonna of Sansovino, which was found smashed into nearly 2,000 fragments. So, owing to the generosity of the art patrons of Europe in general and the pope in particular, the Campanile will soon reassert its domination.

Just as Bad.

Courtesy over the telephone is a virtue, and it's just as offensive to the girl at the switchboard to be called a Dutch mutt as it would be to be told that her hat isn't on straight.—Hartford Times.

Poor Opinion of Countrymen.

One of the great intellects of England has stated that not above 50,000 people in all Britain can read and understand the ordinary London newspaper.

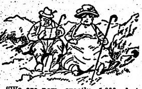
A LITTLE COLD.

He caught a little cold—
That was all.
So the neighbors sadly said,
As they gathered round his bed,
When they heard that he was dead.

He caught a little cold—
That was all. (Puck.)

Neglect of a cough or cold often leads to serious trouble. To break up a cold in twenty-four hours and cure any cough that is curable mix two ounces of Glycerine, a half-ounce of Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure and eight ounces of pure Whisky. Take a teaspoonful every four hours. You can buy these at any good drug store and easily mix them in a large bottle.

A MATTER OF GEOGRAPHY.



"We are now exactly 1,000 feet above the level of the sea."

"What sea?"

"The guide-book doesn't say."

Ruled by Kindness.

Lucy Burd's success with boys at the reform school in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, she thinks, is due simply to kindness. She has reformed more than 100 boys in her term of five years as superintendent. Some of her boys are in the navy some on farms. Few have gone back to their old ways after coming under her influence.

A Motor Hint.

Miss Lillian Russell, who looks younger than her daughter, was talking about age at a dinner in New York. Miss Russell, who is always witty, ended with this mot:

"It is a sure sign of age in a woman when she begins to get out of her motor car backwards."

Not Sisters

Now and again you see two women passing down the street who look like sisters. You are astonished to learn that they are mother and daughter, and you realize that a woman at forty or forty-five ought to be at her finest and fairest. Why isn't it so?

The general health of woman is so intimately associated with the local health of the essentially feminine organs that there can be no red cheeks and round form where there is female weakness.

Women who have suffered from this trouble have found prompt relief and cure in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives vigor and vitality to the organs of womanhood. It clears the complexion, brightens the eyes and reddens the cheeks.

No alcohol, or habit-forming drugs is contained in "Favorite Prescription." Any sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. Every letter is held as sacredly confidential, and answered in a plain envelope. Address: World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R.V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N.Y.

TRUTHFUL ADVERTISING THE BASIS OF SUCCESS.

Since the Ingredients Entering Peruna Are Known, Its Power as a Catarrh Remedy and Tonic is Understood.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.—The active ingredients entering the most popular household remedy in the world have been made known to the public. This means a new era in the advertising of popular family medicines—Peruna leads.

Peruna contains among other things, golden seal, powerful in its effect upon the mucous membranes. Cedron seed, a rare medicine and unsurpassed tonic. Cubebs, valuable in nasal catarrh and affections of the kidneys and bladder. Stone root, valuable for the nerves, mucous membranes as well as in dropsy and indigestion.

THE REASON.

His Friend—I suppose it's cause he couldn't reach no higher.

Mistake Somewhere.

A story comes from a Kentucky town that is worth repeating. There lives there a woman who says that she has immediate communion with the Almighty, and now and then delivers to those of common clay a message that she has received from on high. The fact that these messages sometimes take on a very materialistic hue does not alter their effectiveness, in her opinion.

One day she went into the office of a well known attorney and approached him solemnly as one about to reveal an awe-inspiring secret.

"The Lord sent me to you for $25," she announced.

The attorney looked up and smiled.

"That must be a mistake," he replied, blandly, "because the Lord knows I have not got it."

Celestial communication was thereupon broken off.

Relics of the Stone Age.

During excavations conducted near Willendorf, on the Danube, by the prehistoric section of the Austrian Natural History museum, a chalk figurine, 11 centimeters high, has been discovered in a stratum containing instruments and weapons characteristic of the stone age. The figurine shows traces of having been painted and represents a female figure with remarkable precision of artistic execution.

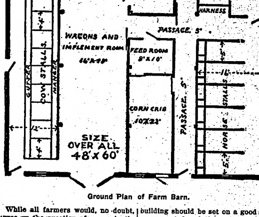
LABOR-SAVING BARN FOR A SMALL FARM

Conveniently Arranged So that Feeding and Caring for Stock Is Reduced to Minimum—
By J. E. Bridgman.



Ground Plan of Farm Barn.

While all farmers would, no doubt, agree on the question of conveniently arranged and substantially constructed farm buildings, also that the housing of the different kinds of stock in separate buildings is advisable, many of us, for some reason, are so situated that it is not possible to build separate buildings, writes J. E. Bridgman in American Agriculturist. The question of labor causes us to so arrange our farm buildings that the feeding and caring for stock is reduced to the minimum. This can best be accomplished where all, or at least the greater part, of the stock is housed under one roof, and in a building that will have storage room for a large quantity of feed.

The barn plan herewith illustrated is a good example of that type of barn. The barn is a balloon frame, 48x60 feet square, 12 feet to the eaves, and 36 feet to peak of roof. The building should be set on a good stone or cement foundation, and if the expense can be borne a cement floor over the entire barn will soon pay for itself, as it affords no harbors or hiding places for rats and mice. However, a fairly good floor may be made with clay.

As will be seen by the floor plan, the barn has accommodation for ten cows and six horses. It also has two box stalls. These may be used for various purposes, such as calf or hog pens, cows with young calves, or ailing animals. There is a large corn crib, oats bin, feed room, and a large open drive that may be used for wagons, or for storing implements. A five by five foot hay chute is built over the passage located between the feed room and box stall. This chute extends within 18 or 20 inches of the roof, and acts as a ventilator for the entire barn.

BROOMCORN IS PAYING CROP

Product Can Be Worked Up to Good Advantage by Farmer and Family at Home—
By Thomas M. Cisel.

Broomcorn can be grown on almost any soil, but does the best on a level, black soil. The planting and cultivation is the same as of Indian corn, only the plants must be much thicker in the row, as close planting makes the brush long and fine, which is much desired for making brooms. Plant some next spring.

A farmer who has 20 acres of broomcorn should have 15 men when the corn is ready for cutting, which should be done the sixth day after the brush commences to push from the root.

In cutting, the corn is first made into tables or benches by overlapping two rows.

After the tables are made the cutters pass down the open row and remove the brush from the stalk at the first joint below the boot, placing it in small bunches on the table.

After that it is placed on wagons and taken to the seeder, where the seed is removed by passing the bursh through spiked rollers.

It is then placed on racks in a curing shed. These racks are made by slatting the sides of an open shed with wooden strips one by two inches and laying cross-sticks from one wall to the other. The brush is placed about three inches deep on the cross-sticks where it gets the benefit of plenty of air.

After two weeks it is removed from the racks and made into bales.

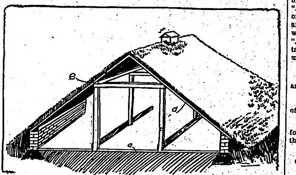
Cultivating Garden Crops.

Garden crops and all crops are cultivated for two reasons—for improving the physical and chemical condition of the soil and for killing weeds. It is usually held that the killing of weeds is the more essential of these, but the former reason is just as important as the latter. Both objects may be accomplished in the same cultivation.

Pure Breeds.

It is not essential for profit that a farmer own a herd of pure bred Holsteins or Jerseys, although we believe that the nearer pure breeding is approached the more satisfactory the results from a profit producing standpoint, if the breeding is accompanied by the proper feeding and care.

STORAGE HOUSE FOR CELERY



Storage House for Celery.

When celery is to be kept for a few months, a good form of storage house can be built with low walls and even span roof. Planks may be used for the roof, the whole being covered to a depth of four inches or more with earth and sodded over. The dimensions of the house illustrated are—width, 24 feet; height of side walls, two feet; height in center to ridge, 11 feet. There is a bed of sand (a) on the earth floor, division boards (b) and posts (c) supporting roof. A ventilator (f) is indispensable.

IDEAL CORN FOR PLANTING

Farmer Should Be Able to Really Know Good Ear When He Sees It—Description of Best Kind.

When a farmer selects corn for planting he should be able to really know a good ear of corn when he sees it. The following description should enable the careful observer to make good selections:

Authorities have decided that the best form for an ideal ear should be as near a cylinder as possible. It should be about 10 inches long and about seven inches in circumference, or at least this ratio should be as near parallel as possible and the grains should grow well over the tip and butt. The grains should be wedge shape and their length should be at least twice their width. The cob should be small, from 84 to 90 per cent. of an ear of corn should be grain. In yellow corn the cob should be red and in white corn it should be white. If one desires his corn to have high protein contents the germ or heart should be large. If meal is to be made the white or starchy end should be large. The grains should be firm on the cob and the ear should be firm, solid and heavy. The grains of the "dent" varieties will be more or less wrinkled on the outer tip, otherwise the surface of the ear should be smooth and glossy. A dead color usually indicates low vitality.

To Trim Fruit Trees.

With apples and most fruit trees and shrubs trimming may as well be done in winter as at any other time. There are two decided advantages in winter trimming. One is that there is more time for the work at that season, and the other is that foliage and fruit do not interfere with the work. Since the cuts are made some weeks before new growth and healing begin it is well to paint the scars to keep out water, dust and germs that might cause decay.

NEW STRENGTH FOR WOMEN'S BACKS.

How to Make a Bad Back Better.

Women who suffer with backache, bearing down pains, dizzy spells and that constant feeling of dullness and tiredness, will find hope in the advice of Mrs. Mary Hinson, of 21 Strother St., Mt. Sterling, Ky. "Had I not used Doan's Kidney Pills, I believe I would not be living today," says Mrs. Hinson. "My eyesight was poor, I suffered with nervous, splitting headaches, spots would dance before my eyes and at times I would be so dizzy I would have to grasp something for support. My back was so weak and painful I could hardly bend over to button my shoes and could not get around without suffering severely. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me from the first, and I continued until practically well again."

Remember the name—Doan's. Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

PROOF POSITIVE.

"I believe I once had the pleasure of meeting your wife."

"If you consider it a pleasure, it was not she."

As to the Hessian Fly.

The Hessian fly is a German product which was conceived in iniquity and born in sauerkraut. It is a long, rangy fly with a bite like a steel trap, and it lays a pale blue, oblong egg at the rate of 30,000 an hour. The Hessian fly will eat anything from decayed custard pie to a glass inkwell, but its favorite dish is the double neck of a fat gent. This bird can perform a two-step on sticky fly paper without crooking its toes, and is proof against rough on rats, the daisy fly killer, and a strychnine hypodermic. No Hessian fly was ever known to die of anything but old age, which accounts for the color of its whiskers. If it ever fastens upon your jowl, it will stay until removed by the undertaker.—Manchester (Ia.) Press.

The Remarkable Trimming.

"Jimmy," said the pretty actress to her actor husband, "won't you run down to the milliner's and get me the hat I ordered?"

"Sure I won't make a mistake?" queried Jimmy, somewhat dubiously, with a caution born of an utter ignorance of millinery.

"Oh, you won't," laughed the spouse. 'My hat is the white beaver trimmed with orchids. You can remember that."

Gamely he went to his doom. Entering the millinery shop, he asked, valiantly: Is my wife's hat ready? I mean the white biffer, trimmed with oh-you-kids?"

And the French girls in the shop made funny Parisian giggles at him.

She Could Not.

"With one wave of my wand," says the fairy, "I can make you grow young again."

"Excuse me," replied the woman, "if I decline your kind offer. If you can bring youth to me at my present age, all right; but I positively refuse to travel back through pyrography, the first stages of bridge, the habit back, the straight front, balloon sleeves, and all the rest of the fads I can remember."

The Last Resort.

"They're going to increase the tax on beer!" "Then we won't drink any." "And they're going to increase the tax on spirits." "Then we won't drink any." "And they're going to tax wine." "Then we won't drink any." "And they're going to tax inheritances!" "Then let's drink up our money!"

SOME HARD KNOCKS.
Woman Gets Rid of "Coffee Heart."

The injurious action of Coffee on the heart of many persons is well known by physicians to be caused by caffeine. This is the drug found by chemists in coffee and tea.

A woman suffered a long time with severe heart trouble and finally her doctor told her she must give up coffee, as that was the principal cause of the trouble. She writes:

"My heart was so weak it could not do its work properly. My husband would sometimes have to carry me from the table, and it would seem that I would never breathe again.

"The doctor told me that coffee was causing the weakness of my heart. He said I must stop it, but it seemed I could not give it up until I was down in bed with nervous prostration.

"For eleven weeks I lay there and suffered. Finally Husband brought home some Postum and I quit coffee and started new and right. Slowly I got well. Now I do not have any headaches, nor those spells with weak heart. We know it is Postum that helped me. The Dr. said the other day, 'I never thought you would be what you are.' I used to weigh 92 pounds and now I weigh 158.

"Postum has done much for me and I would not go back to coffee again for any money, for I believe it would kill me if I kept at it. Postum must be well boiled according to directions on pkg., then it has a rich flavour and with cream is fine."

One ounce compound syrup of Sarsaparilla, and one ounce Toris compound. Add these to a half pint of first-class whiskey, and use a tablespoonful before each meal and at bed time. The bottle must be well shaken each time. This simple remedy is one of the most effective known. The restorative action will be felt after the first few doses.

KNEW THE WAYS OF WOMEN

Mean Trick of Ballantine That Probably Made Much Trouble for His Friend Blank.

Capt. J. F. Chase of Veteran City, Fla., was in Washington last month to register his forty-seventh airship patent. Capt. Chase is best known as the inventor of the hoop-skirt.

Discussing the hoop-skirt's remarkable success, Capt. Chase said to a reporter:

"The success was due to the skirt's strangeness. Women like strange things. By catering to women, by studying their taste a man can twist them around his finger."

The veteran officer smiled.

"Ballantine," he said, "came in late to a song recital in Palm Beach, and there wasn't a vacant seat in the house.

"Ballantine noticed Mrs. Jerome Blank. Mrs. Jerome Blank, he knew, had a very handsome husband that she kept strict watch over—she didn't like him to associate with any of the fair sex.

"Ballantine, edging near to Mrs. Blank, who had an excellent seat, said in a loud voice to a friend:

"'Who was that uncommonly pretty girl I saw Jerome Blank talking to on the pier?'

"In about four seconds Mrs. Blank was gone, and Ballantine was seated comfortably in her chair.

ECZEMA COVERED HIM.

Itching Torture Was Beyond Words—Slept Only from Sheer Exhaustion—Relieved in 24 Hours and Cured by Cuticura in a Month.

"I am seventy-seven years old, and some years ago I was taken with eczema from head to foot. I was sick for six months and what I suffered tongue could not tell. I could not sleep day or night because of that dreadful itching; when I did sleep it was from sheer exhaustion. I was one mass of irritation; it was even in my scalp. The doctor's medicine seemed to make me worse and I was almost out of my mind. I got a set of the Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent. I used them persistently for twenty-four hours. That night I slept like an infant, the first solid night's sleep I had had for six months. In a month I was cured. W. Harrison Smith, Mt. Kisco, N. Y., Feb. 3, 1908."

Grace.

A paper out in northwestern Kansas tells of a pious old farmer who has the habit of gazing at the rafters in his dining-room when saying grace. One day while so engaged he forgot himself, and his grace sounded something like this: "We thank thee for this food and—by Joe! there's that darned gimlet I've been looking for for the last six months. I'll have Jim go up there and get it. Thou hast been gracious to us, O Lord, and again we thank thee. Amen!"—Kansas City Star.

In the Same Boat.

A magazine contributor, being hard pressed by his creditors, recently wrote to his editor: "Please send check at once, as my gas bill is due." The candid editor replied in this brief fashion: "So is mine. God help us all."

When you hear a woman say she would like to be a man, it's a pretty good sign she is full of bottled cuss words.

The Price of Courtesy.

"Politeness costs nothing," said the man who quotes proverbs.

"You are wrong again," answered Mr. Sirius Barker. "You have evidently not figured how much it costs to persuade a New York waiter to look pleasant and say 'thank you.'"—Washington Star.

THE BIG CORN EXHIBIT
TUESDAY, NOV. 30, 1909

You can't afford to miss it and we hope to see you all here. This is going to be an instructive meeting and a general good time so don't forget the date. While you are here, if you need anything in the Hardware line, come in and look us over. If we can't give you as much for your money as any store in any town in the Northwest, we don't want your business.

RANGES We are justly proud of our line of Ranges. We have four makes of malleable ranges—the Malleable, the Monarch, the Majestic and the Faultless. We of course have the cheaper ones and can show them to you at from $29.00 to $65.00.

HEATERS Our Heating Stove line has averything from the cheap Air Tights to the best Base Burners. You should see the "Round Oaks" and "Coles" for hard coal. They cost about half as much as a fancy base burner and do the work equally as well.

WASHING MACHINES We have a new one called the "Noiseless." It works so easy you hardly know you are working and it doesn't make a bit of noise.

Your Money's Worth or Your Money Back.

We Hope You All Enjoyed Your Thanksgiving Feast,
---and speaking about feasts---
it strikes us that it ought ta be a feast to shop at our store, for anyone in need of a fine
CLOAK, FUR OR READY MADE GARMENT OF ANY KIND.

PALMER CLOAKS AND GORDON COATS have no superiors in workmanship, fit and style and are really no higher than the trashy stuff that is often palmed off on the unsuspecting public as first class stuff. Everything in these garments is positively guaranteed to give satisfaction. We are good for it; the houses we represent are still better. Palmer Cloaks at from $10 up. Gordon Coats at from $20 up. Cheaper goods also from $6.39 up for fur collared garments.

KUPPENHEIMER AND CLOTHCRAFT SUITS AND OVERCOATS—As good a line of these as there is in the Northwest. $10 buys an all-wool worsted or cassimere suit, but if you want the very best as to material and workmanship, we have it, too.

Don't Forget the Specials We Are Advertising For The Corn Show. Here They Are:

Ladies' 52 inch Black Kersey, fur collar cloak $6.39
Ladies' 48 in. black and fancy cloaks worth $10 .... $5.00
75c Boys' and Men's Sweaters, mixed, all colors .... .49c
Men's and Boys' Caps, broken lots, 50c and $1 grades, choice .... .25c

Misses' Cloaks, broken lots, as good as they ever were but sizes are broken, go at half price. Ladies' winter vests, light fleece, 15c. Children's heavy fleeced stockings, 15c. LARGE NUMBER OF FARMERS IN TOWN

Corn Contest and Dairy Show Was Very Successful Affair.

Finest Meeting of the Kind Ever Aeld in Red Lake Falls.

The corn exhibit and dairy show held at Red Lake Falls Tuesday was the biggest affair of the kind ever held in this city, farmers from all over southern Red Lake county and many from adjoining counties being present. It was an excellent program that had been prepared for the occasion, and everybody was happy and expressed themselves as well repaid for coming to the show. Two hundred and fifty farmers and farmers' wives were the guests of the people of Red Lake Falls at the banquet served at noon.

The farmers came early, and remained for the whole show, being induced to do so no doubt by the program of star features provided by Manager Malvin.

At the morning meeting at 10 o'clock there was a fine attendance. Attorney F. L. Farley presided at the meetings. Mayor J. A. Duffy welcomed the guests to the city, and Rev. Fr. Fayolle responded to the address of welcome.

Supt. Wm. Robertson of the Crookston experimental farm, who never disappoints an audience of farmers, delivered a fine address on "Corn and Hog Raising."

Supt. Robertson's address concluded the morning program, and for the next two hours the big crowd enjoyed the excellent dinner provided by the ladies of St. Mary's church and served at the Woodman hall. Freund's Concert Orchestra played while the banquet was being served, and also furnished the musical numbers for the program at the opera house.

For the afternon session the opera house was filled, not only the first floor but the balcony as well, and it was a crowd of people that came to get something out of the meeting for they stayed until every number on the program had been given. The program was given just as it had been announced that it would be. Joel Winkjer, of the dairy division at Washington and an authority on dairy subjects, gave an address on "The Farmers Duty to the Creamery." Hon Andrew French, state dairy commissioner, gave an entertaining, racy talk on how to treat the boys and girls and the dairy cow on the farm Commissioner French urged the erection of silos by farmers who have gone into the dairying and stock raising quite extensively

The address by Prof. F. L. Washburn, the state entomologist, was very entertaining as it was anticipated it would be. He gave valuable information regarding the "treatment" for grasshoppers and other "bugs" and advised the farmers as to how they can get more information and how to use it.

The program was pleasingly diversified, as a program for farmers should be, and that no doubt accounts for the program being so entertaining throughout.

As a pleasing diversion Dr. N. M. Watson talked about "Corns," foot ball an other things.

Supt. Wm. Robertson, who judged the exhibits of corn, announced that in judging the corn, size of ears did not receive great consideration. It was the corn's firmness and maturity that indicates its adaptability to being grown in this country and those were almost the deciding points in awarding the prizes. Corn with odd colored kernels did not, of course, score so well as pure corn, other things being equal.

The award of prizes was made as follows:

White Dent Class

First—Israel LaFramboise.
Second—Olof Nelson.

Yellow Dent Class

First—Louis Zimmerman.
Second—Geo. Herr, Jr.

Flint Class

First—F. A. Mestphal.
Second—Ernest Purath.

Northern Dent Class

First—J. H. Glass.
Second—Geo. Orr.

Sweepstake Prizes

First—S. Peshia ad Son.
Second—Swan Akenson.
Best pop corn—F Dougherty.

The sweepstakes prizes were given for best exhibits of four kinds of grains, one of corn and three of smaller grains.

Though Mr. Malvin had the cordial co-operation of the farmers and the townspeople, everybody will be ready to give him credit for the great success of the gathering and will join the expression of appreciation and congratulation. It was the best farmers meeting ever held in Red Lake Falls. Each of the speakers said he never attended a better meeting and one of them said he never saw anything like it before.

The fine exhibits of corn occasioned expressions of surprise from the speakers from the southern part of the state who said that the corn compared favorably with the best exhibits made at fairs in southern Minnesota.

MINNESOTA STATE FAIR AND POLITICS

Big Political Mix-up in Scheme for Management of the Big Show.

Republicans Plan Love Feast—Insurgents Must be Good.

[Special Correspondence to Red Lake Falls Gazette.]

St. Paul, Nov. 30.—Republican and State Fair politics are in some danger of getting mixed. President Nelson's refusal to serve longer on the State Fair board results from a disinclination to adopt political methods of attracting support and using the patronage of the fair to reward and encourage partizans. He regarded the management of the State Fair from the standpoint of a business man; and when he found that wasn't the way things were worked out at Hamline, he concluded it was time for him to get out.

FRAMING UP A JOB.

John Furlong isn't troubled with visionary ideas of that kind. In his view leg-pullers and grafters may be at times annoying, but when one, in order to attain office on the State Fair board, has to construct a machine, they are a necessary part of it. In what way is one to back the agricultural society with one's friends if one isn't allowed a little today? Though a bold, it was a clever move of his to take charge of the Tawney campaign to balk the demonstration in favor of the insurgent congressmen proposed a few months ago. He put Tawney under obligations to him. Tawney's machine in the First District comprises very largely the men active there in public enterprises. When a dairymen's convention or a county fair, or a street fair is to be held they are the fellows to take hold. They are the leading politicians and on familiar terms with the county board. With them one hand washes the other. So when John Furlong now wants to be president of the State Fair board, Mr. Tawney's friends are his friends and glad of the opportunity of reciprocating his favors.

THE ORIGINAL PACIFICATOR.

Really when one comes to think of it Tawney was the original pacifcator. When everyone else was praising the insurgents, it was John who told them to keep cool. To do so wasn't either fashionable or popular then. Now wherever two or three republicans are gathered together, the first thing one hears is the sibilant "Hush-sh-st! Not a word!" The tariff, Joe Cannon, Aldrich, Taft's vs. Roosevelt's policies—these are things which if mentioned at all must not be spoken of above a whisper. This is the time to forget things. All efforts now must be directed towards getting together.

THE STEVENS LOVE FEAST.

That's the reason the demonstration the other evening at the Ryan to Congressman Stevens was such a tremendous success. There the insurgent no longer shouted his long distance definance to the stalwart. There the lion laid down beside the lamb. The swart Clann outdid in affable condescension the dapper Kellogg. No speaker approached a dangerous subject within a league. They may talk tariff at the corner grocery or in the church sociable. Minnesota statesmen pass it up. No longer is there any parallel between the lordly elephant and the Minnesota leaders of the republican party. More fairly would they be represented by the ostrich with its head buried in the sand stubbornly oblivious to facts patent to everyone else.

THE PEOPLE OUT OF IT.

And that, too, is why Stevens talked about the navigation of the Mississippi. That is why Eberhart loses no opportunity to preach conservation, with an occasional digression into the field of agricultural education or a kick at the oil and boiler inspectors who have no freinds. These are safe subjects. There is no one to take offense. That the people are talking and thinking of other things just now is a small matter. It's for them to follow their leaders, and the conviction of the leaders here in St. Paul is that it's up to them to make the issues and shape the proceedings of nominating conventions. By the time election day comes around the people will have forgotten that there ever was such a thing as a tariff to revise.

THE OLD SENATE COMBINE.

The party leaders having put an end to any overt exhibitions of insurgency in Minnesota, they are now directing their efforts towards the nomination of a winning ticket. It is a curious circumstance that though these gentlemen are working ostensibly in Governor Eberhart's interests and are industriously spreading the gospel of peace and the evangel of harmony, that it is not their intention to secure the nomination for Eberhart if they can avoid it. As they were ready on the eve of the last republican convention to sacrifice Jacobson, so today the same leaders who are still manipulating the party machinery are getting ready to double cross Eberhart. And for the same man. Ripley Brower is really their choice. When Ed. Hawkins after having organized the old senatorial combine cast his mantle on the shoulders of Ed. Smith, he chose wisel. Nobody could have worked more diligently, and at the same time more unostentatiously to keep it together. When favors are to be distributed the services of its members are never forgotten. Senator Smith knows just where Brower is at. Although he has ben able to make use of Eberhart he never has been sure of him.

COLE FOR LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

As indicating the activity of the combine and how close its members grew to each other, it is of interest to note how they are preferred when positions are open. The local leaders have never really warmed up to the candidacy of W. A. Nolan or Dr. Gates for lieutenant governor. Indeed members of the senate regard it as rather presumptuous for a mere member of the house to aspire to preside over them. They are not regarded as being in the line of succession until they have served at least one term in the upper chamber. But no sooner had Dr. Cole who was in the senate with Hawkins, with Brower, with Eberhart, with Smith, with Calhoun and the rest, appeared on the scene than he was hit upon at once as the very man to preside over the next senate. Being from the northern part of the state, he will be particularly available if Eberhart is the party's candidate for governor. With Brower for first place the matter could be readily arranged by choosing a southern Minnesota man for auditor or treasurer.

A DISTURBING ELEMENT.

The prominence given to the candidacy of Mr. Hanscom of Folly, Benton county, is, however occasioning the slatemakers alarm. Hanscom, being from the same district as Brower, they don't like it. That is not the worst of it. Hanscom used to live in Carver county. Carver county is in the Third district. They've got a string of politicians down there who have got in the habit of pulling together. They're pulling for Hanscom now. Hanscom himself is a shrewd manipulator. He has built up a winning machine in Benton county which Brower has been accustomed to regard as his own. He is a man of fine address, an able financier, a good stump speaker. He has courage and push. He goes after a thing to get it. He's after the state treasurer's office. While he may

LOCAL BANKS MAKE FINE SHOWING

Nearly Half Million Dollars on Deposit in the Local Institutions.

Indication of Prosperous Conditions in Southern Red Lake County.

The excellent condition of Red Lake Falls banking institutions as indicated by the reports published in the last issue of the Gazette is certainly cause for congratulation. Such a showing ought to be a source of gratification to everybody as an indication of the sound financial condition of southern Red Lake county. The footings of the two banking institutions amount to more than half a million dollars. The total deposits are more than $446,000.00. Such figures indicate not only that the banks are flourishing but that the patrons are prospering. That the people of Red Lake Falls and the tributary country have nearly half a million dollars on deposit in the two banks of this city indicates a condition that is encouraging. Even the bank at the little inland village of Brooks, the statement of which is published in this issue, makes an excellent showing. Its buisness equals that of banks in many railroad towns much larger than Brooks.

Fine Concert.

The program given by the Red Lake Falls Concert Band last Friday evening was a delightful one. Few country bands handle the class of music that the Red Lake Falls boys play, and it is doubtful if there was a single patron of the concert who did not feel proud that the city has such an excellent musical organization. The special numbers on the program as well as the full band numbers were warmly applanded. Joseph Harren played a baritone solo and as is always the case when he does the spot light stunt, he had to play again. Director Brunelle played a cornet solo so well that the crowd demanded another, but he responded with a selection by the band. Two of the juvenile members of the band, Masters Philion and Hennemuth, played a cornet duet with band accompaniment and the crowd insisted that the kids play some more. The Misses Latendresse and Zeh and Messrs. Garceau and Zaiser sang a quartet and responded to an encore. The selections by the band were very well rendered. Director Brunelle is doing excellent work with the band.

Mrs. Aime Benoit.

Mrs. Benoit, wife of Aime Benoit, passed away at 4:30 o'clock Monday morning after an illness of only a few days. Mrs. Benoit had been ill less than a week and her condition was not considered serious until Sunday, the day before her death. Funeral services were held at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday morning from St. Joseph's church, of which deceased was a member, Rev. Fr. Fayolle officiating. The members of the M. B. A. lodge, of which society deceased was a member, attended in a body.

Mrs. Benoit was thirty-seven years old. She had resided in Red Lake county since childhood and in this city for many years and had many friends who were pained to learn of her death and who sympathise with the bereaved relatives. Deceased is survived by her husband and nine children and a number of other relatives.

MANY WOLVES HERE.

Larger Number Than Usual This Winter.

There are many wolves in the vicinity of Red Lake Falls this winter, a larger number than usual. People driving through the country report that they have seen them and many farmers report having seen numbers of them. Several hunting parties have gone out from town the past few days and though they came back empty handed, they had a few shots at some wolves. During the month of November, Auditor Latendresse paid bounty on fifteen wolves and most of them have been brought in during the past ten days. Ford Brothers of Wylie made the biggest haul of any reported, they having killed five last week. The amount paid in bounties for the month is $187.50.

WILL GIVE FINE ENTERTAINMENT

Students of St. Joseph's School Will Give Program and Drama.

At Metropolitan Opera House Friday Evening, Dec. 3.

The students of St. Joseph's school will give a fine program at the Metropolitan opera house, Friday evening, Dec. 3, the principal feature of which will be a four act drama, "Through Darkness to Light." The young people have put much work on the piece and there is no doubt that the program will be a very pleasing one. Following is the program:

Chorus, "Drift My Bark," Kucken
Young Ladies.
Selection Orchestra
Drama, "Through Dorkness to [Light,"

Following the first act of the drama Misses Lea Latendresse and Monica Zeh will sing a duet, "Life's Dreams are O'er." Following each of the other acts the orchestra will play. Miss Cora Paul will be the accompanist for the musical numbers on the program.

Tickets for the entertainment may be reserved at Holzman's jewelry store, The price of reserved seat tickets is 35 cents, general admission 25 cents. At 3 o'clock Friday afternoon a matinee for children will be given for which the admission charge will be only 10 cents.

Miller—LaFramboise.

Miss Cerise LaFramboise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Israel LaFramboise, and Mr. Jos. S. Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Miller, were married Thanksgiving day, November 25. The ceremony was performed at St. Joseph's church at 10 o'clock in the morning, Rev. Fr. Fayolle officiating. Following the ceremony at the church the wedding party went to the home of the bride's parents where the wedding dinner was served. The young people have gone to housekeeping on the Miller farm.

Hides Higher!!

We will pay you as high as 11c in cash or 11 1-2c in trade for your hides per pound. Trade will bring you as high as 15c per pound for your hides on account of our goods being 15c or more lower on each dollar than anywhere else. And furs will bring you 25c on a dollar more at our store than anywhere else. No matter how much anyone else can pay you for your hides, we can pay you 1c more in cash or 2c more in trade. Don't believe that anyone else's prices are higher. Our prices will always be the highest. There is no reason why we shouldn't pay higher as we get 2c per pound more than anyone else. You don't have to ship your hides and furs and wait for the returns three weeks and then the market goes down. Then your returns are at the lowest price. Better bring them to us and we will pay you in from 1c to 2c more than anyone else. You will get more money for the hides if you salt them immediately after butchering. Don't make any holes in the hides. Don't leave any meat on the hides. Cut off the tail bone and horns. Hides in such condition—salt-cured, No.1—will bring you as high as 13c per pound. We pay the highest price for furs. In the fur business we are connected with tailoring houses who use the furs without going through any other hands. We can pay you the highest price for furs in cash or trade. If your neighbor doesn't read the Gazette, tell him it will pay him much more than the Gazette costs, to read this ad.

CASH OR TRADE

We will soon get in some Fresh Frozen Fish. We will sell them at not higher than 4c a pound and maybe less than that.

DAY FOR THANKS

GOV. EBERHART ISSUES HIS FIRST PROCLAMATION.

SETS NOV. 25 AS THE DAY

Says We Have Abundant Material Reasons For Returning Thanks This Year.

St. Paul.—Governor Adolph O. Eberhart issued his Thanksgiving proclamation, naming Thursday, Nov. 25, as the day of general praise and thanks. The document, which is the first by the new governor, reads:

"The people of this state are ever mindful of the source from which come all their blessings. Cosmopolitan as they are, blending here the blood, the heart, and conscience of all that is best in old-world civilization, they approach the Thanksgiving period with sincere appreciation that "All good cometh from on High."

"Of material reasons for spiritual thanksgiving and praise there are abundant causes—our unity as a people, our enjoyments of peace, our increasing opportunities for industrial advancement, our splendid school system that guarantees to every child the right to liberal educational advantages, our peaceful journeys in the direction of higher ideals of civilization and society. These are blessings that our people will do well to remember and to raise their voices in praise and gratitude therefor. Let us each and everyone, whether in the quiet of our homes or in the places of public worship, give thanks to Almighty God for these, our privileges and blessings, and with fervent resolution and reverent men let us justify the faith of our fathers by consecrating ourselves anew on this autumnal day to service in the cause of the Great Giver.

"Thankful, indeed, that fire and flood have not devastated our dominion, that public health and public morals are both on a high plane, that our harvests are not only bountiful, but our products command a premium in the marts of the world, we of Minnesota should give thanks for these signs of the heavenly beneficence and devote ourselves to works of highest attainment, not forgetting that through service to others is the road to individual happiness and the accomplishment of the ideal.

"Now, therefore, I, Adolph O. Eberhart, governor of the state of Minnesota, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the laws of the state and the custom honored since the admission of the state to the union, do hereby appoint Thursday, the 25th day of November, in the year nineteen hundred and nine, as a day of general Thanksgiving.

"Done at the capitol in the city of St. Paul, this twelfth day of November in the year nineteen hundred and nine.

"ADOLPH O. EBERHART,
Governor.

"Attest:
"Julius A. Schmahl,
"Secretary of State."

EDITORS AT SAUK CENTER.

Gov. Eberhart Will Speak to Central Minnesota Association.

Sauk Center. — Governor Adolph E. Eberhart will address the Central Minnesota Editorial Association here on Dec. 3 on "The Newspaper as a Factor in the State's Development." Frank M. Eddy will also address the association. Editor Welles of the Sauk Center Herald is at work on an entertainment program, and the citizens are preparing a special welcome to the editors and their out-of-town guests. Business matters of vital importance to editors and publishers will be discussed and the social side will be amply provided for by the committee. The scope of the association was greatly enlarged at the last meeting at Bemidji and the territory was increased. Originally this association was called togther by a few editors on the Sauk Center and Bemidji branch of the Great Northern railroad, to try and get better train service for the towns on the branch line, Long Prairie, Akeley, Park Rapids, Cass Lake, Walker, Browerville and Walker.

A public reception will be held in the Opera house, where Governor Eberhart will give his address.

TWO FILE IN BANKRUPTCY.

Mankato.—Elihu Parker, of Minneapolis, formerly of Mankato, filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy. He has been engaged in the elevator business, and gives his liabilities as $24,893, and his assets as real estate $30,000, stock, etc., $1,230, and $6,500 exempt. Lawrence J. Parker, of Henderson, an elevator man, also filed a petition in bankruptcy at the same time, with liabilities of $2,225, and assets exempt.

MOTHER AND FIVE PERISH.

Husband and Father Builds Fire With Gasoline at Warroad.

Warroad.—Mrs. Nell Jensen and five children lost their lives, and Jensen, the husband and father, probably will die as the result of injuries sustained in a fire caused by a gasoline explosion. Jensen was starting a fire with gasoline. His wife was upstairs, sick with a week-old baby and these, with four other children, had no chance to escape.

SHOOTS HIS FATHER DEAD.

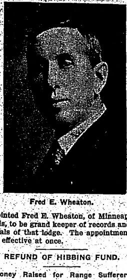
Son, Believed Insane, Confesses to Caledonia Crime.

Caledonia.—Jens Johnson, thirty-three years old, residing with his father, eight miles northwest of here, shot his father in the head with a 38 caliber revolver, the bullet coming out at the right eye. He died instantly. Johnson admits the shooting and assigns no reason except that he thought he was [illegible] to do so. He is thought [illegible]

WHEATON IS GRAND OFFICER.

Minneapolis Man, Keeper of Records and Seals of K. of P.

Cleburne, Texas. — To fill the vacancy caused by the death of R. L. C. White, of Nashville, Tenn., Henry C. Brown, supreme chancellor of the Order of Knights of Pythias, has appointed Fred E. Wheaton, of Minneapolis, to be grand keeper of records and seals of that lodge. The appointment is effective at once.



Fred E. Wheaton.

REFUND OF HIBBING FUND.

Money Raised for Range Sufferers Will Be Returned.

Minneapolis, Nov. 12.—Sixty-one per cent of the money given by Minneapolis people for the relief of the sufferers on the Mesaba range, after the forest fire in September, 1908, will be returned to the givers. There will be 61 cents for each dollar given.

The committee, composed of B. F. Nelson, Perry Harrison, Geo. H. Partridge, W. S. Jones and Wallace G. Nye, has made its report, which showed that $29,083.47 of the amount received remaining.

The committee reported that within two weeks $47,667.82 was raised. Of this amount $20,000 was sent to the state commission at Duluth to be distributed among the sufferers. Early in October, 1908, E. T. Lies, general secretary of the Associated Charities was sent to the range to ascertain the actual conditions. He learned that all the money needed was already available.

It was not until October 29, 1909, that the affairs of the state commission were wound up, and the money sent was returned to the local committee.

Of the money left, $825.90 will be turned over to the Associated Charities. This came from anonymous donors.

THREATEN LIQUOR DEALERS.

Wholesalers Said To Be Responsible In Indian Districts.

St. Paul. — The wholesale liquor dealers of the Twin Cities are threatened with prosecution by the State Prohibition society if they continue to encourage the sale of liquor in the prohibited districts of northern Minnesota. W. G. Calderwood, secretary of the state prohibition committee, states that in many cases the wholesalers are responsible for the violations because of their eagerness to sell liquors to the retailers.

"The wholesalers, whose places of business are not within the prohibited district, are just as liable as the saloonkeepers who purchase their liquor," said Mr. Calderwood. "The treaty states specifically that no liquor shall be sold or distributed within the limits of the territory described. This certainly means that the companies shipping in the liquor are liable. We of course intend to prosecute the saloonkeepers first, but when we are satisfied that the wholesalers are just as much responsible we intend to make them answer for it."

STOCKTON MERCHANT ROBBED.

Postmaster A. F. Swindler Loses $800 In Cash.

Winona.—A. F. Swindler, postmaster in the village of Stockton, 10 miles west of this city, was the victim of a daring hold-up on the doorstep of his establishment, the robber securing $800 in cash.

The merchant closed his store at 9 o'clock, after turning out the lights, and started in the direction of his home. At the corner a pistol short flared up in the darkness a few inches from Swindler's face. The man fell and the hold-up man jumped upon him and took his wallet from his pocket. The victim got no description on account of the darkness.

Two Boys Killed By Train.

Mankato.—New Ulm and Mankato passenger train on the Chicago and Northwestern road last evening ran down two boys as it entered the city and killed both instantly. The boys were Lee Foley, 15 years old, and Paul Huettl, 13 years old.

Duluth Italian Must Hang.

Duluth. — Mike Rossi was found guilty of murder in the first degree after the jury had been out less than an hour. The crime for which the guilty man is to suffer the extreme penalty was the deliberate murder at Anton DeMoe last July. Rossi who had an altercation with DeMeo earlier in the summer, procured a revolver and waylaid his victim, first shooting him through the heart and then stabbing him in the head. Both parties are well known to local Italian residents.

Loggers Making Ready.

Bemidji.—Much logging will be done in this section the coming winter, and already there is much stir among the "man catchers" and lumberjacks as well as the contractors and lumbermen. The Bemidji Lumber Company will cut some 12,000,000 feet of timber which will be logged by independent loggers near Tenstrike, and at other points between Funkley and Northome. This timber will be banked at the places where logged and brought to Bemidji to be sawed in the Bemidji Lumber Company's mill [illegible]

WANTS REAL TEST

GOVERNMENT WANTS TRIAL INVOLVING ALL POINTS OF BLEACHED FLOUR.

PIERCE BUTLER EMPLOYED

Special Counsel Will Prosecute the Government's Side of Case Minneapolis Case Were Not Thorough.

Washington, Nov. 18.—With reference to the controversey and flour millers of the country, as to the legality of manufacturing bleached flour, the statement was made today at the department that it was the purpose of the government authorities to bring to trial a case that will involve all the points in the dispute between the millers and the law.

It was pointed out here today that the Iowa cases which yesterday at Minneapolis were postponed until February did not embrace all the points upon which the government desired to secure a decision.

Federal authorities wish to make a thorough test of the right to manufacture bleached flour, which the department has declared to be contrary to the pure food law and because of which Pierce Butler of St. Paul has been employed as special counsel to prosecute what are known as the bleached flour cases. The seizures of flour alleged to have been bleached in violation of the law, were made some time ago.

ENTER BURNING MINE.

Geologists and Two Companions Enter Mine At Cherry, Ill.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 18.—J. W. Paul of the United States geological survey of Pittsburg, entered the air shaft and was lowered to the bottom. He was armed with a hatchet and ax and carried ropes and boards. The boards he expected to use to make the landing from the cage into the mine gallery. Paul had quickly completed his mission and came to the surface, where he was joined by George H. Rice and R. Y. Williams for a second descent. All left letters to be mailed to their families in case of death. They will make a desperate effort to ascertain conditions in the fatal second gallery.

LEADERS GRANTED STAY.

Courts of Appeals Allows Stay of Sentence Until Nov. 29.

Washington, Nov. 18.—The court of appeals of the District of Columbia, upon the request of counsel for the labor leaders, today granted a stay until Nov. 29 in the issuance of the mandate sending President Gompers, Vice President Mitchell and Secretary Morrison of the American Federation of Labor to jail for contempt of the supreme court of the District of Columbia in the Bucks' Stove & Range Co. case.

LAKE TRAFFIC RESUMED.

Five Vessels Were Wrecked But Only One Life Lost.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 18.—The second severe storm of the autumn season on the Great Lakes abated today and marine traffic was resumed with the vigor which annually characterizes the closing days of the shipping season.

Although the storm damage is probably $500,000, the loss is not so great as in former seasons when late storms swept the lakes. Boat owners were warned in time with the result that comparatively few were out. Only one life was lost, although five vessels were wrecked.

WANT BAIL INCREASED.

Government's Attorneys Ask That Walsh's Bail Be $250,000.

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Government attorney's today asked that pending the decision on the petition for a rehearing by the United States circuit court of appeals, an increase to $250,000 be made in the bail of John R. Walsh, the former president of the Chicago National bank. The motion was taken under advisement by the court. The present bail is $50,000.

HOT FROM THE WIRES.

Duluth, Nov. 18.—An unknown vessel is ashore on Isle Royal and is said to be a complete wreck.

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 18.—Elias Ray, one of the wealthiest land owners in Indiana killed himself with a pen knife today rather than go to court to face trial for the murder of one of his employes last spring.

Washington, Nov. 18.—On receipt of news that two Americans had been condemned to death in Nicaragua for participating in the revolution there, two American war vessels were ordered to proceed there with all speed.

New York, Nov 18.—It is feared that John Jacob Astor's yatch with himself and son aboard was lost in the recent West Indian hurricane.

RUN ENGINE WILD.

Boys Steal Locomotive and Have Disastrous Ride.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 18.—Forty boys at Birmingham, north of this city stole a Mogul locomotive, that had been sidetracked by a construction crew, and ran the engine several miles. They then reversed the engine and started for Birmingham, throwing the throttle wide open. The boys were unable to stop the locomotive and jumped off. All were injured, five seriously.

The engine, which attained a speed of more than a mile a minute, crashed into a freight train in the VBirmingham yard and was wrecked.

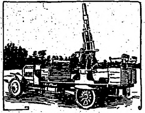
TO DESTROY AN AIRSHIP.

Big Gun Mounted on an Automobile Designed to Offset Fighting Air Craft.

Berlin.—The great success of dirigible balloons has created a demand for the invention of means to destroy them in war time. Of these the fire from rifles and machine guns was not sufficient, on account of their small caliber and the difficulty of watching the moving airship. Cannon have therefore been designed in Germany—the greatest manufacturing country of war material—for the sole purpose of attacking and shooting balloons, flying machines, and the like. To do this effectively such a cannon must comply with the following requirements: Unlimited moving ability sideways, shooting at any angle up to the vertical, highest speed of the projectile or smallest time for flying. In addition it must be possible to move the gun from place to place in the shortest time.



The Airship Destroyer.

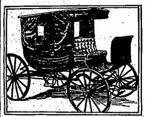
The automobile illustrated herewith complies with these many and difficult requirements. It has been built by the famous Krupp concern and was exhibited in the recent international aero show at Frankfort. The fact that the gun is rather long favors a high speed for the projectile. Above it is a brake with a liquid and air compressor. When a shot is to be fired the bolting of the gun is disengaged and the latter slides out by the expansion of the air. The total weight of the car is 4,315 kilograms, and that of the gun alone 450 kilograms. A 50 horse-power engine is mounted under the hood and propels the vehicle with a speed of 70 miles an hour-average. All four wheels are connected with the motor; and thus any rough ground and steep grades can be overcome. On the platform seats for five men are provided and room for 32 cartridges.

The cartridges deserve some description, as they have some novel features. It is necessary to watch the path of a projectile if applied to a balloon. Shrapnel hit only the cover and these holes are mostly closed again by the inner gas pressure, so that not much gas escapes. The best result comes from brisance grenades, which explode inside the balloon and not only hit the envelope, but ignite the gas. Thus an airship will be completely wrecked, as the photograph shows. Another valuable feature is that each projectile contains a burner ignited as it leaves the gun, and this produces a wake of black smoke, showing the line of flight by night or day.

DANIEL WEBSTER'S CARRIAGE

Boston Business Man Who Owns Great Scholar's Home, Keeps the Famous Coach.

Boston.—Walton Hall, a Boston business man, who now owns the farm where Daniel Webster lived at Marshfield, Mass., has many relics of the great scholar, among them being the coach in which Webster used to ride. Many persons visit the place annually, and none leaves the place without initiating himself to the old coach, which is not so old, either, as far as appearance goes. Mr. Hall purchased the carriage and has kept it in good repair. At the time Admiral Sampson, Senator Hoar and ex-Gov Boutwell visited the place he drove them through the town in it. Sixty years ago presidents, distinguished men of Europe, governors, senators, have driven from Boston to Marshfield behind the cream-colored horses to visit the great American statesman. The same coach has carried equally distinguished men to the little plot in the Marshfield cemetery at the time of the memorial services held in his honor.



Daniel Webster's Carriage.

In this same cemetery Gov. Josiah Winslow is buried, also Peregrine White, born on the Mayflower, the first baby of New England. Here, too, is buried the famous singer, Adeline Phillips, who lived on the next place to the Webster estate.

Good Work of Aeroplanes.

The aeroplane has created one of the most delectable and healthy states of mind the world has yet known, causing an excitement all to the good, for it has suddenly yanked the old fogy world into the study and imaginations of the paradise of science; it has so usurped attention that England and Germany have all but quit quarreling long enough to wonder if war is really worth while. Perhaps, though, they never thought of fighting each other in the first place.—New York Press.

MINE STILL BURNS

ST. PAUL COAL MINE AT CHERRY, ILL., WILL BE CLOSED FOR A WEEK.

PITIFUL SCENES DAILY

Tons of Water Were Flooded Into the Mine During the Night, But the Temperature Is Still Too Hot to Allow a Rescue.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 17.—Heat in the St. Paul coal mine was found to be too intense today to permit an entrance. This means that the bodies of the 300 men entombed by Saturday's disaster will remain there for at least another twenty-four hours. The fire is believed to be worse than ever. No bodies, it is believed, have been burned beyond the hope of recognition.

The decison not to open the mine today was the result of a three hours' conference of mining officials and experts. C. W. Traer, a mining inspector, said they were trying to agree upon a plan for lowering the temperature in the main shaft. Considerable difference of opinion prevailed at the conference.

Early today the pumping of water into the hoisting shaft was stopped. The water evidently was failing to reach the flames since the fire is the fiercest in the galleries and the water descends beyond it to the bottom of the shaft. The fire was hotter today than it has been at any time. The chances are, it was said today, that no one could enter the mine for a week.

Threats have been made against Rosenjack, the cager, who is said to have deserted his post, the first day of the disaster.

The delay in recovering the bodies has driven scores of the women almost to desperation. Hints of a possible demonstration against the mine officials reached the ears of States Attorney Eckhart yesterday and troops were sent for.

All night they did sentinel duty about the mine and the Milwaukee cars containing the mine inspectors and nurses and the private coach of President Earling of the Milwaukee.

The temperature in the main shaft of the mine was taken today by Geo. F. Rice, of the United States geological survey, a few feet f.om the top and the thermometer recorded 115 degrees fahrenheit.

During the taking of the test, pathetic appeals from the unfortunate women of Cherry for the shaft to be opened forced the officials to turn their heads.

MOORE IS PAROLED.

Ex-Glen Ullin Baner Gets Four-Year Suspended Sentence.

Bismarck, N. D., Nov. 17.—Ex-Banker W. T. Moore, convicted last week in the Morton county court of forgery of $500 in connection with the wrecking of the Glen Ullin bank, was sentenced yesterday afternoon to serve four years in the state penitentiary and then given a suspended sentence which means that Moore will not be sent to the institution, but will be under the eye of the board of parole for four years and can be arrested and made to serve his term within the walls of the penitentiary if he breaks any of the conditions of the parole. Moore has turned over all his personal property to the officers of the bank, which his speculations wrecked, and has assisted in other ways in straightening affairs so the customers of the bank suffered no loss and the sentiment in his home town favored such a sentence as was given him.

CONFESSES TO MURDER.

Eighteen-Year-Old Boy Says He Choked Man to Death.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—Stephen Blackwell, 18 years old, a laborer who was arrested in St. Louis by a decoy letter and brought here, made a confession today, according to the police, that he and a companion choked and robbed Andrew Pelliginni, 65 years old, who was found dead Oct. 8 in a room in a hotel here. Pelliginni was a wealthy stockman from Vancouver, B. C.

CONDENSED NEWS OF DAY.

Cape Haytien, Hayti, Nov.V 17.—The rainfall here during the two weeks, ending Nov. 14, is officially recorded as 29 inches. The total precipitation at interior points is given as 88 inches.

Williston, N. D., Nov. 17.—The Odd Fellows' building was gutted by a fire which started at 8 o'clock last night and burned to midnight. Only the walls remain standing. The cause is unknown.

Milwaukee, Nov. 17.—The body of Hattie Zinda, the 14-year-old daughter of Joseph Zinda, 909 Mell street, was found this afternoon in a deserted lime shed, at Humbolt and North avenue. The girl had been assaulted and afterwards murdered.

Dayton, Ohio, Nov. 17.—A double header freight train south-bound and a passenger train north-bound on the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton met in a head-on collision a few miles north of this city early this morning, two men, a firemen and a brakeman were killed.

FILE ANSWER TO WALSH.

Government Files Answer in Case of Convicted Banker.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—Dist. Atty. Edwin W. Sims, today filed the answer of the government to the petition of John R. Walsh, convicted of misapplying the funds of the Chicago National bank, for a rehearing of his appeal to the federal court of appeals.

In the answer the government attorney says that the only new points raised by the defendant in the petition which was filed some days ago, are the multiplicity of the counts of the indictment and the allegation that the verdict was inconsistent.

MINE STILL BURNING.

Coal Mine At Cherry, Ill. Is Still On Fire.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 16.—All efforts to enter the St. Paul coal mine where 300 men are entombed were abandoned at 1 o'clock this afternoon. George S. Rice, chief of field work of the United States geological survey announced this decision after an inspection of the mouth. The sand over the seal was at a temperature of 110 degrees, indicating that the heat of the interior was intense. It is believed that the coal deposits are burning.

Two Little Girls Had Eczema Very Badly—In One Case Child's Hair Came Out and Left Bare Patches.

Cuticura Met with Great Success

"I have two little girls who have been troubled very badly with eczema. One of them had it on her lower limbs. I did everything that I could hear of for her, but it did not give in until warm weather, when it seemingly subsided. The next winter when it became cold the eczema started again and also in her head where it would take the hair out and leave bare patches. At the same time her arms were sore the whole length of them. I took her to a physician, but the child grew worse all the time. Her sister's arms were also affected. I began using Cuticura Remedies, and by the time the second lot was used their skin was soft and smooth. Mrs. Charles Baker, Albion, Me., Sept. 21, '08."

Farming The Wild Turkey

Novel Thanksgiving Idea Suggested By The Bird Experts

THE newest idea, appropriate to Thanksgiving, is that wild turkeys should be farmed—that is to say, bred regularly under conditions of semi-domestication. Ornithological experts say that it is entirely feasible, and in the adoption of such a plan lies the hope for the preservation of our greatest game bird from final extinction.

The wild turkey, of course, is a species entirely distinct from the tame bird with the white-meated breast. One reason why its preservation is important is that it is needed to contribute from time to time its hardy blood and much-prized game flavor to the domesticated variety by interbreeding. The comparatively dark meat of the breast of many of the tame turkeys that come to market nowadays at the Thanksgiving season is attributable to such matings, which are eagerly sought by the knowing producer of feathered stock.

The wild turkey is so notoriously shy that most people would be inclined to suppose it incapable of domestication. Such an inference, however, according to the expert, is a mistaken one. As a matter of fact, the bird is not by nature much afraid of man, but rather tame and sociable, so far as human beings are concerned. In Massachusetts during early colonial days there were great numbers of wild turkeys, and frequently they made themselves at home in the close neighborhood of the dwellings of settlers.

To-day the species is entirely extinct in New England, and in other parts of the country the fowl is extremely wild and hard to shoot—not, however, because of a natural shyness of disposition, but simply for the reason that it has been hunted and trapped so persistently. If wild turkeys were bred and reared on farms—a matter of no great difficulty to accomplish, say the experts—they would be docile enough, and, with proper protection, would multiply rapidly.

The fact that wild turkeys have maintained their foothold to some extent in long-settled parts of their old territory—as, for example, in Virginia and Maryland—appears to indicate that it would be entirely practicable to restock portions of their former ranges. But, inasmuch as the country anciently occupied by them is now for the most part populated by human beings, it is necessary, in order to accomplish the object suggested, that their multiplication shall be encouraged under conditions of at least partial domestication—that is to say, by farming the birds for pleasure and profit.

It is believed that, if proper protection were given to such enterprises by the law, sporting club and wealthy individuals owning or leasing large tracts would gladly go into the business of breeding wild turkeys—not for market of course, but for the pleasure derivable from such an enterprise. At the present time not a few such organizations and proprietors of great private estates maintain similar preserves for the quail or "bob-white," holding field trials in competition, to test the ability of dogs to find and point the birds. These field trials are in reality dog races, and no shooting of the quail is allowed.

Where wild turkeys are concerned, however, there is no reason why such extensive preserves, covering in some instances many thousands of acres, should not afford admirable sport under suitable restrictions. There is no form of outdoor amusement more delightful than turkey hunting. But, if farmers could be persuaded to take up the idea, and to breed the birds, they might sell shooting privileges to sportsmen at a rate which would put much more money into their pockets than they could gain by sending the fowls to market.

If the business were suitably managed farms of 500 to 1,000 acres would yield a larger revenue from wild turkeys than from poultry, sportsmen being usually willing to pay several times more for the fun of shooting birds than the latter would fetch as marketable game. For such purposes, of course, it would be neither necessary nor desirable that the fowls should be too tame. On the other hand, experience has shown that wild turkeys are not disposed to go far away from an accustomed source of food supply.

The wild turkey is prolific, and takes kindly to civilization. Like its tame congener, it is a great consumer of injurious insects, particularly grasshoppers, and as such would be useful to the farmer. The female lays from 15 to 20 eggs for a "clutch," but raises only one brood in a year. Foxes, hawks and owls are deadly enemies, but it would be the business of the farmer to protect the birds from these foes, as he does in the case of his farm-yard poultry. As for human poachers, adequate laws for protection against them would have to be passed; but the sportsmen, if once they became interested in the matter, could be relied upon to exert in this direction a powerful influence, which has never yet failed of success in affairs of the kind.

It seems difficult to realize that less than 100 years ago wild turkeys were so abundant that they often sold for six cents apiece, a very large one, weighing 25 or 30 pounds, occasionally fetching as much as 25 cents. To-day a large specimen, gobbler preferred, is worth $5. The species has been wiped out, not by sportsmen, but by pothunters, who kill the birds on the roosts, trap them in pens, or lie in ambush for them, attracting them within easy shooting distance by imitating the call of the hen or the young "poult."

On Fisher's island, in Long Island sound, a most interesting experiment has already been made in the rearing of turkeys under semi-domestication—though in this case the species dealt with is the tame one. On this island, which is the most successful turkey farm in the world, the birds are permitted to run wild, and are not even furnished with any shelter, other than they can find among the trees and scrub. But plenty of corn is thrown about where they can get it.

BACK FROM THE HUNT

In this artificial wilderness, as it might be called, which covers an area of about 4,000 acres, the turkeys get as close to nature as possible. Indeed, the whole idea of their management is to let them alone, interfering with them as little as possible. In the winter time their heads often freeze under their wings when they are at roost. But the exposure does them no harm; on the contrary, it renders them exceedingly vigorous, and they attain huge size, the gobblers sometimes weighing as much as 50 pounds when sent to market.

Every spring a few wild gobblers, trapped for the purpose in Virginia or the Carolinas, are introduced into the flocks on Fisher's island, to contribute fresh blood. This is esteemed a matter of the utmost importance. Our tame turkeys are notoriously difficult birds to rear, under ordinary circumstances, being delicate and liable to epidemics—on which account many farmers have given up trying to raise them. The reason why is simply that there has been too much in-breeding, and the stock has lost its hardiness.

A number of varieties of the tame turkey have been developed by breeding, the principal ones being the Bronze, the Buff, the Slate, and the White, the Black and the Narragansett. The White was originally an albino. But all of these are derived from a single species, which is of Mexican origin. There is only one other known species, which is native to Yucatan and Guatemala. It is called the "ocellated turkey," owing to the fact that its tail is ornamented with eyes like that of the peacock. It is one of the most beautiful of birds, its feathers blazing with metallic reflections of gold, green, blue and bronze.

The Thankful Heart

Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.—Ephesians v:20.

The thankful spirit is the true and sure source of a happy life. There are plenty of things to be thankful for, and it is wise to make an effort to find them. They are never far away. They are under our control. We are their masters. God made us that way. We may be in touch with very disagreeable people, but if we do not like disagreeable feelings we need not have them. There are many good things to think of with reference to such people. Be a missionary to them. Think how nice it would be if such a person had a sweet disposition and let your own radiate its virtues.

We can rejoice and be glad no matter where we are. Paul and Silas sang hymns while in jail. Why not? It was bad enough to be in jail. God was good to them. He revealed to them facts of eternal life. These were good things to think about, and why should they not enjoy them? To sing was a reasonable thing to do. God had given them something against the day of trouble and they used it. Why should not we? What is the use of being miserable when we can just as well be happy? God is near us in the joys and comforts of life as well as in our trials and temptations. We have good reasons to be thankful under all conditions of life. The sun always shines no matter about the clouds. Daylight is a good thing, but the best thing is God created us in his image and after his likeness. There is a divine element in our nature that enables us to think God's thoughts in the facts of nature as well as in the words of Scriptures.

The natural world is a product of thought developed and governed by a system of divine laws that are always in force. God has planned and made laws by which we live, breathe, walk, see, hear, think, talk and learn the meaning of things. How our Heavenly Father has planned the universe for man's comfort and how thankful and happy man should be!

Mark the difference between the accomplished Christian gentleman and man in his uncivilized state and then be thankful for the Gospel and what the discovery of the laws of nature has done for you. Open your mind to see how God planned the laws of steam and electricity in keeping with man's capacity to utilize these forces and thus bring joy and comfort to human hearts. Go through your house, look and think as you go. You will see things of art and culture everywhere—books, magazines, newspapers, pictures, and conveniences, and works of art bearing the marks of the divine in man, which means you who look. When in the city you may look around and notice the buildings, and works of man, and remember that the people who have done all these wonderful things are members of your family. God is their father and he has given them a task you could not do. They are doing the work and you are getting the benefit of it.

God has given every person a religious nature. It is a source of great comfort and joy. Are you weary? "I will give you rest." "Let not your heart be troubled." "My peace I leave with you." These are God's promises. They should mean much to us. Are you poor and homeless? Turn your thoughts on the Saviour's promises and picture to yourself the golden city; locate your mansion, receive your old friends, tell them to come in. Thankful? How can one help but be thankful? The Christian's spirit is the thankful, happy spirit. Every person should have it. It is the conquering spirit. It never meets defeat. No matter where one is or how sad the conditions of life, the hopes of heaven are always bright. The Christian, happy spirit always has something worth while to do. The wickedness of the world is round us. Throw a dash of Gospel sunlight along the pathway of the sin-suffering friend. A light in the darkness is what he needs. Smile on him. Let him see your gladness when he would expect to see sorrow.

The thankful spirit brings gladness in all conditions of life. There are beautiful characters among the needy as well as in elegant homes on the boulevards. If the rich can afford to adorn their homes and beautify them and pay the price I will enjoy their beauty and render thanks. There is a difference in men's natural attainments. They are God-made and are needed for the improvement and comfort of mankind. Without them there could be no schools, no true progress, and what would we do without the conveniences made possible through the labor of others. They are necessary to the comforts of our homes and in every department of the work of life. God help you to look and see reasons to be thankful every day of your life.—Rev. J. B. MacGuffin.

For the Thanksgiving Dinner

The delicate flavor of the pumpkin is developed only by a long and gentle application of heat, so when preparing it for pies always stew it for three or four hours, then mix it with the other ingredients.

To each cupful of pulp add two well beaten eggs, half a cupful of sugar, a tablespoonful of cornstarch, dissolved in a cupful of cream, half a teaspoonful each of ginger and cinnamon and a teaspoonful of lemon extract; add a large tablespoonful of melted butter and fill the paste full with this mixture. Bake brown in a moderate oven.

Although the observance of Thanksgiving is particularly a northern custom, the following recipe for Virginia pudding is given in the Housekeeper as appropriate to the occasion.

Turn one pound of stoned raisins, one pound of dried currants, one-fourth of a pound of citron sliced thin into a large mixing bowl and dredge well with flour. Add half a pound of fresh suet chopped small, then mix the whole thoroughly. In another bowl cream one-half pound of butter with an equal weight of sugar; add to this mixture the yolks of six eggs beaten smooth and one pint of rich, sweet milk.

Whip the whites of the eggs very stiff, then add them alternately with one and a quarter pounds of sifted flour to the mixture. Then stir into it the juice and grated rind of one lemon, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and cloves, one-half teaspoonful of mace, one grated nutmeg and one-half teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a little cold water. Lastly, add the fruit, stirring and beating vigorously until the whole is thoroughly mixed.

Pour into a well floured pudding bag, allowing plenty of room for swelling, drop into a roomy pot of boiling water and boil continuously for five hours. Serve hot with a sauce made as follows: Cream together one cupful of white sugar and a lump of butter the size of an egg. When smooth and white, beat in the grated rind of a lemon and the whipped white of an egg.

Putting It Gently

John R. Bradley, the backer of Dr. Cook, discussed, at a recent dinner, the Eskimo character.

"The Eskimo," said he, "is kind and truthful, but all his statements must be taken with a grain of salt, for in his kindness, in his desire to please, he is apt to say what he thinks you want him to say, and thus, unintentionally, he misleads.

"The Eskimo, in a word, is like the foreman of George Gummey of Cinnaminson.

"George's wife doesn't allow him to drink; but, at the end of a caucus one night the fellow so far forgot himself as to take a plate of sandwiches and a bottle of beer.

"On the way home he met his foreman.

"'Jack,' he said, anxiously, 'I've just had some sandwiches and a couple of glasses of beer. Do you thing the wife'll smell it on me when I get home?'

"The foreman sniffed about George Gummey's mustache, then said, apologetically:

"'Well, sir, I can just smell the sandwiches.'"

He Loved Little Dogs.

The good priest was walking happily along one of the Sixties when he met three of the children of the parish, accompanied by a small dog. Smiling benignly, the good father remarked: "Pax vobiscum," and patted both the juveniles and the joyous dog.

Arriving home, one of the youngsters shouted: "Papa, Father F—— must be awfully fond of dogs."

"What makes you think so, Tommy?" asked the father.

"Why," explained the little fellow, "we just met him up the street, and when he saw Rover he said 'Pack of dog biscuits,' as plain as plain could be."

Pla-Mate Shoes
Are the Best Shoes Built for Children

Only the best material and finest workmanship go into Pla-Mate Shoes—just as good in every way as the finest shoe for grown-ups. Notice the shape of the shoe—it follows the natural lines of the foot and allows it to develop as Nature intended it to. The children like them because they are soft, flexible and so comfortable—the parents like them because while they cost a little more to start with, they are the cheapest in the end as one pair of Pla-Mate Shoes outlast two pairs of ordinary children's shoes, and they hold their shape so well. Sizes 4 to 12, in all suitable leathers and in lace, button and oxford styles. If you can't buy Pla-Mate Shoes from your dealer, send us his name and state size and style and we will see that you are quickly supplied.

One Dose for Coughs

Children cough at night? Give them Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Often a single dose at bedtime will completely control the cough. Good for any one with a cold or cough. Good for easy cases, hard cases; good for acute cases, chronic cases. Ask your doctor to tell you, honestly and frankly, just what he thinks of this old standard remedy. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

THERE is a rumor afloat that Senator Clapp isn't pleased over Frank Kellogg's success in the Standard Oil cases.

ALBERT KAISER, the Bagley banker, is a candidate for state treasurer, but as John Eastman is opposed to him, there is really no chance.

SENATOR McCUMBER is alarmed that Minnesota might go democratic, but the senator is more seriously apprehensive that North Dakota may not go for McCumber.

BY the omission of the word "not" in the act requiring operators of cream and milk testing apparatus to be licensed the law becomes a dead letter on the day that itshould be enforced Jan. 1 1910.

THE Brown's Valley Tribune makes a good suggestion in saying that "if a public official who did not do his duty was defeated every time he came up for re-election, the time would soon come when there would be very few who would not do their duty. The remedy for a large part of the wrong doing of the public official is with the people."

AN almost forgotten law passed by the last legislature goes into effect January 1st. Under its provisions ten per cent of all the liquor licenses in cities and villages of less than 10,000 goes into the county revenue fund. Red Lake county is third in the amount of money to be transferred from cities and villages, and under this law about $3,900 will revert to the general fund.

UNDER a recent ruling of the interior department about a hundred saloons in northwestern Minnesota will be closed. The territory affected is all of Becker and Hubbard counties and portions of Itasca, Clearwater, Cass and Polk counties. In the latter county all of the saloons at Fosston and Lengby are affected. The agents of the government insist that there will be no compromise, and the saloons are given thirty days to dispose of their stock of liquors.

A SHIP SUBSIDY is probably the only way to maintain a merchant marine, since the Aldrich bill doesn't give the ships a chance to do much business. Under a revenue tariff there would undoubtedly be a revival of the shipping industry sufficiently important to keep the ships busy. It is somewhat inconsistent to deprive the ocean carriers of their business and at the same time vote them a bonus. Under the Aldrich plan the American consumer would indeed be between the upper and nether millstones. He would be taxed "going and coming."

A MEMORIAL service to the memory of Governor Johnson was held in New York City Sunday afternoon. President Taft sent a letter of regret, commending the high character and broad staesmanship of the dead governor. Governor Hughes was the main speaker, and among other eloquent tributes he paid this simple and desrved testimonial of the value of Governor Johnson's life to his state and country: "This lesson in the life of Gov. Johnson is thrust upon us. It shows this to be the land of opportunity. It is not simply that we admire his career but we think of his inspiration. Every poor mother as she cares for her boy is helped as she thinks what Gov. Johnson did. And now while we are paying tribute to his inspiration we should not overlook his great public services. He would have been worthy of the honors paid today even if he had been favored with fortune from the start."

THE silver dollar is gradually going out of circulation and the paper dollar is coming more and more in demand says a Washington correspondent. The east, generally, has discarded the unwieldly coin, but the west and the southwest seemed to like it and it remained in demand. But now the demand is lessening. Three years ago more than 80,000,000 were in circulation. Up to that time the government had ben in the habit of appropriating thousands of dollars annually to pay express charges for the shipment of silver dollars in return for notes. But two years ago the congress of the United States knocked out this appropriation. Since then any bank that wanted silver dollars had to pay the charges of transporting them. The banks didn't see anything in that for themselves, and unless the demand in their localities for silver dollars was so persistent that it coundn't be disregarded they substituted $1 bills. Thus the movement in silver dollars is decreasing rapidly.

GOVERNOR EBERHART wants to abolish oil and boiler inspectors, but he does not make it clear just how he intends to improve on the present plan. Even though both of these branches of the public service were taken over by the dairy and food department, there is no reason to believe the work could be done more cheaply or that there would be an improvement in the service rendered. It is necessary to have local inspectors, and a good many of them. When a carload of oil arrives at a country town it must be inspected immediately, since neither the railroad company, the oil company, nor the purchaser would care to await the convenience of a dairy and food inspector. The same principle is involved in the inspection of boilers. Anyway, under the present system the people of the state do not pay the tax, and both departments are revenue producers. If the governor knows that any of the present inspectors are inefficient the remedy would seem to lie in discharging them and hiring capable and reliable men.

WON'T NEED HIM AGAIN.

St. Peter Free Press (Rep.): Congress Steenerson is credited with the statement that he will never support Cannon for speaker again. Well, he voted for him last spring and in all probability Mr. Cannon will not need further support for that position in the future.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Princeton Union: Six Illinois congressmen have promised to oppose Cannon's re-election, says a contemporary. But what have they promised Joe?—that's the question.

Waverly Star and Tribune: Hardly had William J. Gaynor been elected mayor of New York when he was mentioned by many as a possible candidate for president of the United States on the democratic ticket. We believe it is far better to wait and see whether he makes good before doing too much shouting.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: Unless Governor Eberhart pays more attention to facts and holds that magnificent imagination of his in reasonable check, he will talk himself out of a job.

Sauk Center Herald: "Why not send Joe Cannon to China?" inquiries the straight republican newspaper, the LeSueur News. The Herald can see no objection, but would suggest that a special Boxer uprising be arranged for as a welcome to him.

Appleton Press: Our republicanism is not radical enough to swallow the Aldrich-Cannon propaganda and we notice that many of the old boys who have the temerity to attempt the dose make many grimaces and wry faces as it passes their aesophaguses.

Ortonville Herald-Star: With Ralph Wheelock and Preus—pronounced Price—both in office under Governor Eberhart it looks as though the pacification of Senator Nelson had been accomplished.

Two Harbors Journal-News: If Joe Cannon could be induced to run for something where the people outside of Illinois could get a swipe at him, he would not last as long as that proverbial snowball.

Hinckley Enterprise: Speaker Cannon keeps getting madder. The insurgents arrows must be pricking deeper.

Aitkin Republican: "Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad." Uncle Joe Cannon is roaring mad.

Tickling, tight Coughs, can be surely and quickly loosened with a prescription druggists are dispensing everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is so very, very different than common cough medicines. No opium, no chloroform, absolutely nothing harsh or unsafe. The tender leaves of a harmless, lung healing mountainous shrub, gives the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. Those leaves have the power to calm the most distressing Cough and to soothe and heal the most sensitive bronchial membrane. Mothers should for safety's sake alone always demand Dr. Shoop's. It can with perfect freedom be given to even the youngest babes. Test it yourself and see. Sold by all dealers.

S.S.S. PURELY VEGETABLE

It is a generally recognized fact that medicines taken from the botanical kingdom are better adapted to the delicate human system, and safer in every way, than those composed of strong mineral mixtures.

In the early settlement of this land, our forefathers were obliged to procure their medicines from Nature's great laboratories of forest and field. They searched out and compounded the different vegetable materials into teas, concoctions and medicines. That these pioneers found the most potent and valuable of the roots, herbs and barks placed at their disposal, is abundantly proven by the fact that the great majority of them were blessed with rugged health. They cured their diseases and were enabled to do the great preliminary work of civilization because the remedies they used were Nature's remedies, and specially adapted to the needs of humanity.

Among the very best of these vegetable preparations is S. S. S., a medicine made entirely of roots, herbs and barks in such combination as to make it the greatest of all blood purifiers and the finest of all tonics. S. S. S. does not contain the least particle of mineral in any form, and is absolutely a safe medicine for any one to use.

CHEMIST FOUND S.S.S. FREE FROM MINERALS.
A few years ago I was taken with Inflammatory Rheumatism. Upon the advice of a friend I decided to try S.S.S. Before allowing me to take it, however, my guardian, who was a chemist, analyzed the remedy, and pronounced it free from potash or mercury. I continued the remedy, and in two months I was cured completely. The cure was permanent, for I have never since had a touch of Rheumatism, though many times exposed to damp and cold weather!
MRS. ELEANOR T. JONES
58 Cliff St., Roxbury, Mass.

While purifying the blood this great vegetable remedy builds up and strengthens every portion of the system. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sores and Ulcers, Malaria, Scrofula, Skin Diseases, Contagious Blood Poison, hereditary taints, and all other diseases and disorders caused by impure or polluted blood.

As a tonic S. S. S. is unequalled. It invigorates every portion of the system, and the healthy blood it creates largely assists in overcoming any derangement of the digestive system If you are suffering from any blood trouble, or need a tonic to build up your constitution, you could not do better than to take S. S. S., a medicine that is in no degree harmful. Book on the blood and any medical advice free.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments, must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential. Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local. Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.

The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.

The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, eases nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

We Also Have Second-Hand Machinery
Established 1879

You no doubt find it a hard matter to sell your rough lumber to advantage because most of your customers want it finished. Furthermore you can get twice as much for your lumber by planing it, making it up into flooring, drop siding, window casing and mouldings, for which there is an unlimited demand at big prices. The Howell Planer and Matcher does all this work to perfection.

You can also make big money by working up all your slabs and waste material into Lath and Shingles. All you need for this purpose is our Lath Mill and Shingle Machine. We build the best and most up-to-date machines of this kind on the market which we can furnish you at manufacturers prices. Keep your plant running all the time. Remember we build complete Saw Mill Plants from top to bottom, all of our own manufacture. Our new Catalog B is just now out. If you have not received it, witre to-day. Manufactured by

It isn't so difficult to strengthen a weak stomach if one goes at it correctly. And this is true of the Heart and Kidneys. The old fashioned way of dosing the stomach or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is surely wrong! Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. "Go to the weak or ailing nerves of these organs," said he. Each inside organ has its controlling or "inside nerve." When these nerves fail them, those organs must surely falter. This vital truth is leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. A few days test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

A clergyman writes: Preventics, those little Candy Cold Cure Tablets are working wonders in my parish." Preventics surely will check a cold, or the Grippe, in a very few hours. And Preventics are so safe and harmless. No quinine, nothing harsh nor sickening. Fine for feverish restless. Box of 48 at 25c. Sold by all dealers.

Read the pain formula on a box of Pink Pain Tablets. Then ask your doctor if there is a better one. Pain means congestion—blood pressure somewhere. Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets check head pains, womanly pains, pain anywhere. Try one and see! 20 for 25c. Sold by all dealers.

PROCEEDINGS

Official Proceedings, Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake County.

Red Lake Falls, Minn.
November 27th, 1909.

On the call of the County Auditor, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 230 of the Laws of Minnesota, for the year 1905 and acts amendatory thereof, the Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake County, State of Minnesota, met in special session at the office of the County Auditor in the city of Red Lake Falls, Minn., on Saturday, the 27th day of November, A. D. 1909, at 10:00 o'clock a. m. for the purpose of hearing and considering the petition of Archibald D. Brown and others for the establishemnt and construction of a public ditch in the townships of Star and Hickory, Red Lake County, Minn.

Meeting called to order by the chairman at 10:00 o'clock a. m.

Members persent: Demann, Pigeon, Aubol, Johnson and Lindquist.

Members absent: None.

The petition of Archibald D. Brown and others for a drainage ditch came up for hearing and the petition was read. After hearing the arguments of all persons interested for or against the construction of the proposed ditch, on motion made by Commissioner Pigeon and seconded by Commissioner Johnson the following resolution appointing an engineer to survey the route of the said proposed ditch was adopted.

In the matter of the petition of Archibald D. Brown and others for locating and constructing County Ditch No. 43 in the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,)
)ss.
County of Red Lake.)

Whereas, A petition bearing date the 20th day of September, 1909, signed by Archibald D. Brown and others praying for the establishemnt of a certain Drainage Ditch in said county, designated and numbered by the County Auditor as County Ditch No. 43 the route of which is more fully described in said petition, and a proper bond accompanying the same, have been filed with the County Auditor of said county, as by law required:

And, Whereas, It appears by satisfactory proof to the County Board of Red Lake county, that due notice of the pendency of said petition, and the time and place at which the same would be heard, has been given as required by law:

Now, Therefore, We, the County Board of said county, at a special session held this day, do hereby appoint C. H. Martz as a competent and experienced engineer to make an accurate survey of the line of said Drainage Ditch from its source to its outlet, as provided and specified in and by Chapter 230 of the General Laws of 1905, and after completing his duties as such engineer to make and file his report with the County Auditor of said County on or before the 1st day of March, 1910.

Dated Nov. 27th, 1909.

By the Board.

(Seal) C. A. LINDQUIST,
Chairman of County Board,
of Red Lake County.
Attest: A. A. LATENDRESSE,
County Auditor.

On motion made by Commissioner Aubol and esconded by Commissioner Demann and carried unanimously, the following order appointing viewers on County Ditch No. 43 was made:

In the matter of the Petition of Archibald D. Brown and others for County Ditch No. 43 in the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota;

STATE OF MINNESOTA,)
)ss.
County of Red Lake.)

Whereas, A petition bearing date the 20th day of September, A. D. 1909, signed by Archibald D. Brown and others, praying for the establishment of a ditch in said county, designated and numbered by the County Auditor as County Ditch No. 43, the route of which is fully described in said petition, together with a proper bond accompanying the same, has been filed with the County Auditor of said county; and said County Auditor has given notice of the pendency of said petition, and the said notice has been published and served as by law required; and hearing had on said petition pursuant to said notice; and the said County Board of said county have heretofore duly appointed a competent engineer, to-wit: C. H. Martz to make a survey of said ditch.

Now Therefore, We, the County Board of said county, at a special session held this day, do hereby appoint John Hebert and Otto Zaiser and Gilbert Haavi, three resident freeholders of said county who are not interested in the construction of said proposed work, and not of kin to any of the parties known to be interested therein, to be viewers of said proposed work and of the route thereof. The said viewers shall first take an oath to faithfully perform their duties as such viewers; and thereafter, having received a certified copy of the petition for said ditch and of the order appointing them such viewers and of the order of County Auditor of said county designating the time and place of the first meeting of said viewers, shall meet at the time and place specified in the order of the County Auditor aforesaid and shall proceed to view said proposed work, and the land damaged or benefitted thereby; and, having completed said view and examination of said work, shall make and file their report thereof with said County Auditor of said county within thirty days from the date of their first meeting. In said report they shall in tabular form give the names of the owners of each tract of land to be benefitted or damaged by said proposed work, the description of each tract of land so benefitted or damaged (said names of owners to be the same as appear on the county tax duplicates of said county, and the description to be given in legal form), and the total number of acres in each of said tracts, the estimated number of acres in each tract of land to be benefitted or damaged (as the case may be), the number of acres added to any tract by the total or partial drainage of any meandered lake, or the change of any water course and the location and value of such added land; the damages [illegible] or corporate road or railroad or benefits any such road so that the roadbed or traveled track of any such road will be made better by the construction of said ditch, said viewers shall estimate the benefits arising therefrom to said road, roadbeds or railroads, and report said benfits, together with the names of roads and other particulars necessary to identify the corporations, private or public, to be benefited thereby, and amounts of benefits to each they shall report as part of such tabular statement; the damages awarded to each municipal or other corporation for injury to any road or roadbed, and from the necessary construction and maintenance of any bridge, culverts, or other works rendered necessary by the establishment of such ditch, stating the same separately. They shall also report the total estimated benefits in respect to said ditch entire, and branches thereof, if any, and also whether or not, in their opinion, the estimated expense of the construction of said ditch including the damages assessed therefor, is greater than the utility of said proposed ditch; and whether or not said proposed ditch is impracticable for any reason, and if so, stating the reason why it should not be constructed. In making said view and survey of said proposed work and their report thereon, the said viewers shall proceed according to Chatper 230 of the General Laws of 1905 and acts amendatory thereof.

Dated this 27th day of November, A. D. 1909.

The County Board of Red Lake County, Minnesota.

(Seal) By C. A. LINDQUIST,
Chairman.
Attest: A. A. LATENDRESSE,
County Auditor.

On motion duly carried the Board took a recess until 2:00 p. m.

Meeting called to order by the chairman at 2:00 p. m.

Members all present.

The matter of the repairing of Thief River Falls Ditch No. 1 came duly before the Board, and on motion made by Commissioner Johnson duly seconded by Commissioner Aubol, the following order for the repairing of Thief River Falls Ditch No. 1 was made:

In the matter of the repairing of Thief River Falls Ditch No. 1, in the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,)
)ss.
County of Red Lake.)

Whereas, it has been brought to the attention of the Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake County, State of Minnesota, that Thief River Falls, Ditch No. 1 needs repairing, and

Whereas, the said Board by its order bearing date the 28th day of August, A. D. 1909, did appoint C. H. Martz, engineer, to ascertain the cost of repairing said ditch, and

Whereas, the above entitled matter came on duly to be heard before the County Board of the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, at a special meeting of said Board duly called for the purpose of hearing and considering the matter of the repair of said ditch on the 6th day of November, A. D. 1909, at which time the matter was continued until the 27th day of November, A. D. 1909, at 2:00 o'clock p. m. to await the filing of a supplemental report of the said engineer covering Branch Ditch No. 1 of said named ditch, and

Whereas, the said engineer has completed the survey of said ditch and branch thereof and filed same in the office of the County Auditor of Red Lake County, Minnesota, together with his estimate of the cost thereof, and

Whereas, it appears by proper evidence that due notice has been given of the pendency thereof and of the time and place of hearing thereon and the said County Board did on the 27th day of November, A. D. 1909, proceed to hear said matter and the said Board having duly considered the same and heard all the parties interested for or against the repairing of same:

Now, Therefore, We, the County Board of said county and state, at the meeting of said Board held at the time last above specified, being satisfied that it is necessary that said ditch be repaired, do hereby order the repairing of said ditch, including Branch 1 thereof, according to the reports and specifications of said engineer made and field herein.

Dated this 27th day of November, A. D. 1909.

THE DIVA'S RUBY

SYNOPSIS.

Baraka, a Tartar girl, became enamored of a golden bearded stranger who was prospecting and studying herbs in the vicinity of her home in central Asia, and revealed to him the location of a mine of rubies hoping that the stranger would love her in return for her disclosure. They were followed to the cave by the girl's relatives, who blocked up the entrance, and drew off the water supply, leaving the couple to die. Baraka's cousin Saad, her betrothed, attempted to climb down a cliff overlooking the mine; but the traveler shot him. The stranger was revived from a water gourd Saad carried, dug his way out of the tunnel, and departed, deserting the girl and carrying a bag of rubies. Baraka gathered all the gems she could carry, and started in pursuit. Margaret Donne (Margarita da Cordova), a famous prima donna, became engaged in London to Konstantin Logotheti, a wealthy Greek financier. Her intimate friend was Countess Leven, known as Lady Maud, whose husband had been killed by a bomb in St. Petersburg; and Lady Maud's most intimate friend was Rufus Van Torp, an American, who had been a cowboy in early life, but had become one of the richest men in the world. Van Torp was in love with Margaret, and rushed to London as soon as he heard of her betrothal.

"If you had only said a lark instead of a hen, Rufus!" she laughed.

"We could get along a lot better without larks than without hens," answered her friend philosophically. "But I'll make it a nightingale next time, if I can remember, or a bald eagle, or any bird that strikes you as cheerful."

The terrible mouth had relaxed almost to gentleness, and the fierce blue eyes were suddenly kind as they looked into the woman's face. She led him to an old-fashioned sofa, their hands parted, and they sat down side by side.

"Cheerful," he said, in a tone of reflection. "Yes, I'm feeling pretty cheerful, and it's all over and settled."

"Do you mean the trouble you were in last spring?"

"N—no—not that, though it wasn't as funny as a Sunday school treat while it lasted, and I was thankful when it was through. It's another matter altogether that I'm cheerful about—besides seeing you, my dear. I've done it, Maud. I've done it at last."

"What?"

"I've sold my interest in the Trust. It won't be made known for some time, so don't talk about it, please. But it's settled and done, and I've got the money."

"You have sold the Nickel Trust?" Lady Maud's lips remained parted in surprise.

"And I've bought you a little present with the proceeds," he answered, putting his large thumb and finger into the pocket of his white waistcoat. "It's only a funny little bit of glass I picked up," he continued, producing a small twist of stiff writing paper. "You needn't think it's so very fine! But it's a pretty color, and when you're out of mourning I daresay you'll make a hatpin of it. I like handsome hatpins myself, you know."

He had untwisted the paper while speaking, it lay open in the palm of his hand, and Lady Maud saw a stone of the size of an ordinary hazel nut, very perfectly cut, and of that wonderful transparent red color which is known as "pigeon's blood," and which it is almost impossible to describe. Sunlight shining through Persian rose-leaf sherbet upon white silk makes a little patch of color that is perhaps more like it than any other shade of red, but not many Europeans have ever seen that, and it is a good deal easier to go and look at a pigeon's blood ruby in a jeweler's window.

"What a beautiful color!" exclaimed Lady Maud innocently, after a moment. "I didn't know they imitated rubies so well, though, of course, I know nothing about it. If it were not an impossiblity, I should take it for a real one."

"So should I," assented Mr. Van Torp quietly. "It'll make a pretty hatpin anyway. Shall I have it mounted for you?"

"Thanks, awfully, but I think I should like to keep it as it is for a little while. It's such a lovely color, just as it is. Thank you so much! Do tell me where you got it."

"Oh, well, there was a sort of a traveler came to New York the other day selling them what they call privately. I guess he must be a Russian or something, for he has a kind of an off-look of your husband, only he wears a beard and an eyeglass. It must be about the eyes. Maybe the forehead, too. He'll most likely turn up in London one of these days to sell this invention, or whatever it is."

Lady Maud said nothing to this, but she took the stone from his hand, looked at it some time with evident admiration, and then set it down on its bit of paper, upon a little table by the end of the sofa.

"If I were you, I wouldn't leave it around much," observed Mr. Van Torp carelessly. "Somebody might take a fancy to it. The color's attractive, you see, and it looks like real."

"Oh, I'll be very careful of it, never fear! I can't tell you how much I like it!" She twisted it up tightly in its bit of paper, rose to her feet, and put it away in her writing table.

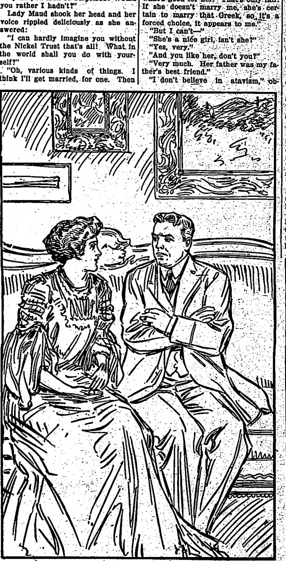
"It'll be a sort of souvenir of the old Nickel Trust," said her friend, watching her with satisfaction.

"Have you really sold out all your interest in it?" she asked, sitting down again; and now that she returned to the question her tone showed that she had not yet recovered from her astonishment.

"That's what I've done. I always told you I would, when I was ready. Why do you look so surprised? Would you rather I hadn't?"

Lady Maud shook her head and her voice rippled deliciously as she answered:

"I can hardly imagine you without the Nickel Trust that's all! What in the world shall you do with yourself?"



"What a Beautiful Color!"

"Oh, various kinds of things. I think I'll get married, for one. Then I'll take a rest and sort of look around. Maybe something will turn up. I've concluded to win the Derby next year—that's something anyway."

"Rather! Have you thought of anything else?"

She laughed a little, but was grave the next moment, for she knew him much too well to believe that he had taken such a step out of caprice, or a mere fancy for change. He noticed the grave look and was silent for a few moments.

"The Derby's a side show," he said at last. "I've come over to get married, and I want you to help me. Will you?"

"Can I?" asked Lady Maud, evasively.

"Yes, you can, and I believe there'll be trouble unless you do."

"Who is she? Do I know her?" She was trying to put off the evil moment.

"Oh, yes, you know her quite well. It's Mme. Cordova."

"But she's engaged to Mons. Logotheti—"

"I don't care. I mean to marry her if she marries any one. He shan't have her anyway."

"But I cannot deliberately help you to break off her engagement! It's impossible!"

"See here," answered Mr. Van Torp. "You know that Greek, and you know me. Which of us will make the best husband for an English girl? That's what Mme. Cordova is, after all. I put it to you. If you were forced to choose one of us yourself, which would you take? That's the way to look at it."

"But Miss Donne is not 'forced' to take one of you—"

"She's going to be. It's the same. Besides, I said 'if.' Won't you answer me?"

"She's in love with Mons. Logotheti," said Lady Maud, rather desperately.

"Is she, now? I wonder. I don't much think so myself. He's clever and he's obstinate, and he's just made her think she's in love, that's all. Anyhow, that's not an answer to my question. Other things being alike, if she had to choose, which of us would be the best husband for her?—the better, I mean. You taught me to say 'better,' didn't you?"

Lady Maud tried to smile.

"Of two, yes," she answered. "You are forcing my hand, my dear friend," she went on very gravely. "You know very well that I trust you with all my heart. If it were possible to imagine a case in which the safety of the world could depend on my choosing one of you for my husband, you know very well that I should take you, though I never was the least little bit in love with you, any more than you ever were with me."

"Well, but if you would, she ought," argued Mr. Van Torp. "It's for her own good, and as you're a friend of hers, you ought to help her to do what's good for her. That's only fair. If she doesn't marry me, she's certain to marry that Greek, so it's a forced choice, it appears to me."

"But I can't—"

"She's a nice girl, isn't she?"

"Yes, very."

"And you like her, don't you?"

"Very much. Her father was my father's best friend."

"I don't believe in atavism," observed the American, "but that's neither here nor there. You know what you wrote me. Do you believe she'll be miserable with Logotheti or not?"

"I think she will," Lady Maud answered truthfully. "But I may be wrong."

"No; you're right. I know it. But marriage is a gamble anyway, as you know better than any one. Are you equally sure that she would be miserable with me? Dead sure, I mean."

"No, I'm not sure. But that's not a reason—"

"It's a first-rate reason. I care for that lady, and I want her to be happy, and as you admit that she will have a better chance of happiness with me than with Logotheti, I'm going to marry her myself, not only because I want to, but because it will be a long sight better for her. See? No fault in that line of reasoning, is there?"

"So far as reasoning goes—" Lady Maud's tone was half an admission.

"That's all I wanted you to say," interrupted the American. "So that's settled, and you're going to help me."

"No," answered Lady Maud quietly; "I won't help you to break off that engagement. But if it should come to nothing, without your interfering—that is, by the girl's own free will and choice and change of mind, I'd help you to marry her if I could."

"But you admit that she's going to be miserable," said Van Torp stubbornly.

"I'm sorry for her, but it's none of my business. It's not honorable to try and make trouble between engaged people, no matter how ill-matched they may be."

"Funny idea of honor," observed the American, "that you're bound to let a friend of yours break her neck at the very gravel pit where you were nearly smashed yourself! In the hunting field you'd grab her bridle if she wouldn't listen to you, but in a matter of marriage—oh, no! 'It's dishonorable to interfere. She's made her choice and she must abide by it,' and all that kind of stuff!"

Lady Maud's clear eyes met his angry blue ones calmly.

"I don't like you when you say such things," she said, lowering her voice a little.

"I didn't mean to be rude," answered the millionaire, almost humbly. "You see I don't always know. I learnt things differently from what you did. I suppose you'd think it an insult if I said I'd give a large sum of money to your charity the day I married Mme. Cordova, if you'd help me through."

"Please stop." Lady Maud's face darkened visibly. "That's not like you."

"I'll give a million pounds sterling," said Mr. Van Torp slowly.

Lady Maud leaned back in her corner of the sofa, clasping her hands rather tightly together in her lap. Her white throat flushed as when the light of dawn kisses Parian marble, and the fresh tint in her cheeks deepened softly; her lips were tightly shut, her eyelids quivered a little, and she looked straight before her across the room.

"You can do a pretty good deal with a million pounds," said Mr. Van Torp, after the silence had lasted nearly half a minute.

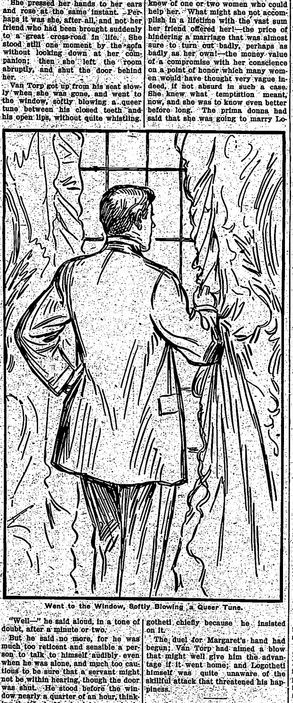
"Don't!" cried Lady Maud, in an odd voice.

"Forty thousand pounds a year," observed the millionaire thoughtfully. "You could do quite a great deal of good with that, couldn't you?"

"Don't! Please don't!"

She pressed her hands to her ears and rose at the same instant. Perhaps it was she, after all, and not her friend who had been brought suddenly to a great cross-road in life. She stood still one moment by the sofa without looking down at her companion; then she left the room abruptly, and shut the door behind her.

Van Torp got up from his seat slowly when she was gone, and went to the window, softly blowing a queer tune between his closed teeth and his open lips, without quite whistling.



Went to the Window, Softly Blowing a Queer Tune.

"Well—" he said at last, in a tone of doubt, after a minute or two.

But he said no more, for he was much too reticent and sensible a person to talk to himself audibly even when he was alone, and much too cautious to be sure that a servant might not be within hearing, though the door was shut. He stood before the window nearly a quarter of an hour, thinking that Lady Maud might come back, but as no sound of any step broke the silence he understood that he was not to see her again that day, and he quietly let himself out of the house and went off, not altogether discontented with the extraordinary impression he had made.

Lady Maud sat alone upstairs, so absorbed in her thoughts that she did not hear the click of the lock as he opened and shut the front door.

She was much more amazed at herself than surprised by the offer he had made. Temptation, in any reasonable sense of the word, had passed by her in life, and she had never before understood what it could mean to her.

She was eight-and-twenty years of age and a widow, and now it came to her suddenly in a shape of tremendous strength, through her trusted friend, who had helped her for years to help others. It was real temptation. The man who offered her a million pounds to save miserable wretches from a life of unspeakable horror, could offer twice as much, four, five, or ten millions perhaps. No one knew the vast extent of his wealth, and in an age of colossal fortunes she had often heard his spoken of with the half-dozen greatest. "You can do quite a great deal of good with forty thousand pounds a year."

Van Torp's rough-hewn speech rang through her head, and somehow its reckless grammar gave it strength and made it stick in her memory, word for word. In the drawer of the writing table before which she was sitting there was a little file of letters that meant more to her than anything else in the world, except one dear memory. They were all from rescued women, they all told much the same little story, and it was good to read. She had made many failures, and some terrible ones, which she could never forget; but there were real successes, too, there were over a dozen of them now, and she had only been at work for three years. If she had more money, she could do more; if she had much she could do much; and she knew of one or two women who could help her. What might she not accomplish in a lifetime with the vast sum her friend offered her!—the price of hindering a marriage that was almost sure to turn out badly, perhaps as badly as her own!—the money value of a compromise with her conscience on a point of honor which many women would have thought very vague indeed, if not absurd in such a case. She knew what temptation meant, now, and she was to know even better before long. The prima donna had said that she was going to marry Logotheti chiefly because he insisted on it.

The duel for Margaret's hand had begun; Van Torp had aimed a blow that might well give him the advantage if it went home; and Logotheti himself was quite unaware of the skillful attack that threatened his happiness.

CHAPTER III.

A few days after she had talked with Lady Maud, and before Mr. Van Torp's arrival, Margaret had gone abroad, without waiting for the promised advice in the matter of the wedding gown. With admirable regard for the proprieties she had quite declined to let Logotheti cross the channel with her, but had promised to see him at Versailles, where she was going to stop a few days with her mother's old American friend, the excellent Mrs. Rushmore, with whom she meant to go to Bayreuth to hear "Parsifal" for the first time.

Mrs. Rushmore had disapproved profoundly of Margaret's career, from the first. After Mrs. Donne's death, she had taken the forlorn girl under her protection, and had encouraged her to go on with what she vaguely called her "music lessons." The good lady was one of those dear, old-fashioned, kind, delicate-minded and golden-hearted American women we may never see again, now that "progress" has got civilization by the throat and is squeezing the life out of it. She called Margaret her "chickabiddy" and spread a motherly wing over her, without the least idea that she was rearing a valuable lyric nightingale that would not long be content to trill and quaver unheard.

Immense and deserved success had half reconciled the old lady to what had happened, and after all Margaret had not married an Italian tenor, a Russian prince, or a Parisian composer, the three shapes of man which seemed the most dreadfully immoral to Mrs. Rushmore. She would find it easier to put up with Logotheti than with one of those, though it was bad enough to think of her old friend's daughter marrying a Greek instead of a nice, clean Anglo-Saxon, like the learned Mr. Donne, the girl's father, or the good Mr. Rushmore, her lamented husband, who had been an upright pillar of the church in New York, and the president of a trust company that could be trusted.

After all, though she thought all Greeks must be what she called "designing," the name of Konstantin Logotheti was associated with everything that was most honorable in the financial world, and this impressed Mrs. Rushmore very much.

Logotheti was undoubtedly considered honest, and Mrs. Rushmore made quite sure of it, as well as of the fact that he had an immense fortune.

At Versailles, with its memories of her earlier youth, the prima donna wished to be Margaret Donne again, and to forget for the time that she was the Cordova, whose name was always first on the opera posters in New York, London and Vienna.

She traveled incognito. That is to say, she had sent her first maid and theatrical dresser Alphonsine to see her relations in Nancy for a month, and only brought the other with her; she had, moreover, caused the stateroom on the channel boat to be taken in the name of Miss Donne, and she brought no more luggage to Versailles than could be piled on an ordinary cart, whereas when she had last come from New York her servants had seen 87 pieces put on board the steamer, and a hat-box had been missing after all.

Mrs. Rushmore came out to meet her on the steps in the hot sunshine, portly and kind as ever, and she applied an embrace which was affectionate, yet imposing.

"My dearest child!" she cried. "I was sure I had not quite lost you yet!"

"I hope you will never think you have," Margaret answered, almost quite in her girlish voice of old.

She was very glad to come back. As soon as they were alone in the cool drawing room, Mrs. Rushmore asked her about her engagement in a tone of profound concern, as though it were a grave bodily ailment which might turn out to be fatal.

"Don't take it so seriously," Margaret answered with a little laugh; "I'm not married yet!"

The elderly face brightened.

"Do you mean to say that—that there is any hope?" she asked eagerly.

Margaret laughed now, but in a gentle and affectionate sort of way.

"Perhaps, just a little! But don't ask me, please. I've come home to forget everything for a few weeks."

"Thank heaven!" ejaculated Mrs Rushmore in a tone of deep relief. "Then if—if he should call this afternoon, or even to-morrow—may I tell them to say that you are out?"

She was losing no time; and Margaret laughed again, though she put her head a little on one side with an expression of doubt.

"I can't refuse to see him," she said, "though really I would much rather be alone with you for a day or two."

"My darling child!" cried Mrs. Rushmore, applying another embrace, "you shall! Leave it to me!"

Mrs. Rushmore's delight was touching, for she could almost feel that Margaret had come to see her quite for her own sake, whereas she had pictured the "child," as she still called the great artist, spending most of her time in carrying on inaudible conversations with Logotheti under the trees in the lawn, or in the most remote corners of the drawing room; for that had been the accepted method of courtship in Mrs. Rushmore's young days, and she was quite ignorant of the changes that had taken place since then.

Half an hour later, Margaret was in her old room upstairs writing a letter, and Mrs. Rushmore had given strict orders that until further notice Miss Donne was "not at home" for any one at all, no matter who might call.

When the letter already covered ten pages, Margaret laid down her pen and without the least pause or hesitation tore the sheets to tiny bits, inking her fingers in the process because the last one was not yet dry.

"What a wicked woman I am!" she exclaimed aloud, to the very great surprise of Potts, her English maid, who was still unpacking in the next room, the door being open.

"Beg pardon, ma'am?" the woman asked, putting in her head.

The KITCHEN CABINET

IN SPITE of all the fret and despair,
A song is always borne on the air,
And somewhere, the world is spanned with blue,
And earth is bright with rose's hue.
Then leave your stormy, cheerless heather,
And live in a world of pleasant weather."
—Letty Bigelow.

Sunday Night Suppers.

A supper on Sunday evening should be a light one, as it follows the late heavy dinner. If the night is cool, a bowl of cream soup or an oyster stew is always acceptable, then a sandwich and salad with a cup of tea or cocoa, or instead of the salad a dish of preserves makes a meal sufficiently hearty for the average person.

A bowl of freshly popped corn and milk makes a supper very satisfying to many.

A chafing dish supper is an ideal one for Sunday nights, as one never tires of seeing things done, and helping in the preparation. There are many dainty, digestible and appetizing dishes that one may prepare in the chafing dish. Creamed eggs served on toast are one of these. Fried oysters, or if one cares to risk the lobster a la Neuburg, and spend the night sitting up with it and a hot water bag.

Milk toast and a cup of hot well-made tea has a heartening quality for a light meal, and there are any number of sandwiches which are good, two favorites which will follow:

Onion Sandwiches.

Chop a mild onion, add salt, red pepper and a dash of mustard, spread on buttered bread and serve very cold. If one likes onions, these sandwiches are prime.

Spanish Sandwiches.

Cream a cake of cream cheese with a wooden spoon until soft, adding a little cream. Season with salt, pepper and one small chopped onion. Cut sandwich bread in thin slices, butter both sides and spread with the mixture and put together, making four or five layers. The top and bottom layers are buttered on one side only. Wrap in a damp cloth and press under a weight. Serve cut in thin slices.

Celery Salad.

Cut tender celery into fine shreds when well dried, mix with mayonnaise and decorate with hard cooked eggs cut into eights lengthwise, and the white celery leaves. Chill and send to the table.

BY THE cynic, the sad, the fallen
Who had no strength for the strife.
The world's highway is cumbered to-day;
They make up the item of life.

"But the virtue that conquers passion,
And the sorrow that hides in a smile—
It is these that are worth the homage of earth,
For we find them but once in a while."

Some Timely Hints Which May Be Valuable.

For autumn dinners or luncheons there are many beautiful centerpieces, favors and place cards that may be made at home with little expense.

If one wanted to give a little dinner with a shower for a bride-to-be, a unique and pleasing decoration for the table is a large ripe pumpkin, hollowed out, the shape of a basket, and lined well with paper, and the gifts placed inside, each with a small ribbon by which it may be removed. Autumn leaves, vines, grapes and apples may surround the centerpiece, to add to its attractiveness. Place cards with Japanese lanterns, brownies or autumn fruits may be easily painted by one, with a little of the artistic gift. The favors may be anything that appeals to the taste. Small pumpkin Jack o'Lanterns lighted by candles, are especially appropriate.

For a candle light supper, fill a large glass punchbowl with water and then pour over it a small quantity of olive oil, place it in the center of the table and on it float 15 or 20 tiny tapers.

A yellow straw basket with corn-colored ribbons, may be made a beauty, and a joy forever, by filling it with autumn leaves, plums, grapes, pears and apples, as a center piece. Candle shades with autumn tinted leaves done in cut work and lined with the colored tissue, are beautiful in their soft tints, when lighted.

A daintier or more fairylike candleholder can not be imagined than one made of a calla lily with the center or pistil removed and a yellow candle placed in its place.

Oyster Omelet.

Scald a dozen and a half of oysters in their own liquor, then drain and cut in small pieces. Beat the whites of six eggs, salt and pepper. Add half the oysters to the beaten yolks and put all together after mixing into the omelet pan. Serve with white or brown sauce to which are added the remainder of the oysters.

Nellie Maxwell.

To the Childish Mind.

One morning little Elsie discovered that the white covers had been removed from the parlor furniture. "Oh, mamma," she cried, "the chairs have shed their nightgowns!"

Still That Kind.

"When I went away you were in love with a certain woman and—"

"I married her."

"The marriage turned out well I hope?"

"Well, she is still a certain woman; so certain that I can not tell her anything."

A Prose Suggestion.

"How can you best drink in the beauty of a starry night?" he asked.

"I suppose," she replied, "with the Great Dipper."

The Tendency to be Queer

Every Community Has Individuals Whose One Idea Is to Kick Over the Traces.

While the majority of people are inclined to think and act like one another, thus keeping the social order from violent convulsions, there is on the part of a great many a native tendency toward the queer; they are contented only outside of the traces. In every community small enough to be aware of its own individualities people in general know who are the "natural-born" come-outers—which man and which woman is likely to take up with the newest fad in dress, doctoring, means of grace, political economy, "social science," and the true authorship of Shakespeare's plays.

There are certain persons destined to progress from one so-called reform to another more extreme as quickly as the reform shows itself. They are pretty sure to box the compass of religions, passing by gradual or violent stages from absolute irreligion to the narrowest dogmatism or, with great rapidity, the other way around. Or they gravitate once and for all into the most irrational and absurd religion which happens to be forced upon their attention, and stick contentedly to its extremest tenets and practices. The more occult and, to the ordinary mind, preposterous the new religion, the greater the attraction it has for certain minds. The new religion is apt to be founded on some one phase of the old—a phase of it which, by very reiteration and use has become trite. In its new and fantastic dress the old principle strikes the new adept as something in the nature of a fresh revelation.—Century.

States That Formally Seceded.

Eleven of the southern states passed ordinances of secession. South Carolina seceded December 20, 1860, followed by Mississippi, January 9, 1861; Florida, January 10; Alabama, January 11; Georgia, January 19; Louisiana, January 26; Texas, February 1. These seven states which comprised what was known as the "Cotton Belt," organized the confederate government. The provisional constitution was prepared February 4, 1861, and the president and vice-president were inaugurated at Montgomery, Ala., February 18. Virginia passed articles of secession and joined the insurgent government April 17, 1861; Arkansas, May 6; North Carolina, May 21; Tennessee, June 8. Though the states of Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri did not pass ordinances of secession, they were afterward represented in the confederate congress.

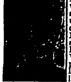
OWES HER LIFE TO

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound



Vienna, W. Va.—"I feel that I owe the last ten years of my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Eleven years ago I was a walking shadow. I had been under the doctor's care but got no relief. My husband persuaded me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it worked like a charm. It relieved all my pains and misery. I advise all suffering women to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Emma Wheaton, Vienna, W. Va.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases of any similar medicine in the country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every such suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

WESTERN CANADA

What Governor Deneen, of Illinois, Says About It:

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Governor Deneen, of Illinois, owns a section of land in Saskatchewan, Canada. He has said in an interview:

"As an American I am delighted to see the remarkable progress of Western Canada. Our people are flocking across the boundary in thousands, and I have not yet met one who admitted he had made a mistake. They are all doing well. There is scarcely a community in the Middle or Western States that has not a representative in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta."

125 Million Bushels of Wheat in 1909

Western Canada field crops for 1909 will easily yield to the farmer $170,000,000.00 in cash. Free Homesteads of 160 acres, and pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. Railway and Land Companies have land for sale at reasonable prices. Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop. Splendid climate, good schools, excellent railway facilities, low freight rates, wood, water and lumber easily obtained.

CERTAIN DEATH.

Hilda—Would you lay down your life for me?

Harold—Glady, dearest.

Hilda—Then go and tell father of our engagement.

Father Was an Invalid.

It had been a hard day in the field, and father and son were very hungry. The only things eatable on the table were 12 very large apple dumplings. The father had consumed ten while the boy was eating one, and then both reached for the one remaining.

"Son," pleaded the farmer, "you wouldn't take the last apple dumpling from your poor sick pa, would you?"—Success Magazine.

Her Sad Finish.

"Did you ever know a girl to die for love?"

"Yes."

"Did she just fade away and die because some man deserted her?"

"No; she just took in washing and worked herself to death because the man she loved married her."

CAREFUL DOCTOR

Prescribed Change of Food Instead of Drugs.

It takes considerable courage for a doctor to deliberately prescribe only food for a despairing patient, instead of resorting to the usual list of medicines.

There are some truly scientific physicians among the present generation who recognize and treat conditions as they are and should be treated regardless of the value to their pockets. Here's an instance:

"Four years ago I was taken with severe gastritis and nothing would stay on my stomach, so that I was on the verge of starvation.

"I heard of a doctor who has a summer cottage near me—a specialist from N. Y., and as a last hope, sent for him.

"After he examined me carefully he advised me to try a small quantity of Grape-Nuts at first, then as my stomach became stronger to eat more.

"I kept at it, and gradually got so I could eat and digest three teaspoonfuls. Then I began to have color in my face, memory became clear, where before everything seemed a blank. My limbs got stronger and I could walk. So I steadily recovered.

"Now, after a year on Grape-Nuts I weigh 153 lbs. My people were surprised at the way I grew fleshy and strong on this food."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

STORY OF ARCHIVES

Public Record Office in London Contains History of England.

Source from Which Froude, Freeman and Green Devised Materials for Their Annals—State Papers in Collection.

London.—Go through an imposing archway in Chancery lane any day of the week, enter a large stone imitation antique building, write your name in a book, give up your umbrella, enter a small circular hall with desks and book shelves all round it and you find yourself in the search-room of the public record office of this ancient kingdom, where are stored materials for the history of England during the last 800 years.

The famous Shakespearean discoveries of Dr. C. W. Wallace have directed fresh attention to this wonderful storehouse of the archives of the past. These last few days numbers of people have drifted thither in the vague hope of seeing the document he describes or of finding something equally valuable. It is only necessary to breathe the name of Shakespeare to make oneself exceedingly unpopular with the officials. They are always ready to help a serious searcher, but they dread and detest the merely curious person or the crank.

People who believe there is money due them are a perpetual trial. They have hazy notions of some chancery suit in which an ancestor was concerned. They sit all day pouring over court records. They are almost as fatuous as the searchers at Somerset house, who start reading all the wills of the last century in the hope of finding themselves entitled to some forgotten legacy.

Broadly, the records are divisible into two classes—state papers and legal documents. It was among the former that Froude and Freeman and J. R. Green and other historians found materials for their books. The latter are not quite so interesting, but there are fascinating side lights upon our social history to be drawn from them. Their very number shows, for example, how amazingly litigious Englishmen used to be.

The reason probably was that nearly all were copyholders of land and knew a certain amount of law themselves. At all events they delighted in lawsuits; would institute proceedings upon what seem now the slightest ground, and even get up cases in a friendly way apparently just to keep their hands in. Law was, in fact, that Elizabethan substitute for golf. This accounts for the number of great families founded by lawyers, who were in those days the only people who heaped up wealth.

There are literally millions of sheepskin parchments relating to lawsuits stored up within these fireproof walls. One has a vision, first, of hills white with the flocks which yielded up the writing material; then of the litigants—sharp-eyed, apple-cheecked farmers, cunning, smooth-spoken townsmen, jolly abbots and warrior bishops, great noblemen, living like princes; dignified masters of provincial trade guilds; finally, of the vicissitudes these records have passed through before being housed in safety here.

Every single document tells a story, carries one back at a bound into the past. Here is a writ of King Edward III. directing a sheriff to inquire into the death of a royal tenant and to discover the next heir.

It is the history of the English people that is found here in the rough. No other nation has such records. And there is hope for many more discoveries since there are yet mountains of them unexplored.

SILK FARM IN CITY

Philadelphia Barber Enlists Aid of Agricultural Department.

Three Hundred Mulberry Trees Now Growing on Jersey Farm—Yearly Yield of Cocoons Expected to Reach 700 Pounds.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A "silk farm" has been established near this city with the aid of the United States department of agriculture. It is not, as yet, an extensive one, but it is in charge of a proficient and experienced silk-worm raiser.

At present the farm contains 300 young white mulberry trees, which the government sent to the pioneer here, James Carvello, who six days in the week is a journeyman barber, and at all times an enthusiastic silk grower. The trees were sent as an experiment.

About a year ago Carvello heard that the government was preparing to assist in the culture of the silk worm in this country. His father-in-law, Charles Moroni, was for 14 years engaged in the industry near Rome, and together they decided to go to Washington and volunteer to make experiments if the government would assist them to get the trees necessary for the work. The silk worms are voracious and at the same time dainty feeders, and their proper culture, to a large extent, depends upon supplying them with sufficient food of the right kind.

Carvello and Moroni were questione and were found to have had the necessary experience, so the government officials agreed to supply both trees and worms. When the trees arrived they were about eight inches high. Carvello planted 300 in close rows in boxes in the little yard back of his dwelling, 714 St. Alban's street. The trees sent to Moroni were planted on his place at Somers Point, N. J., where he has a lot about one hundred and fifty feet square.

The trees now in Carvello's yard are about six feet high, and have large leaves, but are too young as yet for the purpose for which they are intended. Two years more will be required before their growth is sufficient to establish a colony of silk worms. Carvello said that he would take the young trees to his father-in-law's place this fall, where they will be transplanted.

"The air here in Philadelphia," said Carvello, "is not pure enough for the trees. There is too much carbon in it. I intend to take the trees down to my father-in-law's place. He has more room than I have. Together we shall have 600 trees, and in five or six years we should have a yearly yield of cocoons of about 700 pounds. The government offers to buy all the cocoons we raise at $1.25 a pound.

"My father-in-law, who is a native of Rome, has had 14 years' experience. They tried to get some of his secrets from him down in Washington, but he is wise. When the trees are of good size (and that will be in about two years) we will send to Rome for worms. After that the culture will be merely a case of watching worms and trees. You know, the worms get sick, and they have to be taken care of and cured, or they will die.

"The trees begin to bud April 25, and then the tender young branches are given to the worms. Later the worms are fed with tender leaves. They will only eat from one side of a leaf, and for some reason they would rather starve to death than touch the other side. Of course, all the worms are not allowed to reach the butterfly stage they ruin the cocoon by breaking the silk strands. So, when the cocoon is formed the worm is killed. Others are allowed to reach the butterfly stage and lay eggs to be hatched the following year.

"There are about thirty-nine thousand eggs to the ounce, and this number, if successful, will yield about two hundred pounds of cocoons.

"If we are successful at Somers Point we shall take a larger place and cultivate more extensively. It is largely a matter of sufficient food, and that means sufficient trees to furnish leaves. The worms feed about four or five times a day and are not put upon the trees, but are fed with leaves taken from the trees.

"I do not know why silk worm culture has not been extensively tried here, for the white mulberry tree seems to flourish here as well as in Italy. I think the trees are originally brought from Italy. The white mulberry has no fruit and seems to be the only tree whose leaves the silk worm can eat."

PROFIT IN IOWA DEER FARM

Conducted by Trapper Who Had Tried Wild Geese and Wolves with No Success.

Des Moines, Ia.—Twenty miles southwest of Mason City is the only deer farm in the west. It is operated by John W. Griggs, a hunter and trapper of pioneer days, who has a herd of 100 deer, from which he yearly realizes a good profit.

Griggs' farm has been a zoological retreat for years. First he reared wolves, then wild geese, then antelope, then elk, and now deer. He began 15 years ago with a pair of Virginia deer and has experimented with white tails, black tails and other hybrids, but the climate of Iowa has evolved a type of the northern deer as the one hardy enough for all purposes.

Griggs pays as much attention to the breeding of the deer as the average former does to the breeding of horses. This is necessary to prevent inbreeding, which means scrubs. The mating season is in November, the fawns are born in May or June and by fall the spots have all left the fawns and their normal coat of hair appears.

Deer in captivity breed as well as in the wild state. Young does usually give birth to a single fawn, but the older ones usually have twins. Last year Griggs' 35 does brought him 56 fawns. These require no care.

The deer corral, which includes a large piece of woodland, is surrounded by an eight-foot woven wire fence, doubly strengthened as to posts. The natural food of deer is the green bits of the forest, but they can be taught to like corn, while alfalfa and clover are delicacies that appeal to their appetites.

Griggs markets yearly all the deer he cares to sell. For park purposes he gets from $25 to $30 each, while for venison he secures as much from a carcass, the antlers bringing in an average of five dollars each. About the only losses come from injuries inflicted when a deer is frightened and from conflicts of angry or jealous bucks.

Extracts Too Many Teeth

Patient Secures $250 Judgment Against Dental Institute for Pulling Twenty-Two.

London.—What Marshall Hall, K. C., described as "the fine art of dentistry," and Bernard Shaw has termed "ivory-snatching," was the subject of an action that came before Mr. Justice Bray.

The defendant was the London Hygienic institute of Oxford street, one of whose operators, Thomas Samson Mason, has extracted 90,000 teeth during a nine years' career—an average of 10,000 a year.

The plaintiff was George Henry Hawthorne, a Cricklewood baker, 22 of whose teeth Mr. Mason removed at one sitting.

Mr. Hawthorne claimed to be compensated for his sufferings, alleging that he called for mercy when five teeth had gone, and that in spite of his remonstrances Mr. Mason went on to the bitter end.

Mr. Mason's side of the story is that, being warned that enough teeth had been drawn for one afternoon, Mr. Hawthorne declared that he had screwed up his courage for the extraction of the 22, and that if he desisted after the removal of five teeth, he would not be able to nerve himself up to the ordeal again.

Further allegations were that Mr. Hawthorne became so ill after the extraction that he had to spend three weeks in bed, and that 14 stumps were left which had to be drawn by another dentist subsequently. When he went to the institute he had agreed to pay $63.75 on the installment system for extraction and new teeth.

"My screams were terrible," said Mr. Hawthorne, giving evidence. "I screamed as he took out each tooth up to the number of five, and then I fainted. [illegible] dentistry. The hearing was adjourned or, as Marshall Hall put it, "stumps were drawn."

A king's bench jury decided that 22 is an excessive number of teeth to extract at one sitting. It therefore awarded $250 damages to Hawthorne.

Mr. Hawthorne had said that he raised "terrible screams" of protest after the operator had taken out No. 5. This was denied by a female "receptionist," who declared that, although she was close at hand, she heard no cries of distress.

Taking Care of Yourself.

There never was a time when people paid as much attention to their health and strength as they do now. Time was when fine stock and fine horses were fed more carefully than human beings.

The result of properly balanced rations has worked wonders with stock and recent experiments are proving that the same thing is true of mankind.

It has been found that Quaker Oats eaten often and regularly taking the place of heavy, greasy foods will work wonders in the health and strength of a family.

School children fed frequently on Quaker Oats thrive physically and are always capable of the best work at school. For athletes, laborers, it is the best food. One of the attractive features of Quaker Oats is the perfect way it is packed. Besides the regular size package there is the large size family package. 10

Suspicious.

The father of Judge W. H. Wadhams had a chicken-coop and a dog and a stable hand. It began to look to Mr. Wadhams as though some one had discovered the combination. So he kept the coop and the stable hand, but he got a new dog. Next day the bent old negro who groomed the Wadhams' horses came to him. "You los' you affection foh me, boss?" he asked. "No, Scipio," said Mr. Wadhams. "I like you as well as ever." "Then," said Scipio, peevishly, "w'yn't you tie Old Rover in de chicken-coop, 'stid of dat new dorg?"

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

We've arranged it—a special representative from our Chicago tailoring firm, Edward E. Strauss & Co., is going to be here Dec. 8. He is bringing 500 sample woolens in the large pieces. Better look them over; it'll be worth while. $17.50 to $55.00.—J. P. Harren, the Shoe Man.

John C. Nauman, who is to leave for Nebraska soon, will hold an auction sale on his farm, two miles west of town, next Tuesday, Dec. 7, commencing at 12 o'clock sharp. Horses, cattle, farm machinery, household goods and many other articles of personal property will be offered for sale.

M. B. A. Election of officers will be on next Monday evening, Dec. 5, at 8 o'clock sharp. The meeting is very important and a large attendance of the members of the local lodge is desired. After the election the members will be entertained at progressive sinch with appropriate prizes to winners.

Geo. M. Walz, the state truant officer who was in Red Lake Falls two weeks ago, was able to induce nearly all the children of school age to attend school. He will return to Red Lake Falls in a few days and it will be the purpose of that visit to see to it that those who persist in violating the school laws do not do so any longer.

P. J. Nimesgern who has spent the past season in Oklahoma, returned to Red Lake Falls last Saturday. After disposing of his personal property here he will go south again. He will hold an auction sale at his house on the north side next Monday afternoon, Dec. 6, commencing at 1 o'clock. Many articles of personal property will be offered for sale.

Helmuth Zaiser left last Saturday for the big trees and the tall grass. He returned yesterday and brought with him a young doe. The poor thing was dead—quite as dead as though it had been shot by a real hunter. A lot of people have been wondering how Helmuth captured the poor creature. Some believe that he snared it, others that he may have "drownded" it out of its hole.

John C. Nauman and family are soon to leave Red Lake county. Mr. Nauman has purchased a half interest in a lumber yard at Burr, Neb., and he will go to that place soon to assume the management of the business. The Naumans are estimable people and many friends will regret that they are to leave the country. They expect to leave the last of next week or some time during the following week.

The pupils of the Presbyterian Sunday School are planning to give a Christmas entertainment on Christmas eve. The primary and junior departments will present the cantata, "Jack Frost's Christmas Shower." A collection to defray the expenses of the entertainment will be taken at the Sabbath School next Sunday, Dec. 5. It is hoped that the pupils and friends of the school will make this offering a liberal one.

Fremont Sivertson and family of Wylie have returned from a visit to southern Minnesota. They spent the Thanksgiving season at their old home in Blue Earth county.

Put yourself in the way of being shown how really good clothes can be made—made to your order, by Edward E. Strauss & Co. at $17.50 to $35.00. You can make your choice from the large piece. A salesman will be here Dec. 8, direct from Chicago.—J. P. Harren, the Shoe Man.

In an item of "Thirteen years ago" in this issue, mention is made of State Engineer Ralph and his plan of connecting the Lake of the Woods with the Red River by means of a canal. Mr. Ralph had the whole plan at that time worked out, but he found it impossible to arouse sufficient interest in the project at that time to warrant undertaking the work. It is interesting to recall this these days when everybody is talking barge canals and ship canals and when the so-called Mershon plan is being seriously considered by thoughtful men in the state. This Mershon plan provides for a barge canal across the state, from Lake of the Woods thru Roseau county, Wannaska and Roseau, to Lake Traverse, which Ralph anticipated thirteen years ago.—Roseau Region.

WARNING TO DEALERS

Communication From Andrew French, Dairy and Food Commissioner.

To Oyster Dealers and Others Interested:—

Your attention is particularly directed to the provisions of Section 4993, Revised Laws 1905, which section reads in part as follows:

Imitation of Foods, etc.—Every person who, with the intent that the same may be sold as unadulterated or undiluted, shall adulterate or dilute wine, milk, distilled spirits, or malt liquors, or any drug, medicine, food or drink for man or beast; or shall offer for sale or sell the same as unadulterated or undiluted, or without disclosing to or informing the purchaser that the same has been adulterated or diluted; * * * where special provision has not otherwise been made by statute for its punishment, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished by a fine of not less than $25.00, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than thirty days."

Jobbers and Dealers are hereby cautioned against receiving from packers or others, oysters which have been adulterated by the addition of water or ice, and retailers are also cautioned not to dilute oysters with water nor permit ice to come in direct contact therewith.

The trade will be given until January 1, 1910, to so adjust its business as to comply with this law.

STATE FAIR AND POLITICS.

appear to defer to Brower, where he can develop strength he won't let Brower's interests stand in his way. Hanscom is a disturbing element. The leaders don't quite like the propositions the Hanscom boom is assuming. What is worse, they don't see very well what they are going to do about it.

A SERIOUS DILEMMA.

Another thing which the leaders don't like and which they are trying to shut their eyes and to blind the public to is the growth of the county option movement. Not that they aren't ready to take it up, if they would be allowed to direct it, and could do so without letting go their grip of the organization. The real thing that troubles the candidates—Eberhart and Brower among others—is that as they look at it they are between the devil and the deep sea. If prior to the state convention they declare for county option, so strong a hold have the brewing interests on the republican organization, they fear they cannot get the nomination. If on the other hand they get the nomination at the hand of the brewers and affiliated interests, the chances are they can't win the election.

ANOTHER CAUSE OF ALARM.

On top of this comes the talk of John Lind as the democratic candidate for governor. With the leaders bent on leading, and the rank and file of the republicans having acquired the unpleasant habit of independent voting, the situation presented obviously has its embarassments. This, with a republican governor who finds on his accession to office nothing to reform, and who is perforce obliged to adopt the policies of his democratic predecessors and in his public speeches takes occasion to endorse and amplify his recommendations, is likely to occasion a question in the public mind as to whether to be able to pronounce the party shibboleth is a matter of such absolute necessity. These are not the most pleasant times in the world for candidates who fear to state fully their attitude on public questions lest they offend one or the other factions to which they look to for support on the ground that they call themselves by the same party name.

STRONG OIL DECISION.

Another thing which has disturbed the political equilibrium is the decision in the Standard Oil case. It isn't merely that this has driven the Standard Oil company to the wall. It has raised a question as to the legality of the operations of a host of corporations doing an interstate business whose managers and directors have for a decade or more maintained republican affiliations and financed their state and national campaigns. It makes the question of the further pursuance of the Roosevelt policies a vital matter to republican managers. If the law is enforced without fear or favor there can be no further hope of assistance from that quarter. If the Roosevelt policies are abandoned the moment it is proved they can be made effective, will the public stand for it?

CORPORATIONS REASURRED.

The word sent out from Washington is designed to reassure the various trusts. It took five years it is said to accumulate the evidence and take the proceedings which resulted in the decree against the Standard Oil Co. All that time the "big stick" was in constant action. Now the "big stick" has given away to the "golf stick." Naturally there is no occcasion for immediate alarm.

FRANK KELLOGG'S BOOM.

Just the same Frank Kellogg's Senatorial stock is looking up. At an unfortunate time, too. For Senator Clapp has negotiations well under way looking to a cessation of hostilities. He was just about read— to be good. The tariff commission was the price it had been agreed upon during Aldrich's western trip to pay for a truce, and the dropping of the tariff agitation. It is too bad that a gag should have been put in Clapp's mouth at the moment made psychological by the decision in the Standard Oil case for the launching of Frank Kellogg's Senatorial boom.

A Star Litter Carrier.
Will SAVE You TIME and MONEY.

Without a doubt "The Star" is the most reliable made. It is constructed of heavy malleable iron; load held from four different points on the steel shaft. Note that it has a winding chain instead of cable, which unravels. The tub dumps either way, so that you don't have to pack it heavy on one side to make it dump as in others. It has a quick lifting device; you non't want a slow one. Pulling 56 lbs. on the hand chain raises 320 lbs. in the tub. The carrier shown here is the "King of all Rigid Track Litter Carriers"—The Star No. 333. Come in and get an estimate of the cost of fitting out your barn with one of these labor savers. The one shown is the best, but we have the cheaper outfits, as cheap as anyone, that run on a steel rod instead of a track. It costs nothing to investigate this and you may get some pointers by looking over the "Star" line. We have samples in stock.

$3,330 FOR ROADS IN RED LAKE COUNTY

Cities and Villages Must Turn Over Ten Per Cent of the License Money.

Law Was Passed by Last Legislature—Money to be Spent on Roads.

Through an apparently forgotten law passed by the last legislature, which will take effect Jan. 1st next, the cause of good roads in Minnesota will receive an unexpected impetus in the shape of a handsome "pork barrel" supplied out of liquor license money paid throughout the state.

The law in question is chapter 450 and it provides that 10 per cent of all liquor license money paid in towns and cities of less than 10,000 inhabitnats shall go to their respective treasuries for expenditure by county boards for general road and bridge improvements. It is known as the Duea law.

The Duea law was passed at the last session of the legislature and is supposed to answer the complaint made in farming communities, that, although the farmer spent money in the saloons of his neighboring towns, the rural districts never received any benefit from the liquor license money of which his expenditures were a part. This the Duea law is supposed to correct and at the same time give him a more valuable return in the shape of good roads by which to reach his nearest market.

St. Louis county will get the most from this source of revenue, the amount being $17,400. Red Lake county is sixth in the list. Local city and village authorities will be required to turn over $3,330 to the county.

"SPANISH SWINDLE" MONSTER GOLD BRICK

Government Exposing Big "Unfortunate Relative" Confidence Graft.

Many People Caught by Game Worked All Over the World.

An interesting story of a big confidence game comes from government officials at Washington. The government has been investigating the so-called "Spanish Swindle," and the story of the investigation is published in full because it is an interesting story and because it may serve as a warning to some people. The following story is authentic because it is received direct from the state department at Washington:

The Department of State, at Washington, has received a report from the American Consul-General at Barcelona, Spain, in regard to the band of swindlers operating in various towns and cities in Spain, who make a practice of writing to persons in the United States respecting the imprisonment of a relative and the guardianship of a child.

The Consul-General states that the alleged prisoner generally describes himself as a political prisoner from Cuba; he is at the point of death and has but one friend—the prison priest—through whose good offices he is enabled to smuggle an occasional letter out of the prison fort.

The prisoner is rich. He has a fortune in cash on deposit in the United States, but the certificate of deposit is concealed in a secret receptacle of his valise; itself has been taken possession of by the court at Carthagena, which tried and condemned him, and will be held until the prisoner or his representative has satisfied the costs of the trial. The prisoner has an only daughter; dying in his prison, his sole thought is of this beloved offspring. He has no friend or relative in Spain to whose care he can commit her. In this emergency his thoughts turn to the distant relative in the United States whom he has never seen and of whom he knows only through hearsay or the family tree. Will the distant relative assume the guardianship of the darling daughter and the darling daughter's fortune of about $30,000? If the distant relative accepts the trusts one-fourth of the prisoner's entire fortune will be the material reward. The good priest will go at once to the United States and take the darling daughter with him. There is but one condition: the ready money which the prisoner brought with him to Spain has been exhausted; the distant relative is therefore requested to send enough to liberate the valise containing the secret receptacle and the certificate of deposit. This money is to be sent to the good priest at an address indicated, and, having received it, the good priest will at once secure the valise and start for America, the land of the free and the home of the brave, with the darling daughter.

The above is generally the first letter of the series. It is quickly followed by another in which the prisoner pathetically states that his strength is rapidly failing and the end is near. He beseeches his dear distant relative to assume the trust and be a loving father to the darling daughter. The third letter is from the good priest himself, who in brief, touching terms, and hopelessly bad English, announces the death of the unhappy prisoner; the good priest adds that the darling daughter is under his care. He is ready to put his promise into execution and start for the United States as soon as he shall have received the necessary funds from the distant relative. The good priest frequently incloses with his letter a bogus newspaper clipping announcing the death in prison at Barcelona of the famous Cuban patriot (sometimes called Augustin Lafiente); the newspaper notice also speaks cunningly of the confiscated valise and the darling daughter.

It is a simple scheme, but presented in such a plausible way that almost any unsuspecting "distant relative" of European extraction would be more or less deceived by the glad prospect of falling heir to the agreeable custody of a darling daughter with a big fortune, and a one-fourth interest theerin as an additional recompense.

Naturally the first impulse of the distant relative is to ask a lawyer or a judge or some authority what course he ought to pursue in the premises, but as he thinks of doing this his attention is taken by the warning in the prisoner's letter beseeching him not to mention the matter to any living soul lest the secret of the valise and the hidden receptacle be indiscreetly betrayed.

The valise, after all, with its concealed certificate of deposit, is the key to the situation and possession must be taken of it before anything can be done or said. This (so cunningly set forth by the prisoner) is very evident to the distant relative, and so he quite frequently preserves the secret intact, and instead of consulting a lawyer or writing to the American Consul-General at Barcelona he quietly sends a draft for the sum demanded to the good priest and awaits results. Of course he waits in vain, and the poor, dead prisoner and the good priest and the darling daughter in the course of time pass out of his life forever leaving him only an uncomfortable memory of the money he so cheerfully contributed to the confidence game.

For nearly twenty years these same knaves have been practicing their swindle, and it is needless to suggest that they are very carefully organized; they have confederates not only in the United States but in most other countries. The confederates in question select a man and find out all they can about him; they get hold of family names, family origin, and family characteristics. This information is transmitted to the rascals in Spain, and letters are at once written to the prospective victim. The scheme is presented and developed in a very plausible way and many of our fellow-countrymen have "bitten" promptly and cheerfully.

Under the Spanish laws a felony must be consummated before the police may act and a mere attempt to obtain money by false pretenses does not appear to warrant arrest. The money must be actually paid over and the prosecuting witness must be present in propria persona to testify; otherwise prosecution would be useless.

Recently the letters written to the distant relative have varied somewhat from the original; the political prisoner having become a noted Russian banker who absconded, leaving a deficit of some millions of roubles, killed in a quarrel in England another Russian, and finally took refuge in Spain, where he was apprehended and charged with manslaughter.

This change of character, however, is immaterial, and in the future more new characters will probably be introduced by the gang. The scheme is the same, and the public is warned to place no credence in such similar letters.

Every effort has been made by the Department of State and its representatives in Spain to unmask these scoundrels and bring them to justice, and the Spanish authorities have also been active and several members of the gang have been apprehended and held for trial, but so far no convictions have resulted, owing probably to the peculiarity of the Spanish law referred to in the report of the Consul-General at Barcelona.

Council Proceedings.

Regular meeting of the city council held at the city hall, December 2nd, 1909.

Meeting called to order by President Borchers.

Roll called.

Aldermen present: Crompe, Paul and Borchers.

Aldermen absent: Hennemuth and Remick.

Minutes of the previous meeting read and approved.

STRIKE EFFECTS VAST EXTENT OF TERRITORY

Limited Number of Men Directly Affected but Transportation is Disorganized.

Workmen Pay Big Price for Industrial Independence—Public Pays Also.

[Special Correspondence to Red Lake Falls Gazette.]

St. Paul, Dec. 7.—The switchmen's strike is on. Although only some 3000 men are directly effected, it has disorganized transportation through a vast extent of territory. The switchmen hold the key to the railroad situation. They dominate it at the terminals, and, the movement of trains being suspended by their inaction at the terminals the roads between them are as effectively blocked, as far as the orderly movement of freight is concerned as though the tracks were torn up. That is part of the reason why the situation is so serious.

Railroad Employes Sympathize With Strikers.

Another thing which further complicates matters is that all organized labor on railroads and all labor has been organized, may at any time make common cause with the organized switchmen. Their sympathies are with them. They are no doubt ready to tax themselves to finance the switchmen's strike. From giving them their moral and financial support, it is no far cry to give them their active aid. At any moment other classes of organized railroad workmen may conclude that their rights are being imposed upon and that the interests of their organization demand that they too walk out. Traffic is now nearly disorganized. At any moment it may be paralyzed by a general strike.

A Complicated Situation.

If it were not for this, the strike of the switchmen would be merely an inconvenience. In the vast army of railroad operatives the switchmen are but an insignificant fraction. If it were not that they have the normal support of their fellow workmen, and the man who takes the place of one is regarded as an interloper, and industrial Ismaelite, their positions could be readily filled. There are plenty of idle men who would gladly become strike breakers if it were not for the obloquy visited upon them. The moral sentiment of their fellows is what deters them.

Business Disorganized.

In the meantime traffic is at a standstill. Industry is either suspended or on the verge of suspension. Business is hampered. Thousands of innocent people suffer—some from lack of employment; some from derangement of business; some because the markets are closed to them; some because their money is tied up; some because they are unable to get necessary supplies. To these who are not in any way responsible for the wrongs of the switchmen, if they suffer injustice, or of the wrongs of the railroads if an attempt is being made to impose on them, the situation is intolerable. Anyway you look at it, the conditions work a grievous wrong upon them. Their welfare depends on the orderly, systematic, regular movement of trains. These form the great body of the public. In their interest it is demanded that action should be taken that would put it forever out of the power of a few men, whether railroad officials or railroad operatives, to paralyze the industries and the commerce of the empire.

The Problem Presented.

It is a great problem. Workmen are entitled to justice. Railroads are entitled to fair play. The solution seems to lie, where disputants cannot agree, in the direction of compulsory arbitration. The strike at its best is both brutal and wasteful. It is enormously expensive. And in a strike like this the greater expense falls neither on the railroads nor on the workmen. It falls on an innocent public. That public feels that powerless as they are to help themselves, they have the right to look to the government for protection. The government on the other hand has no authority to act. Both state and federal administrations face a situation which they are impotent to remedy. It is a case on every side of "no thoroughfare."

The Workingmen's Sacrifice.

The waste of a strike is enormous. Under present conditions, however, it is often unavoidable. The strike is the workman's only weapon. It is the only way a paternal government has given him to force unwilling employes to grant a righteous demand. As has been said it is a brutaal one. The switchmen's strike shows how formaidable it is. It involves on the workman's part tremendous sacrifices. He forfeits the right to earn his living in the sweat of his brow. He gives up the weekly wage he needs to support his family. To carry his point at this season of the year he faces cold and hunger. Harder still—for these men, and generally they are worthy citizens—sober, honest, industrious, loving fathers and husbands and good providers—are compelled to subject their wives and children to privation and to hardship or to a galling dependence on charity, more or less veiled. No one who has not been through it knows anything of the sacrifices a striking workman makes. Business men never face them. Our farmers know nothing of them. [illegible]

The Price of Industrial Independence.

Nevertheless under our present industrial system these sacrifices are necessary. It is only through them that workmen have achieved independence. It is only the fear of them that deters capital from imposing on labor. Workmen may appear sometimes to lose strikes. It is only in rare cases that they are ever recompensed individually for the individual cost. Nevertheless strikes have always paid in the long run—not the individual but the caste to which the workman belongs. To cease the struggle would mean industrial slavery. The cost of the strike is the price the workman pays for the measure of liberty he enjoys and that independence which enables him unafraid to look his fellowmen in the face, and to meet the best of them on equal terms. That independence is not too dearly purchased at the expense even of industrial paralysis if there is no other way. England spent millions of money and thousands of lives to avenge the death of a single subject done to death in Abyssinia. It was a good investment. It insured to every subject the protection of government to its last dollar and to its last ounce of power. The American workman should likewise feel that the people are ready to make any sacrifice that his rights may be maintained.

State Fair Politics.

There are people, however, who are more interested in other things than they are in the strike. For instance the board of managers of the State Fair. To them nothing is of more importance than their re-election. To tell the truth their contest is not without points of interest. This year it centers around Secretary Cosgrove. Not that there is really anyone after Cosgrove's job although there is some talk of Bill Rich, the custodian of the federal building, being a candidate. That is really a joke. But there is a faction of the managing board who have made up their minds to show Cosgrove that he is not the whole show. They have set out to put a crimp or two in him. They have decided that it is for him to consult the board when anything is to be done, and do it their way and not go ahead and do it his way. They have concluded that they are some too, and they have set out to demonstrate to Cosgrove that as a part of the State Fair machine they must be consulted.

An Aggressive Candidate.

The State Fair insurgents are rallying around John Furlong. John is something of a hustler himself. He isn't the kind that allows anybody to sit on him. He wants to be president. He promises that if he is elected president he will be president and not a figurehead. He will insist that the board of managers be managers in fact and not managers in name only. When he is president, the secretary will be the secretary, the principal executive officer possibly—but merely an executive officer—to do not what he likes but what he is told to do by the board of managers and only that.

The Party of the Other Part.

In opposition to Mr. Furlong, Mr. Underwood of Lake City has got into the game. He is a good man. He has the interest of the fair at heart. In his private business he has demonstrated that he possesses executive ability of a high order. He has influential backing among others S. M. Owen, editor of the Farm, Stock and Home, and members of the board of the State University. Cosgrove professes to be taking no part in the contest, but is believed he, too, favors Underwood. The fight as it stands is a pretty one. If Underwood is backed by Owen and the agricultural college, Furlong has the Tawney machine and a bunch of influential politicians with him. Both are hot foot after delegates to the State Agricultural Society. At this writing it is hard to say who has the best of it.

An Office Seeker Disillusions.

They tell a story at the capitol that is worth repeating. A friend of the governor, shortly after his ascession to the office, after turning the matter over in his mind reached the conclusion that it would be a good time for him to look for a job in the public service. With this in mind he hied him to the capitol and made application to the governor for a subordinate position on the railroad and warehouse commission or something "just as good." The governor spoke him fair, and after they had some talk turned him over to Secretary Wheelock. Secretary Wheelock was patronizing and sauve, and after going over the situation gave the applicant the names of a number of Minneapolis gentlemen, included among whom was Senator Smith with the intimation that it might help some if he were to interest them in his candidacy. The applicant went to Minneapolis and hunted up some of his personal friends there with a view of getting them to introduce him to the influential politicians. One after another were seen, but as it happened they did not feel well enough acquainted to make the required presentation. Finally he met a friend more candid than the rest, who, while admitting he had a casual acquaintance with Senator Smith and saying that he was willing to present the gentleman to him, told him plainly that he wasn't quite sure that such an introduction would do any good. "Don't you think," said he, "that those people in St. Paul have handed you a lemon in sending you off on a wild goose chase for Minneapolis support for an office for a Southern Minnesota man.

"I'm perfectly willing," he added, "to go with you to see Senator Smith, but I'm frank to say I'm not very hopeful as to the outcome." At this it light seemed to break in on the mind of the governor's friend. "No," he said, "you needn't mind. I catch your point. I am not going any further in the matter, but I'll tell you what I will do. I will go straight home and [illegible] possibly the [illegible] is still engaged in that interesting occupation.

UNCLE SAM WILL GET US

If the Delinquent Subscriber Does Not Get Right With the Printer.

Uncle Sam Won't Carry Papers To Those Who Don't Pay For Them.

The postal authorities will get us if you don't watch—that is, they'll get our hard earned money. According to a ruling of the post office department, papers can be sent at pound rates only to those subscribers who show that they are in fact legitimate subscribers, those who keep their subscriptions paid up. It is not a bad ruling, it is not unfair. The government makes a low postal rate on papers and other publications so that the public can get its reading matter at as low a rate as possible. But the department has made the ruling that this low rate can apply only to that part of a paper's subscription list that is paid up. The reason for the ruling is apparent. Uncle Sam is not anxious to carry this class of mail to those people who have indicated that they do not appreciate the benefit of the cheap service, hence the ruling that the publisher cannot get the pound rate on papers that are sent to subscribers who are not paying subscribers and your uncle says that if the subscriber is more than one year in arrears the ruling applies to the paper that goes to that subscriber and that if the subscriber don't pay up, the publisher must dig up more postage—or stop the paper.

Of course it isn't fair to expect the publisher to send a paper to a fellow for a long time and then pay an extra tax in postage for the privilege of sending it longer to the delinquent subscriber.

The Gazette is confronted by a "condition" that is not a "theory." The subscription list will have to be revised the first of the year, and unless accounts are settled some will have to be taken from the list, unsatisfactory to the publisher though that proceeding may be. Of course, it ought not to be necessary—and what a lovely state of affairs it would be if every member of the big family of subscribers would get right with the printer man so that he could get right with Uncle Sam.

PRESBYTERIAN PASTOR

Rev. Wm. Sidebotham Accepts Local Pastorate.

The Presbyterian church is soon to have a new pastor which will be good news to the members and friends of the church. The church has been without a pastor for the past several months and services have been held only occasionally. A short time ago the congregation extended a call to Rev. Wm. Sidebotham, of Lake City, Mich., and this week Mr. Sidebotham's acceptance of the call was received. Mr. Sidebotham has been pastor of the church at Lake City for the past seven years, and the church people there expressed much regret when they learned of his contempalted removal to Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs Sidebotham will arrive in Red Lake Falls early in the new year.

BAD FIRE AT WYLIE

House Owned By Theo. Garceau and Geo. F. Hennings Destroyed Wednesday.

The house at Wylie owned by Theo. Garceau and Geo. F. Hennings and occupied by C. B. Cruzen was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The fire was discovered in time so that all of Mr. Cruzen's household goods were saved, but the destruction of the building could not be prevented, though the people of the village made a hard fight. The house was situated on a farm owned by Messrs. Garceau and Hennings, but on a part of the farm within the village limits and was occupied by C. B. Cruzen, the Wylie merchant, as a residence. The loss in the destruction of the building is nearly $1000, with insurance of $500. During the past season Messrs. Garceau and Hennings spent $300 in remodeling and painting the building, so the insurance will little more than repay them the amount expended this season. Mr. Cruzen and family have moved into the house formerly occupied by T. P. Smidesang.

PLUMMER STORE BURNED SUNDAY

Burning of Store During High Wind Threatened Destruction of the Village.

J. C. Schmitz & Co's General Store Burned Causing Loss of $15,000.

Plummer had a narrow escape from being destroyed by fire on Sunday afternoon when a high wind was blowing. The entire stock of J. C. Schmitz & Co., general merchants, was burned at a loss of $13,000. Insurance to the extent of $7,000 was carried on the goods.

The building was owned by Chas. H. Foy of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and was valued at $1,800. It was insured for $800. Oscar Carlson, who lived in apartments above the store, sustained a loss of $800, with no insurance.

The fire broke out when the proprietor was engaged in lighting the gasoline lamps. So rapidly did the flames spread that he had difficulty in making his escape from the building. It is believed that the fire started from oil leaking from the lamps.

TALKING ABOUT KAISER

Bagley Banker a Probable Candidate for State Treasurer.

During the past few days there has been much newspaper comment favorable to the candidacy of Albert Kaiser, the Bagley banker, for the republican nomination for state treasurer, and in spite of such strong opposition as the Thief River News, it looks as if the Bagley man is to have the support of the republicans of northern Minnesota. The Gazette is not in the occupation of nominating republican candidates for office, but as a matter of news the statement is made that the republicans seem to be clamoring for places on the Kaiser band wagon. No doubt their slogan will be "Hoch der Kaiser."

J. J. Padden made a business trip to Thief River Falls Monday.

An extraordinary attempt at wholesale poisoning among military officers in Vienna has caused a sensation. A large number of officers just promoted to be captains in the general staff have received through the mails sample boxes of pills. These were accompanied by a circular recommending them for nervous debility. One of the officers, Captain Mader, took some of the pills and died almost immediately. An autopsy revealed the presence of cyanide of potassium and that death had been caused by this poison.

DAY FOR THANKS

GOV. EBERHART ISSUES HIS FIRST PROCLAMATION.

SETS NOV. 25 AS THE DAY

Says We Have Abundant Material Reasons For Returning Thanks This Year.

St. Paul.—Governor Adolph O. Eberhart, issued his Thanksgiving proclamation, naming Thursday, Nov. 25, as the day of general praise and thanks. The document, which is the first by the new governor, reads:

"The people of this state are ever mindful of the source from which come all their blessings. Cosmopolitan as they are, blending here the blood, the heart, and conscience of all that is best in old-world civilization, they approach the Thanksgiving period with sincere appreciation that "All good cometh from on High."

"Of material reasons for spiritual thanksgiving and praise there are abundant causes—our unity as a people, our enjoyments of peace, our increasing opportunities for industrial advancement, our splendid school system that guarantees to every child the right to liberal educational advantages, our peaceful journeys in the direction of higher ideals of civilization and society. These are blessings that our people will do well to remember and to raise their voices in praise and gratitude therefor. Let us each and everyone, whether in the quiet of our homes or in the places of public worship, give thanks to Almighty God for these, our privileges and blessings, and with fervent resolution and reverent mien let us justify the faith of our fathers by consecrating ourselves anew on this autumnal day to service in the cause of the Great Giver.

"Thankful, indeed, that fire and flood have not devastated our dominion, that public health and public morals are both on a high plane, that our harvests are not only bountiful, but our products command a premium in the marts of the world, we of Minnesota should give thanks for these signs of the heavenly beneficence and devote ourselves to works of highest attainment, not forgetting that through service to others is the road to individual happiness and the accomplishment of the ideal.

"Now, therefore, I, Adolph O. Eberhart, governor of the state of Minnesota, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the laws of the state and the custom honored since the admission of the state to the union, do hereby appoint Thursday, the 25th day of November, in the year nineteen hundred and nine, as a day of general Thanksgiving.

"Done at the capitol in the city of St. Paul, this twelfth day of November in the year nineteen hundred and nine.

"ADOLPH O. EBERHART,
Governor.

"Attest:
"Julius A. Schmahl,
"Secretary of State."

EIGHT PERSONS POISONED.

Children at Play Mixed Arsenic With Baking Powder.

Montgomery.—Joseph Edel, a farmer, and his seven children are sick from arsenic poisoning. Some time ago the children, in the absence of their parents, found a package of arsenic which had been placed behind a clock by Mr. Edel after he had used some of it for a horse. The children, thinking it baking powder, emptied it into the baking powder can in the pantry. On Wednesday, Mrs. Edel used it in making biscuits, of which Mr. Edel and the seven children ate freely.

Mrs. Edel did not eat any of the biscuits, as she did not sit down with the rest of the family, but was waiting upon them and doing other work about the kitchen. Everything is being done to save their lives, but as yet the physician cannot tell what the outcome will be.

FARMERS INSTITUTES ARE BUSY.

Successful One Held at Hibbing Yesterday.

Hibbing.—The disagreeable weather did not deter many farmers from coming to town to attend the farmer's institute. The institute opened in the morning and held afternoon and evening meetings.

F. B. McLeren, of Wrenshall, who had charge of the institute at Cook, was again in charge, aided by C. E. Brown of Elk River; H. K. Larson, of Bernier; A. B. Hostetter, of Duluth, and others, who addressed the assemblage upon farming topics. Today the institute will be held at Eveleth, where the Commercial club is also planning to royally welcome the visitors.

NEARLY SINKS IN HARBOR.

Steamer Odanah in Trouble at Duluth.

Duluth.—While trying to leave the harbor, loaded with ore for Lake Erie, in the heavy gales, the steamer Odanah of the Pickands-Mather Company hit the north pier of the Duluth ship canal and stove in her bow. The vessel had to be beached on the shore of Park Point to prevent her sinking. Divers are ascertaining the extent of the damage.

MINNESOTA'S WEALTH LEAPS.

Bank Deposits Increase $90,000,000 in Two Years.

The most remarkable statement of financial conditions in the Northwest that has ever been published is contained in a compilation made by the Security National bank of Minneapolis, copies of which have been placed in the hands of all the leading financiers of the country.

It discloses that the bank deposits of Minnesota have increased in two years over $90,000,000; that the bank deposits of Iowa, in the same period, have increased almost $90,000,000, and that the deposits of North Dakota and South Dakota show, respectively, increases of $19,000,000 and $35,000,000 in the two-year period.

Such a showing of potential wealth in the Northwest is a surprise even to financial men who have followed the developments in all lines of activity. For the last year or two the Northwest has been in the position of a money lender, its money has sought investment in other sections and few demands have been made upon the East for the financing of Northwestern enterprises.

The reason is manifest in a study of the comparative tables prepared by the Security National bank. The figures show the deposits in state and national banks on about Sept. 1, or as near that date as the bank call will permit. For the four states named, the total deposits at the beginning of September, 1909, are as follows:

Iowa, $372,575,000; Minnesota, $269,948,000; South Dakota, $78,820,000; North Dakota, $58,753,000. The deposits in the four states exceed $780,000,000.

Tremendous Development.

A thorough appreciation of the tremendous development in the Northwest in the last few years is secured by an examination of the comparative tables for the four states accompanying which show deposits for a period of 12 years. The steady growth that marked the earlier years has been followed by a jump in deposits during the last two years that almost exceeds belief. Minnesota's deposits increased $74,000,000 and Iowa's $76,000,000 in the last year. This increase was accompanied by only a normal increase in the number of banks.

The Northwest is now in a position where it finances its annual crop movement practically without outside financial help. It is apparent from the inquiries that are being directed toward the Twin Cities by outside investors of capital, and the interest manifested in the Northwest by the greatest masters of industry and transportation in the country, that new riches are to be poured into the country tributary to Minneapolis, in the shape of increased railroad development and added industrial activities.

WON'T SELL TO INDIANS.

Prosecutions Will Start if Pledges are Violated.

While people in the northern part of the state have been led to believe that the department of the interior has stopped all attempt to get evidence against liquor dealers selling intoxicants to Indians, secretary of the Prohibition party has received official notice that special officers have been at work steadily since the first prosecutions and information, sufficient to convict, has been obtained against five dealers at Grand Marais, one of the points at which the illegal trade is said to have centered.

Three officers arrived at that village, which is located on the north shore of Lake Superior in Cook county, about Nov. 1. Aided by residents of the town who had entered complaints, evidence against the places selling to Indians was quickly gathered. In accordance with the policy of the department of the interior, the saloonkeepers were called to the court house and confronted with the evidence.

Instead of starting the prosecution, the special officers presented a complete set of conditions, which bound the dealers not to sell intoxicants to the Indians or to allow Indians in their saloons or barrooms and to immediately give information against any person doing so.

The signatures of every saloonkeeper and bartender in Grand Marais was obtained to the document. This was then sent to headquarters, with the evidence which had been obtained.

MRS. LEDBETER ENTERS PLEA.

Says Not Guilty to Indictment Charging Murder.

Mankato.—Mrs. Grace Ledbeter pleaded not guilty to the indictment charging her with murder in the first degree. Frank Smith's attorney submitted a motion to dismiss the indictment and discharge the defendant, on the ground that W. R. Geddes, one of the witnesses examined by the grand jury in finding the indictment, was previously attorney for Smith, and that his evidence was gained from Smith as such attorney.

Students Judging Cattle.

South St. Paul.—A feature of interest to the Northwestern Live Stock show in South St. Paul was the students' judging contest in which the students of the various agricultural colleges of the Northwest were afforded an opportunity to show the practical value of their college training. This contest took place after the opening addresses by President C. N. Cosgrove of the Northwestern Live Stock Association and President C. P. Craig of the Minnesota Live Stock Breeders' Association.

For Murder of His Sire.

Duluth.—Bjorn Ostby, the 18-year-old slayer of his father, John G. Ostby, is on trial here. No criminal matter in the courts of St. Louis county in recent years has attracted as much attention as the slaying of John G. Ostby. It is charged that, fired with resentment against his father on account of a quarrel between his parents on the evening of Aug. 11, Ostby came up behind his father

RAILROAD WRECK

GREAT NORTHERN TRAIN COLLIDES WITH WILD ENGINE—TRAINMASTER KILLED.

FIRE CONSUMES WRECK

Passenger Train Using Northern Pacific Tracks Is Wrecked—Three Trainmen Dead—All Passengers Are Safe.

Lind, Wash., Nov. 25.—Three trainmen dead, two others believed to be fatally injured, five out of six cars on a Great Northern passenger train completely destroyed by fire, but every passenger safe, is the summing up of a wreck on the Northern Pacific railroad about a mile from Lind shortly after midnight.

The dead:

ENGINEER L. REAMAN.
FIREMAN JACOB SPANGLER.
PILOT TYLER.

The engineer and fireman on the wild engine that collided with the passenger train are probably fatally injured. Their names are not yet ascertained. The accident occurred either through a misundrstanding or a disregard of orders.

The Great Northern passenger train from the coast was travelling over the Northern Pacific tracks on account of floods and washouts on the Great Northern line.

AMERICANS IN JAIL.

President Zelaya Gathered Them All In Says Traveler.

New Orleans, Nov. 25.—A cable from Panama today says that Edgar S. Harris of Columbus, Ohio, an American commercial traveler who has been touring Central America, declares that several Americans were in jail at Managua and other places in Nicaragua and other places in Nicaragua, having been arrested on orders from President Zelaya. Every American in business in Nicaragua who refused to contribute to the war fund by Zelaya was promptly arrested and thrown into prison, Mr. Harris says. A few of the Americans who were arrested bought their way out of jail by paying the price demanded, but a number are still held incommunicado.

COPPER MERGER IS HELD UP.

Promoters Will Wait to See Effect of Standard Oil Ruling.

New York, Nov. 25.—The proposed $800,000,000 copper combine has been held up temporarily at least, according to Wall street reports yesterday, until lawyers for the interests concerned can figure out the effect which the Standard Oil decision of last Saturday will have upon the merger which is contemplated.

Prominent corporation lawyers were quoted yesterday as advising that it would be unwise to proceed with the merger plans in the face of a decision as drastic and apparently prohibitive.

As a result of these reports all the active copper stocks took heavy slumps yesterday.

DRAW PRISON TERMS.

Women Who Made Attempt to Destroy Ballot Boxes Sentenced.

London, Nov. 25.—Mrs. Alice Champin, the militant suffragette, who injured a polling clerk at the Bermondsey by-election when she smashed a bottle containing corrosive acid upon the ballot box, was sentenced in the Old Bailey police court today to seven months' imprisonment. Mrs. Chapin was convicted upon two charges, three months of her punishment being given for the offense of interfering with the ballot box and the balance of the term for an assault upon the polling clerk. Miss Alzon Neilans, who made a similar attempt to express the suffragette sentiment at the by-election, but with less serious consequences, was also convicted and was sentenced to three months' imprisonment.

JAPAN HAS MINE ACCIDENT.

Over Two Hundred Miners Entombed as Result of Explosion.

Tokio, Nov. 25.—Heavy loss of life is feared as the result of an explosion today in a coal mine at Onoura, Fukouka province. Fifteen men are known to have perished, while 228 miners are entombed in the workings. Every attempt is being made to rescue them, but their fate is as yet in doubt.

CONDENSED NEWS OF DAY.

New York, Nov. 25.—Charles A. Peabody was elected a director of the Erie railway to succeed the late E. H. Harriman.

Phillips, Me., Nov. 25.—Dr. L. J. Holt, a local dentist, was shot and killed today by his nephew, who mistook him for a deer.

Jefferson City, Nov. 25.—Governor Hadley says he will not appoint a successor to De Armond until after the funeral of the former congressman.

Plymouth, Eng., Nov. 25.—The new British Dreadnought, Vanguard, completed an eight-hour trial tonight during which she attained the remarkable speed of 22.4 knots an hour, a full knot in excess of the admiralty's stipulation.

CRUISER READY TO SAIL.

With Four Hundred Marines Abroad for Nicaragua.

Philadelphia, Nov. 25.—Stored with provisions and ammunition the United States cruiser Prairie lies at the Philadelphia navy yard today all ready to sail for Panama or Nicaragua.

The 400 marines who are to be carried by the cruiser to the Carribean waters are anxiously awaiting the signal to start. Several weeks ago the orders were received from the navy department at Washington to have the Prairie ready to transport marines to the Isthmus of Panama in December.

LEAVES WITH RECORD.

Cook's Data Is Now Enroute to University of Copenhagen.

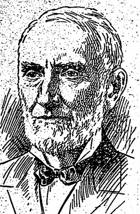
New York, Nov. 25.—Another chapter in the north pole controversy was begun today, with the departure of the data and reports which Dr. Frederick A. Cook compiled in the arctic regions. The documents go to Denmark where they will be submitted to the University of Copenhagen as proof of

SAYS CANNON MUST QUIT

Victor Murdock Predicts Trouble for Man Who Serves Notice on "Uncle Joe."

Kansas City, Mo.—Some one in the next session of congress is going to have a mighty unhappy ten seconds in the company of Speaker Cannon. Men who reviewed the future here believed that about ten seconds would do, and they were equally certain that the particular visit to the sacred chamber would be made by some one; especially certain was Victor Murdock of the Seventh Kansas congressional district.

"The most disagreeable job in the world is waiting for some member of the Cannon machine in the house," Mr. Murdock said. "It will be performed, in all probability, in the next eight months. The satraps of the Cannon machine will hold a meeting and pick some man to go to Cannon and tell him that for the safety of the system he must announce immediately his retirement.



"Uncle Joe" Cannon.

"The domination of Cannon over his lieutenants is such that any one of them would rather meet death than to face the speaker on this proposition, because Cannon has no intention of retiring, and will not take kindly to the suggestion; but he is impossible, and his lieutenants know it and fear that if he continues as a factor he will carry the system down with him.

"They know that for their own good the system must be saved. They are guarding three propositions.

"The first is the right in the speakership of inquisitorial recognition. The second, the power which the system will do everything to preserve, even to eliminating the present speaker, is the power of the appointment of committees, under which, as is well known, a part of the house control hinges.

"The third factor of control which the machine will try to preserve is the membership of the speaker on the committee on rules.

"The condemnation of Cannon can no longer be identified as sectional. I am in receipt of letters from nearly every section of the country, official and private alike, and all tell the same tale of a widespread determination to veto the power of this man.

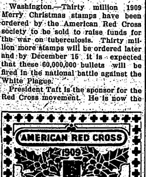
"Cannon may not know that he is gone, probably does not, but his lieutenants know it, and from this time on their whole endeavor will be to save the system and transmit, unimpaired, its machinery to another personality."

STAMPS FOR THE RED CROSS

Sixty Millions of Christmas "Stickers" to Be Sold to Aid Tuberculosis War.

Washington.—Thirty million 1909 Merry Christmas stamps have been ordered by the American Red Cross society to be sold to raise funds for the war on tuberculosis. Thirty million more stamps will be ordered later and by December 15 it is expected that these 60,000,000 bullets will be fired in the national battle against the White Plague.

President Taft is the sponsor for the Red Cross movement. He is now the president of the society. The stamp this year is similar in design to the one used last year. The 1908 stamp sale netted the society $140,000, all of which was used in the fight against the tubercular baccilli.



The Red Cross Stamp.

The stamps are sold to Christmas shoppers who in their turn put them on all the packages and Christmas greetings which they send to their friends and relatives.

Abolition of the Wig.

Civilization has to thank the French revolution and the subsequent wars for masculine emancipation from the wig. It was partly the scarcity of flour and the war tax on hair powder that banished the powdered wig, but partly also the leveling influence of Jacobinism. "I do not know the present generation by sight," wrote Walpole in 1791, complaining that the young men "in their dirty shirts and shaggy hair have leveled nobility as much as the nobility in France have."

MARINES READY

FOUR HUNDRED MARINES ARE ORDERED TO CANAL ZONE AS REINFORCEMENTS

UNITED STATES PREPARES

General War Is Predicted in Central America—Nicaraguans to Invade Salvador—United State Is Watchful.

Washington, Nov. 23.—Taft will take up at a meeting of his cabinet today the problem that confronts the government regarding Nicaragua.

Work is being rushed in preparing the Prairie at League Island Navy yard in Philadelphia to transport 400 marines now at the yard, to Panama.

These will reinforce the 380 marines on duty in the canal zone and a reliable force of tried fighters will be close to Nicaragua, in case the United States decide that prompt and vigorous steps are necessary.

General Uprising Predicted.

New Orleans, Nov. 23.—A disptach from Port Limon, Costa Rica, says that passengers arriving at Puna Arenas report a great movement of troops in Salvadore ports. It is said that Gen. Prudencio Alfaro is at the head of 4,000 Nicaraguans.

This expedition is said to be well armed and equipped. The arrival of Don Luis Alonzo Barahon, ex-candidate for the presidency of Salvadore, who is expected to join with Alfaro and Figueroa as one of the revolutionary chiefs, will complicate affairs. The revolutionists are said now to be in possession of Castillo Viejo.

In a San Jose paper it is predicted that the invasion of Salvadore by the Nicaraguans may precipitate a general uprising in Central America.

BLACKHAND OUTRAGE.

Danville, Ill., Nov. 23.—An explosion of dynamite in the fruit and wine store of Joseph Mascari, 113 College street, today wrecked about twenty-five buildings in the business district of the city. Mascari, who is an Italian, believes the blackhand is responsible for the explosion.

The damage is from $50,000 to $75,000. The business block in which Mascaris' place of business was situated, is completely demolished. Bricks from it and other buildings in the vicinity were found ten squares away. The explosion was heard three miles. For more than a mile houses rocked. Thinking the city had been shaken by an earthquake, hundreds of persons fled to the streets in terror. Immediately after the explosion flames began to sweep the district, but were soon extinguished.

Mascari declines to make any statement as to threats made against him. The police have suspects under surveillance.

BAD FOR SURVIVORS.

Rescue Work Is Delayed For Several Days.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 23.—Fire in the second gallery resulted today in heavy cavings of earth, blocking the rescue work to the east. In this section will be the best chance of the finding of survivors. It is found that the passage is so badly blocked that it will be impossible for many days to make an entrance. Meanwhile the men now alive may starve. The news spread gloom throughout the village, and was relieved only by the fairer prospect of exploring the 500 foot level at the bottom of the mine.

It is said the blockade in the entry to the east is near the main shaft. As one caving was followed by another, endangering the lives of the workers, attempts to remove the debris were halted and an attempt will be made to hew a new passage through the solid earth around the piles of earth.

DIES IN FIRE.

Congressman DeArmond and Grandson Perish in Flames.

Kansas City, Nov. 23.—Rep. David A. DeArmond, one of the oldest democratic members of congress, and his grandson, Waddie, aged 6, were burned to death in a fire that destroyed DeArmond home at Butler, Mo., early today.

The other members of the family escaped and it is believed none are hurt. Neither the body of the congressman nor that of his grandson has been recovered and it is believed that they were incinerated.

HOT FROM THE WIRE.

Saratoga, European Russia, Nov. 22.—Fifteen prisoners were hanged here today. Two men convicted of lynching have been condemned to death.

New York, Nov. 23.—The steam yacht Nourmahal with Colonel Astor on board, arrived at San Juan, Porto Rico, from Mayaguez, on Sunday, Nov. 14, and was still there on the evening of Nov. 17.

Winnipeg, Nov. 23.—Early in the spring several thousand Doukhabors will arrive from southern Russia to take up fruit lands in British Columbia.

TRIES AERIAL WARFARE.

Army Officers Experimenting With Captive Balloon.

New York, Nov. 23.—The first practice of the United States army in aerial warfare began at Sandy Hook yesterday. A large captive balloon was sent up and gunners at Fort Hancock elevated their big guns to test their range on the imaginary enemy. With three big balloons as targets, actual shots will be fired later in the week.

Lieut. Benjamin B. Foulois of the signal corps is commanding the aerial invaders and some of the best known officers the defense.

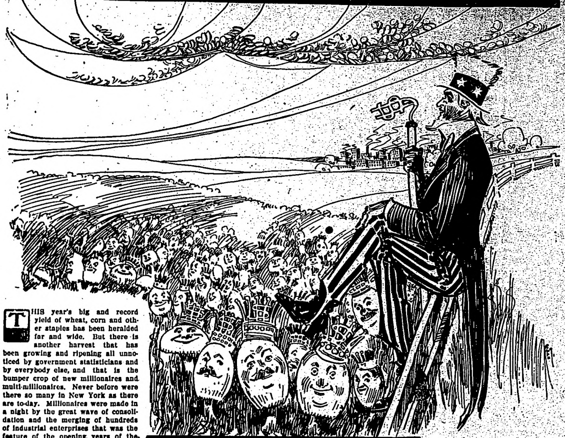
TWO VOLCANIES ACTIVE.

Island of Teneriffe Is Scene of Their Activity.

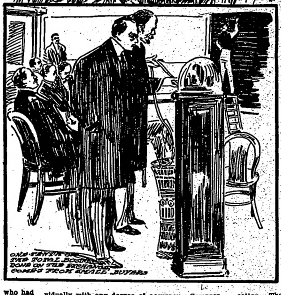
Madrid, Nov. 22.—Two volcanoes near Garachico on the island of Teneriffe, in the Canary Islands, are belching flames and lava, and, acording to dispatches from the islands, it is feared the whole island of Teneriffe will be destroyed.

Ships from African and Spanish ports have been ordered to Teneriffe and are hurrying to the scene. The town of Garachico was almost entirely destroyed by volcanic erup

Money Kings Made in a Night
BUMPER CROP OF NEW MILLIONAIRES



THIS year's big and record yield of wheat, corn and other staples has been heralded far and wide. But there is another harvest that has been growing and ripening all unnoticed by government statisticians and by everybody else, and that is the bumper crop of new millionaires and multi-millionaires. Never before were there so many in New York as there are to-day. Millionaires were made in a night by the great wave of consolidation and the merging of hundreds of industrial enterprises that was the feature of the opening years of the twentieth century, just after the close of the Spanish-American war. There were steel kings, steamship kings, pump kings, kings of car springs and of air brakes and of all sorts of things. They blossomed forth between the sunset of one day and the dawn of the next. The select circle of plutocracy widened so swiftly that it broke all barriers and created a new aristocracy of wealth in America. New York was invaded by a horde of westerners whose manners in some cases shocked even the imperturbable servitors at the expensive hotels where they monopolized the royal suites. Pittsburg, from being simply a great mill town, a city of grimy workmen, jumped into world-wide prominence because it was discovered suddenly that it had more millionaires to the square inch than any other spot on earth. In New York all sorts of people achieved fortunes, paper or actual, almost before they were aware; jockeys, waiters, bartenders and other humble folk glanced with amaze at the balances with their brokers and began making plans for yachts and country houses. The history of this period was one of the wonders of America.



ONE-TENTH OF THE TOTAL BUSINESS DONE ON THE EXCHANGE COMES FROM SMALL BUYERS

Then, two years ago, the panic came and put a dampener on the financial hopes and aspirations of those who had survived the various ills that followed in the wake of industrial over-expansion. But since the panic clouds have cleared away there has come another and even more wonderful appreciation in values, the most remarkable advance in the prices of all commodities and securities that this country has ever known. Probably more millionaires have been made in the last 12 months by the steadily rising tide of tremendous prosperity than history ever has recorded in a similar period of time. The number of those who have grown rich quickly is greater, probably than it was in the time of merger and consolidation, nearly a decade ago. Before the panic of 1907 there were, perhaps, 3,000 millionaires in New York. Now there are anywhere between 5,000 and 10,000.

The advances in the value of securities in the last two years have been almost incredible. There probably are more than 100,000 persons who are stockholders of United States Steel. In October, 1907, Steel Common was 21⅞; in February, 1909, it was 41¼; this October it has been well above 90. The shares of the Pennsylvania railroad are more widely distributed than any other transportation line, more than 60,000 people being listed on its books of shareholders. Two years ago it was 103; lately it has been above 150. Union Pacific is next to Pennsylvania in the length of its stockholders' list. It is not only one of the most popular investment securities, but also one that is speculated in most largely. Union Pacific common was 100 in 1907; this year it has been above 219, an increase of more than 100 per cent. New York Central, Southern Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Atlantic Coast Line, Illinois Central, Great Northern, Standard Oil—practically all the stocks in the long list of railways and industrials have advanced from 50 to 100 or more per cent. in value since October, 1907.

Thousands of people who are not speculators and who are intolerant of speculation have profited enormously by this wonderful rise in prices. They are the ones who bought for investment when the prices were low and who are now reaping the harvest. During the panic enormous blocks of gilt-edge shares were thrown on the markets when great speculators like Heinze and Morse, and some others who were not so spectacular or daring, had to sacrifice anything and everything for ready money. Their holdings now are scattered throughout the country and have been tucked away in tens of thousands of safes and strong boxes.

While some of the new millionaires come from the ranks of those who were bargain hunters in the days of panic, most of the new plutocrats are from the army of speculators.

There are so many of these new millionaires that it would be impossible to list them all individually with any degree of accuracy. Comparatively few of the old band of millionaires have failed to add materially to their fortunes since the panic. There are some, it is true, who were more or less disabled in those days, and the period that preceded them who have not succeeded in winning back their lost money and prestige; some who were in the ill-fated trust companies, others of the insurance crowd, and so on. But those who held on and were able to weather the storms have been lifted up and now are richer than ever. Not only that, but a large number of new groups of great financial strength has been developed. There is the Hawley group, for instance, which has made millions and millions in the rise in values of railway shares. Edwin Hawley, the head of this coterie, was not a big Wall street figure until within the last year or so, but of late he has added immeasurably to his wealth and to his power as a transportation king.

Among those of his friends who have climbed into the chariot of the plutocrats is Frank A. Vanderlip, the president of the National City bank. He is reputed to have made more than a million out of Chesapeake & Ohio and Union Pacific. When he was assistant secretary of the treasury a few years ago Vanderlip was a man of very moderate means and lived in a modest little flat in Washington. After he came to New York his wealth increased somewhat, but only since the first of this year has he entered the millionaire class.

Another of the Hawley group who is one of the new crop of multi-millionaires is a banker named Scott, who piled up a small fortune, dollar by dollar, in Richmond, Va., and who has increased it many fold of late in Wall street. Still another of the same group is Robert Fleming. He was not a poor man when the rise in stocks began, but he is said to be a very rich one now. Then there is a new crop of Union Pacific millionaires, Southern Pacific millionaires, Wabash, Rock Island and many other groups of new millionaires who have become wealthy by the tremendous upturn of the shares they were interested in. Some of these men were millionaires before the beginning of this year; these have now moved up to the multi-millionaire class.

There are quite as many who have won fortunes in the field of industrial stocks, especially in United States Steel common. One of these—more than a millionaire when he began buying Steel—is Frank A. Munsey, the publisher. He is said to have started his Steel purchases two years ago, when the stock was around 23, and to have accumulated a total of 100,000 shares at very low prices. His winnings are estimated at more than $5,000,000.

These instances, taken at random, give an indication of the thousands of fortunes that have sprung up lately through the upward sweep of prices in Wall street. Great corporations, like the fire and the life insurance companies, have also profited stupendously. These tremendous reservoirs of money own huge blocks of shares in scores of railway and industrial companies—lots of from 10,000 shares to almost a controlling interest. The most of these are sober, gilt-edged, dividend-paying stocks that have not been spectacular in their advance in price as compared with some of those that have gone up like skyrockets. Yet even these high-priced shares have been enhanced in value from 20 to 50 per cent. in the last 12 months. They were bought at panic prices, so the published records of these companies show, and these institutions now are said to be selling them off, cautiously and carefully at the fancy figures that have been prevailing of late. Unlike the individual investor, they believe in cashing in their winnings and salting them down until there is another chance to buy cheap.

In the commodities there are new groups of millionaires and multi-millionaires also. Some of these have won their wealth in wheat, others in corn, but most of them in cotton. There are more new cotton kings and princes to-day than ever before. Practically all of these are southerners, who have had an expert knowledge of this staple. Most of them have been cotton planters themselves on a large scale, and all their lives they have been studying cotton, its growth and its ever-widening markets.

Almost every day there have been rumors flying about as to what Patten was doing in cotton. But curiously enough there has been never a word said about the real bull leader in the cotton market, the man who has been the biggest speculator in this staple, and who recently has jumped into the multi-millionaire class, Eugene G. Scales of Dallas, Tex. Scales is the most towering bull, probably, that the cotton market ever has known. Patten is a piker beside him. Even the celebrated Mr. Sully in his palmiest days never operated on such a huge basis as Scales has been in the last eight months.

This new and mighty multi-millionaire in the cotton market has steadfastly kept himself in the background. He is no amateur speculator, however, for five years ago he was in one of the Sully campaigns and retired from the fight with several large dents in his financial armor. But now he has won back all his losses and a lot more.

Some among the many others who "know cotton" and have won big fortunes through its rise in price are Fergus Reid of Norfolk, Va.; Morris H. Rothschild of Woodville, Miss.; William P. Brown of New Orleans, and Louis S. Berg of Mississippi. Berg had charge of the Chalmette terminals at New Orleans not long ago and was a hard-working railroad man. A little later he pieced together a lot of small Mississippi railroads and combined them into an effective and profitable system. Then, with a modest fortune, he came to New York, and since then has been making money out of cotton.

And so the list runs on. Hardly a name among the thousands of new millionaires is familiar to New Yorkers. They are practically unknown outside of the small communities they came from in the west and south. They live in the costliest suites in the most expensive New York hotels. Next summer, if they have no setback they will begin leasing or buying palaces at Newport, Bar Harbor or other places where the socially elect are supposed to live. Then they will begin trying to break through the imaginary inclosure with which "society" surrounds itself. There are so many of these new millionaires that perhaps like the incursion of a new race they will overwhelm and conquer the relatively small group of people who have been priding themselves on having their wealth for a decade or more. At any rate, the names of most of these new millionaires probably will be read for the first time in print in the next year's books of social registry, which form the nearest approach to the directory of the peerage that the plutocracy of America knows.

Helpful Hints.

When washing a sweater do not wring it but squeeze all the water possible from it. Cold water is best, and have the soap dissolved in the water; do not rub it on the garment. When washed rinse in water of the same temperature and lay to dry in the bright sunshine on a sheet on the grass. Turn it until well dried. In this way the garment does not lose its shape.

Remember that flavoring extracts are very volatile and should be added when possible to the mixture when cold.

Make your own vanilla by getting a fine vanilla bean, cover with alcohol. This will extract the flavor and it will last a long time; more alcohol being added as it is used.

Red peppers which are so fine for flavor in many dishes, may be canned now as the markets are offering them. Wash the peppers and cut in strips with shears; pour boiling water over them and let stand five minutes; drain and plunge in ice water having a piece of ice in the water. When the peppers are thoroughly chilled, fill cans, packing closely. To one quart of vinegar add two cupfuls of sugar, boil 15 minutes and pour over the peppers, overflowing the cans.

Seal and store in a cold place.

Fricassee of Oysters.

Brown four tablespoonfuls of butter, add one-half a teaspoonful of chopped parsley, one tablespoonful of flour, salt, cayenne and white pepper to taste, when the flour is well blended, add one quart of well drained oysters. When the edges begin to curl add the beaten yolks of two eggs. Serve with fried bread and parsley.

Oyster Canapes.

Scald a cupful of cream, add two tablespoonfuls of fine-grated bread crumbs, a tablespoonful of butter, a dash of paprika and nutmeg; then add two dozen oysters, chopped. Stir until well heated, but not boiling. Spread on rounds of toast well buttered. Serve with olives or gherkins.

Tips for the Tired.

The old saw: "Let your head save your heels," is one we all need to keep constantly before us. One housekeeper lays all things to be carried upstairs, on a certain chair near the door, that she will have to pass through, in this way saving many needless trips on tired feet.

Where one's household is large and duties many, a slate in the kitchen is a great convenience. It may be used for jotting down supplies needed, or suggestions of different members of the family for favorite dishes, extra work to be done, or a hundred other things peculiar to each household.

For tired feet a hot foot bath, the water of which is made very salt, by using the common barrel salt, will rest the feet wonderfully, and it is said to cure corns if done each day, for a week, soaking the feet 15 minutes each time.

For burning feet a little epsom salts dissolved in the water is a great relief.

Cottage Pudding.

Cream three-fourths of a tablespoon of butter, add one and one-half tablespoonfuls of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of beaten egg, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of milk, five tablespoonfuls of flour sifted with half a teaspoonful of baking powder, and a pinch of salt. Beat vigorously and turn into two buttered individual tins, and bake in a moderate oven. Serve with cream, or with a vinegar or lemon sauce.

Hot Water Gingerbread.

Mix two tablespoonfuls of molasses with one tablespoonful of boiling water. Mix and sift together four and a half tablespoonfuls of flour, one-eighth of a teaspoonful each of ginger and soda; a few grains of salt, combine mixtures and add one and one-half teaspoonfuls of melted butter. Bake in a moderate oven 15 minutes.

Fifty-Three Years Without Holiday.

Mr. Joseph Thornton, aged 84, superintendent of the street cleansing department of the Bradford (Eng.) corporation, died the other day, after being in the employ of the corporation 53 years. During that time he never took a holiday, although he was at liberty to do so whenever he liked.

THANKSGIVING DAY

Canada's Day of Thanks a Month Earlier Than in the United States.

For some reason better known to the Canadians themselves than to the people on this side of the line, our Canadian cousins celebrated their Thanksgiving a month or more earlier than we do. It may be that the Canadian turkey had become impatient, and sounded a note of warning, or it may be that the "frost on the pumpkin" declared itself. But whatever the reason, their Thanksgiving day is past. It may have been that the reasons for giving thanks so much earlier than we do were pushing themselves so hard and so fast that the Canadians were ashamed to postpone the event. They have had reasons, and good ones, too, for giving thanks. Their great broad areas of prairie land have yielded in abundance, and here, by the way, it is not uninteresting to the friends of the millions of Americans who have made their home in Canada during the past few years to know that they have participated most generously in the "cutting of the melon." Probably the western portion of Canada, comprising the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, have the greatest reason of any of the provinces to express in the most enthusiastic manner their gratitude. The results in the line of production give ample reason for devout thanksgiving to Providence. This year has surpassed all others in so far as the total increase in the country's wealth is concerned. There is no question that Providence was especially generous. The weather conditions were perfect, and during the ripening and harvesting period, there was nothing to interfere. And now it was well it was so, for with a demand for labor that could not be supplied, there was the greatest danger, but with suitable weather the garnering of the grain has been successfully accomplished. There have been low general averages, but these are accounted for by the fact that farmers were indifferent, relying altogether upon what a good soil would do. There will be no more low averages though, for this year has shown what good, careful farming will do. It will produce 130 million bushels of wheat from seven million acres, and it will produce a splendid lot of oats, yielding anywhere from 50 to 100 bushels per acre. This on land that has cost but from $10 to $15 per acre—many farmers have realized sufficient from this year's crop to pay the entire cost of their farms. The Toronto Globe says:

"The whole population of the West rejoices in the bounty of Providence, and sends out a message of gratitude and appreciation of the favors which have been bestowed on the country. The cheerfulness which has abounded with industry during the past six months has not obliterated the conception of the source from which the blessings have flown, and the good feeling is combined with a spirit of thankfulness for the privilege of living in so fruitful a land. The misfortunes of the past are practically forgotten, because there is great cause to contemplate with satisfaction the comforts of the present. Thanksgiving should be a season of unusual enthusiasm."

Chance to Destroy Human Enemy.

At the present time there are in the United States only 6,000 beds and 75,000 advanced cases of consumption who ought to be in hospitals. The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis declares that at least 70,000 more beds in hospitals are needed for advanced cases of consumption. Until these are provided, tuberculosis cannot be wiped out. If every body in the United States gave five dollars to provide hospitals for the dangerous consumptives, sufficient funds would be procured to destroy forever the threat of tuberculosis from this country.

SURELY HERE IS THE LIMIT

Undecipherable Handwriting a Minor Thing, According to This Story.

From Horace Greeley's time great men have been noted for their poor chirography, and in this connection Joaquin Miller, the "poet of the Sierra," is no exception. But the best story regarding the versifier's handwriting that I have [illegible] recently from the secretary of a well-known local club. It seems that the club desired to have the poet address the organization at an annual affair at which an elaborate program had been prepared. The secretary addressed a letter to Joaquin telling him of the purpose of the jinks and requesting his co-operation. He was scheduled for a recitation [illegible] from the poet. It was in his own hand and covered four pages. In vain the secretary pored over the manuscript. He turned it over to the president, the board of directors and the members in turn, but all failed to decipher the scrawls. The question before the club was, "Has Miller accepted or has he declined?"

The secretary finally took the matter into his own hands and addressed the following note to Miller: "My dear Mr. Miller: Your letter [illegible] have been unable to determine whether you have accepted or declined our invitation. If you will be present on the date mentioned, will you kindly make a cross on the bottom of this letter? If it will be impossible for you to appear, will you kindly draw a circle?"

In due time the letter came back, but the secretary could not decide whether it was a cross or a circle.—San Francisco Call.

For Benefit of Women who Suffer from Female Ills

Minneapolis, Minn.—"I was a great sufferer from female troubles which caused a weakness and broken down condition of the system. I read so much of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other suffering women I felt sure it would help me, and I must say it did help me wonderfully. My pains all left me, I grew stronger, and within three months I was a perfectly well woman.

"I want this letter made public to show the benefit women may derive from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOHN G. MOLDAN, 2115 Second St. North, Minneapolis, Minn.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials like the above prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made exclusively from roots and herbs.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She will treat your letter as strictly confidential. For 20 years she has been helping sick women in this way, free of charge. Don't hesitate—write at once.

WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT THE FLAVOR LASTS

For Pain in Chest

For sore throat, sharp pain in lungs, tightness across the chest, hoarseness or cough, lave the parts with Sloan's Liniment. You don't need to rub, just lay it on lightly. It penetrates instantly to the seat of the trouble, relieves congestion and stops the pain.

Here's the Proof.
Mr. A. W. Price, Fredonia, Kans., says: "We have used Sloan's Liniment for a year, and find it an excellent thing for sore throat, chest pains, colds, and hay fever attacks. A few drops taken on sugar stops coughing and sneezing instantly."

Sloan's Liniment

is easier to use than porous plasters, acts quicker and does not clog up the pores of the skin.

It is an excellent antiseptic remedy for asthma, bronchitis, and all inflammatory diseases of the throat and chest; will break up the deadly membrane in an attack of croup, and will kill any kind of neuralgia or rheumatic pains.

All druggists keep Sloan's Liniment.

Pla-Mate Shoes

The Best Shoes for Children

$1.75 & $2.00

For 36 years we have done nothing but make children's shoes. Everything we have learned is embodied in the Pla-Mate Shoes — the best shoe made anywhere for little folks. See the shape, it means comfort and allows the feet to develop along natural lines. The soles are of clear oak, welts are genuine Goodyear, and full extension heels for protecting uppers. These points mean that a pair of Pla-Mate Shoes will outlast two pairs of any other shoe. They come in lace, button and oxford shape and in all sizes from 4 to 12. Just try one pair, see how the children enjoy them, and notice how long they wear. If not in stock at your dealers, send us his name, stating size and style desired and we will see that you are supplied.

Of course you are doing your Christmas shopping early.

There is a suspicion in some quarters that the Standard Oil won't stay licked.

The new governor is not keeping up the pace set earlier in his administration. Last week brought only three speeches.

Joe Cannon is just at present engaged in the delightful occupation of showing the people the way of real Republicanism.

The per capita wealth is now computed at $1,318.11. The eleven cents is accounted for, but a good many of us are wondering who has the rest.

Frank Eddy is not issuing challenges to debate the tariff with standpat congressmen nowadays, for he has just landed a job with the national committee to patch up things for Taft and Tawney. Frank has evidently reached the conclusion that his talents can be capitalized, and he probably needs the money.

Some real friend of Mr. President Taft should get next to him as soon as possible and tell him the sooner he fires that man Ballinger out of the cabinet the better it will be for him and the country, suggests the Fairmont Sentinel. It does not seem possible that a president will retain in a high position a man who has been found with the goods on him. Get busy, Mr. Taft. The country is growing impatient!

The Pioneer Press quotes Senator Alderman, of Brainerd, as thus expressing his views anent the governorship:

"If two such men as Ripley Brower and Gov. Eberhart clash in a fight for the Republican nomination for governor it may spell disaster for the republican party at the next election. I mention Brower and the governor, for at present they appear the most likely contestants for the honor. If either is nominated the friends of the other have it in their power to force a situation as existed in the Dunn-Collins campaign and it may be doubted if either is strong enough with that handicap, to crush the Democratic maching which has been five years in the making."

THE peddlers' license law enacted by the last legislature has been declared unconstitutional by the supreme court in an opinion handed down by Judge Lewis. The peddlers' bill passed by the 1907 legislature was vetoed by Governor Johnson, who believed it to be class legislation and therefore unconstitutional, and the question was somewhat of an issue in the last campaign.

AN editor wishing to give a milliner a "puff" wrote that he was glad to see her stocking up. The next time he met the milliner she assaulted him with an umbrella and threatened to tell his wife. The newspaper man read the article several times before he understood why she was so wrathy.

CARL A. PIDGEON has resigned as clerk of the supreme court and Irving A. Caswell of Anoka has been appointed to fill the vacancy. Mr. Caswell has ben a candidate for the nomination next year, and the recent turn of officers will be to his advantage.

MESSRS. Aldrich and Cannon convened Tuesday and are now "on the job" in Washington.

A YOUNG Iowa doctor has made the discovery that the ankle was placed between the foot and the knee in order to keep the calf away from the corn. Looks reasonable, doesn't it?

THE New York Sun's definition of a gentleman is worthy of serious consideration.

"I'll have to give you the real definition of a real gentleman: 'A man that's clean inside and out; who neither looks up to the rich nor down on the poor; who can lose without squealing and who can win without bragging; who is considerate of women, children and old people; who is too brave to lie, too generous to cheat, and who takes his share of the world and lets other people have theirs.'"

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Albert Lea Standard: Wise Mr. Hillis says the women will own all the property in a 1,000 years. That will not be much different, for don't they already almost own the earth?

Cannon Falls Beacon: Congressman Murdock of Kansas says: "Cannon and Cannonism is doomed." We will insist on restraining our "holler" till Mr. Murdock's prediction has come to pass.

Fairmont Sentinel: What has become of the old hard-shell Republican papers that were for party right or wrong? asks the Mankato Journal. They are vanishing. And it is well. The good of the masses first, party afterwards.

Paynesville Press: The Appleton Press says an insurgent is simply a cheap imitation of a Democrat. Now we will all rest easy if the esteemed Press will enlighten us by answering this important question: "What is a Democrat?"

Austin Transcript: The main issue that will be fought out in the immediate future is whether the Middle West Republicans will accept the leadership of Aldrich, Cannon and Payne or will adopt the views and follow the councils of the insurgents.

LeSueur News: If the state of Minnesota would take the same trouble and go to the same expense as private individuals, there would not be so much wild land in Northern Minnesota or so many people from this state crossing over the line into Canada.

Greenbush Trbiune: Speaker Cannon is trying to read out of the Republican party all those who voted against the recent tariff bill. Bryan is trying to oust from the Democratic party those who voted for it. Which brings up the belief that there will be a general lineup in the next campaign of the protection and free trade forces. Modern protection in our opinion is to be desired, but high protection is not and will eventually be turned down.

Litchfield Indenendence: The Republican program just now is to have a high tariff wall to shut out foreign goods and make the people pay enormous tribute to the protected home manufacturers and on top of this we are asked to pay a government subsidy to the shipping interests so they can pay dividends whether they bring in or caryy out any cargoes or not. The tariff wall kills commerce, and the people are to be taxed to make good the losses to ship owners.

A woman seldom appreciates a husband until she becomes a widow.

Judge a man by what he laughs at; judge a woman by what she cries over.

Always on the Job.

Wabasha Herald: Governor Johnson's memory will live forever in the hearts of his people and his devoted private secretary will not be forgotten very soon. Frank Day has his finger on the pulse of public affairs in this state as perhaps no other man. In his official capacity he came in close contact with every factor in the development and progress of the state, politically and otherwise, and he acquitted himself creditably in the perforamnce of his manifold duties. His name has been suggested for gubernatoral honors but nothing with reference to this has come from Mr. Day himself. If he cares for a political future its realization will depend upon ensuing political developments, but however, that may be, he will be remembered as one of the most faithful and efficient workers that ever served in that capacity.

SELECTING THE BRONZE TURKEY.

A Thanksgiving Story.

By PORTE JEFFERSON.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Amanda Butler cautiously opened the door of the turkey shed and flashed the rays of her lantern until they fell broadcast on the clumsy form of a large turkey in the corner. He roused as she approached and stretched himself for action.

It was the work of an instant for Amanda's nimble fingers to flash up to his legs, and when she darted back there dangled from one foot a strip of bright red flannel. When Amanda locked the door and turned away the victim of her craftiness was protesting loudly against the absurdity of wearing red flannel in August.

Jeremiah sat on the doorstep in his shirt sleeves, smoking a peaceful pipe.

"There," panted Amanda as she put out the lantern and sat down beside him and fanned herself with her sunbonnet; "I've got one job done."

"What's that?" queried Jeremiah lazily.

"Marked the Thanksgiving turkey."

"Which one?"

"The big bronze one. I've had him in mind for some time. He always roosts in the shed, so I caught him asleep just now and tied a red rag on his leg. I'll shut him up, come the 1st of November."

"The big bronze turkey always roosts in the walnut tree. That's why I s'lected him for Thanksgiving dinner," remarked Mr. Butler deliberately. "Him a-roosting out of doors shows he has wild tastes, and what tastes better than wild turkey, I wanter know?"

Amanda received this unconscious witticism on her husband's part in stony silence.

"Of course I mean the biggest of them two bronze fellers," added Jeremiah after awhile.

"I marked the biggest," said Amanda acidly.

Jeremiah whistled one stanza of "The Star Spangled Banner," knocked his pipe against the step and went into the house. A moment later Amanda heard him winding the kitchen clock preparatory to retiring for the night.

"A woman that's married might as well give up trying to have her way about anything," murmured Amanda discontentedly. "Just as if I didn't know that there turkey in the [illegible] able married woman!"

Having delivered herself of these sentiments, Amanda felt more cheerfully disposed and in her turn retired to bed, where her husband was already breathing loudly and harmoniously.

The next morning when she went out to feed the poultry two big bronze gobblers were stalking about the yard, each with a rag about one leg. The red flanneled turkey ruffled indignantly every time his beady eye caught sight of the objectionable color on his foot. The other one gazed mournfully at a piece of black tape that adorned his extremity.

Jeremiah crossed the yard with foaming pails of milk.

"What's that there black rag?" demanded Amanda angrily.

Her husband looked quizzically at her and then went on. "That there turkey is in mourning because he's going to be killed for Thanksgiving dinner," he said dryly.

Amanda said no more, but her plump face grew very pink, and her smooth forehead was creased in an anxious frown.

That morning the rival turkeys fought bitterly. Whether it was the red flannel which aroused the mourning turkey's gorge I cannot say. It is sufficient to note that they fought fairly and that the red flannel gentleman put the other to open flight. When it was all over Amanda went out and smilingly picked up several handfuls of bronze feathers.

Jeremiah, who had witnessed the battle through a crack in the barn door, grinned openly and went back to his neglected garden.

At night a remarkable thing happened. The victorious wearer of red sought a roost in the walnut tree, while the mourning turkey ignominiously found refuge in the shed, and, strange to relate, he chose the very spot vacated by his rival.

All that summer and early fall Amanda and Jeremiah avoided the subject of turkeys. After awhile others noticed that the topic was a disagreeable one, and so it was tacitly avoided by every one.

The first of November two bronze gobblers nervously paced two narrow pens. The red flannel turkey was generously fed by Amanda, while the black tape bird was as conscientiously stuffed by her husband.

Amanda grew nervous and irritable as the weeks wore on toward Thanksgiving. She did not really care which turkey she ate, for it had been a prosperous year with them, and she was thankful in every sense for the fullness of their cellar and granary. What she really did mind was the giving in to Jeremiah. She had always been the one to give in, and this time—it did seem for once as if he might let her have her way. It was true she had her way about everything concerning the household, but—

She baked and boiled and stewed for a fragrant week before the great feast day. There would be cousins from neighboring towns to dine with them, and the turkey must be slain and prepared the day before. Such a huge bird would be plenty for the ten who would be present. Amanda wished she might invite more, so that there would be some excuse for killing both birds, and thus cut the gordian knot of contention without loss of dignity to either Jeremiah or herself.

On the evening of the second day before Thanksgiving, Jeremiah Butler and Amanda sat in the warm circle of light cast by the reading lamp. Jeremiah was reading the county paper, and his wife was sewing.

Suddenly Jeremiah looked up. "Pete Jones is coming around to kill the turkey tomorrow morning," he said, with assumed carelessness. "He'll get it all dressed and ready for you."

"I've been thinking," said Amanda slowly, "that you might as well kill that there black tape turkey of yours. He looks pretty well conditioned, and he's the biggest bird after all. I don't feel like as if I could have any contention this Thanksgiving. We've been so prospered this year."

Jeremiah coughed dubiously. "Amanda," he began rather sheepishly, "I did kind of a fool thing last summer. When you tied a rag on your turkey I went out the next morning and changed them rags. That's why your turkey went to roost with a black rag and mine went back to his tree with a red one. I meant it for a joke at first. I thought I'd have my way about killing the black one, and when we was eating it I was going to tell you it was your bird after all, but it looks silly now."

"It was silly," said Amanda energetically. "I about made myself sick over them two turkeys. I don't know if I wanter eat neither one. If I had known you was trying to joke—why, I don't know as I ever knew you to make a joke, Jeremiah!"

"I never did before," said Jeremiah, with a sickly smile. "I guess I won't again. I'll tell Pete to kill the black rag turkey, and then it'll be the one you s'lected."

"I'd ruther have the wild flavored one," admitted Amanda. "I'm partial to wild turkeys. Then it was your turkey that fit mine and made him run after all." She glanced at the bronze feathers above the clock.

"That there wild one was a gamy bird," chuckled Jeremiah, with another break into unconscious wit.

The next day when Pete Jones came to kill the turkey he found Jeremiah and Amanda busily engaged in cleaning silver.

"Which one of them two bronze gobblers shall I kill? One's as fat as t'other, and each one's got a dirty rag tide around his foot."

Jeremiah looked critically at a fork he was polishing, and then he turned a quizzical smile upon his wife.

"Kill 'em both, Pete, and take one home for yourself."

"And whichever one it is, Pete, enjoy it!" smiled Amanda at her reflection in a teaspoon.

S.S.S. CURES SKIN DISEASES
The skin is composed of two distinct layers. One is known as the epidermis, or outer skin, which has no fibres, and serves principally as a covering to the body, and a protection from outward dangers to the delicate flesh beneath. The other layer is known as the derma, or true skin, and is composed of elastic fibres, fat tissue, glands, lymphatics, nerves, etc. The thousands of tiny veins and arteries with which it is interlaced constantly supply every fibre and tissue with healthful properties from the circulation to keep the skin smooth and perfect.
This is changed, however, when the blood becomes infected with humors, acids or impurities. Instead of constantly supplying rich, nutritive properties to the skin, the circulation deposits the acrid impurity with which it is contaminated, into the sensitive fibres and tissues. This causes irritation and inflammation, which splits or breaks the thin outer cuticle, while the tissues beneath ulcerate and discharge upon the surface in the form of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, etc. There is likewise a dry form of skin diseases, such as Acne, Psoriasis, etc. In these varieties the humor in the blood diseases and inflames the glands, hair follicles, etc., causing them to swell and protrude to the outer surface. Pimples, rashes, eruptions and like troubles, are all dependent on imperfect blood, and no one can have a good complexion, free from humiliating blemishes, unless the skin is kept healthy by good blood.
S.S.S. cures Skin Diseases of every kind by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the blood. It cools the acid-heated circulation, builds it up to normal strength, multiplies its rich, nutritious corpuscles, and adds to its purity in every way. Then the skin, instead of being irritated, inflamed and diseased by acrid impurities or fiery humors, is nourished, soothed and softened by a cooling, healthy stream of blood. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and therein lies its ability to cure skin diseases. Book on Skin Diseases and medical advice free.

S.S.S. CURED HER.
Some time ago I was troubled with a severe skin affection called Acne. Small pimples would appear on my face and neck which would in time fester and become inflamed. My complexion was muddy and sallow and most unsightly. I chanced to read about S.S.S., and concluded to give it a trial; the result was entirely satisfactory, my complexion soon becoming clear, the pimples disappearing, and my skin became soft and smooth. I cannot too highly recommend S. S. S. to any who are likewise afflicted.

Weak Women
To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential.
Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local.
Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.
The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.
The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, eases nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

It isn't so difficult to strengthen a weak stomach if one goes at it correctly. And this is true of the Heart and Kidneys. The old fashioned way of dosing the stomach or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is surely wrong. Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. "Go to the weak or ailing nerves of these organs," said he. Each inside organ has its controlling or inside nerve. When these nerves fail, then those organs must surely falter. This vital truth is leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. A few days test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

THE BANKERS ARE INTERESTED

Want a Good Man Elected Dean of the State Agricultural School.

Make Recommendations to Regents and Urge Prompt Action.

Hon. John Lind, Pres.,
The Board of Regents of the State University, Minneapolis, Minn.

Sir:—

At the twentieth annual convention of the Minnesota Bankers' Association, representing about eight hundred and twenty-five banks, state and national, located principally within the farming district of Minnesota, the question of the agricultural development of Minnesota and also the question of the agricultural education, were very seriously considered. A resolution was passed, unanimously, instructing the executive council to appoint a committee from among its members to look into these matters and take such steps as in their judgment might seem most expedient to improve conditions in connection therewith. Subsequently, the committee was appointed, and after considerable investigation and research, it has succeeded in obtaining a large amount of information from all sections of the state regarding agricultural conditions and the facilities for obtaining education in scientific agriculture.

The committee learned, among other things, that while in our sister state of Wisconsin, compulsory agricultural education in the rural schools has been in vogue for many years, and is admittedly largely responsible for the intelligent interest taken by the people of Wisconsin in agricultural matters, in Minnesota we have no such law, with the result that practically nothing is being done in our rural schools along these lines.

The committee has visited the Agricultural College at Madison, and also our own Agricultural School at St. Anthony Park. We were particularly interested in learning, if possible, why the Wisconsin school is reputed to be the best agricultural school in the United States, if not in the world, and we believe that we have found at least three good reasons why it is accredited with such a reputation. The Wisconsin school has a thoroughly competent, intelligent and efficient administrative organization. We found, also, that its extension short course in agriculture for farmers given at Madison, had an attendance last year of something over eight hundred farmers, as against the attendance of a similar courses at our own school of one hundred sixty-nine. We were also very much impressed with the intelligent and effective handling of many other features of the extension work. We also found in the Wisconsin school a thoroughly organized and efficient publicity department which not only enables the school to keep in close touch with the farmers of the state, but also to thoroughly advertise throughout the world the results which the school is accomplishing in raising the corn yield per acre in Wisconsin from twenty-five to approximately forty-two bushels. It is also through the efforts of the publicity department of the Wisconsin school that the fact that the best cheese in the United States is made in Wisconsin, has been spread broadcast.

We are satisfied that the plant and equipment of the Minnesota school is superior to that of Wisconsin. We are also satisfied that our teachers in the various departments are competent men and of a caliber as broad, if not broader, than those of the Wisconsin school. In view of the fact, however, that it is conceded there is to be a change in the executive head of our Agricultural School, there is more or less disorganization and consequent lowering of the work. There is no incentive to introduce new methods and systems so long as the appointment of a new dean is postponed.

It is the opinion of our committee that the position of dean of the Agricultural School is one of the most important in this state, for many reasons. While Minnesota is generally known as an agricultural state, we find that, as a matter of fact, its manufactured products exceed in value its agricultural products by many millions of dollars. We also find that less than one-third of the tillable soil of Minnesota is under cultivation. The committee believes that by no other means can the agricultural development of our state be so well assured as by the appointment of the best and most competent man procurable in the United States regardless of salary, to become executive head of the Agricultural School. We would, therefore, urge that at the next meeting of your honorable board to be held early in December, the matter of the appointment of such a man to fill this most important position, be definitely disposed of without further postponement. The committee understands that your honorable board has under consideration two men for this position, namely, Prof. A. R. Woods, of [illegible]

Soule, president of the Agricultural College of Georgia, and a graduate of the Guelph School of Ontario. We are satisfied that both of these men are highly accomplished and efficient agriculturists. In addition, however, to possessing all the qualifications of Prof. Woods, President Soule has the additional qualification of being a very successful educator.

If the members of our association can be of any assistance to you in any way, you have only to command us.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH CHAPMAN, Jr.,
Chairman, the Agriculture Committee.

SYNOPSIS.

Baraka, a Tartar girl, became enamored of a golden bearded stranger who was prospecting and studying herbs in the vicinity of her home in central Asia, and revealed to him the location of a mine of rubies hoping that the stranger would love her in return for her disclosure. They were followed to the cave by the girl's relatives, who blocked up the entrance, and drew off the water supply, leaving the couple to die. Baraka's cousin Saad, her betrothed, attempted to climb down a cliff overlooking the mine; but the traveler shot him. The stranger was revived from a water gourd Saad carried, dug his way out of the tunnel, and departed, deserting the girl and carrying a bag of rubies. Baraka gathered all the gems she could carry, and started in pursuit. Margaret Donne (Margarita da Cordova), a famous prima donna, became engaged in London to Konstantin Logotheti, a wealthy Greek financier. Her intimate friend was Countess Leven, known as Lady Maud, whose husband had been killed by a bomb in St. Petersburg; and Lady Maud's most intimate friend was Rufus Van Torp, an American, who had been a cowboy in early life, but had become one of the richest men in the world. Van Torp was in love with Margaret, and rushed to London as soon as he heard of her betrothal. He offered Lady Maud $3,000,000 for her pet charity if she would aid him in winning the singer from Logotheti.

CHAPTER III.—Continued.

"I said I was a wicked woman," Margaret answered, rising; "and what's more, I believe I am. But I quite forgot you were there, Potts, or I probably should not have said it aloud."

"Yes, ma'am," answered Potts meekly, and she went back to her unpacking.

Margaret had two maids, who were oddly suited to her two natures. She had inherited Alphonsine from her friend the famous retired soprano, Mme. Bonanni, and the cadaverous, clever, ill-tempered, garrulous dresser was as necessary to Cordova's theatrical existence as paint, limelight, wigs and an orchestra. The English Potts, the meek, silent, busy and intensely respectable maid, continually made it clear that her mistress was Miss Donne, an English lady, and that Mme. Cordova, the celebrated singer, was what Mr. Van Torp would have called "only a side-show."

The letter that had been torn up before it was finished was to have gone to Lady Maud, but Margaret herself had been almost sure that she would not send it, even while she was writing.

She had written that she had done very wrong in engaging herself to Logotheti; that was the "wickedness" she accused herself of, repeating the self-accusation to her astonished maid, because it was a sort of relief to say the words to somebody. She had written that she did not really care for him in that way; that when he was near she could not resist a sort of natural attraction he had for her, but that as soon as he was gone she felt it no longer and she wished he would not come back; that her ideal of a husband was so and so, and this and that—and here fiction had begun, and she had put a stop to it by destroying the whole letter instead of crossing out a few lines—which was a pity; for if Lady Maud had received it, she would have told Mr. Van Torp that he needed no help from her since Margaret herself asked no better than to be freed from the engagement.

Logotheti did not come out to Versailles that afternoon, because he was plentifully endowed with tact where women were concerned, and he applied all the knowledge and skill he had to the single purpose of pleasing Margaret. But before dinner he telephoned and asked to speak with her, and this she could not possibly refuse. Besides, the day had seemed long, and though she did not wish for his presence she wanted something—that indescribable, mysterious something which disturbed her and made her feel uncomfortable when she felt it, but which she missed when she did not see him for a day or two.

"How are you?" asked his voice, and he ran on without waiting for an answer. "I hope you are not very tired after crossing yesterday. I came by Boulogne—decent of me, wasn't it? You must be sick of seeing me all the time, so I shall give you a rest for a day or two. Telephone whenever you think you can bear the sight of me again, and I'll be with you in 35 minutes. I shall not stir from home in this baking weather. If you think I'm in mischief you're quite mistaken, dear lady, for I'm up to my chin in work!"

"I envy you," Margaret said, when he paused at last. "I've nothing on earth to do, and the piano here is out of tune. But you're quite right, I don't want to see you a little bit, and I'm not jealous, nor suspicious, nor anything disagreeable. So there!"

"How nice of you!"

"I'm very nice," Margaret answered with laughing emphasis. "I know it. What sort of work are you doing? It's only idle curiosity, so don't tell me if you would rather not! Have you got a new railway in Brazil, or an overland route to the other side of beyond?"

"Nothing so easy! I'm brushing up my Tartar."

"Brushing up what? I didn't hear."

"Tartar—the Tartar language—T-a-r—" he began to spell the word.

"Yes, I hear now," interrupted Margaret. "But what in the world is the use of knowing it? You must be awfully hard up for something to do!"

"You can be understood from Constantinople to the Pacific ocean if you can speak Tartar," Logotheti answered in a matter-of-fact tone.

"I daresay! But you're not going to travel from Constantinople to the Pacific ocean—"

"I might. One never can tell what one may like to do."

"Oh, if it's because Tartar is useful 'against the bites of sharks,'" answered Margaret, quoting Alice, "learn it by all means!"

"Besides, there are all sorts of people in Paris. I'm sure there must be some Tartars. I might meet one, and it would be amusing to be able to talk to him."

"Nonsense! Why should you ever meet a Tartar? How absurd you are!"

"There's one with me now—close beside me, at my elbow."

"Don't be silly, or I'll ring off."

"If you don't believe me, listen!"

He said something in a language Margaret did not understand, and another voice answered him at once in the same tongue. Margaret started slightly and bent her brows with a puzzled and displeased look.

"Is that your teacher?" she asked with more interest in her tone than she had yet betrayed.

"Yes."

"I begin to understand. Do you mind telling me how old she is?"

"It's not 'she,' it's a young man. I don't know how old he is. I'll ask him if you like."

Again she heard him speak a few incomprehensible words, which were answered very briefly in the same tongue.

"He tells me he is 20," Logotheti said. "He's a good-looking young fellow. How is Mrs. Rushmore? I forgot to ask."

"She's quite well, thank you. But I should like to know—"

"Will you be so very kind as to remember me to her, and to say that I hope to find her at home the day after to-morrow?"

"Certainly. Come to-morrow if you like. But please tell me how you happened to pick up that young Tartar. It sounds so interesting! He has such a sweet voice."

There was no reply to this question, and Margaret could not get another word from Logotheti. The communication was apparently cut off. She rang up the central office and asked for his number again, but the young woman soon said that she could get no answer to the call, and that something was probably wrong with the instrument of number one-hundred-and-six-thirty-seven.

Margaret was not pleased, and she was silent and absent-minded at dinner and in the evening.

"It's the reaction after London," she said with a smile, when Mrs. Rushmore asked if anything was the matter. "I find I am more tired than I knew, now that it's all over."

Mrs. Rushmore was quite of the same opinion, and it was still early when she declared that she herself was sleepy and that Margaret had much better go to bed and get a good night's rest.

But when the prima donna was sitting before the glass and her maid was brushing out her soft brown hair, she was not at all drowsy, and though her eyes looked steadily at their own reflection in the mirror, she was not aware that she saw anything.

"Potts," she said suddenly, and stopped.

"Yes, ma'am?" answered the maid with meek interrogation, and without checking the regular movement of the big brush.

"Potts," she began again, "you are not very imaginative, are you?"

"No, ma'am," the maid answered, because it seemed to be expected of her, though she had never thought of the matter.

"Do you think you could possibly be mistaken about a voice, if you didn't see the person who was speaking?"

"In what way, ma'am?"

"I mean, do you think you could take a man's voice for a woman's at a distance?"

"Oh, I see!" Potts exclaimed. "As it might be, at the telephone?"

"Well—at the telephone, if you like, or anywhere else. Do you think you might?"

"It would depend on the voice, ma'am," observed Potts, with caution.

"Of course it would," assented Margaret rather impatiently.

"Well, ma'am, I'll say this, since you ask me. When I was last at home I was mistaken in that way about my own brother, for I heard him calling to me from downstairs, and I took him for my sister Milly."

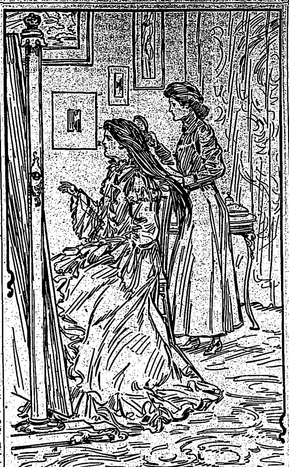
"Oh! That's interesting!" Margaret smiled. "What sort of voice has your brother? How old is he?"

"He's eight-and-twenty, ma'am; and as for his voice, he has a sweet counter tenor, and sings nicely. He's a song-man at the cathedral, ma'am."

"Really! How nice! Have you a voice, too? Do you sing at all?"

"Oh, no, ma'am!" answered Potts in a deprecating tone. "One in the family is quite enough!"

Margaret vaguely wondered why, but did not inquire.



"Potts," She Said Suddenly, and Then Stopped.

"You are quite sure that it was your brother who was speaking, I suppose," she said.

"Oh, yes, ma'am! I looked down over the banisters, and there he was!"

Margaret had the solid health of a great singer, and it would have been a serious trouble indeed that could have interfered with her unbroken and dreamless sleep during at least eight hours; but when she closed her eyes that night she was quite sure that she could not have slept at all but for Potts' comforting little story about the brother with the "counter-tenor" voice. Yet even so, at the moment before waking in the morning, she dreamt that she was at the telephone again, and that words in a strange language came to her along the wire in a soft and caressing tone that could only be a woman's, and that for the first time in all her life she knew what it was to be jealous. The sensation was not an agreeable one.

The dream-voice was silent as soon as she opened her eyes, but she had not been awake long without realizing that she wished very much to see Logotheti at once, and was profoundly thankful that she had torn up her letter to Lady Maud. She was not prepared to admit, even now, that Konstantin was the ideal she should have chosen for a husband, and whom she had been describing from imagination when she had suddenly stopped writing. But, on the other hand, the mere thought that he had perhaps been amusing himself in the society of another woman all yesterday afternoon made her so angry that she took refuge in trying to believe that he had spoken the truth and that she had really been mistaken about the voice.

It was all very well to talk about learning Tartar! How could she be sure that it was not modern Greek, or Turkish? She could not have known the difference. Was it so very unlikely that some charming compatriot of his should have come from Constantinople to spend a few weeks in Paris? She remembered the mysterious house in the Boulevard Pereire where he lived, the beautiful upper hall where the statue of Aphrodite stood, the doors that would not open like other doors, the strangely-disturbing encaustic painting of Cleopatra in the drawing room—many things which she distrusted.

Besides, supposing that the language was really Tartar—were there not Russians who spoke it? She thought there must be, because she had a vague idea that all Russians were more or less Tartars. There was a proverb about it. Moreover, to the English as well as to the French, Russians represent romance and wickedness.

She would not go to the telephone herself, but she sent a message to Logotheti, and he came out in the cool time of the afternoon. She thought he had never looked so handsome and so little exotic since she had known him.

He was received by Mrs. Rushmore and Margaret together, and he took noticeable pains to make himself agreeable to the mistress of the house. At first Margaret was pleased at this; but when she saw that he was doing his best to keep Mrs. Rushmore from leaving the room, as she probably would have done, Margaret did not like it. She was dying to ask him questions about his lessons in Tartar, and especially about his teacher, and she probably meant to cast her inquiries in such a form as would make it preferable to examine him alone rather than before Mrs. Rushmore; but he talked on and on, only pausing an instant for the good lady's expressions of interest or approval.

He was telling her what a prime minister had told an ambassador about the pope, when Margaret rose rather abruptly.

"I'm awfully sorry," she said to Mrs. Rushmore, by way of apology, "but I really must have a little air. I've not been out of the house all day."

Mrs. Rushmore understood, and was not hurt, though she was sorry not to hear more. The "dear child" should go out, by all means. Would Mons. Logotheti stay to dinner? No? She was sorry. She had forgotten that she had a letter to write in time for the afternoon post. So she went off and left the two together.

Margaret led the way out upon the lawn, and they sat down on garden chairs under a big elm tree. She said nothing while she settled herself very deliberately, avoiding her companion's eyes till she was quite ready, and then she suddenly looked at him with a sort of blank stare that would have disconcerted any one less superlatively self-possessed than he was. It was most distinctly Mme. de Cordova, the offended prima donna, that spoke at last, and not Miss Margaret Donne, the "nice English girl."

"What in the world has got into you?" she inquired in a chilly tone.

He opened his almond-shaped eyes a little wider with an excellent affectation of astonishment at her words and manner.

"Have I done anything you don't like?" he asked in a tone of anxiety and concern. "Was I rude to Mrs. Rushmore?"

Margaret looked at him a moment longer, and then turned her head away in silence, as if scorning to answer such a silly question. The look of surprise disappeared from his face, and he became very gloomy and thoughtful, and said nothing more.

Possibly he had brought about exactly what he wished, and was satisfied to await the inevitable result. It came before long.

"I don't understand you at all," Margaret said less icily, but with the sad little air of a woman who believes herself misunderstood. "It was very odd yesterday, at the telephone, you know—very odd indeed. I suppose you didn't realize it. And now, this afternoon, you have evidently been doing your best to keep Mrs. Rushmore from leaving us together. You would still be telling her stories about people if I hadn't obliged you to come out!"

"Yes," Logotheti asserted with exasperating calm and meekness, "we should still be there."

"You did not want to be alone with me, I suppose. There's no other explanation, and it's not a very flattering one, is it?"

"I never flatter you, dear lady," said Logotheti gravely.

"But you do! How can you deny it? You often tell me that I make you think of the Victory in the Louvre—"

"It's quite true. If the statue had a head it would be a portrait of you."

"Nonsense! And in your moments of enthusiasm you say that I sing better than Mme. Bonanni in her best days—"

"Yes. You know quite as much as she ever did, you are a much better musician, and you began with a better voice. Therefore you sing better. I maintain it."

"You often maintain things you don't believe," Margaret retorted, though her manner momentarily relaxed a little.

"Only in matters of business," answered the Greek with imperturbable calm.

"Pray, is 'learning Tartar' a matter of business?" Her eyes sparkled angrily as she asked the question.

Logotheti smiled; she had reached the point to which he knew she must come before long.

"Oh, yes!" he replied with alacrity. "Of course it is."

"That accounts for everything, since you are admitting that I need not even try to believe it was a man whom I heard speaking."

"To tell the truth, I have some suspicions about that myself," answered Logotheti.

"I have a great many," Margaret laughed rather harshly. "And you behave as if you wanted me to have more. Who is this eastern woman? Come, be frank. She is some one from Constantinople, isn't she? A Fanariote like yourself, I dare say—an old friend who is in Paris for a few days, and would not pass through without seeing you. Say so, for heaven's sake, and don't make such a mystery about it!"

"How very ingenious women are!" observed the Greek. "If I had thought of it I might have told you that story through the telephone yesterday. But I didn't."

Margaret was rapidly becoming exasperated, her eyes flashed, her firm young cheeks reddened handsomely, and her generous lips made scornful curves.

"Are you trying to quarrel with me?"

The words had a fierce ring; he glanced at her quickly and saw how well her look agreed with her tone. She was very angry.

"If I were not afraid of boring you," he said with quiet gravity, "I would tell you the whole story, but—" he pretended to hesitate.

He heard her harsh little laugh at once.

"Your worst enemy could not accuse you of being a bore!" she retorted. "Oh, no! It's something quite different from boredom that I feel, I assure you!"

"I wish I thought that you cared for me enough to be jealous," Logotheti said earnestly.

"Jealous!"

No one can describe the tone of indignant contempt in which a thoroughly jealous woman disclaims the least thought of jealousy with a single word; a man must have heard it to remember what it is like, and most men have. Logotheti knew it well; and at the sound he put on an expression of meek innocence which would have done credit to a cat that had just eaten a canary.

"I'm so sorry," he cried in a voice like a child's. "I didn't mean to make you angry, I was only wishing aloud. Please forgive me!"

"If your idea of caring for a woman is to make her jealous—"

This was such an obvious misinterpretation of his words that she stopped short and bit her lip. He sighed audibly, as if he were very sorry that he could do nothing to appease her, but this only made her feel more injured. She made an effort to speak coldly.

"You seem to forget that so long as we are supposed to be engaged I have some little claim to know how you spend your time!"

"I make no secret of what I do. Nothing could have been easier than for me to say that I was busy with one of the matters you suggested."

"Oh, of course! Nothing could be easier than to tell me an untruth!"

This certainly looked like the feminine retort-triumphant, and Margaret delivered it in a cutting tone.

"That is precisely what you seem to imply that I did," Logotheti objected. "But if what I told you was untrue your argument goes to pieces. There was no Tartar lesson, there was no Tartar teacher, and it was all a fabrication of my own!"

"Just what I think!" returned Margaret. "It was not Tartar you spoke, and there was no teacher!"

"You have me there," answered the Greek mildly, "unless you would like me to produce my young friend and talk to him before you in the presence of witnesses who know his language."

"I wish you would! I would like to see 'him!' I should like to see the color of 'his' eyes and hair!"

"Black as ink," said Logotheti.

"And you'll tell me that 'his' complexion is black, too, no doubt!"

"Not at all; a sort of creamy complexion, I think, though I did not pay much attention to his skin. He is a smallish chap, good-looking, with hands and feet like a woman's. I noticed that. As I told you, a doubt occurred to me at once, and I will not positively swear that it is not a girl after all. He, or she, is really a Tartar from central Asia, and I know enough of the language to say what was necessary."

"Necessary!"

"Yes. He—or she—came on a matter of business. What I said about a teacher was mere nonsense. Now you know the whole thing."

"Excepting what the business was," Margaret said incredulously.

"The business was an uncut stone," answered Logotheti with indifference. He had one to sell, and I bought it. "He was recommended to me by a man in Constantinople. He came to Marseilles on a French steamer with two Greek merchants who were coming to Paris, and they brought him to my door. That is the whole story. And here is the ruby. I bought it for you, because you like those things. Will you take it?"

He held out what looked like a little ball of white tissue paper, but Margaret turned her face from him.

"You treat me like a child!" she said.

To her own great surprise and indignation, her voice was unsteady and she felt something burning in her eyes. She was almost frightened at the thought that she might be going to cry, out of sheer mortification.

Logotheti said nothing for a moment. He began to unroll the paper from the precious stone, but changed his mind, wrapped it up again, and put it back into his watch-pocket before he spoke.

"I did not mean it as you think," he said softly.

She turned her eyes without moving her head, till she could just see that he was leaning forward, resting his wrists on his knees, bending his head and apparently looking down at his loosely hanging hands. His attitude expressed dejection and disappointment. She was glad of it. He had no right to think that he could make her as angry as she still was, angry even to tears, and then bribe her to smile again when he was tired of teasing her. Her eyes turned away again, and she did not answer him.

"I make mistakes sometimes," he said, speaking still lower, "I know I do. When I am with you I cannot be always thinking of what I say. It's too much to ask, when a man is as far gone as I am!"

"I should like to believe that," Margaret said, without looking at him.

"Is it hard to believe?" he asked so gently that she only just heard the words.

"You don't make it easy, you know," said she with a little defiance, for she felt that she was going to yield before long.

"I don't know how to. You're not in the least capricious—and yet—"

"You're mistaken," Margaret answered, turning to him suddenly. "I'm the most capricious woman in the world! Yesterday I wrote a long letter to a friend, and then I suddenly tore it up—there were ever so many pages! I daresay that if I had written just the same letter this morning I should have sent it. If that is not caprice, what is it?"

"It may have been wisdom to tear it up," Logotheti suggested.

Decline of Ancient English Fair.

After being held annually for 800 years Stow Green pleasure fair has practically ceased to exist.

Established by charter of Henry III., it ranked as one of the largest fairs in England for merchandise and lasted three weeks. All the large traveling shows in the country used to attend and they covered nearly four acres of ground. The fair is now limited to two days and when it commenced it only consisted of a few catchpenny devices.

This year the magistrates curtailed the hours for drinking and it is expected the fair will soon collapse altogether.—London Standard.

A NURSE'S EXPERIENCE.

Backache, Pains in the Kidneys, Bloating, Etc., Overcome.

A nurse is expected to know what to do for common ailments, and women who suffer backache, constant languor, and other common symptoms of kidney complaint, should be grateful to Mrs. Minnie Turner, of E. B. St., Anadarko, Okla., for pointing out the way to find quick relief. Mrs. Turner used Doan's Kidney Pills for a run-down condition, backache, pains in the sides and kidneys, bloated limbs, etc. "The way they have built me up is simply marvelous," says Mrs. Turner, who is a nurse. "My health improved rapidly. Five boxes did so much for me I am telling everybody about it."

FOOD CONTROLS MAN

Scientific Writer Says There Are No Good or Bad Thoughts.

They Are Well or Ill Digested Particles of Oxygen or Sustenance—Puritans Kill-Joy Attitude Bilious Rather Than Pious.

London.—Startling is the theory propounded by a learned scientist that food, the manner of its digestion and asimilation, accounts for all the actions of mankind. In the London Mirror it is explained by Charles H. Heydeman, Ph. D. as follows:

The brain is the stomach of the soul. There are no such things as good or bad thoughts. They are well or only badly digested particles of oxygen, water or food.

The mind, to put it simply, is nothing else but a chemical laboratory, in which, similarly to the electric cell process, various chemical products, from the air we breathe the liquids we absorb and the food we eat are split up and transformed into heat and motion or stored for future use.

Atoms as they circulate through the brain in continual kaleidoscopic changes combine with others, setting free a certain amount of energy, some of which is manifested in thoughts.

The real stomach as such, is only the ante-chamber to the brain; it serves as the general distributer of the nutriment which comes down to it. So much into the blood, so much to form bone and muscle, fat and fiber, and the tit-bits into the upper story.

Our food, thus, not only governs our digestive organs, but our thoughts, our morals, our actions, our looks, our whole lives. It makes us the men we are.

The kill-joy Puritan attitude which objected to "bear-baiting," not because it gave pain to the bear, but because it gave pleasure to the multitude, arose through the defective working of the biliary duct of these gentlemen.

They thought they were pious, when they were only bilious.

Carlyle's fierce invectives against the world—"mostly fools"—and his periodical eruptions into difform chunks of undigested English were the result of his chronic dyspepsia.

The man whose countenance Shakespeare talks about as being "sicklied o'er by the pale cast of thought" had probably been eating pork for supper. The conscience which makes cowards of us all comes from a disordered liver.

The tree is known by its fruit. Kean, the actor, always suited his diet to his part. When he had to play the lover he ate mutton; for murderers he took beef, very underdone; and pork for tyrants.

Fuseli, the painter, would eat meat raw when he wanted to raise his imagination to the horrible, and Mrs. Radcliffe did the same when she thrilled the world with her "Mysteries of Udolpho."

Siddons, the husband of the immortal Sarah, always declared that his wife never wept so heart rendingly as when she had partaken copiously of small beer.

Sydney Smith points out the importance of diet to man. "Half the unhappiness of man," he says, "arises from little stoppings, from a duct choked up, from food pressing in the wrong place, from a vexed duodenum or an agitated pylorus."

A man sups late. The next morning he wants to sell his house in town and retire into the country. He has vague forebodings about a fire. He is troubled about his daughter's health, and thinks she is in a decline. He finds he is spending too much money, and has serious doubts as to his investments.

"The country, sir, is going to the dogs." Within 24 hours his mind has resumed its accustomed equanimity. It was all owing to the lobster.

Every nation, every individual (with due reservations for heredity, and that again is conditioned by nourishment) is far better known by the food eaten than, as has been erroneously said of the individual, by the pictures on his walls.

First Lincoln Cents Gone.

Philadelphia.—All of the original "V. D. B." Lincoln pennies, which aroused such wide interest because of the prominence of Designer Brenner's initials on them and the subsequent change in dies to make the initials less conspicuous, have passed entirely into the public's hands. There were 28,328,000 of them issued, and not a cent of that famous issue is left in the treasury at Washington or subtreasury here.

Nimrod Bonds His Home.

Chester, Pa.—In order to pay a fine imposed on him for illegal gunning a foreigner, who appeared before Alderman Stockman, was compelled to mortgage his home. Giovano Delasando was charged with killing one rabbit and nine robins and was fined $170.47; Dominico Desarando, charged with killing six robins and one flicker, paid fines amounting to $107.37.

END OF FRUIT FRAUDS

Government Makes New Rules Wiping Out Big Graft.

Flagrant Abuses in Importation, Entailing Thousands of Dollars of Loss to Nation Hit by Order of Treasury Department.

Washington.—Flagrant abuses in fruit importation, entailing thousands of dollars of loss to the government, occurring especially on the docks at New York, are aimed at in regulations proclaimed by Acting Secretary of the Treasury Reynolds and directed to collectors of customs "and all others concerned."

The regulations prohibit importers from delaying for a week or ten days the filing of claims for allowances for decay, destruction or injury of fruit imported but not taken off the docks, making it impossible for the authorities to determine what to allow for the deterioration of the imports. California fruit raisers took up this question with congress at the last session, contending that the delays operated to the undue advantage of Italian interests, particularly as to oranges and lemons.

The government is entitled to the duty on the arrival of the fruit. Forty-eight hours is fixed by the department under the new circular as the time within which, after the arrival of the vessel, importers may file claims for allowance for shortage or nonimportation.

Immediately on notice of these claims the appraisers, under direction of the collectors, will detail one or more examiners to determine promptly the percentage of decay. These examiners will be called on to set aside representative packages, consisting of at least five per cent of each lot or mark, and to open and examine them.

Immediately on notice of these claims the appraisers, under direction of the collectors, will detail one or more examiners to determine promptly the percentage of decay. These examiners will be called on to set aside representative packages, consisting of at least five per cent. of each lot or mark, and to open and examine them.

Within ten days after the landing of the fruit the report of the appraiser must be made to the collector, fixing the percentage of rotten and worthless fruit found. On this percentage the allowance will be made in the liquidation of the entry.

Where imported or other perishable goods have been condemned at the port of original entry within ten days after landing, by the health officer or other authorities, no allowance will be made until the importers or their agents within 24 hours after the condemnation file detailed notice with the collector.

No allowance will be made for damage to any imported merchandise other than the allowance on unperishable goods, on the ground of nonimportation. Importers, however, are permitted under the new regulations to abandon to the United States within ten days after entry all or any portion of any goods included in any invoice and be relieved from payment of duty on the abandoned portion, provided that the abandoned part amounts to at least ten per cent. of the total value or quantity of the invoice. This right of abandonment may be exercised regardless of damage or commercial value.

The importers will have to deliver the abandonded goods at some designated place within the limits of the port, when the allowance will be made in liquidating the the entry and the marchandise sold or destroyed. On failure to deliver as required the government will take possession of the goods at the expense of the importers

CHOPS ACT AS INTOXICANT

Inhalation of Benzine, Excessive Emotion and Joy Riding May Make One Drunk, Says Authority.

London.—The vapor given off by turpentine, which intoxicated a number of men who were unloading a cargo of it at Bristol, is not the only curious inebriant. Even the homely chop, taken after long abstention from meat food, may stimulate to the point of drunkenness.

"Ordinary petrol, or benzine, if inhaled in sufficient quantities for a long enough period," a correspondent was informed by a medical analyst, "will produce the same result.

"Intoxication is by no means an effect of alcohol alone. The intoxication caused by alcohol is complete and, generally speaking, lasts longer; but it is quite possible to develop all the symptoms of drunkenness through excessive emotion, whether joy, grief or the exhilaration excited by music.

"What really happens is that the nerve centers are in such cases thrown out of unison with each other and with the brain, so that mentally directed actions—walking, talking and so on—become difficult and thought itself tends to incoherency.

"A motor ride in fresh air, especially to a person unused to it, will often produce similar effects, owing to excessive oxygenation of the blood, in plain words, overstimulation.

"Again, a man who has been ill for any length of time and, having been on a milk diet, takes too hearty a meal of meat when he is first allowed that food may expect to experience symptoms of intoxication. A chop can, under such circumstances, make him distinctly drunk.

"Strong coffee will also produce results not unlike spirit, especially if taken on an empty stomach after some hours of brain work. Tea is also distinctly stimulating, as is shown at an 'at home,' where it is usually noticed that the women's tongues wag most freely after the second or third cup."

A GOOD COUGH MIXTURE

Simple Home-Made Remedy That Is Free from Opiates and Harmful Drugs.

An effective remedy that will usually break up a cold in twenty-four hours is easily made by mixing together in a large bottle two ounces of Glycerine, a half-ounce of Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure and eight ounces of pure Whisky. This mixture will cure any cough that is curable and is not expensive as it makes enough to last the average family an entire year. Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure is prepared only in the laboratories of the Leach Chemical Co., Cincinnati, O.

RECIPE FOR CATARRH.

Furnished by High Medical Authority, Gives Prompt Results.

The only logical treatment for catarrh is through the blood. A prescription which has recently proved wonderfully effective in hospital work is the following. It is easily mixed.

"One ounce compound syrup of Sarsaparilla; one ounce Toris compound; half pint first-class whiskey." These to be mixed by shaking well in a bottle, and used in tablespoon doses before each meal and at bedtime.

The ingredients can be gotten from any well stocked druggist, or he will get them from his wholesale house.

Strictly Neutral.

Among the humorous and human stories in Dr. T. L. Pennell's recent book, "Among the Wild Tribes of the Afghan Frontier," is one of a British officer in the Kurram valley who interrogated an Afridi with regard to what was then considered a probable conflict.

"Now tell me," said the officer, "if there were to be war—which God forbid—between Russia and England, what part would you and your people take? Whom would you side with?"

"Do you wish me to tell you what would please you or to tell you the real truth?" was the naive reply.

"I adjure you to tell me what is the 'white word.'"

"Then," said the old graybeard, "we would just sit up here on our mountain tops watching you both fight, until we saw one or the other defeated. Then we would come down and loot the vanquished till the last mule! God is great! What a time that would be for us!"

Would Be No Change.

During the presidential campaign the question of woman suffrage was much discussed among women pro and con and at an afternoon tea the conversation turned that way between the women guests.

"Are you a woman suffragist?" asked the one who was not interested.

"Indeed, I am not," replied the other most emphatically.

"Oh, that's too bad, but just supposing you were, whom would you support in the present campaign?"

"The same man I've always supported, of course," was the apt reply—"my husband."

Good Place for Camels.

Gov. Glasscock of West Virginia, while traveling through Arizona, noticed the dry, dusty appearance of the country.

"Doesn't it ever rain around here?" he asked one of the natives.

"Rain?" the native spat. "Rain? Why, say, pardner, there's bullfrogs in this yere town over five years old that hain't learned to swim yet."—Everybody's Magazine.

Eating for Strength.

The greatest pleasure to be derived from eating is the pleasure one gets in the knowledge that his food is giving him greater strength and vitality.

Because of this fact there is a constant increase in the consumption of Quaker Oats; every time the strength making qualities of Quaker Oats have been tested by scientific investigation or by experiments in families it has been found to be a food without an equal.

It builds the muscles and brain without taxing the digestive organs; it costs so little anyone can afford it, and it is so carefully prepared and packed that it is absolutely pure and clean. A Quaker Oats eating family is always a healthy family. 11

Quaker Oats is packed in regular size packages and also in large size family packages. The latter very convenient for those not near the store.

Worth the Expense.

The story that Sir John Fisher of the British admiralty tells with the greatest enjoyment—and he tells many, and all with zest—is of an old boatswain on his flagship who fell into a little money and retired. One day the admiral visited him at his country box, to find the old sailor possessed of an apparently useless man servant.

"What do you want with him?" asked Fisher.

"H'every morning," explained the old sailor, "'e comes to me 'hammock and tells me to roll h'out. 'The h'admiral wants to see you,' 'e says to me. H'and I says to 'im, 'Tell the h'admiral to go to 'ell,' says Hi."

HOOKWORM BUG FROM HAWAII

San Francisco.—The hookworm disease has been brought to San Francisco from Hawaii and the orient, and hundreds of cases of hitherto unexplained dejection and laziness are attributed to the inroads of the little parasite. Dr. Herbert Gunn, who is directing a campaign of physicians against the disease, says he has treated over 100 cases, at least one of which resulted fatally. Hundreds are barred from Hawaii and soldiers from the Philippines, victims of the parasite, are supposed to be living on this coast.

Cat Baffles Hawk in Midair

Bloomington (Ind.) Farmer Tells of Discomfiture of Bird When Clawed by Feline.

Bloomington, Ind.—A remarkable midair battle between a house cat and a large chicken hawk on the farm of Paris Hazel, a leading citizen south of this city, is reported by Mr. Hazel himself, who was an eyewitness.

According to Mr. Hazel's story, he was awakened early Wednesday morning by a commotion in his poultry yard. The hawk was hovering over a flock of chickens preparing to sink its talons into one of them and carry it away, when Mr. Hazel appeared.

Through a mistake the invader caught up the cat, and as it arose 25 feet from the ground the feline began to scratch and fight, at the same time letting out "yowls" that plainly indicated its distress. The biting and scratching of the cat caused the hawk to release its hold and [illegible] came to the ground with a thud. The [illegible] made another attempt to attack the cat, when Mr. Hazel quickly drove it away.

Mr. Hazel states that he and his family vouch for the truth of the unusual story.

To Raise Egyptian Lotus.

Pontiac, Mich.—Attorney Joseph E. Sawyer will endeavor to raise the Egyptian sacred lotus lily at Keego harbor, the entrance to Cass lake. He has secured a shipment of pods containing the lotus seed and will sow them in the muck about the shore of the harbor. Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Rev. Stephen Sidebotham of Warroad, who is a son of Rev. Wm. Sidebotham who has accepted the pastorate of the local Presbyterian church, was in town last evening and today making arrangements for the removal of his father's family to this city.

Miss Etta Gaass of Pella, Iowa, is a guest at the home of her brother, P. B. Gaass. Miss Gaass arrived in Red Lake Falls yesterday, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Gaass' little daughter, Miss Wanda, who has spent the summer with her grandmother at Pella.

Louis Corbeil from Green Bay, Wis., is visiting his brother, Jos. Corbeil. He will spend most of the winter. Mr. Corbeil drove out to Brooks today with his nephew, Josaphat Corbeil, who came in to get him, and spend a few days with relatives at Brooks.

You may have waited till now for a suit or overcoat. Suits, $5.90 to $27.50 for the finest strictly all hand tailored suits made. You would look nice in a Kuppenheimer suit. Try one on and see. That part of it doesn't cost anything. We guarantee everything we sell; no misrepresentations.—The Big Store.

Misses Dora, Mabel and Leah Quesnelle, all of whom have been quite seriously ill with typhoid fever, are getting along nicely. Miss Dora has about recovered and was able to go to her home at Terrebonne this week. Misses Mabel and Leah are still being cared for at the home of Mrs. Marchand, but will soon be able to go to their home.

Dr. J. C. Wilkinson was called to the home of Nels Madson near Mentor last Thursday and found Mr. Madson's four year old son afflicted with infantile paralysis. The little boy had lost control of one of his legs. This week his condition is improved. He can use his leg a little and seems to be gaining in strength. There have been a number of cases of infantile paralysis in the vicinity of Mentor during the past season.

What will it be—a linen set, a rug, a set of furs, a smoking jacket, a swell neck tie, a piece of fancy work, an auto scarf or muffler, a swell hand bag, a beautiful handkerchief, a piece of Haviland or hand painted china or a dinner set? It depends who it is for. We have a bigger and finer stock of these goods than anyone else. It will be a pleasure for you to look over our stock, and for us to have you do so. You don't have to buy; do all the "shopping" you care to.—The Big Store.

Rev. Fr. Fayolle has about completed arrangements for his trip south. He expects to leave Monday and will go to Tuscon, Arizona, where he spend the winter. He will return next May or early in June to take up the work in his pastorate again. Fr. Fayolle's many friends hope that his sojourn in the south will be both pleasant and beneficial to his health. Rev. Fr. Ernest Bossus from St. Mathias, near Brainerd, will have charge of the work of the pastorate during Fr. Fayolle's absence.

The mellow drama, "Lone Star of Texas," was as good as a living puzzle picture, for the audience had an hilarious time trying to find the lone star. It was a lively performance with much exciting gun and knife play and even the small boy hanging on the window casing in the back of the balcony was all cut up because it took so long to "dispatch" the villain. Several people were killed and wounded, but the dead ones had a habit of reviving—all except the villain. He was killed good and plenty—finally.

STOP and look over our store when buying your Christmas goods and presents. We have a large stock of candy, nuts, figs, dates and apple cider. In our grocery department you will find fine coffees, teas, bread, cookies, crackers and canned goods. In our Notion and Stationary department you will find handkerchiefs, gloves, mittens, neckties, President suspenders in fancy boxes for 50c, perfumery, combs, brushes, mirrors, razors, pocket knives, nut crackers, harmonicas, fountain pens, cuff buttons, scarf pins, toys, dolls, box paper, cards, writing tablets, post cards, pens, pencils, etc. In our Tobacco department you will find a big assortment of cigars, pipes and smokers' articles.—Spillane's, The Store of Quality.

The local M. B. A. lodge held its regular annual election on Monday and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Frank Brouillet; vice president, Lillian Belair; secretary, Samuel Gibeau; conductor, Jules Lasha; chaplain, Alexine Gibeau; watchman, Joseph Harren; sentry, Joseph Paquin; trustees, Rufus Poirier, John Kiefenheim and Addie Longtin. The financial report was found very satisfactory. The membership of this society is now 160.

After the meeting the members were entertained at progressive cinch until midnight. The head prize, a beautiful fruit dish, was won by Mrs. Lillian Belair, while the consolation prize, a bon bon dish, was awarded to Miss Cora Cress.

The young people of St. Joseph's school who gave the program and drama, "Through Darkness To Light," at the Metropolitan opera house last Friday evening, clearly showed by the ease with which they handled the difficult parts of the principal number on the program, that they had received careful training. The smaller girls in the flower drill moved with ease and precision and those taking heavier parts in the drama acquitted themselves very creditably. The opera house was filled with an enthusiastic audience and the work of the young people received much applause. The musical numbers on the program were a chorus by the young ladies, a vocal duet by Misses Lea Latendresse and Mona Zeh and selections by the concert orchestra.

Notice of Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the First State Bank of Red Lake Falls, Minn., will be held in its office in the City of Red Lake Falls, County of Red Lake and state of Minnesota, on the 11th day of January, 1910, between the hours of 10:00 a. m. and 4:00 p. m., for the purpose of electing directors for the ensuing year and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting.
[illegible], President. 9-30

EFFECT OF THE STRIKE

Milling Company Is Operating Plant Only Part of Time.

The effect of the switchmen's strike is being felt in Red Lake Falls. The old Healy mill that was leased by the Red Lake Falls Milling company and that was being operated night and day, is now operated only a few hours each day. The local trade is taken care of, but inability to get cars makes it impossible to get flour to outside customers.

The tie-up in freight traffic has o course caused considerable inconvenience to local merchants, especially as the strike came just about the time they were getting ready for the Christmas trade.

'Twas a Proposal.

"I got a letter from him yesterday written on a typewriter."

"That's too much like business."

Red Lake Falls Electric Light Co., a Corporation, Plaintiffs, Against
L. P. Berthon and Mrs. L. P. Berthon, Defendants.

The State of Minnesota to L. P. Berthon and Mrs. L. P. Berthon, Defendants:

You are hereby summoned to be and appear before the undersigned, one of the justices of the Peace in and for said county, on the 31st day of December, 1909, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at my office, in the City of Red Lake Falls, in said county, to answer to the complaint of the Red Lake Falls Electric Light Company, (a corporation) in a civil action, wherein the plaintiff claims the sum of thirty-six and 77-100 dollars ($36.77) with interest thereon from the 30th day of September, 1906, at the rate of six per cent per annum. Should you fail to appear at the time and place aforesaid, judgment will be rendered against you upon the evidence adduced by said Red Lake Falls Electric Light Company, for such sum as it shall show itself entitled to.

Given under my hand this 29th day of November, A. D. 1909.

A Star Litter Carrier.

Will SAVE You TIME and MONEY.

Without a doubt "The Star" is the most reliable made. It is constructed of heavy malleable iron; load held from four different points on the steel shaft. Note that it has a winding chain instead of cable, which unravels. The tub dumps either way, so that you don't have to pack it heavy on one side to make it dump as in others. It has a quick lifting device; you non't want a slow one. Pulling 56 lbs. on the hand chain raises 320 lbs. in the tub. The carrier shown here is the "King of all Rigid Track Litter Carriers"—The Star No. 333. Come in and get an estimate of the cost of fitting out your barn with one of these labor savers. The one shown is the best, but we have the cheaper outfits, as cheap as anyone, that run on a steel rod instead of a track. It costs nothing to investigate this and you may get some pointers by looking over the "Star" line. We have samples in stock.

MINNESOTA AT THE OMAHA EXPOSITION

A. D. VanSickle of Warren Won Sweepstakes For Best Peck of Oats.

Swan Akenson of Red Lake Falls Made Good Showing in Corn Contest.

Minnesota farmers scored well in the contests on grains at the Omaha exposition, and the grand sweepstakes for the best peck of oats shown at the exposition was won by a northern Minnesota farmer. A. A. VanSickle of Warren won this prize and also the Colorado trophy offered by Prof. W. H. Olin, vice president of the National Corn Association of Colorado. The cup is valued at $1,500. Mr. Van Sickle also won the first prize offered by J. J. Hill for the best peck of oats. Anton Kurtz, also of Warren, won the second prize.

Red Lake Falls also has a prize winner. Swan Akenson scored eleventh in the contest for prizes offered for best ten ears of dent corn, other than yellow or white. Martin Cole and J. E. C. Walland, both of Ada, scored seventh and eighth in the contest on ten ears of flin corn, any color.

NOT SO WET HERE

County's Ten Per Cent of License Money Not So Much.

Red Lake County is not so wet as the article appearing in the last issue of the Gazette might cause some people to believe From figures coming from the state auditor's office, it was estimated that $3,300 would have to be paid into the county treasury by the cities and villages of the county, that amount representing ten per cent of the liquor license money.

There are twelve saloons at Thief River Falls, ~~seven at Red~~ Lake Falls, four at St. Hilaire and two at Plummer. Each of the twenty-five saloons pays a license fee of $500, so the total amount that must be paid into the county treasurer by the cities and villages is $1,200 instead of $3,300.

Wylie, Brooks and Lambert are not incorporated villages, so all of the license money from the liquor stores at those places goes into the county treasury. There are two saloons at Brooks, one at Wylie and one at Lambert, each paying a license fee of 500. Adding these amounts to the ten per cent, the cities and incorporated villages will be required to pay under the new law will make an aggregate of $3,250, about as much as it was stated the new law would bring into the county treasury. All of the money received from this source goes into the general revenue fund.

Were Married Here

A happy marriage was solemnized at Red Lake Falls last Tuesday when Miss Emma Hartley and Herbert Quesnell, both well known young people north of the village, joined hands and were pronounced husband and wife. The young couple stole a march on their many friends and nothing was suspected until they returned home Tuesday night. They will make their home at Mentor and have the best wishes of a host of friends for a long and happy wedded life.—Erskine Echo.

FINE ENTERTAINMENT

Robert Miekle and Company at Metropolitan Opera House Friday Night.

Manager Wander of the Metropolitan opera house has booked a fine entertainment for Friday evening. Dec. 17. Robert Meikle, the eminent baritone, and his company, will be here. Mr. Meikle will be assisted by Frank Lloyd, singing comedian, and Miss Gladys Noxon, dramatic reader. All of the members of the company are talented, and there is no doubt that the entertainment will be one of high order—an entertainment of a class that Red Lake Falls people do not often have an opportunity to enjoy. Critics in many of the larger cities of this country and Canada have been saying fine things about the work of these three people. Mr. Meikle apepared in concert in New York City, and the New York World had the following to say about his singing:

"At the Scotch concert, on Saturday night, Mr. Robert Meikle again scored a brilliant success. He aroused his audience to great enthusiasm by his dramatic interpretations of the ringing Scotch songs."

Tickets for the entertainment are now on sale at Holzman's jewelry store.

BULLET IN HER FOOT

Miss Mary Cadieux Victim of a Peculiar Accident.

Miss Marie Cadieux has been the victim of a peculiar accident and one that ordinarily would prove much more serious than did this one. Miss Cadieux has been teaching at Lundgren, near International Falls. On Oct. 31 she was out hunting and carried a 22 calibre rifle. She was carrying the rifle with the barrel pointing down. The hammer was up and her finger was on the trigger. She stumbled and involuntarily she pressed the trigger. The gun was discharged and the ball struck her foot. The wound caused he little inconvenience and she was able to continue her school work. Miss Cadieux is now at home for the Christmas vacation and on Tuesday Dr. J. C. Wilkinson removed the bullet. The bullet had almost penetrated the foot and lodged just beneath the skin on the sole of the foot. The old wound had healed and in removing the bullet it was necessary to make only a slight wound.

CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

Children of Presbyterian Sunday School Will Entertain.

The pupils of the Presbyterian Sunday School will give a Christmas entertainment on Christmas eve. The primary and junior departments will present the cantata, "Jack Frost's Christmas Shower," and there will be other numbers on the program appropriate to the Christmas season. Santa Claus will be there, and there will be heaps of fun for the litle people, and for the older people as well.

Will Rebuild.

Business men, who are interested, have received assurance from Charles H. Foy of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, who owned the building occupied by J. C. Schmitz & Co., that he would rebuild as soon as possible in the spring. The new front building will have a fifty foot front two stories high, making it just twice the size of the former building. Mr. Schmitz has not made his plans for the future as yet, though he does not figure on going into business here again, yet he likes the outlook here and there is a possibility of his being the occupant of the new building.—Plummer Pioneer.

STRIKE CAUSES INCONVENIENCE

Public Suffers Inconvenience Because of Difficulty in the Handling of Freight.

Paul Pry's Interesting Comment About Politics and Other Things.

[Special Correspondence to Red Lake Falls Gazette.]

St. Paul, Dec.—Only one thing seems certain about the status of the Switchmen's strike, and that is that it is causing the public great inconvenience. For instance I met a gentleman the other day who had been at Faribault. He told me that there was a shortage of coal there affecting the electric lighting plant. At that time there was a prospect that the city would have to economize on light, and that if the strike was protracted many days, the plant would have to shut down. Today I met a gentleman from Montgomery. They have a big flouring mill there, employing altogether some seventy men. The trouble there was that they couldn't get wheat. Because of this the mill would be obliged to shut down, and its employes would have to submit to enforced idleness. These are merely characteristic incidents. To a greater or less extent these conditions are duplicated all over the state.

The Public Blamed.

These things give force to the remark made the other day by Dr. Phelan, the professor of economics at the State University. "The switchmen," he said, "are not necessarily to be censured for striking, nor the railroads for refusing the demands of the union. The public is to be censured for its lack of provision against public utility strikes." He added, "the fact that a strike of such immense import and possibly of dire consequence should be possible before there had been a full and impartial investigation and publication of the facts of the controversy is a lamentable commentary upon the failure of American legislation and administration to adapt itself promptly to present day conditions." He favored the enactment of a law similar to that now in force in Canada which requires all labor questions involving public utilities to be submitted to a thirty-day investigation by a specially appointed public board. After such an investigation the board reports its findings, and while its recommendations are not binding to either party to the controversy, in practice it is found that both are ready to adpot the findings of an impartial tribunal. The interest of the people are paramount both to the interest of the railroads and of its employes. Such method must be devised to protect the public against such conditions as now prevail. It is a problem to which thoughtful legislatros should at once apply themselves.

Freight Not Moving.

In the meantime, claims of the railroads and of committees of commercial organizations to the contrary notwithstanding, freight is not moving promptly. Traffic is interrupted. Terminal points are congested, and there is no effective relief. Switchmen rejoice in this as an indication that the railroads must make terms with the strikers. To the public there can be no satisfaction in such a situation. Their interest is that traffic should be resumed.

The Labor Department Doing Its Best.

Unfortunately the State Labor Department is clothed with no authority in the matter. All that it can do is to see that the law is observed both by the railroads and the strikers. This Mr. McEwan has been able to do. He has done more. He has taken care of men brought here by the railroads only to find that there was no work for them, or that it was work they were not able to do. He has kept the governor informed as to the actual situation. That there have been no outbreaks and no violence is largely due to the fact that he has insisted that aliens shall not be armed by the railroads and clothed with police powers, and that workmen on the other hand must keep within the law. Unfortunate as has been the result of the strike in suspending traffic and putting the public to great loss and inconvenience, this at least must be said in justice to both parties to been orderly and that violence has the controversy, that the struggle has not characterized it.

The Governor Misrepresented.

Something has been said of late regarding friction between the governor and the Labor Department about appointments. In this I am inclined to think the governor has been done some injustice. The trouble appears to have been the result of the wound-

HAS GONE SOUTH

Rev. Fr. Fayolle Will Spend Winter at Tuscon, Arizona.

Rev. Fr. Fayolle left Monday evening on his journey south and will arrive at Tuscon, Arizona, the last of the week. He will spend much of the winter there, though he will visit other points of interest before his return to Red Lake Falls next May. Rev. Fr. Bossus from St. Mathias arrived Saturday and will have charge of the work of St. Joseph's church during Fr. Fayolle's absence.

Father Fayolle's parishioners will join in the wish that his sojourn in the south may be both pleasant and beneficial to his health and that he may return to Red Lake Falls next May enjoying vigorous health.

A number of Father Fayolle's friends who are not members of his church, that they too might share in the expressions of regret that he is to leave and wishes that his stay in the south may be an enjoyable one, gave a little dinner party in his honor at Paul's hotel on the eve of his departure. Mrs. Paul served an excellent banquet after which members of the dinner party voiced the feelings of those present in wishing Father Fayolle Godspeed on his journey, a happy sojourn in the south and assuring him of a hearty welcome home next summer. Father Fayolle responded feelingly, expressing deep appreciation of the friendship that prompted the giving of the little dinner. It was a happy occasion and indicated the esteem in which Father Fayolle is held by his friends, those who are not in the church as well as his own church people. Covers were laid for twelve Besides Father Fayolle and Father Bossus, the guests of honor, the following were gathered about the banquet table: Dr. N. M. Watson, S. M. Sivertson, Sam E. Hunt, H. E. Ives, Supt. L. V. Koos, Geo. F. Hennings, Supt. H. F. Anderson, H. H. Zaiser, Dr. J. E. Argue, C. R. C. Baker.

Lost His Coat.

P. J. Costelle passed through the city this morning enroute to Red Lake Falls, where he will spend a few days. Mr. Costelle was a passenger from Bemidji day before yesterday, getting off the train at Erskine and taking the Soo for Thief River Falls. He had two overcoats, a fur lined coat and a light overcoat. The latter he threw on the rack over his seat when he entered the train at Bemidji. Before the train pulled out there he noted, when counting his change, that the ticket clerk had given him $1 too much in change. He jumped off the train and returned the dollar and when he got on again he forgot all about his coat and took another seat. At Erskine he could not send a telegram and this morning took the matter up with the local Great Northern officials and will, without doubt, recover his coat.—Crookston Times.

Killed Two Wolves.

Wolves are still quite numerous in the vicinity of Red Lake Falls, though they are playing a defensive game and it is hard to get a good shot at any of the "varmint." E. E. Fletcher and son, Abner Fletcher, are the latest successful wolf hunters. They killed two of the animals Sunday afternoon.

THE BAND WILL PLAY

Another Fine Concert is to be given on Tuesday Evening, Dec. 28.

The band boys will give another of their fine concerts on Tuesday evening Dec. 28. Director Brunelle is drilling the boys on some fine band selections, and no doubt the program will be as fine a one as was the last program. The band boys have been making excellent progress of late, and have earned the right to the encouragement that a big crowd at the next concert will give them. The concert program will be published in the next issue of the Gazette.

Notice of Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the First State Bank of Red Lake Falls, Minn., will be held in its office in the City of Red Lake Falls, County of Red Lake and state of Minnesota, on the 11th day of January, 1910, between the hours of 10:00 a. m. and 4:00 p. m., for the purpose of electing directors for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting.—Theo. Garceau, President. 9-30

NOT GUILTY IS THE JURY'S VERDICT

Sensational Murder Trial at Fergus Falls Concluded Yesterday.

Second Trial of Paul Fournier Resulted in verdict of Acquittal.

The sensational murder trial at Fergus Falls, that of the state against Paul Fournier charged with the murder of N. O. Dahl, came to an end yesterday. The verdict of "not guilty" was a surprise. It was generally believed that Fournier would be convicted or that the jury would fail to agree.

Mr. Hunt, adjustor for the Royal Insurance company, was in town Saturday and adjusted the loss occasioned by the burning of the house at Wylie owned by Theo. Garceau and Geo. F. Hennings. The amount of the policy was $500 and the loss was paid in full.

Friends of A. C. Mayfield, a former resident of Mayfield township, will be interested to know that he has gone from Mineral Point, Wis., to Kissimmer, Florida. The Gazette has not been informed whether Mr. Mayfield has gone south for the winter or is to make his futne home in the land of sunshine and flowers.

P. L. Malvin has had an agreeable surprise and doesn't know who to thank for the pleasant sensation and don't know why it happened. Somebody left some silverware at his house and no explanations were offered. This happened shortly after the big dairy show and corn contest and maybe it has some connection with that event. It is possible that somebody believed that Mr. Malvin was entitled to some kind of a medal for pulling off such a big event so successfully.

There are more R-E-Z shoes worn in town than any other make. Style and comfort are combined to perfection in this shoe. Try a pair and you will never wear anything else. —LaBissoniere's.

LUMBER OUTPUT

STATE FURNISHED ONE-THIRD OF COUNTRY'S WHITE PINE DURING 1909.

ONE OF "BIG FIVE" STATES

Wisconsin Is Second, With About 15 Per Cent.—Valuation of the Output Falls Behind That of Last Year.

Washington, D. C.—Washington, Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas and Wisconsin, in the order named, constitute the "big five" in producing the country's lumber supply, whose valuation for last year runs far above that of the billion dollar mark.

Texas, Michigan, Oregon, Minnesota and Pennsylvania rank after the first five states and others follow in decreasing amounts down to Utah, the lowest on the list, with Nevada and North Dakota, having little timbered area, not rated at all.

While the total valuation of the production of lumber, lath and shingle production reached $541,545,640, this is a decrease of 23 per cent under the previous year's output. The mills reporting manufactured 33,224,369,000 board feet of lumber, valued at $510,575,822, and 2,986,684,000 lath, valued at $6,791,328. Shingle makers turned out 12,106,483,000 shingles, valued at $24,178,490.

Yellow Pine From South.

The average value of lumber at the point of manufacture was $15.37 a thousand feet, $2.27 a thousand for lath and $2 a thousand for shingles.

Yellow pine of the south, which has been far in the lead in the lumber production for more than a decade, more than maintained its supremacy last year, contributing slightly more than 38 per cent of the total cut from all kinds. Douglas fir of the northwest ranked second and white pine third.

Oak and hemlock maintained their relative ranks, but showed decreases of 25 per cent each, and spruce dropped 18 per cent.

Louisiana was the heaviest producer of yellow pine lumber; Texas, Mississippi, Arkansas and Alabama followed. The state of Washington supplied more than three-fifths of the Douglas fir cut, while the bulk of the remainder came from Oregon.

Minnesota produced about a third of the white pine, followed by Wisconsin with about 15 per cent and New Hampshire third with 10 per cent.

Oak lumber now centers in Kentucky.

SIX STEERS SEEK HONORS.

Pride of Minnesota State Herds Sent To Chicago Show.

St. Paul.—Comfortably placed in a special car with a private attendant, six head of blooded steers went out from the Minnesota Agricultural college to go on exhibition at the International Live Stock show which opens in Chicago today. The animals are the pride of the University stock farm, and most of them already have records of prizes and places won at similar exhibitions. They are in charge of H. C. Campbell, who will see that they are properly fed and handled up to the minute they go on the platform.

Chief in the herd is Grand Champion Eclipser, an Angus three-year-old steer which stood second at the national show last year, and which is fully expected by his backers to take away the blue ribbon this time. Disclosure, a Hereford, goes in the same class of the Hereford breed, and is a Minnesota bred animal with winning points. Two Shorthorn yearlings, Juba and Prince Rollan, are to be entered in the younger class from Minnesota, with Undulata, an Angus yearling who stood first in his class last year. Barbarian, another Angus calf closes the list. He is expected to be a winner in the youngest class at the show.

Prof. Haeker, head of the livestock department, went to Chicago yesterday, and will take charge of the Student's judging contest, which is the first event on the show program. Prof. Boss and Instructor Gaumnitz leave today and expect to study the best stock in the world.

N. Y. GOPHERS TO BANQUET.

Real Stars Will Be Set On Roof of Waldorf-Astoria.

New York, N. Y.—The annual dinner of the Minnesota society of New York will be held on the evening of Dec. 18 at the Waldorf-Astoria. Already the sun parlor has been reserved for the occasion, but should the number of those who signify their intention of being present exceed 100, the main banquet hall of the hotel will be used. The sun parlor is on the roof of the great hostelry. It is a large glass room and should the annual banquet of the society be spread in it the diners will feast under the stars of heaven, with the glimmering lights of the city in full view below them.

Timothy E. Byrnes, fourth vice-president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, is the president of the society this year and he is making a strenuous effort to secure a record-breaking attendance at the dinner. He has sworn that he will fetch Senator Knute Nelson from Washington and he has announced that already Representative Tawney of Winona has signified his intention of accepting an invitation to the dinner.

Three railway presidents at least will be among the diners on the 18th of next month. They are President Mellen of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad; President Underwood of the Erie and President Winter of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit. It is expected, too, that James J. Hill, chairman of the board of the Great Northern railroad, will also be present.

Among the speakers will be such well known orators as ex-Senator Charles A. Towne, Rev. John Wesley Hill of the Metropolitan Temple, formerly pastor of Fowler Methodist Episcopal church of Minneapolis; Dr. David James Burrell of the Marble Collegiate church, formerly pastor of Westminster Presbyterian church of Minneapolis, and Dr. Albert Shaw, editor of the Review of Reviews, formerly of The Minneapolis Tribune.

The Minnesota society is made up of men who are now in the forefront of the financial, railroad and professional world in this city, and consequently of the country, and its annual banquet always attracts widespread attention.

The date this year has been set with a view to accommodating residents of Minnesota who may happen to be in New York the week before Christmas to do their holiday shopping and all those who are now intending to visit the metropolis during that week are invited to communicate with the treasurer of the society, W. R. Richards, so that invitations may be sent them.

The officers of the society are Timothy E. Byrnes, president; Henry G. Ingersoll, secretary; W. B. Richards of 43 Wall Street, treasurer, and John Henry Hammond, F. W. M. Cutcheon, Cande Hamlin and A. B. Stickney, vice presidents.

BEMIDJI MARSHAL IS SHOT.

Was Attempting to Arrest Highwayman.

Bemidji.—An unknown highwayman was killed and Deputy Sheriff Andrew Johnson, of this city, dangerously wounded in a desperate battle 17 miles from this city.

Two highwaymen entered the store owned by B. Laqua, at Puposky, a town 17 miles northwest of here, at 2:30 in the morning and attempted to blow the safe. The noise awoke Mr. Laqua, the proprietor, who grabbed a shotgun and fired two shots at the robbers. They exchanged the shots but none took effect. The robbers then ran and stole a speeder from the Red Lake railway company and escaped in the direction of Bemidji. Mr. Laqua notified Deputy Johnson of this city and he, in company with Allan Benner, hurried to the overhead bridge, one mile outside of the city limits and waited for the men to appear.

They had not long to wait for in five minutes the two highwaymen appeared. Johnson ordered the men to hold up their hands, but in response to this was shot at by one of them. The shot entered his left shoulder, passed through his lung and came out of his left side. Brenner then fired at the robbers, hitting and instantly killing one.

The dead robber is believed to be a lumberjack known here as Jim Smith who has been working in this vicinity for the past three years. He was shot in the head, death being instantaneous. The other robber escaped but posses are scouring the woods for him. He has been traced to the Wilton camp three miles from Bemidji and his caputure is expected soon.

KETHMAN GUILTY

OF MURDER IN THE SECOND DEGREE—SO SAYS JURY IN MOORHEAD CASE.

GIVEN SENTENCE FOR LIFE

Prisoner Maintains Very Cool Demeanor Throughout Trial—Affecting Scene When Sentence Is Pronounced.

Fargo, Dec. 2.—Frank Kethman of Moorhead was found guilty of murder in the second degree under an indictment charging him with the killing of Dr. Thrond S. Egge on the night of Labor day, Sept. 6, and at 11:25 this forenoon, was sentenced to life imprisonment at Stillwater.

The jury deliberated on its verdict fifteen hours and twenty minutes.

Kethman appeared unmoved when he heard the verdict read by Clerk McCubrey. Immediately after the verdict was read the convicted man was returned to his cell in the county jail to await the formal passing of sentence.

Judge Taylor, after a short conference with the county attorney and Mr. Nye, the latter counsel for the defense, told the sheriff to bring in Frank Kethman for sentence. By this time Mrs. Kethman and her father, Mr. Wheelwright, and Mrs. Parmeter had arrived in court.

In response to the usual question by the court as to whether the defendant or his attorney desired to make any statement, Kethman said: "I want to say a word, judge. I was arrested by Witherow and Erickson, both of them witnesses against me. Two or three times during the trial I have seen those two men talking to the jury when they have been leaving the box and I don't think that was fair. Those witnesses from the saloon did not tell the truth about the time. They said it was 7 minutes to 11 o'clock when the saloon was closed, but to tell the truth judge it was 7 minutes after 11 o'clock. I ask no mercy, but that swearing was to protect the $1,000 saloon license which was at stake. They don't care as long as they can do business." Kethman made some other remarks, but they were not audible.

Mr. Nye, for the prisoner, said that there was some merit in what the defendant had said. As to the penalty there was nothing to say, the law fixed that. He had strong doubts as to the guilt of the defendant, but as long as there exist such institutions as we have among us we shall have more of these cases.

Judge Taylor said the defendant had been given a fair trial and that he had been ably defended and in no particular had anything been done in the conduct of the trial, but what all could honestly do. Under the verdict, the law fixes the penalty, the court was only the medium for pronouncing the penalty for murder in the second degree, and it is "that you, Frank Kethman, be confined at hard labor in the state penitentiary at Stillwater, for the period of your natural life."

Kethman did not exhibit a quiver. All through the ordeal he maintained the same degree of composure which has been conspicuous since the beginning of the trial, Nov. 19.

The examination of veniremen for the jury began Nov. 19. The jury was completed at noon Monday, Nov. 28, and the taking of the testimony began in the afternoon, and the case was submitted to the jury yesterday afternoon at 4:45.

MAKES GETAWAY.

Samuel Gant Eludes Pursuers and Reaches Reservation.

Aberdeen, S. D., Dec. 2.—After fleeing from the officers of the counties of Marshall, Brown, Edmunds and Walworth in South Dakota, and those of two or three counties in North Dakota, Samuel Gant, the murderer of Louis Maxwell at Englevale, N. D., on Thanksgiving day, has disappeared having succeeded in eluding all the posses in search of him. When last seen he was about three miles ahead of the sheriff of Edmunds county, headed south. The officers are confident that Gant has not succeeded in crossing the Missouri river to the reservation country, believed to be his destination.

Strike Situation Unchanged.

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 2.—With the importation of strikebreakers from Chicago and other points and the pressing into service of other employes of the road, the railroads of the northwest that were affected by the strike, began their first real work today in trying to restore normal traffic conditions between here and the Pacific coast.

Despite the efforts of the railroads, there was no noticeable improvement in business conditions in the twin cities this morning. In Minneapolis all the flour mills with the exception of one of the smaller ones were stopped.

Rush Marines to Scene.

Philadelphia, Dec. 2.—Seven hundred marines, equipped for any eventuality, will leave the Philadelphia navy yard at 4 o'clock this afternoon on board the transport Prairie for the Panama canal zone or possibly Nicaragua. The Prairie originally scheduled to sail tomorrow with 400 marines, has been ready to leave for nearly a week because of the Nicaraguan situation and orders to get away immediately had been expected every day.

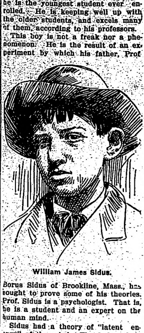
ENTERS HARVARD AT 13

James Sidus the Youngest Student Ever Admitted to College—Is Not a Freak.

Cambridge, Mass.—William James Sidus, 13 years old, is making a good record at Harvard university, where he is the youngest student ever enrolled. He is keeping well up with the older students, and excels many of them, according to his professors.

This boy is not a freak nor a phenomenon. He is the result of an experiment by which his father, Prof.



William James Sidus.

Borus Sidus of Brookline, Mass., has sought to prove some of his theories. Prof. Sidus is a psychologist. That is, he is a student and an expert on the human mind.

Sidus had a theory of "latent energy" of the mind. The father then, each day, sought not to teach the child anything, but to lead him to discover for himself some fact and the relation of that fact to other facts.

The first course gave the child a sturdy body and made him a lover of outdoors and an expert in all childish games. The second course kept him a "baby" and stimulated his imagination. The third gave him facility in handling that most wonderful of all tools—the reasoning brain.

Never in his life has he been told in answer to a question that he "wouldn't understand." Never has he been told a thing is true "because father says so." Never has he been given a false or slovenly answer in reply to his childish questions.

Each time the little mind reached out—whether to ask: "How big is the sun?" or "Why does the kitty have a tail?" a careful, truthful answer has been given. Sidus found that the "foolish questions" which his boy asked were the same that all children asked, but he saw in them the groping of an awakened mind, and sought to give them direction, purpose and relation.

The result was that the child, not being held down to the alphabet, "learning to count ten" and a few vague and unrelated facts about the things he saw about him, was as easily interested in history as he was in "Mother Goose."

He didn't "learn to count ten," but he learned, by playing dominoes, the relation of numbers (not figures), and his mind was permitted to discover for itself that twice two make four.

They found that a simple book on chemistry was as interesting to the child as was "Alice in Wonderland." Not only as interesting, but it proved as easily understood by him.

There are a lot of things which we think a child is too young to understand. So we won't explain them. The child, however, is as interested in a locomotive as he is in a cat, and what interests him he can understand.

You don't believe it, do you?

STRIKE ORDERED

SWITCHMEN'S STRIKE PARALYZES TRAFFIC FROM TWIN CITIES TO COAST.

WANT INCREASE OF 6 CTS.

Cause of the Strike Was a Demand for an Increase of Six Cents Per Hour, Double Time for Overtime and Sundays.

St. Paul, Dec. 1.—At 6 o'clock last night every switchman between the twin cities and the Pacific coast walked out from his job as a result of being denied changes asked for. These were an increase of six cents per hour and double pay for overtime and Sunday work.

The different roads are firm in their intentions not to accede to these demands and the switchmen are equally firm. Freight traffic is completely tied up, but so far all roads keep passenger trains running nearly on schedule time.

Business paralysis is gradually following the strike. Very little freight is being handled in the twin cities and the announcement came from Minneapolis at noon today that all of the big flour mills in Minneapolis will be closed by 6 o'clock tonight, twenty-four hours after the calling of the strike. If this occurs as it must, 3,500 employes of the milling companies will be out of work and about 1,500 more employed in cooperage and kindred trades will be forced out if the strike lasts for a few days. Minneapolis flour mills have no storage facilities for their product after it has been ground. Freight cars cannot be moved and the railway tracks are blocked in every direction.

Information was given out from the switchmen's headquarters that if the railroads attempt to use the non-union switchmen, the locomotive firemen will refuse to handle cars and it is understood from one member of the locomotive firemen's union that the chief of that organization has instructed the men to decline to work with non-union men.

ENGLAND IN TURMOIL.

House of Lords Refuse to Concur in Financial Budget.

London, Dec. 1.—A political crisis, caused by the unprecedented action of the house of lords in refusing to consent to the government's budget is developing rapidly.

The cabinet, which had already determined upon the policy to pursue in the event of Lord Lansdowne's amendment being carried, a conclusion which was foreseen from the first, had an unusually early meeting today to consider a motion which Premier Asquith will ask the house of commons to adopt.

Premier Asquith announced in the house of commons today that on tomorrow he would move a resolution to the effect that the action of the house of lords in refusing to pass into law the financial provisions made by the lower chamber for the expenses of the year was a breach of constitution and an usurpation of the rights of the house of commons.

When the premier entered the chamber this afternoon the supporters of the government rose to their feet, and greeted him with ringing cheers. Immediately following the conclusion of routine business the premier took the floor. As soon as he concluded the house adjourned.

Corporation Tax Is Money Maker.

Washington, Dec. 1.—"It is estimated that there will have been collected from the special corporation excise tax by July 1, 1909, $15,000,000 and that an additional $10,000,000, collectable for the calendar year from Jan. 1, 1909, to Dec. 31, 1909, will be collected subsequent to July 1, 1910, making an estimate for the total amount of the collection of the fiscal year 1910, $25,000,000."

Entombed Miners Rescued.

Ducktown, Tenn., Dec. 1.—Eight men, who were imprisoned in the London mine of the Tennessee Copper Co. yesterday afternoon as a result of a shaft house fire, were brought to the surface early today.

The entombed miners were safely housed 140 feet from the main shaft. They had built a artition, and were thus protected from the smoke and deadly gases.

Does Not Fear Kidnaping.

New York, Dec. 1.—"Oh, pshaw, oh, pshaw," said John D. Rockefeller, smilingly today, as he alighted from the train from Cleveland and told that he had been marked for kidnaping or perhaps killing in his home city. The president of the Standard Oil Co. was accompanied by his wife, who is quite ill.

ESTRADA AGGRESSIVE.

Nicaragua Insurgent Leader Will Do Some Fighting.

Bluefields, Nicaragua, Dec. 1.—Norwegian steamer, Stavangeren has arrived here from New York with arms and ammunition for the insurgents. The latter have been handicapped up to this time by a lack of ammunition, but are now well equipped, and are also supplied with machine guns and small arms. Accordingly it is announced at the insurgents' camp that the plan of action will be changed, General Estrada immediately assuming the aggressive.

Taft Busy on Message.

Washington, Nov. 30.—President Taft has begun dictating his annual message to congress and will be busily engaged at that task for the next few days. He expects to complete the work and have it in the hands of the public printer by the middle of the present week.

SYNOPSIS.

Baraka, a Tartar girl, became enamored of a golden bearded stranger who was prospecting and studying herbs in the vicinity of her home in central Asia, and revealed to him the location of a mine of rubies hoping that the stranger would love her in return for her disclosure. They were followed to the cave by the girl's relatives, who blocked up the entrance, and drew off the water supply, leaving the couple to die. Baraka's cousin Saad, her betrothed, attempted to climb down a cliff overlooking the mine; but the traveler shot him. The stranger was revived from a water gourd Saad carried, dug his way out of the tunnel, and departed, deserting the girl and carrying a bag of rubies. Baraka gathered all the gems she could carry, and started in pursuit. Margaret Donne (Margarita da Cordova), a famous prima donna, became engaged in London to Konstantin Logotheti, a wealthy Greek financier. Her intimate friend was Countess Leven, known as Lady Maud, whose husband had been killed by a bomb in St. Petersburg; and Lady Maud's most intimate friend was Rufus Van Torp, an American, who had been a cowboy in early life, but had become one of the richest men in the world. Van Torp was in love with Margaret, and rushed to London as soon as he heard of her betrothal. He offered Lady Maud $5,000,000 for her pet charity if she would aid him in winning the singer from Logotheti. Baraka approached Logotheti at Versailles with rubies to sell. He presented a ruby to Margaret.

CHAPTER III.—Continued.

"I'm not sure. I never ask myself questions about what I do. I hate people who are always measuring their wretched little souls and then tinkering their consciences to make them fit! I don't believe I wish to do anything really wrong, and so I do exactly what I like, always!"

"If you will only go on doing what you like," Logotheti answered, "it will give me the greatest pleasure in the world to help you. I only ask one kindness."

"You have no right to ask me anything to-day. You've been quite the most disagreeable person this afternoon that I ever met in my life."

"I know I have," Logotheti answered with admirable contrition. "I'll wait a day or two before I ask anything; perhaps you will have forgiven me by that time."

"I'm not sure. What was the thing you were going to ask?"

He was silent now that she wished to know his thought.

"Have you forgotten it already?" she inquired with a little laugh that was encouraging rather than contemptuous, for her curiosity was roused.

They looked at each other at last, and all at once she felt the deeply disturbing sense of his near presence which she had missed for three days, though she was secretly a little afraid and ashamed of it; and to-day it had not come while her anger had lasted. But now it was stronger than ever before, perhaps because it came so unexpectedly, and it drew her to him.

Their eyes met and they looked long at one another in the shade of the elm tree on the lawn, as the sun was going down. Only a few minutes had passed since Margaret had been very angry, and had almost believed that she was going to quarrel finally, and break her engagement, and be free; and now she could not even turn her face away, and when her hand felt his upon it, she let him draw it slowly to him; and half unconsciously she followed her hand, bending towards him sideways, from her seat, nearer and nearer, and very near.

And as she put up her lips to his, he would that she might drink his soul from him at one deep draught—even as one of his people's poets wished, in the world's spring time, long ago.

It had been a strange love-making. They had been engaged during more than two months, they were young, vital, passionate; yet they had never kissed before that evening hour under the elm tree at Versailles. Perhaps it was for this that Konstantin had played, or at least for the certainty it meant to him, if he had doubted that she was sincere.

CHAPTER IV.

Without offending Mr. Van Torp, Lady Maud managed not to see him again for some time, and when he understood, as he soon did, that this was her wish, he made no attempt to force himself upon her. She was probably thinking over what he had said, and in the end she would exert her influence as he had begged her to do. He was thoroughly persuaded that there was nothing unfair in his proposal and that, when she was convinced that he was right, she would help him.

But when he had taken the first step towards accomplishing his purpose, he was very much at a loss as to the next, and he saw that he had never undertaken anything so difficult since he had reorganized the Nickel Trust, trebled the stock, cleared a profit of thirty millions and ruined nobody but the small-fry, who, of course, deserved it on the principle that people who cannot keep money ought not to have any. Some unkind newspaper man had then nicknamed it the Brass Trust, and had called him Brassy Van Torp; but it is of no use to throw mud at the Golden Calf, for the dirt soon dries to dust and falls off, leaving the animal as beautifully shiny as ever.

Mr. Van Torp did not quite see how he could immediately apply the force of money to further his plans with effect. He knew his adversary's financial position in Europe much too well to think of trying to attack him on that ground; and besides, in his rough code it would not be fair play to do that. It was "all right" to ruin a hostile millionaire in order to get his money. That was "business." But to ruin him for the sake of a woman was "low down." It would be much more "all right" to shoot him after fair and due warning, and to carry off the lady. That was impossible in a civilized country, of course; but as it occurred to him, while he was thinking, that he might find it convenient to go somewhere in a hurry by sea, he bought a perfectly new yacht that was for sale because the owner had died of heart disease the week after she was quite ready to take him to the Mediterranean. The vessel was at least as big as one of the ocean liners of 50 years ago, and had done 22 1-16 knots on her trial. Mr. Van Torp took her over as she was, with her officers, crew, cook and stores, and rechristened her. She had been launched as the Alwayn; he called her the Lancashire Lass—a bit of sentiment on his part, for that was the name of a mare belonging to Lady Maud's father, which he had once ridden bareback when he was in an amazing hurry.

He had one interview with the captain.

"See here, captain," he said, "I may not want to take a trip this season. I'm that sort of a man. I may or I may not. But if I do want you, I'll want you quick. See?"

With the last word, he looked up suddenly, and the captain "saw," for he met a pair of eyes that astonished him.

"Yes, I see," he answered mechanically.

"And if you're in one place with your boat, and I wire that I want you in another, I'd like you to get there right away," said Mr. Van Torp.

"Yes, sir."

"They say she'll do 22 1-10," continued the owner, "but when I wire I want you I'd like her to do as much more as she can without bursting a lung. If you don't think you've got the kind of engineer who'll keep her red-hot, tell me right off and we'll get another. And don't you fuss about burning coal, captain. And see that the crew get all they can eat and not a drop of drink but tea and coffee, and if you let 'em go on shore once in a while, see that they come home right side up with care, captain, and make each of 'em say 'truly rural' and 'British Constitution' before he goes to bed, and if he can't, you just unship him, or whatever you call it on a boat. Understand, captain?"

The captain understood and kept his countenance.

"Now, I want to know one thing," continued the new owner. "What's the nearest sea port to Bayreuth, Bavaria?"

"Venice," answered the captain without the least hesitation, and so quickly that Mr. Van Torp was immediately suspicious.

"If that's so, you're pretty smart," he observed.

"You can telephone to Cook's office, sir, and ask them," said the captain quietly.

The instrument was on the table at Mr. Van Torp's elbow. He looked sharply at the captain, as he unhooked the receiver and set it to his ear. In a few seconds communication was given.

"Cook's office? Yes. Yes. This is Mr. Van Torp, Rufus Van Torp of New York. Yes. I want to know what's the nearest sea port to Bayreuth, Bavaria. Yes. Yes. That's just what I want to know. Yes. I'll hold the wire while you look it up."

He was not kept waiting long.

"Venice, you say? You're sure you're right, I suppose? Yes. Yes. I was only asking. No thank you. If I want a ticket I'll look in myself. Much obliged. Good-by."

He hung the receiver in its place again, and turned to his captain with a different expression, in which admiration and satisfaction were quite apparent.

"Well," he said, "you're right. It's Venice. I must say that, for an Englishman, you're quite smart."

The captain smiled quietly, but did not think it worth while to explain that the last owner with whom he had sailed had been Wagner-mad and had gone to Bayreuth regularly. Moreover, he had judged his man already.

"Am I to proceed to Venice at once, sir?" he asked.

"As quick as you can, captain."

The Englishman looked at his watch deliberately, and made a short mental calculation before he said anything. It was 11 in the morning.

"I can get to sea by five o'clock this afternoon, sir. Will that do?"

Mr. Van Torp was careful not to betray the least surprise.

"Yes," he said, as if he were not more than fairly satisfied, "that'll do nicely."

"Very well, sir, then I'll be off. It's about 3,000 miles, and she's supposed to do that at 18 knots with her own coal. Say eight days. But as this is her maiden trip we must make allowance for having to stop the engines once or twice. Good-morning, sir."

"Good-day, captain. Get in some coal and provisions as soon as you arrive in Venice. I may want to go to Timbuctoo, or to Andaman islands or something. I'm that sort of a man. I'm not sure where I'll go. Good-by."

The captain stopped at the first telegraph office on his way to the Waterloo station and telegraphed both to his chief engineer, Mr. M'Cosh, and his chief mate, Mr. Johnson, for he thought it barely possible that one or the other might be ashore.

"Must have steam by 4 p. m. to-day, to sail at once long voyage. Coming next train. Owner in hurry. Send ashore for my wash. Brown, Captain."

When the clocks struck five on shore that afternoon, and the man at the wheel struck two bells from the wheelhouse, and the lookout forward repeated them on the ship's bell, all according to the most approved modern fashion on large steamers, the beautiful Lancashire Lass was steaming out upon Southampton water.

Out of the merest curiosity Mr. Van Torp telegraphed to Cowes to be informed of the exact moment at which his yacht was under way, and before six o'clock he had a message.

"Yacht sailed at 4:39."

The new owner was so much pleased that he actually smiled, for Capt. Brown had been 21 minutes better than his word.

"I guess he'll do," though Mr. Van Torp. "I only hope I may need him."

He was not at all sure that he should need the Lancashire Lass and Capt. Brown; but it has often been noticed that in the lives of born financiers even their caprices often turn out to their advantage, and that their least logical impulses in business matters are worth more than the sober judgment of ordinary men.

As for Capt. Brown, he was a quiet little person with a rather pink face and sparkling blue eyes, and he knew his business. In fact he had passed as extra master. He knew that he was in the service of one of the richest men in the world, and that he commanded a vessel likely to turn out one of the finest yachts afloat, and he did not mean to lose such a berth either by piling up his ship, or by being slow to do whatever his owner wished done, within the boundaries of the possible; but it had not occurred to him that his owner might order him to exceed the limits of anything but mere possibility, such, for instance, as those of the law, civil, criminal, national, or international.

Mr. Van Torp had solid nerves, but when he had sent his yacht to the only place where he thought he might possibly make use of it, he realized that he was wasting valuable time while Logotheti was making all the running, and his uncommon natural energy, finding nothing to work upon as yet, made him furiously impatient. It seemed to hum and sing in his head, like the steam in an express engine when it is waiting to start.

He had come over to England on an impulse, as soon as he had heard of Cordova's engagement. Until then he had not believed that she would ever accept the Greek, and when he learned from Lady Maud's letter that the fact was announced, he "saw red," and his resolution to prevent the marriage was made then and there. He had no idea how he should carry it out, but he knew that he must either succeed or come to grief in the attempt, for as long as he had any money left, or any strength, he would spend both lavishly for that one purpose.

Yet he did not know how to begin, and his lack of imagination exasperated him beyond measure. He was sleepless and lost his appetite, which had never happened to him before; he stayed on in London instead of going down to his place in Derbyshire, because he was always sure that he meant to start for the continent in a few hours, with an infallible plan for success; but he did not go.

He was meditating on the future one morning, over an almost untouched breakfast, between nine and ten o'clock, when his man Stemp brought a visiting card.

It was a rather large card, bearing in the middle two or three odd-looking signs which meant nothing to him, but underneath them he read in plain characters the single word "Barak."

"Barrack!" grumbled the American. "Oh, the writing's on the back, I see. Now, that's very curious, I must say," he said, after reading the words. "That's very curious," he repeated, laying strong and equal emphasis on the last two words. "Ask him to walk in, Stemp."

"Very good, sir."

As the valet went out Mr. Van Torp turned his chair half round without getting up, so that he sat facing the door. A moment later Stemp had ushered in the visitor, and was gone.

A slim youth came forward without boldness, but without the least timidity, as if he were approaching an equal. He had an oval face, no mustache, a complexion like cream, short and thick black hair and very clear dark eyes that met the American's fearlessly. He was under the average height, and he wore rather thin, loose gray clothes that had been made by a good tailor. His hands and feet were smaller than a European's.

"So you're Mr. Barrack," Mr. Van Torp said, nodding pleasantly.

The young face smiled, and the parted lips showed quite perfect teeth.

"Barak," answered the young man, giving the name the right sound.

"Yes, I understand, but I can't pronounce it like you. Take a chair, Mr. Barrack, and draw up to the table."

The young man understood the gesture that explained the speech and sat down.

"So you're a friend of Mr. Logotheti's, and he advised you to come to me? Understand? Logotheti of Paris."

Barak smiled again, and nodded quickly as he recognized the name. The American watched his face attentively.

"All right," he continued. "You can trot out your things now, right on the tablecloth here."

He had seen enough of Indians and Mexicans in his youth to learn the simple art of using signs, and he easily made his meaning clear to his visitor. Barak produced a little leathern bag, not much bigger than an ordinary purse, fastened with thin thongs, which he slowly untied. Mr. Van Torp watched the movements of the delicate fingers with great interest, for he was an observant man.

"With those hands," he silently reflected, "it's either a lady or a thief, or both."

Barak took several little twists of tissue paper from the bag, laid them in a row on the tablecloth and then began to open them one by one. Each tiny parcel contained a ruby, and when the young man counted them there were five in all, and they were fine stones if they were genuine; but Mr. Van Torp was neither credulous nor easily surprised. When Barak looked to see what impression he had produced on such a desirable buyer, he was disappointed.

"Nice," said the American carelessly; "nice rubies, but I've seen better. I wonder if they're real, anyway. They've found out how to make them by chemistry now, you know."

But Barak understood nothing, of course, beyond the fact that Mr. Van Torp seemed indifferent, which was a common trick of wily customers; but there was something about this one's manner that was not assumed. Barak took the finest of the stones with the tips of his slender young fingers, laid it in the palm of his other hand, and held it under Mr. Van Torp's eyes, looking at him with an inquiring expression. But the American shook his head.

"No rubies to-day, thank you," he said.

Barak nodded quietly, and at once began to wrap up the stones, each in its own bit of paper, putting the twists back into the bag one by one. Then he drew the thongs together and tied them in a neat sort of knot which Mr. Van Torp had never seen. The young man then rose to go, but the millionaire stopped him.

"Say, don't go just yet. I'll show you a ruby that'll make you sit up."

He rose as he spoke, and Barak understood his smile and question, and waited. Mr. Van Torp went into the next room, and came back almost immediately, bringing a small black morocco case, which he set on the table and unlocked with a little key that hung on his watchchain. He was not fond of wearing jewelry, and the box held all his possessions of that sort, and was not full. There were three or four sets of plain studs and links, there were half a dozen very big gold collar studs, there was a bit of an old gold chain, apparently cut off at each end, and having one cheap little diamond set in each link; and there was a thin old wedding ring, that must have been a woman's, besides a few other valueless trinkets, all lying loose and in confusion. Mr. Van Torp shook the box a little, poked the contents about with one large finger and soon found an uncut red stone about the size of a hazelnut, which he took out and placed on the white cloth before the visitor.

"Now that's what I call a ruby," he said, with a smile of satisfaction. "Got any like that, young man? Because if you have I'll talk to you, maybe. Yes," he continued, watching the oriental's face. "I told you I'd make you sit up. But I didn't mean to scare you baldheaded. What's the matter with you, anyway? Your eyes are popping out of your head. Do you feel as if you were going to have a fit? I say! Stemp!"

Barak was indeed violently affected by the sight of the uncut ruby, and his face had changed in a startling way; a great vein like a whipcord suddenly showed itself on his smooth forehead straight up and down; his lids had opened so wide that they uncovered the white of the eye almost all around the iris; he was biting his lower lip so that it was swollen and blood-red against the little white teeth; and a moment before Mr. Van Torp had called out to his servant, the young man had reeled visibly, and would have collapsed if the American had not caught the slender waist and supported the small head against his shoulder with his other hand.

Stemp was not within hearing, therefore Mr. Van Torp called to him in vain, and meanwhile stood where he was with his arm round Barak, and Barak's head on his shoulder; but as no one came at his call, he lifted the slim figure gently and carried it towards the sofa, and while he was crossing the large room with his burden the palpable truth was forced upon him that his visitor's slimness was more apparent than real, and an affair of shape rather than of pounds. Before he had quite reached the lounge, however, Barak stirred, wriggled in his arms, and sprang to the floor and stood upright, blinking a little, like a person waking from a dream, but quite steady, and trying to smile in an apologetic sort of way, though evidently still deeply disturbed. Mr. Van Torp smiled, too, as if to offer his congratulations on the quick recovery.

"Feel better now?" he inquired in a kindly tone, and nodded. "I wonder what on earth you're up to, young lady?" he soliloquised, watching Barak's movements.

He was much too cautious and wise to like being left alone for many minutes with a girl, and a good-looking one, who went about London dressed in men's clothes and passed herself for a ruby merchant. Mr. Van Torp was well aware that he was not a safe judge of precious stones, that the rubies he had seen might very well be imitation, and that the girl's emotion at the sight of the rough stone might be only a piece of clever acting, the whole scene having been planned by a gang of thieves for the purpose of robbing him of that very ruby, which was worth a large sum, even in his estimation, for it was nearly the counterpart of the one he had given Lady Maud, though still uncut.

Therefore he returned to the table and slipped the gem into his pocket before going to the door to see whether Stemp was within hail.

"Julius Caesar" Sent to Bed.

At the British Authors' club banquet in his honor, Lieut. Shackleton told an amusing story of a man who went home one night after dinner and took with him four or five others.

"Come in, boys," he said, "and have a last drink."

"But your wife might not like it," one of the party replied.

"My wife!" was the answer; "I am Julius Caesar in my house."

On entering they were received by the lady of the house with the words: "Oh, walk in, gentlemen; there is plenty of drink in the dining-room. As for Julius Caesar, he is going to bed."

He Knew the Reason.

"I can say one thing in favor of Mr. Featherly," remarked Mrs. Hendricks, the landlady; "he never takes the last piece of bread on the plate." "No, indeed, Mrs. Hendricks," assented Dumley, cordially, "Featherly ain't quick enough."—Bazar.

DOWN at St. Paul they still insist on classifying Andy as a dark horse for United States senator.

A MASSACHUSETTS woman speaks forty-seven languages, but as yet no man has had the temerity to marry her.

THE Roosevelt policies are probably all carried out—the back door. At least there are not enough of them left to disturb the prosaic rhetoric of the president's message.

THE Waseca Herald doubts if the average citizen can tell who was governor before Lind. Probably true, and we know several Republicans who get mad every time they recall Governor Johnson's predecessor.

GOVERNOR EBERHART has invited Secretary Ballinger and Gifford Pinchot to attend the Conservation meeting at St. Paul in March. Details are not announced, but it is assumed that the Queensbury rules will govern.

ENGLAND has always boasted of the fact that there are nineteen ways for a foreign army to get in to that country, but none to get out. From the preparations the Germans are making, it would appear that the phlegmatic Teutons do not intend to get out once they make their way across the channel.

PRESIDENT TAFT isn't stirring up unnecessary trouble, and his message dodges the vital questions. He is content to deliver himself of a judicial essay on the country's greatness, the disadvantages of the law's delays and other taken-for-granted propositions. What's the use of making a fuss, anyway? It's just as well to wait until a government committee tells us what's the matter.

THE state board of control has made another cut of a quarter of a cent per pound on pure manila twine prices. The prison prices now range from ¼ to ½ cent per pound below last year's prices on the three best grades of twine. The Stillwater prices are now 1 cent below the prices named by the International Harvester company, and the Plymouth Cordage company on the principal grades.

AN exchange says that a mute but emphatic and enduring memorial of the popularity of the late Gov. Johnson was placed in the new capitol the day his body lay in state. Commencing at the front door and leading in two parallel lines through the building to the rear entrance two paths may be seen, worn in the floor by the feet of 75,000 people who passed that day to gaze on his face, all efforts to remove which have been in vain.

ACCORDING to the report of State High School Inspector Aiton, Minnesota high schools have increased in number from 86 to 208 during the past ten years, and the number of students from 9,402 to 26,503, or nearly three-fold. Another gratifying feature is increased attendance of boy students, who now constitute 42 per cent of the total. Other improvements cited are better school rooms, better paid teachers who are doing better work.

THE thoughtful and observing reader is inclined to scent a declaration of war in the following paragraph from Bob Dunn's Princeton Union:

"Governor Eberhart served four years as state senator immediately preceding his election to the office of lieutenant governor. Will he or any of his fulsome flatterers point to a single piece of important legislation, enacted during those four years, with which his name is linked? He had a splendid opportunity while serving as state senator to show his mettle. It is in vain that we scan the pages of the senate journal of 1903 and 1905 to find any trace of a single measure introduced or championed by Senator Eberhart that would lead anyone to believe that he favored any of the reforms he now so glibly advocates."

THE following posters are to be put up all over the country in a campaign to check the progress of consumption:

"Fresh air, good food, rest, sunshine, and life in the country cure consumption. Do not wait, if you have a cough, go to the doctor."

"Bad air leads to consumption. Don't crowd the sleeping or work room."

"Overwork, bad air and late hours lead to consumption. Do not live or work in badly ventilated rooms."

"Bad air in closed rooms leads to consumption. Sleep with your windows wide open winter and summer."

"Intemperance and other excesses lead to consumption."

GENERAL S. P. JENNISON, one of the pioneers of Minnesota, Governor Ramsey's private secretary in 1861, a valiant Union soldier during the Rebellion, and a pretty good politician of the old republican school, died very suddenly near Los Angeles, Cal, last Monday night, of heart failure. He was private secretary to four governors in Minnesota and was secretary of state from 1872 to 1875. He was editor of the Red Wing Republican for several years. He was also an entertaining stump speaker, abounding in anecdotes and odd illustrations. He had lived in California a number of years and had become quite prominent in the citrus fruit business.

Sugar Beats Vinegar.

Hibbing Tribune: We are assured by the Red Lake Falls Gazette, (owned by John King, state librarian, Democrat,) that it is a mistake to say that Minnesota is Republican. John got his information from the vote cast for governor for some years back. John should be careful how he tells such truth. If the Republicans of the state should "get on" to how they are being bamboozled, they might turn to and elect a Republican governor. Keep on telling them that Minnesota is "that splendid independently Republican state," John. That's the way to do it.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Northfield News: The governor speaks of state officers working twenty-four hours a day. He should not permit his imagination to run away with him. There are some things that belong exclusively in the realm of fancy.

Foley Independent: The Standard Oil has again been busted and the work was done by Frank B. Kellogg, the able St. Paul attorney. For the sake of decency we sincerely hope that the corpse will stay dead this trip and not give the mourners any more worry.

Princeton Union: On every hand Frank B. Kellogg is receiving congratulations for the magnificent fight he made for the dissolution of the giant Standard Oil trust, and he is deserving of all the good things that have been said of him. Former Attorney General Bonaparte is quoted as saying in Washington: "It was a great victory for Frank B. Kellogg, who tried the case. I have always believed that when the government presented cases of this kind, in the proper way, it would win."

Anoka Union: The dollar of our daddies is fast losing value as a purchasing medium.

Northfield News: Cole wanted state development. Governor Johnson advocated the creation of a thoroughly equipped administrative department devoted to protection, management and general executive administration of public lands, mines, forests, lakes and water powers. So that after all Governor Eberhart's realizing the need of "a new department for the conservation of the state resources" is not in the nature of an original discovery.

Perham Enterprise: It would be hard for an old line Democrat and a progressive Republican to find grounds for a political argument at peresnt. They both favor downward tariff revision, and oppose Cannonism and all that the name implies.

Pointed Paragraphs.

ed vanity of his private secretary. Ever since Mr. Wheelock has been appointed private secretary there has been a disposition on the part of the press to under-rate his capacity for political management. The idea has been advanced that his appointment meant that some one else would be the governor's political agent, and that Mr. Wheelock would confine himself to routine duties. This nettled him. He determined to take an early opportunity to demonstrate his authority. The indications are that in attempting to dictate to Mr. McEwen the appointment of his deputies he went a little beyond his instructions and was indiscreet enough to talk about it afterwards. I have the best of reasons for concluding that whatever indiscretion the governor's private secretary may have been led into, the governor himself has no intention not to carry out the pledge voluntarily made to the people that he would not permit political manipulation in the executive office but would seek to the best of his ability to carry the policy of his distinguished predecessor.

The Governor's Real Attitude.

That I take to be still the governor's real attitude, notwithstanding the great pressure that has been brought to bear upon him to induce him to disorganize departments manned according to Governor Johnson's instructions and in compliance with his wishes. In this connection I notice that it is Mr. Wheelock who is talking again about what "we" intend to do about the Game and Fish Department when the terms of Carlos Avery and John H. Grill expire the first of the year. In this, too, the indications are that the private secretary represents the wishes of the politicians who urged his appointment, rather than any policy the governor himself has outlined. There has been no public complaint about the way the Game and Fish Department has been administered. Its executive agent has attended strictly to the business connected with his office. He has carried out Governor Johnson's policy of giving to the public the best service of which he was capable. The members of the board have been anything but offensive partisans. The business of the department has been carried on business principles. I have heard no complaint from Mr. Fullerton, the Republican who holds an important office under the board, that the board has not co-operated with him in every way to the end that the duties he is intrusted with should inure to the public benefit. Therefore I am inclined to take with a large grain of salt the newspaper rumor that Governor Eberhart is preparing to inject partisan politics into this department and displace the men who enjoyed Governor Johnson's confidence by other whose nomination certain well known Republican bosses are trying to dictate.

The Safe Course.

It goes without saying that great pressure has been brought to bear upon the governor to induce him to chang front. That his private secretary is in sympathy with the marplots can be read between the lines of the interviews which a passion for publicity makes frequent. So far, however, the governor has shown no disposition to yield to the solicitations of those anxious only to construct a political machine which will serve their own purposes. He has only to continue in the course which he has himself laid down to win public approval. Once the gates are opened for the spoils hunters his real troubles will commence.

Scrambling for a Job.

This is perhaps indicated as well as anywhere else in the scramble that began for Mr. Dinehart's position the moment he gave notice of his willingness to vacate. It is an unfruitful week that does not produce a new candidate for state treasurer. Mattson, Schwarz, Holcomb and Kaiser have been for some time in the field. Mr. G. Carl of Clara City, Chippewa County, last week came to the front professing to have the backing of the Seventh District, and certainly the co-operation of many of his fellow members of the Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth legislatures. This week another candidate has made in incursion into the field in the person of John Sheehy of LeSueur County, the president of the First State Bank of Montgomery. It may safely be said that, where there is one candidate for an elective position on the State ticket, there will be easily ten to make the governor's life a burden in demanding recognition for appointive office. He has only to give an indication of weakening to have them all down on his back.

Goodhue County Solons.

It is said that A. J. Rockne, the speaker of the last House, will be a candidate to represent Goodhue County in the senate, although there is an intimation that he has an eye on the presiding officer's chair, in case a deadlock should develop among the other candidates of whom there are always three more or less active, W. A. Nolan of Spring Valley, Dr. Gates of Kenyon, and Dr. Cole of Fergus Falls. B. F. Seiz, who was Sergeant at Arms in the last House will, it is rumored, be a candidate to succeed Mr. Putnam in the House of Representatives, who has declined to run again.

S.S.S. CURES RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is a specific blood fermentation, a souring of the circulation from an excess of uric acid accumulating in the blood stream. This uratic impurity comes usually as a result of constipation, weak kidneys, indigestion and stomach disturbances. These systemic irregularities may not be of marked severity or of long duration, but each has a direct effect on the eliminative members of the body, which prevents the proper removal of the waste products. This refuse remains in the stomach and bowels, and souring forms uric acid, which the blood quickly absorbs.

Rheumatism is usually manifested in the joints and muscles. It is here its sharpest twinges of pain are felt, and stiffening of ligaments and tendons first commence. The pain of Rheumatism is caused by the contact of the sensory nerves with the gritty, acid-formation which uric acid causes to accumulate in the corpuscles of the blood about the joints. The stiffening of muscles and joints is usually gradual. Constantly the blood deposits the uric acid into the joints, and slowly the natural fluids are dried up and destroyed. Then Rheumatism becomes chronic and serious. Rheumatism is sometimes inherited, for like all blood diseases it can be transmitted to offspring. This explains why some persons are afflicted with the disease, and suffer its pains, who have otherwise been perfectly healthy.

RHEUMATISM FORTY YEARS.
I suffered with lumbago for a long time, and speaking of it to a friend one day he told me to try S. S. S. I did so, and soon found it was helping me. I had rheumatism for more than forty years, having contracted it in the army, but S. S. S cured me sound and well, and have had no return of the trouble. I think S.S.S. has no equal for curing rheumatism.
THOS. POTTS.
111 Main St., Johnston City., Pa.

S.S.S. cures Rheumatism and cures it permanently. It goes into the circulation, and removes the uric acid, purifies the blood, and in this way destroys the cause. S.S.S. changes the blood from a sour, acid-steeped stream to a rich, healthy fluid, which quiets the excited nerves, eases the throbbing muscles and painful joints, and filters out of the circulation the irritating matter which causes every painful symptom of the disease. When the blood has been purified and enriched by S.S.S., it nourishes the different members that have been weakened and starved because of imperfect blood. PAIN
Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablet—coaxes blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effect is charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.
If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.
If it's painful periods with women, same cause.
If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.
Bruise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.
We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

It isn't so difficult to strengthen a weak stomach if one goes at it correctly. And this is true of the Heart and Kidneys. The old fashioned way of dosing the stomach or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is surely wrong. Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. "Go to the weak or ailing nerves of these organs," said he. Each inside organ has its controlling or inside nerve. When these nerves fail, then those organs must surely falter. The old fashioned way of dosing a weak stomach, or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is all wrong. Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. This is why his prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—is directed entirely to the cause of these ailments—the weak inside or controlling nerves. It isn't so difficult, says Dr. Shoop, to strengthen a weak Stomach, Heart or Kidneys, if one goes at it correctly. Each inside organ has its controlling or inside nerve. When these nerves fail, then those organs must surely falter. These vital truths are leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Test it a few days, and see! Improvement will promptly and surely follow. Sold by all dealers.

BOWSER BUYS RELIC

Elation at Having Secured Timepiece Owned by Bonaparte.

GUARANTEED BY AUCTIONEER

Clock Reveals Eccentricities, Resulting In Its Demolition by the Enraged Samuel—Divorce Question Again Brought Up For Discussion.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

THE Bowsers had just finished dinner when the cook answered a ring at the basement door and entered the dining room to say:

"There's a boy and a wagon out here, and the boy says he's got a monument for this family."

"What can he mean?" asked Mrs. Bowser as she looked at Mr. Bowser.

"The boy is an idiot! I made a little purchase this afternoon, and it's probable that he has it on his wagon."

"And it isn't a monument or tombstone or coffin or anything of that sort?"

"Woman, don't be a ninny. Cook, you can go back to your pots and pans."

Mr. Bowser went out and had a brief argument with the boy, who said that he had a lame father and meant no harm, and then the object was brought into the front hall. The box was two feet wide and six feet long.

"It isn't a burglar alarm?" queried Mrs. Bowser as she surveyed it with something like awe.

"Humph! Ever see a burglar alarm in a long box like this?"

"But there are long burglars and short burglars, aren't there?"

Mr. Bowser sat down on the box with a look of complacency on his face and waited a moment before saying:

"Mrs. Bowser, at one period in the history of this world there was a man named Napoleon Bonaparte. He was a general and an emperor, and a [illegible] corker. He died a prisoner at St. Helena."

Mrs. Bowser raised her hands in admiration.

"After his death his furniture was sold off."

"And you have got some of his old coffee and tea pots in the box?"

Mr. Bowser stood up and flushed and glared at her and then sat down to say:

"I have bought the clock which he had in his palace at Paris and on the island with him. It is the greatest and only souvenir of the great man in America. It has been sought for far and wide, but was never discovered until the other day. The last thing Napoleon heard as he died was this clock striking 10."

"Then it must have been out of time, for all histories agree that he died at 8:50."

She was given a look to freeze her blood for a week to come, and then Mr. Bowser went for a hammer and chisel to open the box. The task did not take long, and in a quarter of an hour Napoleon's clock was being viewed as it rested on a bedding of excelsior on its back.

Awe and reverence were not absent. Even the family cat put on a new face as she looked into the box.

"Where are you going to put it?" asked Mrs. Bowser in a whisper.

"Right here in the hall, of course," was the answer, "and I shall have a sign printed and hung on it. You don't suppose I'm going to put a souvenir like this down cellar or out in the woodshed, do you? We'll end it up. Gently now. There she is, just as she looked the night she struck the doom of the greatest general the world has ever seen. Mrs. Bowser, stand back here and gaze on it."

"Yes, I'm gazing."

"Isn't there a feeling of awe creeping over you?"

"Yes, there is. But are you sure about the clock? Didn't the auctioneer lie to you?"

"Am I sure? Woman, can you doubt whose clock this was? Can't you see the initials 'N. B.' right before your eyes?"

"But they may stand for 'Take Notice!'"

"Yes, and they may stand for 'No Beer' and a hundred other things, but they don't. By the jumping Jim Crow, it's enough to make a saint grit his teeth! I find Napoleon's clock in an auction room. The auctioneer, who has been at St. Helena himself, guarantees—"

Eccentricity of Timepiece.

The clock began to tick in the most solemn manner and the hands to move. In two minutes the hands had traveled twice around the face, and then they came to a sudden stop, like a street car hitting a fat woman.

"Was that Napoleon's way?" whisperingly asked Mrs. Bowser.

Mr. Bowser stepped forward and took the key and began winding. After he had wound sufficiently to keep seven Waterbury watches going for a month he laid down the key, and the sacred souvenir went at it and struck 211 times without a halt to rush the growler.

"The auctioneer had been at St. Helena himself, you were saying," whispered Mrs. Bowser.

"Woman, retire—slope—get out! Haven't you the sense to realize that this clock is a stranger in our midst? The boy may have jumped up and down on the box. His wagon may have been bumped on the way up. Give the clock time to get a little used to us. It was running all right in the auction room."

"Perhaps it will here, but I wish you had bought something else in place of it. It is said that Napoleon used to wheel a barrow loaded with rocks for exercise. Didn't you see the barrow about the auction room?"

"No, ma'am, I didn't, and I want no more nonsense from you.

"I have bought a clock.

"It once belonged to Napoleon.

"It is a sacred and priceless souvenir.

"I have got it home, and if you can't appreciate it I and others can. It is a bond between Bowser and Napoleon."

As if felicitating itself over the idea, the hands on the dial turned the wrong way four times, and the striker went at it and struck 840 times. Mr. Bowser stood there with bowed head and clasped hands and thought of Waterloo and St. Helena, and Mrs. Bowser went and sat down and thought of auctioneers and what soft marks they found.

From 8 to half past 10 the clock gained five hours.

In the next hour and a half it lost ten.

During the first interval it struck 660 times, during the second 1,567 times. Mr. Bowser walked up and down with his hands behind his back, as he imagined Napoleon must have done at St. Helena, and Mrs. Bowser read a family almanac. At length she felt it her duty to inquire:

"Mr. Bowser, was Napoleon a man who was always on time?"

"To the minute."

"And did he go by this clock?"

"He did."

"Then he must have had a hard time of it. It is 23 o'clock by it now. If you had got that wheelbarrow—"

Reduces Relic to Kindling.

He wheeled to face her, and she saw apoplexy in his face. He was flushed up and glaring. He carried his hand to his throat as if choking. His eyes had begun to roll, and she was about to spring up when he uttered a Comanche warwhoop and dashed down the hall. Crash went the priceless relic on the floor. Bang! went his foot against it.

"Mr. Bowser, have you gone mad?"

The regulator of Napoleon's movements was picked up and hurled against the wall. Then it was picked up and slammed down on the floor. [illegible]

MARKETING PRODUCTS

Letter From A. D. Wilson of the Minnesota Farmers' Institute.

Proper marketing of farm products has quite as much to do with the profits of the farm as has the proper growing of crops and live stock. During the past year, most farm products have been very good, but the fact remains, nevertheless, that many have taken less for their products than they rightly should, considering the prices paid for them by the consumer. It is true also that some large farmers are getting more for their products than the average. It is to make plain some of the reasons for this that this article is written.

A farmer in the Red River Valley who raises several hundred acres of potatoes each year has been able to develop a market for them largely for seed purposes and he consequently gets a better price. He does not raise a superior variety of potatoes, but he has a great many carloads of the same variety. Any group of small farmers who will get together and agree on some one, or at most, two or three varieties of potatoes to grow and then leave it to some one man to sell the whole product so that carloads of one variety may be sold, can get as good prices for their potatoes as these large farmers. If it costs 25 cents per bushel to grow potatoes and they are selling at 30 cents per bushel, there is a net profit of five cents per bushel. If small lots of mixed potatoes are selling at 30 cents car lot, of a straight and standard variety will easily bring 35c. This will double the net profit, and the second 5c profit is much more easily earned than the first. There are large possibilities for increased profit on our farms by paying closer attention to the business side.

Any business man can afford to and will make a closer figure on a large deal than on a small one, whether buying supplies or selling some product. The man who comes to the business man with a large deal gets a better price than he could afford to make on a smaller amount. Farmers may get the benefit of doing business on a large scale by clubbing together in buying and selling. We do not mean the organization of a large farmers' trust to arbitrarily regulate prices, but simply the cooperation of a few farmers in a neighborhood so that products may be sold and supplies purchased in a businesslike way.

The most excellent results obtained with the co-operative creamery should be duplicated in many other branches of the farming industry. That means that several farmers will get together and so operate their farms and market their products as to be able to offer for sale a large and constant supply of a uniformly good product.

A. D. WILSON.

LIPTON TO CHALLENGE FOR AMERICA'S CUP

Sir Thomas Will Send Yacht to Race This Country's Best in 1911.

Sir Thomas Lipton will challenge for a race for the America's cup to be sailed in 1911. Sir Thomas made this statement just before sailing for Europe on the steamer Lusitania.

Sir Thomas has been here for several weeks to learn the attitude of the members of the New York Yacht club on the question of modification of the rules governing the America's cup. What assurance, if any, he received is not known.

Before sailing, Sir Thomas said:

"I will challenge for a race in 1911. I am sure the New York Yacht club will give the question full consideration. I believe they are just as anxious as anybody else for a race. I would have challenged for a race next summer had it been possible to get a boat ready in time.

"If the New York yachtsmen insist on a challenge under the present rules governing international cup races I would stand no chance to win, and that would not be sport. I shall issue my challenge with the largest type of boat to conform as far as possible with their ideas."

Members of the New York Yacht club said until Sir Thomas' challenge had been formally laid before them no definite statement could be made regarding its acceptance.

Leading members of the club hold the opinion that the old racing rules should govern contests for the America's cup.

Since leaving the New York tracks the two-year-old colt Boca Grande has won seven consecutive races. It is generally understood that he was taken east for a killing, but as he is a maiden it is possible that plans were altered. On several occasions New York regulars [illegible]

AMERICANS IN CHICAGO.

Largest of Minor Leagues Said to Be Considering a Club for Kling.

Ground will soon be broken for a new steel and cement grand stand on the proposed American association baseball site at Sheffield avenue and Addison street, Chicago. The property was bought last spring in the name of Charles S. Havenor, owner of the Milwaukee American association ball club. Mr. Havenor acted as agent in the transaction, and, although being the majority owner, other association magnates were interested in the deal, among the rest being M. E. Cantillon of the Minneapolis club and his brother Joe, late manager of the Washington team.

Among those well posted on the affairs of the association magnates it was said that the occupancy of the grounds does not necessarily mean an immediate entrance of the growing league in Chicago, although that is the ultimate object of the promoters.

The real plan back of the enterprise it was said was to bring Johnny Kling, the former Cubs catcher, to Chicago from Kansas City to be at the head of a semi-pro team, in which case the City league would be reorganized or else enlarged to eight clubs.

It is known that another plan, far more radical, has been under advisement for some time and that is to put Kling at the head of an American association club. It is figured that should the American association club enter Chicago it would be an outlaw organization [illegible] that it might be just as well to have a baseball outlaw [illegible] at the head of it. It is known [illegible] willing to put some [illegible] money in the deal [illegible] not get Kling [illegible]

MINNESOTA WINS "BIG EIGHT" TITLE

DEFEAT OF WISCONSIN GIVES THE GOPHERS WESTERN CONFERENCE CHAMPIONSHIP.

HARD GAME WITH MICHIGAN

The undisputed title to the conference championship in western football was won by the University of Minnesota eleven, which swept everything before it during the season just closed.

Wisconsin, after the other teams of the "big eight" had failed, tried in vain to stop the onward rush of the Gophers, but the score—34 to 0—tells how badly the Badgers failed. Then came the game with Michigan, the result of which left the Minnesota team with a full share of honors.

After the brilliant victory of the Minnesota team regret was expressed that the Gophers could not meet Yale, the best of the eastern teams, for the championship of the United States. Some experts expressed the opinion that the boys from the great wheat producing state would have given a good account of themselves in a battle with old Eli.

In order to play Minnesota, Michigan had to agree to the conference rules, which bar fourth-year men from participating in a game. This deprived the Wolverines of the services of Wasmund, the team's great quarterback, as this was his last year in college and he was not eligible for the contest. Joy Miller, right end, was shifted to the quarterback position.

Michigan went into the game with an abundance of confidence because of her victory over Pennsylvania. Having no defeat marked up against them during the season Minnesota also was not lacking in confidence. Both teams put up a desperate battle and the game was filled with thrilling features.

Michigan had tried for four years to beat Pennsylvania, and after its defeat by Notre Dame the chances of the team downing the Quakers did not look rosy. However, when the game was started, it was soon seen that the Wolverines had a chance to wipe out former defeats. The Michigan lads used a style of football that the Penn boys had never seen before and the Red and Blue warriors soon were bewildered by the strength and trickiness of the Wolverines.

Out of the great struggle came one hero whose name will be sacred in the annals of Ann Arbor football for years to come. He is Magidsohn, the wonderful halfback. Michigan has had many stars in her day, but Magidsohn shines as brightly as any of them. It was his work that beat Pennsylvania. He scored both of the touchdowns for his team and tore great holes in the Quaker defense. In addition he tackled desperately and spoiled the Quakers' best efforts to use the forward pass.

Another invasion of the east by the west did not result as successfully as did that of Michigan, but the Chicago Maroons were glad to get even a draw with Cornell. It has been readily admitted that Stagg's team this year was not as strong as those he had assembled in former seasons, and before the struggle it looked like a good bet that Cornell would win. When the Maroons scored six in the first half and the Crimson eleven had nothing it looked as if the west might carry off two victories. But in the second half Cornell tied the score, and thus it stood 6 to 6 when the game was over. The score was the same as that of the 1908 game, and puts the teams on an equal footing. The experts are figuring that the Maroons of 1908 would have defeated the team Cornell had this year. They also say that the Chicago team of the days of Walter Eckersall would have come home with a victory instead of a tied score. Be that as it may, Stagg said he was glad to get away with the tie. If Stagg is satisfied, others should be.

The Maroons came out of the game in good shape and were in condition for their final struggle of the season, the game with Wisconsin. The Badgers were not in as good condition after their crushing defeat by Minnesota, and with Moll out of the line-up were not as strong as they might have been.

In addition to losing the game with Iowa Ames suffered greatly by the injury to her captain, Wilmarth, who was so badly hurt in the struggle that he had to be taken to a hospital. It was said that he suffered concussion of the brain.

Illinois played another of her brilliant games against Northwestern and the Evanston boys were doomed to defeat before the contest had gone ten minutes. Northwestern could do nothing against the Illinois line, and the score of 35 to 0 tells the story.

Kroh First on Holdout List.

"I will never play baseball again if I am compelled to go back to Chicago," said Floyd Kroh, the southpaw of the Chicago Cubs, in a Cincinnati interview. "I was promised a certain bonus when I signed with the Cubs in the spring, but when the time came for paying off my envelope was destitute of the amount I was to have received. I don't know or care where I'm sent in 1910, but you can put down a little bet that next season will not find me at the West Side park in Chicago as a resident player, no matter if staying away from there keeps me out of the game entirely."

Thoughts for the Home Nurse.

A plain cotton dress with little starch to cause rustling is a desirable gown for the nurse. In case of infectious diseases her hair should be covered with a cap. Perfumes and scented soaps should be avoided by those in care of the sick.

A trained nurse who has been most successful in caring for diphtheria patients and has escaped taking the disease she thinks because of the precaution to always cover the nose and mouth of the patient with a handkerchief wet in a solution of one-five-thousandth per cent. of bichloride. This protects one from the germs that might fly out of his mouth while spraying the nose or throat.

Another important rule for a nurse to remember is never to eat anything in the sick room, and always rinse her mouth with listerine or some antiseptic wash before eating.

A nurse's hands should be dipped in a disinfecting solution each time after caring for the patient. The nails should be trimmed quite close and scrubbed carefully with a nail brush, as they form a good hiding place for germs. A solution of one one-thousandth of bichloride should always be on hand, for the nurse and the doctor.

Dishes for One or Two.

As most of our recipes in cookbooks are made for families of five and six, it is hard to find recipes for quantities small enough for two. Many recipes will not divide nicely so it is well to have a few well worked out, and tested, so that one may have small amounts well served. Such dishes as vegetables, stews and soups do not need proportions given as judgment is a fair guide. Cakes, puddings and other made dishes must be carefully measured in order to have success.

Health Hints.

For the person who leads a sedentary life, care should be taken as to the foods. Heat producing food is not necessary as it is to the person much in the open air. The craving for sweets may be satisfied by figs, prunes or candied ginger.

Simple, wholesome food, plenty of sleep, regular habits, frequent baths and well ventilated rooms are a good savings bank for health.

WE STAND on the place To-day has given,
To make or to mar our lot;
We may fill it up to the brim with heaven,
Or blur it with stain or blot.
Bravely may toil for the good and true
Earnestly strive and pray;
But the good or the ill we all may do
Must be done in the span of to-day.
—M. E. Sangster.

The Dietetic Value of Some of Our Foods.

Beets and carrots are valuable foods as they contain a large amount of sugar; the mineral salts of the carrot are also of value.

Onions are valuable for their pungent oil, and are often prescribed for sleeplessness; they are also good aperients.

Spinach contains a large quantity of iron and has been called the "broom of the system."

Lettuce has the same quality as onions, a beneficial form of opium, and should be eaten plentifully by people troubled with "nerves."

Tomatoes are good to make active the torpid liver.

Grape fruit has a form of quinine, and has often been prescribed by physicians as a pleasant medicine.

Fruit contains a large amount of water, and we eat it because of that, together with its sweetness and flavor, as most fruit has little nutritive value. The banana is an exception, as it may be called a food. Dried fruits, as the date, fig and raisin, have even a higher food value than the banana. Weight for weight, dried figs are more nourishing than bread.

Apples, peaches, plums, melons and grapes are Nature's aperients, and should be eaten freely by all those who envy a good complexion.

Sour fruits, like lemons, are taken by sufferers from rheumatism, as the fruit acid, turning to alkali, acts upon the uric acid.

Illinois Versus Missouri.

A Missourian informed a traveler who had inquired about corn that each stalk had nine ears on it and was 15 feet high.

"That's nothing compared to our corn," replied the other quickly. "Up in Illinois, where I came from, we always had nine ears to each stalk and a peck of shelled corn hanging to each tassel, but we never could raise any field beans with it."

"Why?" asked the Missourian.

"Because," nodded the other, "the corn grew so fast that it pulled the beans up."—Circle Magazine.

Taking the Wrong Road.

Much of the tragedy of life is contributed by those who take the wrong road, throwing away their talents and bringing suffering and sorrow upon innocent women and children who are so unfortunate as to be dependent on them.

BALLINGER TELLS OF YEAR'S WORK

Report of the Secretary of the Interior Received.

PROBLEM OF PUBLIC LANDS

Development Through Private Enterprise Under National Supervision and Control Desired—Reclamation Service Discussed.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The annual report to the president of Richard A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior, was made public to-day, and makes interesting reading. The report covers a portion of the time under the administration of James R. Garfield, and Mr. Ballinger gives him credit for his earnest and efficient services.

Secretary Ballinger comments on the old public land statutes, and continues:

"The liberal and rapid disposition of the public lands under these statutes and the lax methods of administration which for a long time prevailed naturally provoked the feeling that the public domain was legitimate prey for the unscrupulous and that it was no crime to violate or circumvent the land laws. It is to be regretted that we, as a nation, were so tardy to realize the importance of preventing so large a measure of our natural resources passing into the hands of land pirates and speculators, with no view to development looking to the national welfare.

Must Continue Prosecutions.

"It may be safely said that millions of acres of timber and other lands have been unlawfully obtained, and it is also true that actions to recover such lands have in most instances long since been barred by the statute of limitations. The principal awakening to our wasteful course came under your predecessor's administration. The bold and vigorous prosecutions of land frauds, through Secretaries Hitchcock and Garfield, have restored a salutary respect for the law, and the public mind has rapidly grasped the importance of safeguarding the further disposition of our natural resources in the public lands in the interest of the public good as against private greed. Notwithstanding this, it is necessary to continue with utmost vigor, through all available sources, the securing of information of violations of the public land laws and to follow such violations with rigid prosecutions.

Use Private Enterprise.

"On this present policy of conserving the natural resources of the public domain, while development is the key-note, the best thought of the day is not that development shall be by national agencies, but that wise utilization shall be secured through private enterprise under national supervision and control. Therefore, if material progress is to be made in securing the best use of our remaining public lands, congress must be called upon to enact remedial legislation."

Mr. Ballinger then gives in detail his recommendations for the classification of public lands, and the features of a measure which he advises for the direction of the disposal of water-power sites.

The Reclamation Service.

Concerning the reclamation service, the report says in part:

"In view of the importance of a speedy completion of existing projects and their proper extension, and of the necessity in 1912 of an adjustment between the states by which the major portion of the funds arising from the sale of public lands within each state and territory shall have been expended so far as practicable within such state or territory, and in view of the importance of making a beneficial use of waters already appropriated or capable of appropriation to which rights may be lost for nonuse, I believe an urgent appeal should be made to congress to authorize the issuance of certificates of indebtedness, or of bonds against the reclamation fund, to an aggregate of not exceeding $30,000,000, or so much thereof as may be needed."

Energetic reorganization of the Indian bureau is in progress, says Mr. Ballinger, and he recommends that the Indian warehouses at New York, Chicago, Omaha, St. Louis and San Francisco be closed as soon as possible. A more advanced policy respecting the maintenance, improvement and operation of the Yellowstone and Yosemite national parks is urged on the government.

Contracts Made on Feast Days.

The fixed date for Easter is probably a matter of little concern in the United States, but of great importance in continental Europe, where rent and other contracts are written on such feast days rather than at New Year's or the 1st of May.

Purchasing Power.

A young gentleman of our acquaintance, who had just reached the age of six, was recently waiting with his mother for a train at a railway station, when he noticed a penny-in-the-slot weighing machine. He asked his mother a great many questions about it, and at last received permission to drop in his penny and be weighed. Having obtained that important information, he said: "How much would I have weighed, mamma, if I had dropped in a dollar?"

TORE HIS SKIN OFF

In Shreds—Itching Was Intense—Sleep Was Often Impossible.

Cured by Cuticura in Three Weeks.

"At first an eruption of small pustules commenced on my hands. These spread later to other parts of my body, and the itching at times was intense, so much so that I literally tore the skin off in shreds in seeking relief. The awful itching interfered with my work considerably, and also kept me awake nights. I tried several doctors and used a number of different ointments and lotions but received practically no benefit. Finally I settled down to the use of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills, with the result that in a few days all itching had ceased and in about three weeks' time all traces of my eruption had disappeared. I have had no trouble of this kind since. H. A. Krutskoff, 5714 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., November 18 and 28, 1907."

Schools for Tuberculous Children.

Special schools for tuberculous children have now been established in Providence, Boston, New York, Rochester, Washington, Hartford, Conn., Chicago and Pittsburg. New York has three schools and Washington, D. C., two. The board of education of New York city is proposing to establish three more, and similar institutions are being planned in Detroit, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Newark N. J.

In cities like Providence, Boston and New York, where outdoor schools have been conducted for two years, the results obtained from the treatment of children in special tuberculosis open air schools seem to show the great advantage of this class of institutions. This, coupled with the experience of open air schools in Germany and England, proves that children can be cured of tuberculosis and keep up with their school work, without any danger to fellow pupils.

That Single Thought.

You've heard the old story of sweet wedded bliss, of the two hearts that flutter as one, and the two souls single-thought sealed with a kiss, and have wondered, no doubt, how 'twas done. As a wise one who was by experience taught, this effect we will briefly explain; in most of the cases that "one single thought" is: "I wish I was single again!"

Avoiding Popularity.

"How shall we avoid popularity?" John Wesley once asked his preachers, and straightway gave them the answer in a set of rules. Here is rule 4: "Warn the people among whom you are most of esteeming or loving you too much." And here is rule 5: "Converse sparingly with those who are particularly fond of you."

Good Guess.

"Pa, what is a football coach?"
"The ambulance, I guess."

SECRET WORKERS

The Plan Upon Which Coffee Operates.

Coffee is such a secret worker that it is not suspected as the cause of sickness or disease, but there is a very sure way to find out the truth.

A lady in Memphis gives an interesting experience her husband had with coffee. It seems that he had been using it for some time and was an invalid.

The physician in charge shrewdly suspected that coffee was the "Worm at the root of the tree," and ordered it discontinued with instructions to use Postum regularly in its place.

The wife says: "We found that was the true remedy for his stomach and heart trouble and we would have gladly paid a hundred times the amount of the doctor's charge when we found how wise his judgment was.

"The use of Postum instead of coffee was begun about a year ago, and it has made my husband a strong, well man. He has gained thirty-five pounds in that time and his stomach and heart troubles have all disappeared.

"The first time I prepared it I did not boil it long enough and he said there was something wrong with it. Sure enough it did taste very flat, but the next morning I followed directions carefully, boiling it for fifteen minutes, and he remarked 'this is better than any of the old coffee.'

"We use Postum regularly and never tire of telling our friends of the benefit we have received from leaving off [illegible]

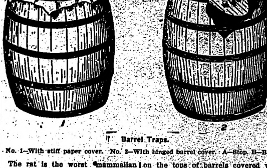
SIMPLE AND PRACTICAL TRAPS TO CATCH RATS

Need for Their Destruction on the Farm and a Few Methods which Can Be Employed—

By David E. Lantz.



Barrel Traps.

No. 1—With stiff paper cover. No. 2—With hinged barrel cover. A—Stop. B—Baits.

The rat is the worst mammalian pest known to man. Its depredations throughout the world result in losses amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars annually. But these losses, great as they are, are of less importance than the fact that rats carry from house to house and from seaport to seaport diseases of all sorts.

Few attempts have been made to collect statistics of damage done by rats in America, but it is known to be very great. Farmers suffer enormous losses, both before and after their crops are harvested, from these pests.

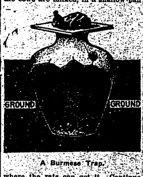
Among methods for driving away rats that have proved useful under some circumstances are the following:

1. Freshly slaked lime placed dry in all burrows and runs of rats.
2. Freshly made thin whitewash poured into the rat burrows.
3. A strong solution of copperas (ferrous sulphate) sprinkled in runs and burrow entrances.
4. Chlorid of lime, loose or in old rags, placed in burrows and runs.
5. Gas tar daubed about the burrow entrances.
6. Powdered red pepper scattered in rat runs and burrows.
7. Gas tar daubed about the burrow entrances.
8. Caustic potash placed in the burrows and runs.

The best bait to use in trapping is usually food of a kind that the rats do not get in the vicinity. As far as possible, food other than the bait should be inaccessible while trapping is in progress. The bait should be kept fresh and attractive, and the kind changed when necessary. Baits and traps should be handled as little as possible. Ordinarily, traps should be frequently cleaned or smoked.

About 60 years ago a writer in the Cornhill Magazine gave details of a trap of which it was claimed that 3,000 rats were caught in a warehouse in a single night. The plan involved tolling the rats to the place and feeding them for several nights on the tops of barrels covered with coarse brown paper. Afterward a cross was cut in the paper, so that the rats fell into the barrel. Many variations of the plan, but few improvements upon it, have been suggested by agricultural writers since that time. Reports are frequently made of large catches of rats by means of a barrel fitted with a light cover of wood, hinged on a rod so as to turn with the weight of a rat, as shown in illustration No. 2.

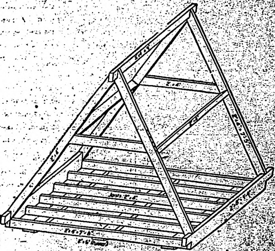
The Burmese use an ingenious and simple method of trapping rats. A large jar with a weighted cover is sunken into the ground. A hole is punched in the side of the jar on a level with the surface of the ground and just large enough to admit a large rat. Rice is used in the jar as bait. A writer states that he saw 72 rats caught in one such trap the first night it was set.



A Burmese Trap.

To destroy rats on farms, place a little fresh milk, each evening when the cows are milked, in a shallow pan where the rats can get it. Continue this for a week until the rats get bold and impatient to get at the milk. Then mix arsenic with the milk and await results. This plan is said to entirely clean a barn of rats.

A-SHAPED HOG HOUSE FRAME



In the illustration is shown the framework for the A-shaped hog house. Little explanation is needed since the dimensions are shown on the various parts. In constructing the house it is important to have the rafters cut the right length so that boards 16 feet long cut in the middle will exactly fit for roof boards.

The following lumber is necessary to construct the portable house just described: Nine pieces 1x12 inches 16 feet long and 11 O. G. battens 16 feet long for roof, five pieces 1x12 inches 14 feet long for ends, one piece 2x8 inches ten feet long for ridge, two pieces 2x8 ten feet long for plates, seven pieces 2x4 inches 16 feet long for rafters and braces in frame, three pieces 2x6 inches eight feet long for runners, and four pieces 1x12 inches 16 feet long, rough, for flooring.

Give Hens Work.

In the extremely cold weather it is most important to give the hens work to do by scattering millet and small grains in the scratching room. On warm days they do not need this so much if they have plenty of range.

NO FERTILITY WITHOUT HUMUS

Experimental Stations Will Invariably Recommend Complete Fertilizer—By C. I. Butler.

Every experimental station in the United States which has made a test on fertilizers will recommend invariably a complete fertilizer in place of one containing only one element, such as nitrogen, phosphorus or potash, experience having proven that it is not only unprofitable but wasteful to the farmer to fertilize his land with anything but a complete fertilizer [illegible]

It should be remembered as a basis for guidance that the maximum yield of any crop is determined and gauged by the fertilizer element which the soil contains in the least quantity. In other words, soil may be [illegible] [illegible] and phosphorus [illegible] [illegible] amount of potash which the soil contains, in other words, the excess amount of nitrogen and phosphorus will not make up for the deficiency in potash.

It is for this reason that we recommend a complete fertilizer on all average soils in preference to a fertilizer containing one or two of the principal elements.

We lay great stress on humus, as the United States department of agriculture has stated repeatedly that without humus in the soil the same would not respond to the use of fertilizers, no difference in what quantity they were applied, humus being the life of the soil and bearing practically the same relation to it that yeast sustains to the bread. John N. Hill, of New York says:

"Without humus there is no fertility in the soil, and because of its character and action it is, with time, the first portion of the essential soil constituents to be lost by cultivation [illegible]

WORK OF A BUDDING GENIUS

Couplet That Lacked Something of the Divine Fire, But Strikingly Original.

The ten-year-old daughter of an artist believes that she is destined to fill a great place in literature, and all her spare moments are devoted to writing poetry about every conceivable subject, according to the San Francisco Wasp. Recently she attended her first church wedding, and so filled with inspiration was she that she immediately began to write a poem descriptive of the event. A few days afterward, when her mother was entertaining friends, the youthful prodigy asked permission to read her poem before the guests. Her mother humored her with not a little secret pride. Stanza by stanza the poem progressed until the young lady reached the point where the description of the bridesmaids was set forth. There one of her couplets read thus:

Some had pug noses and some had Roman,
And each wore a blue ribbon about her abdomen.

Boy's Essay on Clothing.

Here is an extract from an essay, written by a boy in a London school: "Clothing is an article which everybody should wear. The least of this article is worn by savages or natives, which is a piece of cloth or a few leaves or feathers round the waist. In cold countries, same as Eskimos, the people wear more clothes than we do, count of the icy cold out there. They can skate all the year round, except about one thaw there is in summer. If they walked about like natives they would catch cold directly and die of bronkitis. We put clothes on which are nearly like our bodies, some have caps, coats and trousers, but women and girls wear hats and frocks to tell who they are."

Hypnotism Long Recognized.

Hypnotism has been recognized by the medical profession since the fifteenth century and in the last 100 years has been experimented and tested out in thousands of cases by such savants as Charcot in Paris and Bernheim in Nancy, yet with all these years of trial its results have not justified its practical and general use in sickness.—New York Press.

The Fez a Necessity.

All through the markets of every Turkish city and village are little shops where the fez can be pressed and ironed for a few cents. As the head must be covered at all times, a fez or some other brimless covering must be used.

PATENTS [illegible]

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, heart-burn, belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at these will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of native American medical forest plants. Ed. Brouillette, who was so seriously injured a few weeks ago by being caught in a shaft while employed in an elevator at Crookston, was compelled to undergo an operation last week. It will be remembered that one of Mr. Brouillette's arms was fractured in several places. The fractures had not healed properly, and it was found necessary to open the arm and trim the ends of the bones so that they would join together properly. The operation was performed successfully, and Mr. Brouillette is getting along nicely.

P. J. Nimesgern and family left Monday evening for their new home at Oklahoma City. Mr. Nimesgern spent the past season in Oklahoma City, being employed there at the carpenter's trade. The climate has ben beneficial to his health, and that and because he can work at his trade the year around are the reasons for his decisions to move south. Sometime ago Mr. Nimesgern invested in property in Oklahoma City. The growth of the city has been rapid, and Mr. Nimesgern has realized a fine profit from his investment.

The board of managers of the Riverside Club have announced a change in the rules of the club of the provision that prohibited the taking of any of the club's reading matter from the club rooms. Members are to be permitted to take magazines to their homes after the magazines have been on the tables at the club rooms for one month. The magazines are to be returned so that they may be "circulated."

During the rush of the Christmas season many mistakes are made in the addressing of letters and packages. These mistakes are made everywhere and Red Lake Falls is no exception. During the past week four letters without a mark of any kind upon any of them have been mailed at the local office. The only place that these letters can be forwarded to is the dead letter office, unless senders can identify them. At least one of the letters contains a money order.

THE COCKNEY.

'Ere Hi am a-slyvin' an' a-workin' night an' dye,
Hi 'ave a situation, an' Hi'm gettin' splendid pye;
Hi like th' bloomin' wyges that they give a fellow 'ere,
But tuppence 'apiny is too much to arsk a chap for beer.
Han', ho, the slops they serve you! It's mostly wind an' foam.
Hit cawn't compare hat hall with beer that we 'ave hover 'ome.

Th' 'orses 'ere are silly things. Why, bless your heyes, Hi've seen
Th' finest kind of 'orses back 'ome hat Bowling Green.
Han' butter 'ere is horful. Hit's mostly sawlt, y' know.
We wouldn't heat th' stuff hat 'ome. We'd call hit holeo.
Your tea his 'orrible an' rank. Hi very seldom tyke it.
Han', bless me, there's nobody 'ere that knows th' wye to myke it!

My missus didn't want to come. But wot was Hi to do?
Hi'd lost my situation, an' Hi didn't 'ave a sou.
Why, there were thousands hout of work, han' hall of 'em in debt,
Han' thousands arskin' for the plyce that honly one could get.
Hi 'aven't lorst a single dye, Hi 'aven't 'ad to roam,
But wot corsts fifteen dollars 'ere a pound would buy hat 'ome.

Th' missus wears a 'appy smile; th' little tykes are glad.
They're 'avin' more real comforts than before they hever 'ad.
Th' young uns go to public school; but, hon my word, Hi swear
Th' kind of schools you 'ave hout 'ere with Hengland's don't compare.
Th' wyges 'ere hare better than th' wyges 'cross th' foam.
But nothing else is quite as good has wot we 'ave hat 'ome.

A Warm Debate.

Senator Beveridge was deprecating a too warm debate between southern congressmen:

"A soft answer turneth away wrath," said he, "and vice versa. We should all keep polite tongues in our heads. Only last night I heard a very fat man say, with a loud laugh, to a bow-legged friend:

"'Jim, old man, you look as if you'd been riding a barrel!'

"'And you,' snapped Jim sourly, 'look as if you'd swallowed one.'"

Glorious.

"It must be glorious to be able to write as you do," said the beautiful maiden.

"Yes," replied the rising novelist; "I have got so that I can tip back in my chair, with my feet on the desk, and dictate by the hour."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Do not try to drive your employes ahead of you, but keep ahead of them and invite them to come on.—Success Magazine.

His Title.

"Papa," said little James, "what do they call a man who writes comic operas—a composer?"

"No, my son," the old man answered, "he is usually called a plagiarist."

TERREBONNE.

A number of over fifty young people gathered at the home of Doree Laurent Sunday Dec. 12, to help him celebrate his eighteenth birthday. They brought many beautiful presents with them. There was music and games and a very enjoyable time was had by all present. Mr. Laurent desires to thank his friends for the kind remembrance.

Served as coffe, the new coffee substitute known to grocers everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee, will trick even a coffee expert. Not a grain of real coffee in it either. Pure healthful toasted grains, malt, nuts, etc., have been so cleverly blended as to give a wonderfully satisfying coffee taste and flavor. And it is "made in a minute," too. No tedious 20 to 30 minutes boiling. All grocers.

Coughs that are tight, or tickling, get quick and certain help from Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. On this account druggists everywhere are favoring Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. The tender leaves of a harmless lung-healing mountainous shrub give to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its curative properties. Those leaves have the power to calm the most distressing Cough, and to soothe, and heal the most sensitive bronchial membrane. Mothers should, for safety's sake, always demand Dr. Shoop's. It can with perfect freedom be given to even the youngest babes. Test it once yourself, and see! Sold by all dealers.

KREMER IS CONVICTED

Itasca County ExTreasurer Sentenced to Five Years Hard Labor.

After deliberating for thirty-one hours on the evidence submitted, the jury in the case of A. A. Kremer, indicted on a charge of misappropriating county funds, returned a verdict of guilty Monday morning. The charge was grand larceny in the first degree, punishable by imprisonment for from one to ten years. Judge C. W. Stanton sentenced Kremer to five years at hard labor in the Stillwater penitentiary.

The long deliberation of the jury raised the hopes of the defence, as it was confidently expected the jury, in view of the conflicting evidence given by the experts as to whether the accused was insane or sane from the use of morphine, would disagree.

The specific charge was that Aug. 29, 1909, the defendant consummated a shortage in his accounts, as treasurer, of $3,500. Rumors of the shortage first came prevalent Oct. 8, and a few days later, Kremer's arrest followed. At this time the treasurer told his brother, E. A. Kremer, that there was no shortage and that the money he had loaned was from a Duluth party.

The defense attempted to show that Kremer was insane from the use of morphine in recent years. One physician stated that if morphine were to be taken away from him he would immediately show signs of violence that would convince even the prosecuting attorney that he was insane. The same physician said that a sunstroke which was suffered by Kremer when he was four years old, and which was followed by brain fever, would be liable to cause impairment of the mind.

Failing to secure a new trial, it is expected that Kremer will appeal to the supreme court.

CITY SUFFERS BIG LOSS

BLINDPIGGER CAUGHT

Roseau County Man Caught Selling Liquor Illegal.

On complaint lodged by County Attorney Stebbins for selling intoxicating liquors without a license Jonas A. Johnson was arrested on Wednesday and his stock of wet goods seized under a search warrant. His case will come up before Justice Miller Tuesday [illegible].

The authorities have been watching the Johnson place for some time and rumors have been heard as to the nature of the business conducted there, and the investigation culminated in the arrest of Johnson.

Mr. Johnson was convicted of selling without a license last summer and at that time paid a fine of $70 and suffered the destruction of his stock of goods, consisting chiefly of whisky.—Roseau Region.

ARE IMPORTANT DEALS

J. A. Duffy and A. P. Toupin Purchase Brick Block on Main Street.

During the past week two real estate transfers of local interest were made. J. A. Duffy has purchased of M. A. Sheldrup of Minneapolis the brick store building occupied by the Garceau & Rubertus general store. The other transfer is that of the Mose Bray property. J. M. Bray of Calgary, Alberta, who owned the building, sold to J. A. Duffy and A. P. Toupin. The building is now occupied by the Cyr & Savard saloon. These buildings are valuable property and no doubt will prove profitable investments. In making these purchases, Messrs. Duffy and Toupin have indicated their confidence in property values in Red Lake Falls.

METOPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE DESTROYED

Early Morning Fire Does Big Damage When Opera House Burns to Ground.

Loss Is $13,000 with Insurance of $5,800—Practically Nothing Saved.

Fire, which was discovered at three o'clock Saturday morning on the second floor of the Anderson & Wander building, completely destroyed that structure despite the efforts of the fire department to extinguish the blaze. When first seen the fire was burning under the balcony of the opera house, but the lateness of the hour and the fact that many firemen were unable to hear the bell, delayed the arrival of the department just long enough to make it difficult to handle the fire. The blaze was also a very difficult one to get at effectively, and when the firemen had commenced to get the flames under control the engine refused to work properly. It was then discovered that to save the building was an impossibility and the attention of the department was turned to nearby buildings and to the saving of that little of the stock that could be easily reached.

The origin of the fire is a mystery although several conjectures have been offered. A lighted cigar stub carelessly thrown, or an overheated stove are the most likely reasons, although some are tempted to place the blame on the electric wiring. This last cause is the most improbable of the three, as electric wires are less liable to be the origin of a fire than is generally supposed. Several who attended the Mickle concert on the evening before the fire are positive that they could smell burning wood during the evening. Although it will never be known, the fire was undoubtedly the result of one of the first two causes mentioned.

The fire was a very hot one, the dry building burning like tinder. Several buildings across the street suffered broken windows, the Great Northern water tank on the east and almost directly in the path of the wind, was slightly damaged. The heat warped the iron bands holding the tank together, with the result that large cracks were opened through which the water supply leaked out. It was also feared for a short time that the Red Lake Falls Milling company's elevator would go, large pieces of burning wood igniting the roof, but these were put out without any damage.

The loss is complete and amounts to $13,000 about evenly divided between the stock and building. Messrs. Anderson and Wander, who owned both building and stock, carried insurance to the amount of $5,800. They had a large stock of goods and with one or two exceptions nothing was saved. Mr. Wander states that the firm has secured quarters in the city and that they will continue the undertaking business. A small stock of furniture will be handled. Further announcement regarding this will be made later.

The loss of the opera house appeals to Red Lake Falls people more than ever at this time of the year. With the holiday season coming on and its usual number of dances and entertainments, the loss will be much greater than otherwise. Whether the city will have another play house remains to be seen, but it is earnestly hoped that the time is not far distant when a suitable opera house will be erected. Steps in this direction may already have been taken.

CONCERT WAS GOOD

Robert Mickle Company Pleases Local Audience.

The Robert Mickle Concert company, which appeared at the opera house Friday evening, more than fulfilled the expectations of the audience. Mr. Mickle possesses a remarkably even baritone voice and his rendition of many Scotch and English songs brought forth much applause. This coupled with the fact that he was supported by a very brilliant company, made the concert one of the best that has appeared in this city.

Pierre Gray was quite seriously injured the first of the week while sliding down the long hill on the north side. He lost control of the sled as he was running onto the bridge and as a result had one leg badly bruised.

YOU'LL HAVE TO HURRY

If You Expect to Clean Up That Subscription Account Before the New Year.

To comply with postal regulations it will be necessary that the Gazette subscription list be revised and that subscriptions more than one year in arrears be discontinued. This is a condition that must be complied with because Uncle Sam says so.

A number of subscribers have during the past few days paid several years on subscription account, paying in advance to realize a saving since after Jan. 1, 1910, the subscription price will be $1.50 per year. This is gratifying to the publishers for more reasons than one, one of which is that it is an indication that efforts to give Red Lake Falls a live newspaper are appreciated.

Advance subscriptions may be paid at the rate of $1.00 per year until Jan. 1, 1910. After that date the subscription price will be $1.50 per year.

Enjoyed Brisk Trade.

The stores of this city have been thronged from early till late during the past week with Christmas shoppers. All of the merchants have laid in extra fine holiday stocks this year and are reaping a well deserved harvest. All stores stay open until nine o'clock to accomodate the many buyers.

WOULD ADOPT BABIES

Little Girl Volunteers to Take Three Homeless Children In Charge.

The following letter received by the Minneapolis Journal and printed in its issue of Dec. 2, carries with it a little touch of pathos, and it is to be hoped that the little girl's wish will be gratified. Little Miss Kankel is well known in this city and has many friends who would be pleased to learn that her good fairy had not failed her.

Dear Sir:

I read about the poor little Orphant babies in the Minneapolis Journal. And I just fell in love with them one of my little brothers died last fall.

I have another little sister and brother, I am ten years old. So we want Three of them the ones we picked out were these Master Paul and Bessie and Katherine. My Mother and Father said that they would meet them at Red Lake Falls Minn. Send them with express.

PLAN TO ADVERTISE RED LAKE COUNTY

Officers of Two Railroad Companies See Advantages of County.

Representative Here Recently Securing Cuts and Data For Big Feature.

D. M. Cole, representing the land department of the Duluth and Iron Range and the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railway companies, was in the city recently getting information to be used in an extensive advertising campaign.

The advertising is to be of a rather unusual nature. The companies own considerable land in Red Lake county, but the land not owned by the companies instead of their own land is to be advertised. The undertaking shows in what a big way a railroad company takes hold of a business proposition. The county the company officials realize that there will be little demand for it until the other land is taken up. For that reason the land of private parties will be advertised and the advantages of Red Lake county as an agricultural and dairy country will be exploited. The company officials expect, of course that eventually the advertising will bring returns to them, for as the better land is taken up there will be a demand for their less valuable land. Drainage projects, too, will be undertaken as the development of the county will warrant and all of the land drained will be benefitted.

It takes the cold calculations of a soulless railroad corporation to figure out the profit of such an unusual venture in publicity, but there is no doubt that it will be a good move for the companies and incidentally the people of Red Lake county will share in the benefits. The companies will spend quite a large sum of money on the advertising scheme.

[illegible]DBETER TRIAL

SMITH TRIAL OPENS WITH VICTIM'S BROTHER ON STAND.

THE DAUGHTERS TESTIFY

Give Rather Important Testimony Bearing on Mysterious [illegible] Murder.

Mankato.—The jury to try Frank Smith, charged with murdering H. J. Ledbeter, May 4 last, completed as follows: William H. Macbeth, Mankato, retired merchant and miller; Henry Hodapp, Decorah, farmer; Edward Bender, Lake Crystal, stock buyer; Thomas Rooney, Cerasco, farmer; John C. Bixby, Garden City, hotel keeper; F. E. Eaton, Garden City, farmer; R. E. Stanley, Shelby, farmer; Charles Moses, Lake Crystal, farmer; Thomas C. Norman, Garden City, farmer; P. H. Jordan, Mankato, game and fish warden; Eric Shaw, Butternut Valley, foreman.

Seventy-two names were drawn in getting the jury, and the prosecution used its 17 peremptory challenges and the defense seven. Smith and the states attorneys, both are well pleased with the character of the jury selected.

It was a terrible arraignment that P. A. Ledbeter, telling his story in his direct and retiring manner, made of the defendant, without seeming to know it, and Mrs. Ledbeter, wife of the murdered farmer, was brought into the case repeatedly in the witness' testimony.

The witness told of coming to Mankato une 18 to search for his brother, H. J. Ledbeter, of whose disappearance May 5 he had been informed. Searchers from the city and Medo and Lima townships armed with iron spears, augers and shovels, spent two days in going over the farm, seeking where the body was buried, as he had suspicions of foul play. Search was rewarded the second day by finding the body under a potato patch.

Witness told of conversations with Smith, who had put him off with different stories to account for his brother's disappearance, once telling of seeing him alive on the farm two weeks after the disappearance, once saying he had prevented him from shooting himself just as he was about to pull the trigger of a shotgun with a string, and once saying that he and Mrs. Ledbeter had planned to slay Ledbetter by throwing the ladder out from under him while he was making repairs to the top of the barn. The reason this did not succeed was because Ledbetter only went part way up and then came down, remarking he was too old and nervous to climb as he used to. Smith had laid at least one of these stories to Mrs. Ledbeter's ingenuity to shield him.

The second day's developments in the trial of Frank Smith, charged with murdering Holley J. Ledbeter, were more favorable to Mrs. Ledbeter and distinctly to Smith's disadvantage. Mrs. Ledbeter's two daughters, Hazel and Mabel, were put on the stand with her consent and gave straightforward testimony. They and their two younger brothers had gone to bed the evening of May 4 soon after 9 o'clock, following shortly after Smith, and heard no noise or disturbance of any kind during the night.

Hazel went into her parent's room downstairs and everything there looked the same as usual. Smith was off, searching for their father. The evening before a neighbor's children had been there playing with them and their father had watched them play. A small dog had bitten him on the finger and Mabel said she saw her mother tie the finger up. Neither saw their father kick the dog or their mother slap their father. The defense claims the murder was committed before midnight and the girls' testimony about hearing their father call Smith the next morning is new and important.

E. F. Searing, city editor of the Daily Free Press, told of a conversation he had with the defendant at the jail the night of his arrest, and of what was said later that night by Smith and Mrs. Ledbeter when brought face to face. The testimony was confined to Smith's statement of alleged illicit relations with Mrs. Ledbeter before the murder, of Mrs. Ledbeter's reply when accused by Smith of trying to buy poison of a Redwood Falls doctor when she said it was chloroform to take medicine stains from her dress, and of Smith's having prefaced the question with, "Now, Mrs. Ledbeter, when you helped me kill Mr. Ledbeter didn't you do so and so, which he had finally corrected to "bury Ledbeter."

The defense tried to get in the entire conversation, but the state objected, and the jury was sent out while this poin was fought out. The court finally decided that only such parts of conversations as bore on matters brought out by the state were admissable.

Chicago, Illinois.—Gov. Adolph O. Eberhart of Minnesota, in an address here before the National Fairs and Exposition association, made a plea for better farming in America.

"We have made this country the model of the world in our free schools and republican form of government," said Governor Eberhart, "while we have demonstrated the possession of the greatest agricultural resources on the globe and have supplied the world's markets with an unparalleled volume of farm products, we have exhibited a vast and alarming weakness in the depletion of our soil resources and the reduction of yield and profit per acre under cultivation.

"During the last 50 years, in which we have made such tremendous strides in manufacturing and commerce we have lost in soil fertility, as estimated by economic authorities, a wealth that would maintain our population for centuries. [illegible]

"The starvation of our soil has aroused the entire nation and a halt should be called until remedies can be applied to stop this great and unnecessary waste. We find many farms show a decrease in yield per acre due to persistent single cropping, the very cause that has produced farm poverty from time immemorial."

STATE CONSERVATION CONGRESS.

Preliminary Organization for Big Meeting Is Effected.

St. Paul.—The first Minnesota state conservation congress will be held in February or March, and congresses will be held annually in the several Minnesota cities. Delegates to the congress will be appointed through the commercial organizations of the different cities who will nominate delegates to be appointed by the governor. Representatives of the agricultural interests of the state will also send delegates.

MINNEAPOLIS CASE DISMISSED.

Threshing Machine Company Loses Appeal to Commission.

Washington, D. C.—The interstate commerce commission has dismissed the complaint of the Minneapolis Threshing Machine company against the Omaha and Northwestern railroads. The company complained over the fact that joint rates which had been effective between the Great Northern and the two roads named, whereby Hopkins received the same rates as Minneapolis, had been cancelled at the beginning of the present year. The cancellation of these joint rates was alleged to make unreasonable rates on threshing machinery from Hopkins to local points along the two railroads. It was claimed that distributing houses in Minneapolis received better rates than were given the Hopkins concern.

The interstate commission finds that the $5 switching charge now assessed from Hopkins to Minneapolis is reasonable unless Hopkins is to be placed on the same basis as Minneapolis for all business on all railroads.

STATE'S FRUITS ARE SHOWN.

Minneapolis.—Fruits and flowers defied the season during the four days' session of the Minnesota State Horticultural Society and its auxiliaries, the Minnesota State Forestry Association, the Plant Breeders' Auxiliary, the Women's Auxiliary, the Minnesota State Florists' Society, and the Minnesota State Bee-keepers' Society, which opened in the First Unitarian church.

More than 1,000 plates and boxes of fruits raised in the northwest were displayed in the basement of the church. The prize list is a long one and covers grapes, roses, pecks of apples, top-worked apples, seedling apples, bushel boxes of apples and nuts. Convention headquarters were at the Majestic hotel.

The program of the meetings held every morning and afternoon was a lengthy one, as each speaker was restricted to 10 minutes. Among the numerous features were an address on "Breeding," by W. M. Hays, assistant secretary of agriculture, illustrated by lantern pictures.

BURKE PRESIDES

AT THE OPENING OF THE MISSOURI RIVER IMPROVEMENT CONGRESS.

WANTS UNITY OF ACTION

Suggests in His Address That Waterways Associations Should Get Together—Favors Issuance of Bonds.

Omaha, Dec. 15.—The Missouri River Navigation congress began a two days' annual session here yesterday with three governors and 150 delegates present. Governor Burke of North Dakota, president of the congress, presided. Delegations are present from Kansas City, St. Joseph, Sioux City, Pierre, Bismarck, Fort Benton, Mont., Omaha and other Missouri river points. Governor Vessey of South Dakota and Mayor James C. Dahlman were speakers. Governor Burke suggested that the National Rivers and Harbors association, the Lake to the Gulf Waterways association and other similar organizations work together for the securing of navigation. He expressed the belief that the people would be justified in issuing bonds for the improvement of waterways, just as they had for the construction of the Panama canal. The greatest obstacle to the improvement of these inland waterways, he said, was the magnitude of the work and the money it would cost, but he believed congress should meet the issue squarely and could not begin too soon.

KNOX ASKS TIME

Washington, Dec. 15.—Secretary of State Knox has requested the senate committee on foreign relations to postpone the suggested investigation of the Nicaragua situation until such time as things shall have eventuated so as to enable him to give the committee a clear understanding of Central American affairs.

The committee was called together today by Chairman Cullum with the idea of having Secretary Knox make some statement which would acquaint the members with the exact situation in Nicaragua. The secretary asked for the postponement of the meeting for a week or more and the committee asquiesced because of the request by Secretary Knox. A resolution introduced by Senator Rayner in connection with the execution by order of President Zelaya of the two Americans Cannon and Groce, was not taken up today.

Milwaukee Train Wreck.

Omaha, Dec. 15.—An entire train No. 7, west bound on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway left the track two miles east of Bayard, Ia., early today. The train was composed of the engine, tender, baggage and mail cars, two coaches and two sleepers.

A dozen passengers were slightly injured. The tender trucks were first to leave the track, and for that reason it is believed a broken wheel may have been the cause. Number 7 is the Sioux City and Des Moines local out of Chicago and carried passengers for those cities.

Asks Dissolution of Trust.

Pittsburg, Dec. 15.—Denouncing the United States Steel corporation as "a soulless corporation, whose god is the Almighty dollar," the conference committee of labor leaders of the American Federation of Labor adopted resolutions recommending that a committee be appointed to lay before congress and President Taft the grievances of labor against the corporation and to recommend that a government investigation be instituted looking toward a dissolution of the stee corporation.

St. Paul, Dec. 13.—Rumors that President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor had recommended a compromise to President Hawley of the Switchmen's Union of North America, was partly confirmed by a member of the strike committee today.

He said that a compromise was being considered on the following basis: Wage, 3 cents an hour increase instead of 6 cents asked; overtime, time and a half instead of double time; holidays and Sundays to be included as overtime; age limit and physical examination to be modified to a limited extent instead of the radical changes proposed at first.

President Hawley declined to make any statement on the subject.

READS UP ZELAYA.

Senator Rayner Makes Fiery Speech Regarding Him.

Washington, Dec. 13.—With dramatic fervor and in a stirring denunciatory tone, Senator Raynor of Maryland today addressed the senate on his resolution authorizing the president of the United States to take all necessary steps to apprehend and bring to trial President Zelaya of Nicaragua on a charge of the murder of Groce and Cannon, the two American citizens recently executed in Nicaragua.

The speech was an unsparing arraignment of President Zelaya, whom Senator Rayner designated as one of the greatest criminals of the age. "What I am concerned in now," said Senator Rayner, "is not a question of the biligerent rights of the revolutionists or in the cause of their success, their recognization either as the de facto or the de jure government, but the speedy apprehension and punishment of Zelaya.

"This desperado is everything that the secretary of state says about him, and a great deal more. If the country knew what is known in official circles, in reference to his general depravity, it would regard the secretary's communication as exceedingly temperate as it shows upon its face the restraint under which he was laboring in dealing with such a character.

NAVIGATION CLOSES.

Believed Thirty-Eight More Have Met Death on Car Ferry.

Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 13.—With twenty-five vessels today braving the gales and ice of the Great Lakes, nearly all upon their last trip, the shipping season of 1909 is practically at an end. It is believed that within twenty-four hours the lakes will be cleared of boats and the end of the wrecks and loss of life is at hand.

Only one boat now is known to be in peril. That is the car ferry Ashtabula, which is on a sandbar at the entrance to the harbor at Port Burwell, Canada. A heavy sea is raging and there is considerable danger that the boat will go to pieces.

Big Labor Conference.

Pitsburg, Pa., Dec. 13.—The eyes of organized labor are turned towards this city, where an important conference of national labor leaders began at 10 o'clock today, under the auspices of the American Federation of Labor. How long the conference will continue is not known.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, presided. One hundred and fifty delegates represent the various organizations affiliated with the federation.

Frost Causes Three Wrecks.

Watertown, S. D., Dec. 13.—Three trains were wrecked near Watertown last night and this morning because of a peculiar action of frost causing the rails to spread. A St. Louis passenger train went off the track one mile east of the city. A St. Louis freight train went off the track near Waverly and a Northwestern train went off the track near Dolland. No persons were seriously injured.

Launch Capsizes—Four Dead.

Rainer, Ore., Dec. 13.—The capsizing of a gasoline launch yesterday in the Columbia river off Burton's Landing, a few miles west of here, caused the death of four of a party of seven people returning home from a skating rink.

Leper Soldier Dies.

Savannah, Ga., Dec. 13.—Death removed probably the only case of leprosy in the United States army today when First Sergeant C. O. Mix, of the Seventy-second company of coast artillery, died in his lonely cottage on the Fort Screven reservation.

Supreme Judge Named.

Washington, Dec. 13. — Horace H. Lurton of Tennessee was today named by President Taft to be an associate justice of the supreme court of the United States. Lurton is the oldest man ever named for supreme justice.

King Leopold Reported Dying.

Brussels, Dec. 13.—King Leopold was reported to be dying today, but the report lacked confirmation. It is known that the condition of his majesty has reached a critical stage, but death may not be at hand.

Killed by Pile Driver.

Cloquet, Minn., Dec. 13.—Joseph Saw was instantly killed at the Northern Lumber Co.'s mill when the leads and hammer of the pile driver, twenty feet high, aggregating 2,500 pounds fell on him. Almost every bone in his body was broken. He leaves a wife and three children.

Third Operation Kills.

Superior, Wis., Dec. 13.—R. B. Dear, a millionaire contractor and mining man, died here Sunday as the result of a third operation following appendicitis. Until recently he was president of the Butte-Ballaklava Copper Co.

Seven Bodies Found.

Madisonville, Ky., Dec. 14.—A rescuing party headed by State Mine Inspector Norwood of Lexington found today the bodies of seven miners who were entombed in the Baker mine of the West Kentucky Coal Co. The miners had evidently died from black [illegible] after the explosion.

REBELLION HAS BROKEN OUT IN MANAGUA, ZEYLA'S CAPITAL CITY.

INSURGENTS TAKE TOWNS

Estrada's Followers Renew Their Hopes at Prospects of Aid From the United States—Capture Several Towns.

Managua, Nicaragua, Dec. 14.—Rebellion has broken out at the capital. The streets are filled with unrestrained demonstrators. Shouts of "long live liberty, the United States and Estrada," fill the air. The police have made no move to check the mob. It is said that President Zealya has promised to make public today the announcement of his resignation from the presidency.

Bluefield, Dec. 14.—General Estrada and his followers have taken courage at the prospect of assistance from the United States in their efforts to overthrow the government of Nicaragua.

The United States cruisers Des Moines and Tacoma and collier Leonidas with their crews on board are still lying outside the harbor. A cablegram reports that 700 additional marines from the United States have started for Colon and this fact is interpreted as assurance that the marines will be sent here to reinforce the bluejackets now in the habror.

United States Consul Moffat is making tentative arrangements for shore quarters for the American fighting men.

An official telegram received at insurgents' headquarters here announces that General Morales at the head of a band of insurgents has captured Tortuga Orisi and Supoa, three small towns on the Costarian frontier. Moralesp roclaimed Estrada president of Nicaragua and continued his march to attack the important town of Rivas. It is noted with satisfaction that since the arrival of the Des Moines, General Vasquez of the government forces near Rama has redoubled his efforts to obtain a compromise with Estrada. General Estrada now has 2,400 men.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The cruiser Albany and the gunboat Korkton have joined the gunboat Vicksburg at Corinton on the Pacific coast of Nicaragua. Their arrival last night was announced to the navy department today. The Albany has 280 blue jackets aboard and the Yorkton 155. These, together with the 155 aboard the Vicksburg, are county upon to protect American interests and American lives in and around Corinto.

RAILROADS ISSUE FIGURES

To Support Statement That Strike is Broken.

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 14.—As supporting their statements that the switchmen's strike is broken, the railroads have begun to publish large display advertisements in local papers in which the give the "status of the switchmen's strike" in a table of comparison between the business done in terminals last year at this time and also for their entire system.

Governor Eberhart will make an investigation of the strike conditions today and if he finds that traffic is generally tied up he will at once make overtures to both sides for arbitration.

Between twenty and thirty switchmen who have been out on strike returned to work today.

Limited in Wreck.

Erie, Pa., Dec. 14.—The Big Four Twentieth Century Limited, No. 26, east bound second section en route from St. Louis to New York, came together in a rear end collision with passenger train No. 10 on the Lake Shore railroad at Northeast Pennsylvania, sixteen miles from here last midnight. Three Italians were killed, seven other persons were injured and twenty-five cut and bruised. Sleet, which coated the rails and rendered the airbrakes inaffectual, was responsible. Among the injured was Frank F. Cook, Green Bay, Wis., legs cut and ribs fractured.

New Bishop to Fargo.

Rome, Dec. 14.—Approving the recommendation of the consistorial congregation as presented by Secretary Cardinal De Lai, Pope Pius X, today appointed Rev. ames O'Reiley, now rector of St. Anthony of Padua, Minneapolis, Minn., to the bishopric of Fargo, N. D., diocese. Rev. M. F. Fallon of Proncincial Oblates of Buffalo was appointed to the bishopric of London, Canada.

Missing Car Ferry Found.

Port Burwell, Ont., Dec. 14.—The Canadian Pacific Railroad Co.'s car ferry Ashtabula is stranded near here. Her fires are out and she is rapidly filling with water and in extreme danger of sinking suddeply. Her crew are still aboard and are flying signals of distress. A life saving crew from Port Stanley are enroute by special train.

Hurt in Canadian Wreck.

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 14.—The Canadian Northern express train was wrecked 100 miles east of here last night. The cars turned turtle. No one was killed but forty were injured.

The majority were American settlers on their way to old homes for Christmas.

LOSE LIFE IN FLAMES

Seven Die as Result of Lamp Overturned in Quarrel.

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 14.—Seven persons lost their lives, seven others were injured, two probably fatally and fifty others had narrow escapes from instant death in a fire which early today destroyed the four-store tenement at Third street and Sycamore.

The fire started on the second floor of the building and was due to the upsetting of a kerosene lamp during a quarrel between tenants. The flames spread rapidly to the stairways and hall, cutting off escape.

Mr. Van Torp Was Puzzled.

SYNOPSIS.

Baraka, a Tartar girl, became enamored of a golden bearded stranger who was prospecting and studying herbs in the vicinity of her home in central Asia, and revealed to him the location of a mine of rubies hoping that the stranger would love her in return for her disclosure. They were followed to the cave by the girl's relatives, who blocked up the entrance, and drew off the water supply, leaving the couple to die. Baraka's cousin Saad, her betrothed, attempted to climb down a cliff overlooking the mine; but the traveler shot him. The stranger was revived from a water gourd Saad carried, dug his way out of the tunnel, and departed, deserting the girl and carrying a bag of rubies. Baraka gathered all the gems she could carry, and started in pursuit. Margaret Donne (Margarita da Cordova), a famous prima donna, became engaged in London to Konstantin Logotheti, a wealthy Greek financier. Her intimate friend was Countess Leven, known as Lady Maud, whose husband had been killed by a bomb in St. Petersburg; and Lady Maud's most intimate friend was Rufus Van Torp, an American, who had been a cowboy in early life, but had become one of the richest men in the world. Van Torp was in love with Margaret, and rushed to London as soon as he heard of her betrothal. He offered Lady Maud $5,000,000 for her pet charity if she would aid him in winning the singer from Logotheti. Baraka approached Logotheti at Versailles with rubies to sell. He presented a ruby to Margaret. Van Torp bought a yacht and sent it to Venice. He was visited by Baraka in male attire.

CHAPTER IV.—Continued.

But Barak now understood what he was going to do, and ran before him, and stood before the door in an attitude which expressed entreaty so clearly that Mr. Van Torp was puzzled.

"Well," he said, standing still and looking into the beautiful imploring eyes, "what on earth do you want now, Miss Barrack? Try and explain yourself."

A very singular conversation by signs now began.

Barak pointed to the waistcoat pocket into which he had put the stone. The matter concerned that, of course, and Van Torp nodded. Next, though after considerable difficulty, she made him understand that she was asking how he had got it, and when this was clear, he answered by pretending to count out coins with his right hand on the palm of his left to explain that he had bought it. There was no mistaking this, and Barak nodded quickly and went on to her next question. She wanted to know what kind of a man had sold him the ruby. She improvised a pretty little dumb show in which she represented the seller and Mr. Van Torp the buyer of the ruby, and then by gestures she asked if the man who sold it was tall.

Van Torp raised his hand several inches higher than his own head. He had bought the ruby from a very tall man. Putting both hands to her chin and then drawing them down as if stroking a long beard, she inquired if the man had one, and again the answer was affirmative. She nodded excitedly and pointed first to Van Torp's sandy hair and then to her own short black locks. The American pointed to his own, and then touched his watch-chain and smiled. The man's hair was fair, and even golden. By a similar process she ascertained that his eyes were blue and not black, and her excitement grew. Last of all she tried to ask where the man was, but it was some time before she could make Mr. Van Torp understand what she meant. As if to help her out of her difficulty, the sun shone through the clouds at that moment and streamed into the room; she pointed to it at once, turned her back to it, and then held out her right hand to indicate the east, and her left to the west.

"Oh, yes," said Van Torp, who had seen Indians do the same thing, "it was west of here that I bought it of him, a good way west."

He pointed in that direction, and thrust out his arm as if he would make it reach much further if he could. At this Barak looked deeply disappointed. Several times, to show that she meant London, or at least England, she pointed to the floor at her feet and looked inquiringly at Van Torp, but he shook his head and pointed to the west again, and made a gesture that meant crossing something. He spoke to her as if she could understand.

"I've got your meaning," he said. "You're after the big man with the yellow beard, who is selling rubies from the same place, and has very likely gone off with yours. He looked like a bad egg in spite of his handsome face."

He turned his eyes thoughtfully to the window. Barak plucked gently at his sleeve and pretended to write in the palm of her left hand, and then went through all the descriptive gestures again, and then once more pretended to write, and coaxingly pushed him towards a little table on which she saw writing materials.

"You'd like to have his address, would you, Miss Barrak? I wonder why you don't call in your interpreter and tell me so. It would be much simpler than all this dumb crambo."

Once more he made a step towards the door, but she caught at his sleeve and entreated him in her own language not to call any one; and her voice was so deliciously soft and beseeching that he yielded, and sat down at the small table and wrote out an address from memory. He handed her the half-sheet of paper when he had dried the writing and had looked over it carefully.

"Poor little thing!" he said in a tone of pity. "If you ever find him he'll eat you."

Barak again showed signs of great emotion when she put the address into an inside pocket of her man's coat, but it was not of the same kind as before. She took Van Torp's big hand in both her own, and, bending down, she laid it on her head, meaning that he might dispose of her life ever afterwards. But he did not understand.

"You want my blessing, do you, Miss Barrack? Some people don't think Brassy Van Torp's blessing worth much, young lady, but you're welcome to it, such as it is."

He patted her thick hair and smiled as she looked up, and her eyes were dewy with tears.

"That's all right, my dear," he said. "Don't cry!"

She smiled, too, because his tone was kind, and, standing up, she took out her little leathern bag again quickly, emptied the twists of paper into her hand, selected one by touch, and slipped the rest back. She unwrapped a large stone and held it up to the light, turning it a little as she did so. Van Torp watched her with curiosity, and with an amused suspicion that she had perhaps played the whole scene in order to mollify him and induce him to buy something. So many people had played much more elaborate tricks in the hope of getting money from him, and the stones might be imitations after all, in spite of Logotheti's penciled line of recommendation.

But Barak's next action took Van Torp by surprise. To his amazement, she pressed the ruby lightly to her heart, then to her lips, and last of all to her forehead, and before he knew what she was doing she had placed it in his right hand and closed his fingers upon it. It was a thank-offering.

"Nonsense!" objected the millionaire, smiling, but holding out the stone to her. "It's very sweet of you, but you don't mean it, and I don't take presents like that. Why, it's worth a thousand pounds in Bond street any day!"

But she put her hands behind her back and shook her head, to show that she would not take it back. Then with her empty hand she again touched her heart, her lips and forhead, and turned towards the door.

"Here, stop!" said Mr. Van Torp, going after her. "I can't take this thing! See here, I say! Put it back into your pocket!"

She turned and met him, and made a gesture of protest and entreaty, as if earnestly begging him to keep the gem. He looked at her keenly, and he was a judge of humanity, and saw that she was hurt by his refusal. As a last resource, he took out his pocket-book and showed her a quantity of folded bank notes.

"Well," he said, "since you insist, Miss Barrack, I'll buy the stone of you, but I'll be everlastingly jiggered if I'll take it for nothing."

Barak's eyes suddenly flashed in a most surprising way, her lower lip pouted, and her cheek faintly changed color, as a drop of scarlet pomegranate juice will tinge a bowl of cream.

She made one step forwards, plucked the stone from his fingers, rather than took it, and with a quick, but girlishly awkward movement, threw it towards the window as hard as she could, stamping angrily with her little foot at the same moment. Mr. Van Torp was extremely disconcerted, as he sometimes was by the sudden actions of the sex he did not understand. Fortunately the stone hit the wall instead of going out of the window.

"I'm really sorry, Miss Barrack," he said in a tone of humble apology, and he went quickly and picked up the gem. "I hadn't quite understood, you see."

She watched him, and drew back instinctively towards the door, as if expecting that he would again try to give it back to her. But he shook his head now, bowed with all the grace he could affect, which was little, and by way of making her feel that he accepted the gift, he pressed it to his heart, as she had done, and to his lips, but not to his forehead, because he was afraid that might cause some new mistake, as he did not know what the gesture meant.

Barak's face changed instantly; she smiled, nodded, and waved her hand to him, to say that it was all right, and that she was quite satisfied. Then she made a sort of salute that he thought very graceful indeed, as if she were taking something from near the floor and laying it on her forehead, and she laughed softly and was out of the room and had shut the door before he could call her back again.

He stood still in the middle of the room, looking at the gem in his hand with an expression of grave doubt.

"Well," he said to himself, and his lips formed the words, though no sound articulated them, "that's a queer sort of a morning's work, anyway."

He reflected that the very last thing he had ever expected was a present of a fine ruby from a pretty heathen girl in man's clothes, recommended to him by Logotheti. Though he almost laughed at the thought when it occurred to him, he did not like the idea of keeping the stone; yet he did not know what to do with it, for it was more than probable that he was never to see Barak again, and if he ever did, it was at least likely that she would refuse to take back her gift, and as energetically as on the first occasion.

At that moment it occurred to him that he might sell it to a dealer and give the proceeds to Lady Maud for her good work, and taking his hat and gloves he went out immediately, without even telling Stemp that he was going.

He walked up at a leisurely pace from his hotel by the river to Piccadilly and Bond street, and entered a jeweler's shop of modest appearance but ancient reputation, which had been in the same place for nearly a century, and had previously been on the other side of the street.

Outside, two well-dressed men were looking at the things in the window within, a broad-shouldered, smart looking man, with black hair, and dressed in perfectly new blue serge was sitting by the counter with his back to the door, talking with the old jeweler himself. He turned on the chair when he heard the new-comer's step, and Mr. Van Torp found himself face to face with Konstantin Logotheti, whom he had supposed to be in Paris.

"Well," he said, without betraying the surprise he felt, "this is what I call a very pleasant accident, Mr. Logotheti."

The Greek rose and shook hands, and the American did not fail to observe on the counter a small piece of tissue paper on which lay an uncut stone, much larger than the one he had in his pocket.

"If you are in any hurry," said Logotheti politely, "I don't mind waiting in the least. Mr. Pinney and I are in the midst of a discussion that may never end, and I believe neither of us has anything in the world to do."

Mr. Pinney smiled benignly and put in a word in the mercantile plural, which differs from that of royalty in being used every day.

"The truth is, we are not very busy just at this time of the year," he said.

"That's very kind of you, Mr. Logotheti," said Van Torp, answering the latter, "but I'm not really in a hurry, thank you."

The stress he laid on the word "really" might have led one to the conclusion that he was pretending to be, but was not. He sat down deliberately at a little distance, took off his hat, and looked at the gem on the counter.

"I don't know anything about such things, of course," he said in a tone of reflection, "but I should think that was quite a nice ruby."

Again Mr. Pinney smiled benignly, for Mr. Van Torp had dealt with him for years.

"It's a very fine stone, indeed, sir," he said, and then turned to Logotheti again. "I think we can undertake to cut it for you in London," he said. "I will weigh it and give you a careful estimate."

As a matter of fact, before Van Torp entered, Logotheti had got so far as the question of setting the gem for a lady's ring, but Mr. Pinney, like all the great jewelers, was as discreet and tactful as a professional diplomatist. How could he be sure that one customer might like another to know about a ring ordered for a lady? If Logotheti preferred secrecy, he would only have to assent and go away, as if leaving the ruby to be cut, and he could look in again when it was convenient; and this was what he at once decided to do.

"I think you're right, Mr. Pinney," he said. "I shall leave it in your hands. That's really all," he added, turning to Mr. Van Trop.

"Really? My business won't take long either, and we'll go together, if you like, and have a little chat. I only came to get another of those extra large collarstuds you make for me, Mr. Pinney. Have you got another?"

"We always keep them in stock for your convenience, sir," answered the famous jeweler, opening a special little drawer behind the counter and producing a very small morocco case.

Mr. Van Torp did not even open it, and had already laid down the money, for he knew precisely what it cost.

"Thanks," he said. "You're always so obliging about little things, Mr. Pinney."

"Thank you, sir. We do our best. Good-morning, sir, good-morning."

The two millionaires went out together. Two well-dressed men stood aside to let them pass and then entered the shop.

"Which way?" asked Logotheti.

"Your way," answered the American. "I've nothing to do."

"Nor have I," laughed the Greek. "Nothing in the world! What can anybody find to do in London at this time of year?"

"I'm sure I don't know," echoed Van Torp, pleasantly. "I supposed you were on the continent somewhere."

"And I thought you were in America, and so, of course, we meet at old Pinney's in London!"

"Really! Did you think I was in America? Your friend, the heathen girl in boy's clothes, brought me your card this morning. I supposed you knew I was here."

"No, but I thought you might be, within six months, and I gave her several cards for people I know. So she found you out! She's a born ferret—she would find anything. Did you buy anything of her?"

"No. I'm not buying rubies to-day. Much obliged for sending her, all the same. You take an interest in her, I suppose, Mr. Logotheti? Is that so?"

"I?" Logotheti laughed a little. "No, indeed! Those days were long ago. I'm engaged to be married."

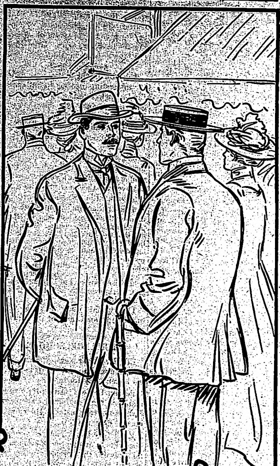
"By the bye, yes. I'd heard that, and I meant to congratulate you. I do now, anyway. When is it to be? Settled that yet?"

"Some time in October, I think. So you guessed that Barak is a girl."

"Yes, that's right. I guessed she was. Do you know anything about her?"

Logotheti told his companion the story of the ruby mine, substantially as it was narrated at the beginning of this tale, not dreaming that Van Torp had perhaps met and talked with the man who had played so large a part in it, and to find whom Baraka had traversed many dangers and overcome many difficulties.

"It all sounds like the Arabian Nights," said Mr. Van Torp as if he found it hard to believe.



"Where's She Hiding from You?"

"Exactly," assented Logotheti. "And, oddly enough, the first of those stories is about Samarkand, which is not so far from Baraka's native village. It seems to have taken the girl about a year to find her way to Constantinople, and when she got there she naturally supposed that it was the capital of the world, and that her man, being very great and very rich, thanks to her, must of course live there. So she searched Stamboul and Pera for him, during seven or eight months. She lived in the house of a good old Persian merchant, under the protection of his wife, and learned that there was a world called Europe where her man might be living, and cities called Paris and London, where people pay fabulous prices for precious stones. Persian merchants are generally well-educated men, you know. At last she made up her mind to dress like a man, she picked up an honest Turkish man-servant who had been all over Europe with a diplomatist and could speak some French and English as well as Tartar, she got a letter of recommendation to me from a Greek banker, through the Persian who did business with him, joined some Greeks who were coming to Marseilles by sea, and here she is. Now you know as much as I do. She is perfectly fearless, and as much more sure of herself than any man ever was, as some young women can be in this queer world. Of course, she'll never find the brute who thought he was leaving her to be murdered by her relations, but if she ever did, she would either marry him or cut his throat."

"Nice, amiable kind of girl," remarked Mr. Van Torp, who remembered her behaviour when he had refused her proffered gift. "That's very interesting, Mr. Logotheti. How long do you count on being in London this time? Three or four days, maybe?"

"I dare say. No longer, I fancy."

"Why don't you come and take dinner with me some night?" asked the American. "Day after to-morrow, perhaps. I'd be pleased to have you."

"Thank you very much," Logotheti answered. "Since you ask me, I see no reason why I should not dine with you, if you want me."

They agreed upon the place and hour, and each suddenly remembered an engagement.

"By the way," said Mr. Van Torp, without apparent interest, "I hope Mme. Cordova is quite well? Where's she hiding from you?"

"Just now the hiding-place is Bayreuth. She's gone there with Mrs. Rushmore to hear 'Parsifal.' I believe I'm not musical enough for that, so I'm roving till it's over. That's my personal history at this moment. And Miss Donne is quite well, I believe, thank you."

"I notice you call her Miss Donne when you speak of her," said Van Torp. "Excuse me if I made a mistake just now. I've always called her Mme. Cordova."

"It doesn't matter at all," answered Logotheti, carelessly, "but I believe she prefers to be called by her own name amongst friends. Good-by till day after to-morrow, then."

"At half after eight."

"All right—half-past—I shall remember."

But at two o'clock, on the next day but one, Logotheti received a note brought by hand, in which Mr. Van Torp said that to his great regret he had been called away suddenly, and hoped that Logotheti would forgive him, as the matter was of such urgent importance that he would have already left London when the note was received.

This was more than true, if possible, for the writer had left town two days earlier, very soon after he had parted from Logotheti in Pall Mall, although the note had not been delivered till 48 hours later.

CHAPTER V.

Mr. Van Torp knew no more about Bayreuth than about Samarkand, beyond the fact that at certain stated times performances of Wagner's operas were given there with as much solemnity as great religious festivals, and that musical people spoke of the Bayreuth season in a curiously reverent manner. He would have been much surprised if any one had told him that he often whistled fragments of "Parsifal" to himself and liked the sound of them; for he had a natural ear and a good memory, and had whistled remarkably well when he was a boy.

The truth about this seemingly impossible circumstance was really very simple. In what he called his cow-punching days, he had been for six months in company with two young men who used to whistle softly together by the hour beside the camp fire, and none of the other "boys" had ever heard the strange tunes they seemed to like best, but Van Torp had caught and remembered many fragments, almost unconsciously, and he whistled them to himself because they gave him a sensation which no "real music" ever did. Extraordinary natures, like his, are often endowed with unnoticed gifts and tastes quite unlike those of most people. No one knew anything about the young men who whistled Wagner; the "Lost Legion" hides many secrets, and the two were not popular with the rest, though they knew their business and did their work fairly well. One of them was afterwards said to have been killed in a shooting affray and the other had disappeared about the same time, no one knew how, or cared, though Mr. Van Torp thought he had recognized him once many years later. They were neither Americans nor Englishmen, though they both spoke English well, and never were heard to use any other language.

GOOD WORK IS LOVED WORK

And Therein One Should Find the Contentment That Is Chief Part of Life.

If a man doesn't love his work, he had better get something else to do. But the trouble is that such people will hardly love any kind of work. The trouble is in them. They lack intelligence. If they knew enough to know good work, they would soon learn to love it. The manual-training scheme has this in view—to surround the job a man is doing with such intelligence and taste as will make it attractive to him.

"The man who is in love with his job gets more contentment out of life than any other," says Brander Matthews; and he gets a great part of his contentment in doing his work right. No man can love his work who shirks. No man can be contented who is dishonest about his work. This is shirking or doing it negligently. So these things always go together—honest work, contentment and love of the job.

Slow Recovery.

"Is the editor out?" asked a visitor to the office of the Ridgeville Banner.

"Yes, sir," answered the editor's small assistant. "He's gone out to put away a jug of licker left by a subscriber."

"Do you think it will take him long to put it away?"

"Naw, sir, it won't take him long ter put it away, but after that he won't be able ter do nuthin' fur a week."

In southern Tunis lies an extensive salt marsh desert called the Shott Jerid, of which the Arabs stand in terror, for many a caravan has been lost in the salt incrusted morass, which, according to De Lesseps is as much as 1,200 feet deep in places. This region has been crossed for the first time in a small automobile by a woman, Myriam Harry, a well-known French novelist.

Verdict Nowhere In Sight

Colored Jurymen Had Done Their Best But Thing Sought For Was Not in Evidence.

A lawyer from New Orleans tells the story about a jury trail in a little obscure village somewhere in Louisiana. "Of course, strange as it may seem, the jury in this trial was made up wholly of negroes [illegible]

"When the evidence [illegible] the prosecuting [illegible] of course, had submitted the case without argument—the accused, fortunately, had no counsel—the judge, also a white man, ordered the jury, which could not agree in the box, to retire to an adjoining room and find a verdict. [illegible]

"The jury retired. At last the judge could stand it no longer and went in person to the room to see what was delaying the verdict [illegible] amazed. He did not know whether the whole jury had gone crazy or what was the matter.

No Old Maids.

"We'd have no old maids if we took a lesson from the ancient Babylonians," a spinster said. "In Babylon unmarried women were graded by the state according to their looks. For a beautiful young wife the state demanded a large number of gold pieces; a less desirable wife cost a smaller number of gold pieces, and [illegible] ried ugliness a fortune came to you. Hence all was happiness in Babylon, and old maids were unknown."

Sam Fullerton has at last discovered that it pays to be loyal to his friends. But Sam couldn't be if he tried.

Morgan says he purchased the Equitable Life for the benefit of the policy holders. And we didn't know the millenium was in sight.

It is suspected that Governor Eberhart's advocacy of peace has special refereuce to the Republican party in Minnesota. It might be well to try out the doctrine on the next convention.

It will interest Minnesota people generally to know that John S. McLain, the builder of the Minneapolis Journal, is in editioral charge of the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.

Bob Dunn objects to candidacy of Joe Sheehy for state treasurer on the ground that the Republican state ticket cannot stand two Irishmen. Looks as though Bob had a son of Erin in mind for governor.

Twenty-nine young lives were sacrificed during the football season just ended, and twenty more young men were dangerously injured or permanently crippled. It would seem that the great American sport has not been brutalized.

Frank Day has received about fifty requests for No. 1 of the de-luxe edition of the life of Gov. Johnson. About forty-nine of the applicants will be dissapointed, as it is not the intention to have more than one No. 1.

A. W. Sheets, editor of the Long Prairie Argus and one of oldest and ablest newspaper editors of the state, has answered the final roll call. He was clean, loyal, aggressive and honest, and his death will be a personal bereavement to the members of the fraternity.

The Ninth district has two candidates for state treasurer, Albert Kaiser of Bagley and G. H. Mattson of Roseau. No other person from this district has been mentioned for a state office except A. B. Cole who is suggested for lieutenant governor.

The monthly bulletin of the state insurance department says fire losses in Minnesota for the month of September were $210,000 as compared with $295,000 in the same month last year. The losses in the United States amounted to $11,358,000 as compared with $15,580,000 in October, 1908.

An exchange says, "wearing of diamonds is no evidence of wealth. If you are a person of small means nobody will think that the diamonds you wear are genuine stones, while if people know you have plenty of money you can make a paste stone pass for a diamond just as well as the real thing."

An increase in the number of the state banks in Minnesota is shown in a statement made public by Bank Examiner John B. Galarnault. In one year, according to he comparisons made, the number of banks has grown from 616 to 646, and the resources and liabilities from over $97,000,000 to over $103,000,000. Two years ago there were five private banks; now there are none. A comparison with 1907 shows even greater growth.

Even though Bro Gordon of the Browns Valley Tribune persists in putting a "d" in governor Eberhart's name, he is always ready with an apt paragraph on current events. In reference to a recent discussion he says: "The St Peter Free Press and Red Lake Falls Gazette are discussing the question, 'is Minnesota a Republican state?' That matter will be settled next November for a couple of years at least. For the past five years Minnesota has been a Johnson state."

The Northfield News has made the interesting discovery that John Lind is ineligible as a candidate for governor because of a law passed by legislature of 1907 depriving regents of the university of holding any other office during the term for which they are appointed. This would be important if true, but fortunately for Mr. Lind and the people generally the legislature cannot override the constitution of the commonwealth. Section 7 of article 7 of this palladium of our liberties reads: "Every person who by the provisions of this article shall be entitled to vote at any election shall be eligible to any office which is now or hereafter shall be elective by the people in the district wherein he shall have resided thirty days previous to such election, except as otherwise provided in this constitution or the constitution of the United States."

This would seem to settle the question beyond cavil or peradventure.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Elk River Star News: If harmony means abandonment of principle, we haven't any for it.

Roseau Region: One of the main planks in the Republican state platform next year must be Harmony, born of love, not fear.

Rush City Post: There is an ominous silence among the gubernatorial aspirants that predicts either a violent storm or a peaceful calm. The harmonizers who have so far appeared in the political arena have not met with an enthusiasm that borders success. Harmony means a pacification of all the discordant elements. No use for a clique to try it.

Fergus Falls Free Press: Certain state papers, notably Dunn's Princeton Union and the St. Cloud Journal-Press, are opening up strong on Governor Eberhart. Evidently Republican harmony, that beautiful bird is going to fly past Minnesota next year, too.

Warren Register: At the present time it does not appear that Governor Eberhart can secure the nomination for governor next year without a fight, and a hard if not bitter one. Both the Princeton Union and the St. Cloud Journal-Press, one Bob Dunn's paper and the other one of Collins' mainstays in the 1904 fight, do not seem to be willing to stand for Eberhart at all; while the Fergus Falls Journal (Elmer E. Adams) suggests that Eberhart's senate committee appointments made as lieutenant governor, ought not soon to be forgotten. The opposition gleefully refers to these outbursts as "echoes of harmony."

Rochester Bulletin: Governor Eberhart advocates international peace. If that could be brought about right away it would undoubtedly benefit the Republican party in Minnesota.

Pointed Paragraphs.

Chicago News: There are some big surprises ahead of the young man who thinks he understands women.

Some men never realize how very valuable they are until they are sued for breach of promise.

During the courtship a girl dislikes meekness in a man, but after marriage she is apt to demand it.

A woman manages to derive a lot of pleasure from bargain sales by purchasing something she doesn't need.

Occasionally a good woman lifts a man from the gutter, but more often the jobies turned over to the policeman.

When a girl attends a wedding or a funeral, she always wonders if people will look as solomn when her turn comes.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: It isn't so much that we love life; it's that we hate death.

A red-headed widow is a very lucky thing for her first husband.

A pretty girl can have the use of all the wisdom she needs in the men she can capture.

If we put into doing something for our friends half the time we put into trying to get even with our enemies this would be a grand world.

SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl St., New York

A GENERAL SUMMARY OF STATE AFFAIRS

St. Paul, Dec. 21.—If one is to believe the news sent out by the railroads, the situation in regard to the switchmen's strike from their point of view is improving daily. If, on the other hand, the switchmen are to be credited, freights are still tied up. The news which reaches here from country towns is that there is a decided shortage of Christmas supplies; coal especially being needed, in many instances to the point of famine.

The Labor Department Discredited.

That matter has at length forced itself upon the attention of the governor. Singularly enough he shows an indisposition to take advantage of the information that the labor department, which through its inspectors has, since the inception of the strike, been active in accumulating. The department from the first has had its men in the railroad yards. They are in a position to know what is going on. They have been selected because of their familiarity with freight movements. But the state builders' exchange has passed resolution condemning Mr. McEwen, the head of the department, for sympathy with the strikers. The governor, because of this, appears to have assumed that any information emanating from the labor department must necessarily be biased.

Seeking Light.

He has therefore sought information from the railroad and warehouse commissioners. This commission has been making an independent investigation of its own. It covers the freight movements not only in St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth but at all points in Minnesota and generally throughout the northwest. Messrs. Mills, Staples and Elmquist are assumed to be disinterested; to lean neither to the one side or to the other. The governor's attitude will therefore depend on the information they submit. If their report shows that, notwithstanding the strike, progress is being made toward a normal movement of traffic, the governor will probably leave well enough alone. If, on the other hand, the report indicates a general disorganization of transportation, he may be expected to suggest arbitration in the interest of shippers and consumers.

Can't Give Orders.

Unfortunately the laws of the state do not invest the governor with any authority in the matter. He can only exercise a moral influence. There is talk of his "insisting" on a conference between the railroads and the strikers, and of demanding that arbitration be employed to end the strike. He cannot insist nor demand. The most he can do is to suggest. There is nothing to compel either railroads or strikers to pay any attention to his suggestions. While it is important that traffic should be resumed, industrial peace purchased at the expense of sacrificing the rights of workingmen, whose only offensive weapon is the strike, would be dearly bought.

The Department Responsible.

Recent developments indicate that I did the governor no more than justice when last week I assumed that the talk of executive interference with the duties of the game and fish commission was unauthorized. The commission met last week. It took up a matter which has been under consideration for some months, namely, whether S. F. Fullerton as an official of the board had not outlived his usefulness, and whether the good of the service did not demand that he sever his connection with it. The decision was unanimous that he should be retired. I am not at liberty to detail the circumstances and to recite the evidence on which this decision was based. It is enough to say that political considerations did not in any way influence the action of the board. Mr. Fullerton may or may not have plotted against his superiors. However that may be it had nothing to do with his dismissal. That was concerned solely with the manner of his discharge of his official duties. When it was said he was discharged "for the good of the service" that was exactly what was meant.

The Governor Declines to Interfere.

The board, having reached a decision, promptly advised the governor that the position occupied by Mr. Fullerton was vacant. What took place at the conference between the governor and the members of the board is not exactly known; but it is not betraying confidence to say that the governor at once recognized that the board acted within its legal rights, and showed no disposition whatever either to criticise its course in dispensing with Mr. Fullerton's services or to dictate who should be named as his successor. He made it quite plain that he had no disposition to interfere with the board's administration of the affairs of the department or to dictate appointments to it.

Candidates for Vacancies.

Nothing more will probably be done until after the first of the year, when the term of Carlos Avery of Hutchinson and Mr. Grill of Sherburne expire. Their successors will be named by the governor. He has given no indication of what appointments he will make, but it has been assumed that he will yield so far to party pressure as to appoint Republicans to succeed the gentlemen I have mentioned. The most prominent candidates for the places are H. H. Dunn of Fairmont, C. S. Benson of St. Cloud, and J. F. McGuire of Crookston. If the governor appoints two Republicans to the board, the majority will still remain Democratic. If we are to judge from the governor's declining to inter-

S.S.S. CURES OLD SORES

Every old sore is an infected spot on the flesh, kept open by constant drainage of impure blood into the place. One of the principal constituents of blood is plasma, a healing property. Where the circulation is pure this element of the blood, which is of a glutinous or sticky nature, performs the necessary work in healing all sores, wounds and lacerations. It does this by sticking or joining the parts together, while nature causes a knitting of the tissues and solidifies the place. This healing property is frequently destroyed by impure accumulations in the blood, and this vital fluid not only loses its power to heal, but becomes a source of irritation and disease to any open sore or ulcer on the body. Constantly it discharges its morbid matters into the place, and gradually it causes the infection to spread, and the sore enlarges. The morbid matter in the blood comes from different causes. A long spell of debilitating sickness, which breeds disease germs in the system, the retention of the refuse matters of the body because of a sluggish condition of the eliminative members, a continued malarial state of the system, inherited bad blood, etc., are usually responsible.

CURED OF EATING SORE.

Dear Sirs:—I was suffering greatly from a sore on my left breast, which had begun to eat, and at times deep, shooting pains would pass through it, and the ulcer was discharging yellow and rather offensive matter. I consulted physicians, but their treatment did not benefit me very much. My condition seemed hopeless, and I had almost despaired of getting well. I knew that the disease was hereditary in my case, as an only sister, my mother and two of her sisters had died of Cancer of the breast. After I had finished the first bottle of S. S. S. I felt some better, so continued it until I was cured.

MRS. JAMES CASSELL,
Belton, Mo.

S. S. S. heals sores and ulcers in the very simplest way. It just goes into the circulation, and removes the impurities and polluted matter that are the means of keeping the ulcer open; then the sore is bound to heal. S.S.S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and not only does it cleanse the circulation, but it adds every necessary property to it to promote good health. It is of the very greatest tonic value, and those who have been weakened and run down by the constitutional drainage of an old sore will find it the very remedy needed. S.S.S. does not simply cause a scab to come over an old sore, but beginning at the bottom it heals the place permanently by building new tissue and filling in the place with firm, healthy flesh. Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a stupefying poison. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—a little late though—Congress says "Put it on the label, if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good!! Hereafter for this very reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

It isn't so difficult to strengthen a weak stomach if one goes at it correctly. And this is true of the Heart and Kidneys. The old fashioned way of dosing the stomach or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is surely wrong. Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. Go to the weak or ailing nerves of these organs, said he. Each inside organ has its controlling or inside nerve. When these nerves fail, then those organs must surely falter. This vital truth is leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. [illegible]

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

A mortgage with power of sale was made by Alfred Helling (a bachelor) to J. M. Wagner, dated the 7th day of June 1901, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Red Lake County, Minnesota, on the 12th day of November A. D. 1902, at one o'clock and ten minutes P. M., in Book 36 of Mortgages on page 619 thereof, which said mortgage was thereafter assigned by the said J. M. Wagner to Earle F. Andrus, by an instrument of assignment, dated the 18th day of May, 1903, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said Red Lake County, Minnesota, on the 4th day of November A. D. 1909, at eleven o'clock A. M., in Book 8 of Mortgages on page 517.

Default has been made in the conditions, agreements and covenants of said mortgage, and there is claimed to be due and is due the subscriber at the date of this notice upon the said mortgage, the sum of One hundred and eleven Dollars and two cents.

Now, Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises described therein and hereinafter described, to satisfy the amount which shall at the date of said sale be due on said mortgage together with the costs and expenses of said sale, as allowed by law, the taxes, if any paid by the subscriber, and the further sum of Twenty-five Dollars, which is a reasonable attorney's fee for the foreclosure of said mortgage and is agreed to be paid in such event.

Said sale will be made at the main front entrance to the Court House in the city of Red Lake Falls, Red Lake County, Minnesota, on Monday the 3rd day of January 1910, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash.

The premises described in said mortgage and so to be sold are situated in the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, and are known and described as follows:—

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That on the eighth day of January, 1910, at three o'clock p. m., at the office of the County Auditor at the Court House in the city of Red Lake Falls, in said Red Lake County, I will sell the jobs of digging and repairing Thief River Falls Drainage Ditch No. 1 of Red Lake county, ordered repaired by the Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake County, State of Minnesota, by their order bearing date November 27th, 1909, viz: for the work as one job, and also for one or more sections of 100 feet each, and also for one or more of the repairing jobs, each of said sections to be known and numbered by stakes as shown by the report of the engineer in said matter, commencing at the one including the outlet and from thence successively up stream as follows:

Station "0" to Station "138" both inclusive, Station "151" to Station "253" same being for the repairing of the main ditch and Station "0" to Station "53" both inclusive being for the repairing of the branch ditch, the earth removed to be placed along the side of the ditch in the time and manner prescribed in the plans, profile, maps and specifications of the civil engineer in charge, to the lowest responsible bidder or bidders, and that the bids are invited for said work: said work to be completed within the time required, and in the manner specified, in said engineer's report.

As no bid will be entertained which exceeds more than thirty (30) per cent over and above the estimate cost of the repairing in any case, as stated in said order and the successful bidder will be required to give a satisfactory bond, to be approved by the auditor of said county, with two freehold sureties for the faithful performance and fulfillment of this contract, and to pay all damages that may accrue by reason of his failure to complete the job within the time required in the contract, the approximate amount of work to be done in the repairing of such ditch is as follows: Engineers estimated cost of repairing $1668.40—the estimated total cost of the work is $1918.40-100 Dollars. All bids must be accompanied by a certified check payable to the auditor of said county, for not less than ten per cent of the amount of each bid.

The right to reject any and all bids is hereby reserved.

Dated December 4th, 1909.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

A mortgage with power of sale was made by Marie Peterson (a single woman) to J. M. Wagner, dated the 27th day of May 1901, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Red Lake County Minnesota on the 24th day of December A. D. 1901, at four o'clock P. M., in Book 21 of Mortgages on page 538 thereof, which said mortgage was thereafter assigned by the said J. M. Wagner to Earle F. Andrus, by an instrument of assignment, dated the 18th day of May 1903, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said Red Lake County, Minnesota, on the 4th day of November A. D. 1909, at eleven o'clock A. M. in Book 8 of Mortgages on page 516.

Default has been made in the conditions, agreements and covenants of said mortgage, and there is claimed to be due and is due the subscriber at the date of this notice upon the said mortgage the sum of One hundred and eleven Dollars and two cents.

Now, Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises described therein and hereinafter described, to satisfy the amount which shall at the date of said sale be due on said mortgage, together with the costs and expenses of said sale as allowed by law, the taxes, if any, paid by the subscriber, and the further sum of Twenty-five Dollars, which is a reasonable attorney's fee for the foreclosure of said mortgage, and is agreed to be paid in such event.

Said sale will be made at the Main Front Entrance to the Court House in the city of Red Lake Falls, Red Lake County, Minnesota, on Monday the 3rd day of January, 1910, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash.

The premises described in said mortgage and so to be sold are situated in the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, and are known and described as follows:—

Southwest Quarter (SW¼) of Section No. 26, in Township No. 150 North of Range No. 44, West of 5th P. M.

Dated November 18th, 1909.

The State of Minnesota to L. P. Berthon and Mrs. L. P. Berthon, Defendants.

You are hereby summoned to be and appear before the undersigned, one of the Justices of the Peace in and for said county, on the [illegible] day of December, 1909, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at my office, in the City of Red Lake Falls in said county, to answer to the complaint of the Red Lake Falls Electric Light Company (a corporation) in a civil action, wherein the plaintiff claims the sum of thirty-six and 77-100 dollars ($36.77) with interest thereon from the [illegible] day of September, 1909, at the rate of six per cent per annum. Should you fail to appear at the time and place aforesaid, judgment will be rendered against you upon the evidence adduced by said Red Lake Falls Electric Light Company for such sum as it shall show itself entitled to, [illegible]

General Summary State Affairs

fere with the board's selection of a successor to Mr. Fullerton, it is fair to assume that he will not impose a personal choice of executive agent on the board, but leave its members free to make that selection which it considers in the public interest. It is only natural to presume that the board would select as its executive agent a man familiar with the work of the game and fish commission in whose capacity they have warrant for confidence.

After a Trust Buster.

I have been informed by a gentleman in a position to know that the officials of the Standard Oil company have been greatly impressed with the capacity shown by Frank Kellogg in conducting the prosecution of that corporation on behalf of the department of justice. While up to the present time no definite offer has been made to the Minnesota attorney it can be stated with authority that the tentative suggestion has been conveyed to him in a round-about way that if he cares to accept legal employment from the Standard Oil Company when his present engagements leave him at liberty to do so, a position will be made for him at any salary he may name. The resources of the Standard Oil company are so great and its interests so important that it is regarded by its managers as the interest of true economy to engage the highest order of legal talent the country affords. I did not learn what consideration Mr. Kellogg gave to the flattering overtures made him.

Building up a Machine.

There is unusual activity among the republicans of the First district in which Mr. Tawney's friends are taking a leading part. The program looks to party solidarity and the elimination of factional and personal contests at the primaries. Steele county appears to be taking the lead under the manipulation of well known local leaders who have hitherto been indentified with Mr. Tawney's campaigns. A meeting of the faithful was held there a short time ago when a program was mapped. A general public meeting which all the Republicans in the county will be asked to attend is slated for Dec. 29th. It is understood that Governor Eberhart has consented to make an address in the interest of peace and harmony.

The Party Whip.

The movement contemplates a complete and effective Republican precinct organization in every county in the district. A man has been in the field for some time working this up. Insurgents are to be won over if possible to support the organization. If they can't be won over they will be disciplined. It has already been suggested here and there to representative men that they have been talking too much or writing too much, and they have been advised that if they hope to occupy responsible places in the party's councils, as those of delegates to county, district, or state conventions that it will be good policy on their part to be more circumspect. The man at the helm down there knows his business, and there is every indicaeion that he is doing effective work.

A Man With Views.

William E. Lee, who was in town last week and is a prospective candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, thinks that the Republican convention at its next meeting should take a stand:

1.—On the tariff;

2.—On ship subsidies;

3.—On the central bank proposition;

4.—On the temperance question;

5.—On the question of taxation.

This is a pleasing relief from the monotany. Other Republican candidates are preparing to fight battles on questions on which men of all parties are agreed and exercise a great deed of ingenuity in dodging questions on which there is a difference of opinion.

Where Are They At.

Incidentally, it would interest people who arn't tied down to the Republican party to know where the local organization really is on the tariff, on ship subsidy and on the central bank proposition. We know where Taft is. Where are the local leaders? I beg leave to suggest that Col. William Rich and Attorey General Simpson be asked to speak up.

Tickling, tight Coughs, can be surely and quickly loosened with a prescription druggists are dispensing everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is so very, very different than common cough medicines. No opium, no chloroform, absolutely nothing harsh or unsafe. The tender leaves of a harmless, lung healing mountainous shrub give the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. Those leaves have the power to calm the most distressing Cough, and to soothe and heal the most sensitive bronchial membrane. Mothers should, for safety's sake alone, always demand Dr. Shoop's. The old fashioned way of dosing a weak stomach, or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is all wrong. Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. This is why his prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—is directed entirely to the cause of these ailments—the weak inside or controlling nerves. It isn't so difficult, says Dr. Shoop, to strengthen a weak Stomach, Heart or Kidneys, if one goes at it correctly. Each inside organ has its controlling or inside nerve. When these nerves fail, then those organs must surely falter. These vital truths are leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Test it a few days, and see! Improvement will promptly and surely follow. Sold by all dealers.

In lying about the circulation of the weekly Kicker last week we made an error. We gave it as 3,254,327. It should have been exactly 4,000,000. We hope our readers will excuse us and accept the apology.

If ex-Judge Barnaby entered our editorial rooms one day last week and fired six shots at us, as he claims, all we can say is that we did not know it. There are days when we are absentminded and pay little attention to things of earth, and this was probably one of them. It wasn't fair of the judge to catch us on an off day.

A Pertinent Query.

Freddy suddenly stopped playing with his blocks and gazed thoughtfully across the room. After a moment's contemplation he turned to his father. "Papa," he began, "why haven't I ever seen any little boy policemen?"—Lippincott's Magazine.

Coach—Haven't you got the nerve to slide harder than that?

Slider (brushing himself)—Sure; I'm full of sand.—Cornell Widow.

Of course Thanksgiving doesn't mean
Just sport for every one.
Our parson has to preach that day,
And that can't be much fun.

And mother has to sup'rintend
The roasting of the turk,
While father sharpens carving knives.
This all means lots of work.

But, then, for me 'tis a dandy time.
I simply take my seat
At table when the dinner's on
An' eat an' eat an' eat!

A Man and His Room.

"Play cards with a man for an hour and you will know him better than if you had met him in the drawing room every evening for a year," says a German writer. But Sonia in the Paris Figaro suggests another character barometer. "A never failing test is the hotel room. The way a man arranges his room in a hotel shows whether he has been well reared, what his ideas of propriety are, whether his bump of order has been developed, whether he is methodical or slovenly, and one may even know by the way wearing apparel, ornaments and baggage are disposed of in a room which the occupant knows he will remain in only a few days whether he is thoroughly or superficially [illegible]

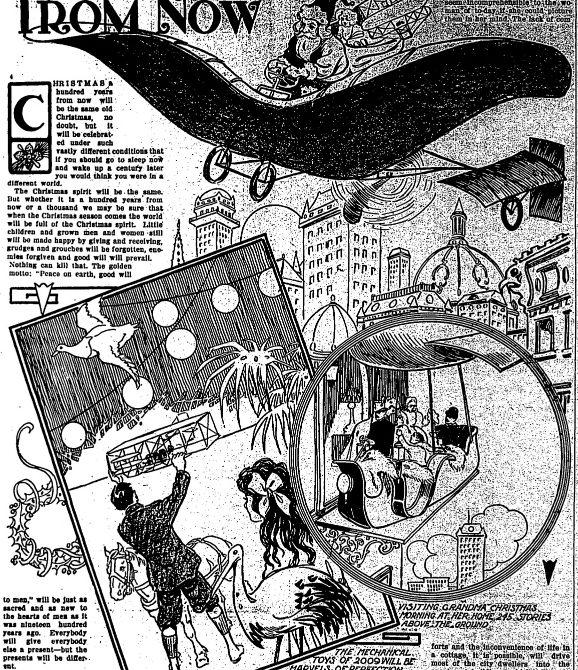
CHRISTMAS A HUNDRED YEARS FROM NOW



VISITING GRANDMA CHRISTMAS MORNING AT HER HOME 245 STORIES ABOVE THE GROUND

THE MECHANICAL TOYS OF 2009 WILL BE MARVELS OF PERFECTION

CHRISTMAS a hundred years from now will be the same old Christmas, no doubt, but it will be celebrated under such vastly different conditions that if you should go to sleep now and wake up a century later you would think you were in a different world.

The Christmas spirit will be the same. But whether it is a hundred years from now or a thousand we may be sure that when the Christmas season comes the world will be full of the Christmas spirit. Little children and grown men and women still will be made happy by giving and receiving, grudges and grouches will be forgotten, enemies forgiven and good will will prevail. Nothing can kill that. The golden motto: "Peace on earth, good will to men," will be just as sacred and as new to the hearts of men as it was nineteen hundred years ago. Everybody will give everybody else a present—but the presents will be different.

Little Johnny will not covet a railroad train. Real cars on a real track, pulled by a real locomotive that makes smoke will not seem a wonderful thing to him, as it does to the little Johnny of to-day. The lad of the next century will want a model of the latest airship in his Christmas stocking. He will expect a working model, too—one that will sail through the fiat like a live bird, and perhaps carry his own weight.

Within the last hundred years steam and electricity have been developed and it is entirely reasonable to imagine that within the coming century men will travel through the air as commonly as they now travel over the land. The automobile, the trolley car, the railroad train, and the horse as a draft animal—all will be gone. Men will use the earth, as the birds do, for a resting place for their homes and the principal source of food supply; but when they want to move from one place to another, they will mount into the ether, even as the birds do, and flay swiftly and safely to their destination.

It is probable that there will not be a wheeled vehicle of any kind on the streets of a great city on Christmas day, in the year 2009. Our tunnel system will have developed until the vast subterranean net work of bores, chutes and pneumatic tubes will carry on the heavy traffic of the city without noise or confusion. The streets will be given up to pedestrians—to those who walk for pleasure or wish to travel short distances. The sidewalk as it is now will be no more, but the entire width of the street will be given up to foot passengers. There will be neither car tracks nor moving vehicles to annoy.

The suburbanite who does not fly to work in 2009 will be shot through a pneumatic tube, traveling the five, ten, or fifty miles of distance in a space of time that may be only a few seconds, and certainly cannot be more than a few minutes. It may be that few people will walk anywhere in the year 2009. When man learns to fly he will scorn walking as too slow a means of progress. Perhaps our great-great-grandchildren, who no doubt will live in immense apartment buildings towering a half mile from the ground, may go for weeks at a time without setting foot to the earth.

With the passing of the Christmas sleigh there will be no longer any need for reindeers for Santa Claus. He, too, will travel by airship, and while the old Santa Claus will be a myth, the new Santa Claus will be as real as the bewhiskered and befurred boys who now entertain the children in the department stores.

It is not hard to imagine that the big stores will develop the Santa Claus idea to the point that Christmas purchases will be delivered on Christmas eve by an airship driver made up to impersonate Santa Claus. A hundred years from now, if you want to avoid the rush and do your Christmas shopping in your own apartments, the scientists probably will have provided for you a combination of telescope and moving picture machine by means of which you can connect your room with the toy department and see the display by wire—or perhaps by wireless—and at the same time you get prices and leave your order with the clerk by telephone.

But perhaps the woman of 2009 will enjoy the mad rush of the shops as much as she does to-day during the holiday season, and then she will go to the big store and order her toys and presents. The store could deliver them through the pneumatic package tubes which will go to all parts of the city, but it will be more poetic to have them delivered by Santa Claus.

Christmas eve a score or a hundred Santa Clauses will set out from the various shops with their airships laden with Christmas gifts to be delivered at the various addresses. It will no longer be necessary to "deliver all goods in the rear" of the big apartment building, but whether you live on the twentieth or two hundred and twentieth story of the big house you will have your own private airship landing, and while the family is gathered at the door to receive Santa Claus the airship will settle on the landing and the cheerful "Merry Christmas" of the aeronaut will greet you as he hands in the packages.

The Christmas tree of a hundred years from now will be an electrical marvel. Festoons and wreaths of rainbow colored lights and "chasers" will scintillate from its green branches. But the presents that hang on it will be even more wonderful.

There will be dolls as large as the little girls who will receive them. There will be dolls that can walk and with the improved phonographic arrangements of another century there will be dolls that can talk and others that can sing beautiful songs. Some of them, no doubt, will be able to dance gracefully and to do tricks that would seem miraculous if performed by an automaton to-day.

The mechanical toys of 2009 will be marvels of perfection. The most imaginative man cannot possibly conceive of the new things that will be invented in the way of machinery, but it is safe to assume that the wireless transmission of power will be perfected. Wheels will spin without any visible motive power. Power may be taken from the sun's rays or wireless power stations may be operated by the waves, the waterfalls, or even the winds. Before the coal supply is exhausted the need for coal, either for warmth or power, will have passed away.

And whatever triumphs men make in the industrial world they impart to their games and recreation. So it is certain that the Teddy bear and the toy dog of the coming century will be mechanical marvels. The "Rover" dog that the little boy gets will be life size. He will prance about on his four furry legs and lie down and roll over at the bidding of his master.

Perhaps the most wonderful feature of all in our Christmas in 2009 will be the changed methods in our daily life. The housekeeping arrangements of that time would seem incomprehensible to the woman of to-day if she could picture them in her mind. The lack of comforts and the inconvenience of life in a cottage, it is possible, will drive most of the city dwellers into the apartment buildings, which will grow bigger and taller as the years pass until they will be literally "skyscrapers" within a century.

In one of these big buildings, while the machinery will be out of sight, domestic affairs will be so mechanical, even automatic, that you can get almost anything the family needs simply by turning on a switch or pressing a button.

The flat dweller of that distant day will not be bothered with servants or the servant problem. By pressing a button the Christmas dinner will come up noiselessly from the kitchen on the mechanical waiter or perhaps in a pneumatic tube.

After your Christmas dinner is over the dishes will disappear as silently and swiftly as you could wish. Some sort of mechanical dish washer in the kitchen will take care of them—or, what is more likely, they will be made of a cheap composition and will be destroyed by burning after they are used once. The antiseptic precautions of the modern surgeon will be common to the kitchens of the next century and hygiene will be a real science.

When you have eaten your Christmas dinner, if you want to go out for the evening you can press a button and an aerocab will come to the landing at your door. Or, if you prefer it, you may drop down the pneumatic elevator to some point 50 or 100 feet below the surface of the earth and be whirled through the pneumatic subway at a dizzy rate of speed to your destination. Only the speed will not make you dizzy. You will not be able to feel it. You may sit in your cushioned car, well lighted and warmed and ventilated by some process yet to be discovered, and before you realize it the miles will speed away and you step out to the opera or the play.

If you prefer to remain at your apartments the telautoscope attached to your telephone may be connected to any theater you desire, and you can sit in your easy chair and smoke while you see the play projected on the wall like the most perfect moving picture. All the stage settings will be there to make the play seem real, and the improved telephone will bring every shade and subtle inflection of the actor's voice to your ear.

It seems certain that this telautoscope arrangement—the exact word to describe it will be coined after the process is discovered—will be one of the triumphs of the coming century. It will enable you to see the person you are talking to over a telephone.

The flight of the coming airship probably will be so rapid that the business man and even the salaried worker, if he loves the country, can have a villa or a cottage at a great distance from the city and go to work in his own airship at slight cost.

On Christmas day in the good century to come this flight in the air will be the means of many family reunions that are impossible now. A few hours will take one to the most distant part of the country, and the practical cessation of business during the holiday week will leave all free to foregather with the loved ones and pay deferred visits.

The KITCHEN CABINET

OF ALL the myriad moods of mind
That through our souls come thronging
Which one is e'er so dear, so kind
So beautiful as longing?

But would we reach life's greatest scope
Which we are hourly wronging,
Our lives must climb from hope to hope
And realize our longing.

Table Don'ts.

Don't play with the silver during the meal.

Don't make a noise with the mouth while eating soup.

Don't fold the napkin when you are a guest for one meal, lay it at the left of the plate.

Don't talk about the good things you have had served you in other homes, "as comparisons are odious."

Don't talk with food in the mouth.

Don't (is it necessary to say it?) put the knife in your mouth.

Don't scrape a dish or tip it to get the last drop.

Don't use a knife with fish; use the fork for carving it.

Don't spread large pieces of bread, laying them on the cloth. Break off a small piece, butter it and convey it to the mouth.

Do be polite and that will be kind, for the old couplet says:

Politeness is to do and say
The kindest things in the kindest way.

The really kind person will never annoy another even if the doing may be something in itself admissable.

Some people think by excusing themselves or begging pardon, gives them the latitude to do anything which in their selfishness they desire, no matter how rude it may be.

Train the children to eat all wholesome food, so that they need never embarrass you, themselves or their hostess.

This is the season when waffles send up their fragrance to the chilly air and here is the best recipe for them that cannot be equaled:

Waffles.

Take one and one-fourth cupfuls of flour sifted with one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt. Beat two eggs, yolks and whites separately, add one-half teaspoonful of soda to one cupful of thick, sour milk, then add the beaten yolks and the flour, then three tablespoonfuls of melted butter and the whites of the eggs beaten stiff. Have the waffle iron hot, grease with a buttered brush, and serve the waffles crisp and brown.

ONE may live in a palace and yet not be a slave to the palace. Our home should be as beautiful as our taste and means can make it; but, like the nest yonder, it should simply serve its purpose, leaving us the time and means to get all the good out of the world that we can."—E. P. Roe.

Meats Not Often Served.

There are several parts of the animal which few people serve that are entirely wholesome and may be prepared in a most attractive manner, viz: brains, kidneys, tripe and oxtails.

Soak in cold water, remove all the red membrane. Put them into a pint of cold water with a tablespoonful of lemon juice or vinegar. Boil ten minutes, then plunge into cold water. Serve in drawn butter sauce with lemon and parsley or chopped onion added to a rich white sauce.

Lambs' Kidneys.

Split the kidneys in halves lengthwise, trim off all the fat and sinews. Cut into small pieces. Fry one onion in two tablespoonfuls of butter, add the kidneys and cook three minutes, add one tablespoonful of flour, one gill of stock or water, a gill of currant jelly, salt and pepper to taste. Just before serving add enough powdered assafoetida to make the amount the size of a small pea. Serve at once.

Tripe is the first stomach of the ox and is considered easy of digestion. Cut it in strips two inches long by one-half inch in width, having three cupfuls. Put in a pan and set in the oven to draw out the water.

Cook one tablespoonful of finely chopped onion in two tablespoonfuls of butter until slightly browned. Add the tripe, drained, and cook five minutes. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and finely chopped parsley.

Oxtail soup is considered a great delicacy.

Cut the oxtail in small pieces, wash, drain, sprinkle with salt, pepper, dredge with flour and fry in butter ten minutes. Add six cups of brown stock, one-half cupful each of carrot and turnip, cut in fancy shapes, one-half cup each of onion and celery, cut in small pieces, the vegetables are all parboiled before adding to the stock. Simmer the stock one hour before adding the vegetables, when they are soft add one-fourth of a cup of orange juice, one teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, and one teaspoonful of lemon juice.

SOUNDS LIKE A FAIRY TALE

THE FARMERS OF CENTRAL CANADA REAP WHEAT AND RICHES.

Up in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the provinces that compose Central Canada have such a quantity of land suitable for the growth of small grains, which grow so abundantly, and yield so handsomely, that no fear need be feared of a wheat famine on this Continent. The story reproduced below is only one of the hundreds of proofs that could be produced to show the results that may be obtained from cultivation of the lands in these provinces. Almost any section of the country will do as well.

With the country recently opened by the Grand Trunk Pacific, the latest of the great transcontinental lines to enter the field of the development of the Canadian West, there is afforded added ample opportunity to do as was done in the case cited below:

To buy a section of land, break it up and crop it, make $17,550 out of the yield and $10,880 out of the increase of value all within the short period of two years, was the record established by James Bailey, a well known farmer within a few miles of Regina. Mr. Bailey bought the 640 acres of land near Grand Coulee two years ago. He immediately prepared the whole section for crop and this year has 600 acres of wheat and 40 acres of oats. The wheat yielded 19,875 bushels, and the oats yielded 4,750 bushels. The whole of the grain has been marketed and Mr. Bailey is now worth $17,550 from the grain alone. He bought the land at $18 an acre, and the other day refused an offer of $35 an acre, just a $17 advance for the time of his purchase. The land cost $11,320 in the first instance. Here are the figures of the case.—Land cost, 640 acres, at $18, $11,320. Wheat yielded 19,875 bushels, at 84 cents a bushel, $16,695. Oats yielded 4,750 bushels at 28 cents a bushel, $855. Offered for land, 640 acres at $35 an acre, $22,400. Increase value of land, $10,880. Total earnings of crop, $17,550, together with increase in value of land a total of $28,540.

It is interesting to note the figures of the yield per acre. The wheat yielded 33⅓ bushels to the acre, and oats 118.7 bushels to the acre. The figures are a fair indication of the average throughout the district.

THEIR WEDDING JOURNEY.

"Waiter, when are you going to bring us that roast chicken?"

"Why, you've already eaten your dinner, sir!"

"Then bring me the check!"

"But you've already paid, sir!"

Detected.

The consul in London of a continental kingdom was informed by his government that one of his countrywomen, supposed to be living in Great Britain, had been left a million of money. After advertising without result, he applied to the police, and a smart young detective was set to work.

When a few weeks had gone by his chief asked him how he was going on.

"I've found the lady, sir."

"Good! Where is she?"

"At my place. I got married to her yesterday!"

The Exception.

In a home where the mother is somewhat aggressive and the father good-natured and peace-loving, a child's estimate of home conditions was tersely expressed the other day. While dressing, the mother paused in the act of putting on her shoes and said: "I certainly am easy on shoes, I have worn these for four months. I don't know what you would do, John, if I were not. I am easy on everything." The little girl looked up from her dolls and remarked: "Except father."—Success.

Now and Then.

He is a capitalist now in an Ohio town, but he was not always thus. He has progressed along various lines, and one mark of his progress is the open-back shirt, a comparatively modern invention. To this he is yet new, and recently commented upon it to a friend who was in his room while he was dressing.

"Look at me," he said, sticking his head through his shirt. "When I came to this town I hadn't a shirt to my back, and now—now, I haven't a back to my shirt."

WESTERN CANADA
What Governor Deneen, of Illinois, Says About It:
160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE
Governor Deneen, of Illinois, owns a section of land in Saskatchewan, Canada. He has said in an interview: "As an American I am delighted to see the remarkable progress of Western Canada. Our people are flocking across the boundary in thousands, and I have not yet met one who admitted he had made a mistake. They are all doing well. There is scarcely a community in the Middle or Western States that has not a representative in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta."
125 Million Bushels of Wheat in 1909
Western Canada field crops for 1909 will easily yield to the farmer $170,000,000.00 in cash. Free Homesteads of 160 acres, and pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. Railway and Land Companies have land for sale at reasonable prices. Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop. The Fountain Head of Life Is The Stomach
A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished.
DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and restorative nerve tonic. It makes men strong in body, active in mind and cool in judgement.
This "Discovery" is a pure, glyceric extract of American medical roots, absolutely free from alcohol and all injurious, habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients are printed on its wrappers. It has no relationship with secret nostrums. Its every ingredient is endorsed by the leaders in all the schools of medicine. Don't accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this time-proven remedy of KNOWN COMPOSITION. ASK YOUR NEIGHBORS. They must know of many cures made by it during past 40 years, right in your own neighborhood. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

WANTED IT FOR HIS HAIR

No Trouble at All for [illegible] to Account for the Carbolic Acid.

"I was on my way home one night," said the retired baritone, according to Illustrated Bits, "and the hour was late. As I turned a corner at a lonely spot a wild-eyed man stepped out in front of me. In his right hand he carried a pistol and in his left a gleaming knife. With a low, mocking laugh he thrust his burly form athwart my path, and said:

"'At last I have you in my power. I have sworn to kill the first man I met after 3 a. m. You are he—also it. Would you rather be shot or stabbed?'

"Immediately I saw I had to do with a madman. Quick thought was necessary. Right there and then my long training stood me well in hand. Taking a pint bottle of carbolic acid from my overcoat pocket, I remarked jovially:

"'Old scout, I greet thee as a friend. Kill me if thou wilt, but first let us drink success to the crime.'

"It made a hit with the bug. He grabbed the bottle and took a swallow like a stage hand. As he fell, writhing on the sidewalk I stepped over his body and continued on my way."

"How did you happen to have a bottle of carbolic acid with you?" asked the incredulous press agent.

"I was taking it home to put on my hair," answered the retired baritone.

AGONIZING ITCHING.

Eczema for a Year—Got No Relief Even at Skin Hospital—In Despair

Until Cuticura Cured Him.

"I was troubled with a severe itching and dry, scurfy skin on my ankles, feet, arms and scalp. Scratching made it worse. Thousands of small red pimples formed and these caused intense itching. I was advised to go to the hospital for diseases of the skin. I did so, the chief surgeon saying: 'I never saw such a bad case of eczema.' But I got little or no relief. Then I tried many so-called remedies, but I became so bad that I almost gave up in despair. After suffering agonies for twelve months, I was relieved of the almost unbearable itching after two or three applications of Cuticura Ointment. I continued its use, combined with Cuticura Soap and Pills, and I was completely cured. Henry Searle, Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 8 and 10, 1907."

Stated in Cold Figures.

It costs on an average about $354 to cure an incipient consumptive or to care for an advanced case of tuberculosis until death. If he is left in destitute circumstances without proper attention he will surely infect with his disease at least two other persons, and possibly more. Considering that the average life is worth to society in dollars and cents about $1,500, the net loss which would accrue to a community by not treating its poor consumptives in proper institutions would be, for each case, including those who are unnecessarily infected, at the very lowest figure, $4,350. On this basis, if the poor consumptives in the United States who are now sick were segregated from their families, and either kept in institutions until they died, or else cured of their disease, the saving to the country would be the enormous sum of $1,275,000,000.

HABIT'S CHAIN

Certain Habits Unconsciously Formed and Hard to Break.

An ingenious philosopher estimates that the amount of will power necessary to break a life-long habit would, if it could be transformed, lift a weight of many tons.

It sometimes requires a higher degree of heroism to break the chains of a pernicious habit than to lead a forlorn hope in a bloody battle. A lady writes from an Indiana town:

"From my earliest childhood I was a lover of coffee. Before I was out of my teens I was a miserable dyspeptic suffering terribly at times with my stomach. [illegible]

TRAPS CATCH MEN

Present Statutes in Pennsylvania Are Not Being Observed.

Accidents to Hunters in Keystone State May Lead to Enactment of Law Prohibiting Use of Any But Old-Fashioned Traps.

Williamsport, Pa.—It looks as if the steel bear trap, with its diabolical possibilities, would have to go. The hunters are up in arms over the dangerous devices. Several valuable dogs have already been caught in them and their hind legs broken, and one man in the Kettle Creek region of Potter county, who walked into an unprotected and practicaly unmarked trap, is now suffering from blood poisoning due to the ugly wound made by the jaws of the trap. Hunters says that if during the great rush of hunters in the woods in the 15-day deer season men are not trapped and wounded it will be a great wonder.

Men who have been in the deep woods where bear are wont to work report that the number of steel traps has increased 50 per cent. over former years, and that many of them are being set and maintained in utter disregard of the restrictions prescribed by the game laws. Many of the men who are engaging in the use of the traps do not even know the law, and others who seem to know that there is a prescribed way to set a trap and fortify other hunters against it carry out the precautions so indifferently that they are of little help.

Grant Hoover, a recognized deer and bear hunter, who is the owner of three traps himself, declares that he is ready any day to throw his traps away if the game authorities say so, as he sees in them a terrible menace to men and dogs, simply because those who set them pay no attention to the matter of fixing guards or danger notices. It is prescribed by law, he says, that an inclosure two feet high be maintained about a trap when it is in position and set, so that the hunter can discern it easily at a good distance, and not only save himself from coming in contact with it, but also guard the movements of his dog that it is also insured against accidents.

Two local bird hunters in the Gray's Run district recently were attracted to a thicket by the suspicious movements of one of their dogs, and on making an examination found a bear trap in position, though the stakes forming the inclosure were only four inches high, while there was no other notice visible except a three-inch blaze on a sapling, on which, in lead pencil were written the words: "Bear trap." The low stake inclosure ran back against a log, at which a part of a beef's head lay as bait. It was the meat that had aroused the dog, though, fortunately, the animal had not stepped into the inclosure, in which event he would surely have been caught, as the trap was without so much as its nose showing above the leaves.

The sentiment of the hunters in this section is that all traps except the old-fashioned log trap should be prohibited. The increase in the number of bears has caused an increase in the business of trapping, so that the woods are full of the steel-jawed and hidden traps, each one a menace to the safety of the hunter and to the life of his dog. There is some likelihood of trapping becoming so widely practiced that the bears will become scarce, thus destroying a variety of gunning that now promises to be among the best sport in the Pennsylvania woods. One trapper in the Blockhouse section of this and Tioga county is reported to have trapped eight bears this season thus far, selling hide and carcass for gain. An ordinary sized bear at the edge of the woods will bring $25 any day, and if the bear is extra large and the hide exceptionally fine $35 is not an unusual price to be paid for the prize. At this rate the Blockhouse trapper has made at least $230 since the season opened. There is also a sentiment growing in favor of limiting any one man from taking more than two bears in any one season.

The outgrowth of the sentiment against the steel bear trap will probably be a memorial to the state game commission, with the request that the hidden trap be outlawed and that only the old log trap be permitted. Last year two men in Tioga county, during the deer season, walked into and sprang bear traps on their ankles and one of them sustained a fracture of the bones. A man can generally release himself from a bear trap though to be wounded by one of them when alone and far in the wods would be a pitiable fate. In the case of dogs that are caught in them their legs are usually broken, and shooting is always necessary to end their misery.

Could Save Many Children

From 100,000 to 200,000 Yearly Said to Die in America of Preventable Causes.

Washington.—From 100,000 to 200,000 children under five years of age die every year from preventable causes in the United States, is the opinion of Dr. Cressy L. Wilbur, chief of vital statistics of the census bureau, who has prepared a bulletin on the basis of present-day knowledge of sanitary measures.

Of the number of deaths returned for 1908—691,574—which covers the registration area, Dr. Wilbur has found that nearly one-fifth were of infants of under one year old and more than one-fourth of children under five years of age. Reduced to figures, Dr. Wilbur makes the following estimates: More than one-eighth of a million babies under one year old and fully 200,000 children under five died among about one-half of the population of the United States in the year mentioned. It is considered probable that fully 200,000 more died in cities and states not included in the census bureau death registration area.

In this connection Dr. Wilbur quotes Prof. Irving Fisher's conclusion that of all the diseases of infancy having the median age one year 47 per cent. may be prevented, and that of the diseases of childhood having a median age of two to five years 67 per cent. may be prevented.

"It does not seem unreasonable," Dr. Wilbur says, "when we consider the fact that there is apparently no reason why infants if properly born—and this means simply the prevention of ante-natal disease and the improvement of the health and conditions of life of their parents—should die in early infancy or childhood except from the comparatively few accidents that are unavoidable."

The bulletin continues with a statement that the general death rate of a country is dependent largely upon its infant mortality and says:

"In the light of the figures quoted it would seem that practical sanitation has only made a beginning in the work of preventing the occurrence of infant and child mortality. The ground has only been scratched over. Deep stirring of the soil and thorough cultivation of all the means available with our present scientific and medical knowledge for the guarding of young lives would produce startling and, from all human experience, almost unbelievable results."

Ants Will Eat Boll Weevil

Important Discovery Accidentally Made by Government Official in Oklahoma Cotton Patch.

Durant, Okla.—The federal government will experiment in cotton fields near here with black ants to exterminate boll weevil, the most damaging of cotton pests. The discovery was recently made by Special Agent S. W. Murphy of the department of agriculture, who is located in Durant, that the ants will devour the young weevil. The discovery was made entirely by accident in the following manner: Murphy had visited a cotton patch near Durant and [illegible]

[illegible] black ants were devouring the weevil. He wrote a full report of his discovery to Dr. Knapp, head of the bureau of plant life industry, under whose direction Murphy is now working. Murphy is confident that he has found in them an insect which will destroy the boll weevil without injuring the crop, and he intends to colonize as many ants as possible in a cotton field near Durant next year, and to assist him in this [illegible] the government expert [illegible] detailed.

The awful treatment to which some of the dogs are subjected long ago started the friends of animals to action and a national society for the protection of draft dogs was formed and it has been actively engaged in bettering conditions. It is largely due to the insight into the matter gained by this society that the present bill has been satisfactorily framed. Stringent provisions are made against the use of sick and feeble dogs and the size of the animals, the relation to the carts and loads is regulated. Suitable harness is prescribed. RICE MAKES GAINS

Production Makes Big Jump in Last Twenty-Four Years.

World's Market Amounts to $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 Per Annum—Louisiana Leads in United States.

Washington.—The growth of rice production in the United States from less than 100,000,000 pounds a few years ago to over 600,000,000 in 1908 lends interest to a study by the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor of the markets offered for this particular commodity.

Rice production in the United States seldom reached 100,000,000 pounds per annum prior to 1885, and had but twice crossed the 200,000,000 line prior to 1900. Then came in 1901 a production of 388,000,000 pounds, in 1903, 580,000,000, in 1904, 586,000,000, and in 1908, 608,000,000 pounds.

The rice production of the United States in the last decade has thus equaled that of the half century immediately preceding, or in other words, the quantity produced since the beginning of the year 1900 has been as great as that of the 50 years from 1850 to 1900.

Domestic production about equaled the imports, making an average annual consumption ranging from 250,000,000 to 400,000,000 pounds.

Even during the recent period of large domestic production, importations have continued at about the same rate as in former years, while exports have been comparatively small, hinting at a largely increased domestic consumption.

The world's market for rice, measuring this market merely by the imports of the principal countries of the world, amounts to from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 per annum. The imports of rice into the principal countries of Europe in the latest available year amounted to about $82,000,000 value; into North and South America, exclusive of the United States, $13,000,000, and into Africa, $6,000,000.

It is estimated that the world's rice crop is 175,000,000,000 pounds per annum, of which 60,000,000,000 are produced in British India, 50,000,000,000 to 60,000,000,000 in China, 15,000,000,000 in Japan, 6,750,000,000 in Siam, 6,500,000,000 in Java, 5,000,000,000 in French Indo China, 3,000,000,000 in Korea, 2,750,000,000 in Formosa, 750,000,000 pounds in Italy and 500,000,000 pounds each in Spain, Ceylon, the Philippine islands and the United States.

Rice forms the chief cereal food of about one-half of the world's population, and wheat the chief cereal food of the other half.

Of the 608,000,000 pounds of rice produced in the United States in 1908, 53.8 per cent. was produced in Louisiana, 41.8 per cent. in Texas, 2.2 per cent. in South Carolina, 2.1 per cent in Arkansas, and the remainder in Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi and North Carolina.

This year's rice crop in Arkansas will net the growers about $950,000, according to estimates thus far formulated, and under the impetus of the prosperity which this will bring about it is probable that the rice acreage in the state will be nearly doubled next year.

In September about 1,000,000 pounds of the present year's crop were marketed in that state and twice that amount was shipped. By February 1 it is predicted that the entire crop of 25,000,000 pounds, the produce of 28,000 acres of land, will have been marketed.

Fishing Extraordinary.

Representative Flood of Virginia tells a good story in which one of the characters was Gen. Reuben Lindsay Walker of the confederate army. On one occasion the general was waiting for his breakfast and his faithful negro servant had gone to catch some fish for the feast. When the servant was away an unusually long time the general called to him impatiently.

"Why don't you come here with that fish, Sam?"

Sam in the meantime had caught a flounder, which is white on one side with a whiteness that looks like raw fish meat.

Thursday evening at Mrs. Marshall's home was a gala occasion in more ways than one. The F. F. B.'s long noted for their ability to entertain in a royal way surpassed themselves in their efforts to show honor and good will to two of their members who will be principals in certain happy events of the near future.

This festive occasion took the form of "A Spoon Shower" in honor of the Misses Allard and Erickson who will be brides of this month. The rooms were bright with Christmas greens, the holly predominating everywhere. The decorations of the table were carried out in the prevailing colors scarlet and green. A great bonquet of scarlet carnations in a beautiful cut-glass vase held the place of honor in the center of the table, surrounded by the glittering circle of silver spoons attached to each other by scarlet ribbon one end of which reached to the plate of each of the brides to be. The place cards were decorated with sprays of holly tied with scarlet ribbon while other sprays of the same Christmas green were scattered over the table, the lovely deep shade of green and brilliant scarlet berries glowing brightly on the snowy linen. After showing appretion of the bountiful repast many toasts and good wishes were showered upon the happy girls after which they were told to draw in the ribbon attached to the spoons belonging to each, when in imagination amidst the merry tinkle of the silver could be heard the sound of faintly ringing wedding bells.

After due appreciation had been expended on these the guests repaired to the parlor to finish up the happy occasion with their usual exchange of Christmas gifts. In one corner of the room had been fashioned a chimney of candy boxes artisticly covered with red paper to representing bricks, behind which safely hidden lay the little tokens of good will. Attached to each gift was a scarlet ribbon one end of which hung over the chimney as if inviting each one to help themselves. This they did, each one selecting a ribbon haphazard which on pulling brought to her a dainty little article and thus amid much hilarity and genuine pleasure the guests prepared to depart. It was such an enjoyable occasion we understand some more of the young members of the F. F. B.'s are thinking of "going and doing likewise."

APPOINTMENT MADE

A. P. Toupin is to be Register of the United States Land Office at Crookston.

On last Thursday A. P. Toupin received a telegram from Washington informing him that his appointment as register of the United States land office at Crookston had been confirmed by the senate. Mr. Toupin will take the oath of office about Jan. 1. The new register is a man well qualified from business experience and natural ability for the place and his many friends are offering congratulations upon his good fortune. Mr. Toupin's family will continue to reside in Red Lake Falls for some time at least.

DEATH OF A PIONEER

J. W. Bourdon, Long Resident of Red Lake Falls, is Dead.

Joseph W. Bourdon, one of the pioneer residents of the city, passed away at the family home at 10:30 o'clock last Friday night. Though it may be stated that blood poisoning is the direct cause of death, Mr. Bourdon had been in feeble health for the past two years and when he became critically ill a few days before his death he was not able to make a strong fight.

Joseph W. Bourdon was born Jan 12, 1840 at Rosses Point, Clinton County New York. At the age of ten years he went with his parents to Ripon, Wis., where they resided for a number of years, moving to Dover, Minn., in 1858. On Oct. 14, 1863, Mr. Bourdon and Miss Jane A. Robertson were married. Mr. and Mrs. Bourdon came to Red Lake Falls in the year 1884 and had resided here ever since. At the time of his death Mr. Bourdon was aged 69 years, 11 months and 6 days. He is survived by his wife and two sons, Charles N. and Robert H. Bourdon and a number of other relatives. Mr. Dourdon had been a resident of Red Lake Falls for more than twenty five years and in that time made many friends who appreciated his worth and who sympathize with the relatives in their bereavement.

Funeral services, conducted by Rev. D. K. Laurie, were held at the home at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon. Mr. Bourdon was a member of the I. O. O. F. lodge and members of that order attended the funeral in a body and acted as escort and pall bearers.

Honored at Chicago.

Miss Rose I. Sutter, a former graduate of the local high school, and now a student in a medical college in Chicago, was the elected representative of the college to the Alpha Epsilon Iota medical convention recently held in the Twin Cities. There was a very large representation of practicing physicians, delegates being present from many large cities in the east. This certainly speaks high honors for Miss Sutter and it goes without mention that she received the hearty congratulations of the college on being their chosen representative and she deserves much credit for her excellent record already made in the noble humanitarian profession which she has chosen. The proceedings during the three days session of the convention were of great importance and benefit to those attending and [illegible] entertained in [illegible] by the [illegible]

Honors for Minnesota.

Captain John McGovern of the Minnesota foot ball team is given the position of quarterback on Walter Camp's honorary All-American football eleven which appears in the current issue of Collier's. It is the first time that Minnesota has been honored with a place on the team, and only one other western man, Benbrook of Michigan, was given a place on the team. The other nine men picked are from the big eastern schools, six from Yale, two from Harvard and one from Brown. McGovern has made a great record especially when it is considered that he was out of the game a part of the season because of an injury. In commenting on McGovern's great work Walter Camp said: "At quarter McGovern of Minnesota is the best man in the country. Being a westerner, he is not as well known to the east, but some idea of his quality may be gathered from the fact that he handled a machine of far greater variety of play than any other eastern man and made it work for him, too, while his individual work in forward passing, running in a broken-up field and catching punts was quite up to that of Tad Jones, and in addition he kicked three drop kick goals in one of his championship games."

WILL NOT SHIP LIQUORS NOW

Railroads Issue Orders to Agents Prohibiting Taking of Liquors For Shipment.

Order Causes Much Indignation But Is being Strictly Adhered To.

The railroad and express agents have received stringent notices regarding the stopping of all shipments of beer, whiskey and all ar[illegible] spirits on land formerly included in the Indian reservation territory even though it has since been [illegible] back to the government by the Indians. The orders are being strictly adhered to by the agents and the result is that many of the towns are exceedingly dry and the residents thereof who are in the habit of drinking beer when they liked are very much enraged over this latest order and the refusal of the railroads to ship liquor of any kind to their towns.

The order sent by the Great Northern officials includes all of Hubbard and Becker counties; Itasca county west of range 46 and south of township 147; all of Mahnomen county; Polk county, east of range 45 and south of township 148, and Clearwater county, south of township 148.

Badly Hurt Tuesday

Charles Iverson, foreman of the crew of men who have been busy for several weeks testing the two water-powers in this city, was quite badly hurt Tuesday afternoon while at work at the Healy dam. A large pipe, extending into the air about forty feet, broke and the end fell a distance of thirty feet, striking Mr. Iverson on the head. A deep gash was cut in the scalp altho a heavy cap which Mr. Iverson was wearing [illegible]. Several stitches were required to close the wound which is painful though not serious.

BIG SUM FOR MARSHALL

Northern Minnesota County Gets $21,000 of School Money.

Requests for loans of state school money were approved by the state board of investment on December 23, to the extent of $50,000.

Marshall county was given $21,000 for ditch purposes, and Kittson county $5,916 for a like improvement. Crow Wing, Mahnomen and Wright counties were favored with $6,000, $2,000 and $3,500 respectively for school purposes.

Thomas Thibodeau, who left here December 1, for Van Buren, Maine, has arrived at his destination, and has accepted a position as agent for the Thibodeau Sewing Machine company. It is twenty-five years since he left Van Buren and he writes that he finds a big change in the vicinity of his boyhood home.

Allard-Buse.

On Thursday afternoon at two o'clock, at the St. Joseph's parsonage, occurred the marriage of Miss Mollie Allard to Mr. Ernest G. Buse, the Rev. Fr. Bossus officiating. Following the ceremony, the bridal party sat down to a dainty informal wedding lunch at Paul's hotel.

Miss Allard, daintily attired in white, was attended by Miss Rose Harren, as bridesmaid, while Clement E. Brunelle acted as best man. The ceremony was a quiet one, no invited guests being present. The young people left on the afternoon train for Big Falls, Minn., where they were the guests for a week at the home of the bride's father, M. Allard.

The contracting parties in this happy affair are well known and popular people of Red Lake Falls. Miss Allard has been a resident of the city for a number of years, having grown from childhood here. She has a large number of friends, made by her winning ways and agreeable manners. Mr. Buse is equally as popular, and has an acquaintance throughout the entire northern part of the state. He also grew from childhood in Red Lake Falls, and has been associated with all efforts for the progress of this city. At present he is a member of the Red Lake County Abstract company, and his business integrity has made for him many friends.

Both of the young people are the recipients of many congratulations, all deserved, and the well wishes of their many friends will be with them henceforth.

Mr. and Mrs. Buse will make this city their home which will be glad news to their acquaintences.

FIFTY CENTS PER DAY

That's What You'll Save by Paying Your Subscription Tomorrow.

After Jan. 1, 1910, the subscription price of the Red Lake Falls Gazette will be $1.50 per year—and the paper is going to be worth that price.

There's just one day more until the change, so it will be possible for you to save fifty cents by not neglecting to fix up the subscription account not later than tomorrow.

The Gazette has had much to say about settling old accounts, but the statements have been induced by the desire that everybody have fair notice of the change in the subscription price and of the postal regulation that requires that delinquent subscriptions be discontinued and that none who desire to pay advance subscriptions at the old rate may fail to have sufficient notice of the change in rate. After the first of the year the subscription list will be revised to comply with the postal regulations—and consequently this is the last notice.

Finally then, don't forget that you can save fifty cents tomorrow by paying your subscription to the Gazette one year in advance.

LAST STRAW DISAPPEARS

Mrs. Gonigam Dead.

Mrs. Carrie Gonigam, a former well known resident of Red Lake Falls, passed away Sunday morning at her home in Walnut, Ill., aged 53 years, death being due to heart failure. Mrs. Gonigam was in perfect health on Christmas day and news of her death comes as a surprise to all her old acquaitances in this vicinity. Funeral service were conducted on Tuesday, interment taking place at Walnut. Mrs. Gonigam is survived by three children, Almeda, Grace, and Gladys, the latter being twelve years old. The year following the death of Mr. Gonigam five years ago, the family removed to Walnut, where they have since made their home.

Farmers' Short Course.

At the School of Agriculture, University Farm, St. Paul, the short course for farmers has been arranged this year to commence Friday, Jan. 14th and to run for four weeks. This course will enable any farmer or his son in comparatively short time to gain a comprehensive idea of the latest developments in all the lines connected with practical farming. The course includes instruction and demonstrations in agriculture, horticulture, live stock, farm botany, dairying, poultry, entomology, rope tying, good roads, farm chemistry, farm drainage, veterinary science, farm and power machinery, etc. Special instruction in judging soils, grains and live stock will be given during the month.

Excursions to large mills, chamber of commerce, state capitol, stock yards and other points of interest in and about the twin cities will be conducted by members of the faculty. The enrollment fee for the entire course is $5.00. Board and room may be obtained at low rates.

A very pleasant and profitable month can be spent attending this [illegible]. There is no age limit and entrance requirements.

Concert Was Good.

The band concert given on Tuesday evening, was equally as good as its predecessors of the past season. The band selections were well rendered, while the two solos, by Joseph Harren on the baritone, and Director Brunelle on the cornet, and the duet by the same two gentlemen, were received very favorably by the audience. The French dialect recitation, "L'habitant," by Robert Poirier made a big hit, Mr. Poirer's apt interpretation of the piece being very natural. Omar Hall, "the village cut-up", made a little speech of thanks, which was as striking on account of its delivery as on account of its object. Following the concert, the younger folks adjourned to the M. B. A. hall where dancing was the order of things for a few hours.

PITY RURAL CARRIER

Cold Fingers Result From Careless Practice of Farmers Along Rural Route.

Three hundred thousand rural free delivery mail carriers waste a lot of time each week in undignified pursuit of elusive small coins which farmers drop into the rural boxes to pay for unstamped letters. This estimate is based on a count made in one county in New York, where it was found that each carrier had to play hide and seek with 115 pennies each week.

The situation is just as bad in Red Lake county, where the farmers frequently drop coins into the box which the carrier finally gets hold of with his benumbed fingers and then, like as not, lets fall into the snow, making another search necessary.

COUNTY SEAT QUESTION SETTLED

Decision of State Supreme Court Determines Questions Fight is Ended.

Notable Victory for County Commissioners and Attorney Chas. E. Boughton.

All hope of the Thief River Falls people that their city would some day be the county seat of Red Lake county is now gone. A decision of the supreme court rendered last week has settled finally the county seat removal question.

It will be remembered that after the destruction of the court house by fire last April, the county commissioners decided to issue the bonds of the county for the purpose of raising funds for the erection of a new court house. They were acting under authority of section one, chapter 175, General Laws for 1905, which provides that the board of county commissioners of any county which does not already own a court house may issue bonds of the county for the purpose of erecting a new building.

Court Commissioner Johnson issued an injunction restraining the commissioners from doing any act to carry out their expressed intent to erect a new building. Judge Watts of the district court subsequently dissolved this injunction and the Thief River people caused an appeal to be taken from this decision.

The Thief River attorneys contended that the law does not apply to counties situated as is Red Lake county. They contended that the word "already" narrowed the authority conferred by the law to such counties as actually had no court houses at the time of the taking effect of the law in question—April 14, 1905.

Attorney Boughton, representing the county commissioners, argued that the law ought to be given a broader interpretation, that the legislature intended the law to apply not merely to a present, but to a future contingency, to any county in the state where such conditions might arise, in the present or in the future, that the county does not own a court house.

The supreme court of the great state of Minnesota holds that the law cannot have such a narrow interpretation as the Thief River attorneys would place upon it, that the limitation of the word "already" has reference to the time when it is proposed to build instead of to the time when the law became effective. The following from the opinion of the court will be of interest.

Red Lake County—Martin V. Evanston, appellant, vs. Wm. C. Demann, et al., respondents.

Chapter 175, laws 1905, construed and held that the word "already" does not limit the operation of the act to counties that had no court house at the time of its passage, but refers also to any future time, and it is

"Held, that at any time a court house is destroyed by fire, or other cause, the county commissioners may issue the bonds of such county in an amount not in excess of one per cent of the assessed valuation of its real and personal property for the purpose of building a new court house."

The Thief River people might appeal to the legislature again, if it were not too late. But it is too late—too late! And, anyhow, their efforts to spread the county seat fight over the entire state have not been very effective.

The county seat removal fight is at an end and as stated in previous issues of the Gazette, a new court house is to be erected in Red Lake Falls. [illegible]

The attorneys who have handled the county seat litigation for Red [illegible]

Chapter 175, Laws 1905, construed and held that the word "already" does not limit the operation of the act to counties that had no court house at the time of its passage, but refers also to any future time, and it is

Held, that when at any time a court house is destroyed by fire, or other cause, the county commissioners may issue the bonds of such county in an amount not in excess of one per cent of the assessed valuation of its real and personal property for the purpose of building a new court house.

This action was brought to enjoin the county commissioners of Red Lake county from issuing bonds to the extent of $35,000, for the purpose of building a new court house. The board claimed to have authority to act under the provisions of C. 175, Laws 1905, "An act to authorize the board of county commissioners of any county not already owning a county court house, to issue its bonds, and to use the proceeds thereof for the building of a county court house." Section 1 reads: "the board of county commissioners of any county of the state of Minnesota which does not already own a county court house, is hereby authorized and empowered to issue the bonds of said county to such an amount as, in its judgment, may be necessary, but not exceeding one per cent of the assessed valuation of its real and personal property, as fixed by the last preceding assessment for general taxation, for the purpose of building a county court house in said county."

It appears from the complaint that in January 1905, the county of Red Lake become the ower, by purchase, of a court house at the county seat, but that the some was totally destroyed by fire on April 23rd, 1909, that six days after the fire the board of county commissioners held a meeting and adopted resolutions to build a new court house and to provide funds for that purpose by issuing county bonds to the amount of $35,000, which sum did not exceed one per cent of the total taxable valuation of the assessable property of the county.

"If the act be construed to refer to counties not owning a court house at the time of the passage of the act, April 14, 1905, then the commissioners were without authority in proposing to issue the bonds for the reason that Red Lake county was the owner of a court house at that time. But if the act also referred to any future time, when the contingency might arise that any county should not be the owner of a court house, then the commissioners were authorized to proceed. Lexicographers define the word 'already,' to mean 'prior to some specified time, either past, present, or future. It has reference to past time but may be used for a future past.'—Webster. As us in this act, therefore, the word 'already' may refer to the present, that is, the time of the adoption of the act, or to the future. The language being ambiguous, we must discover the necessity or call for such legislation. If it was intended to legislate with reference to a condition existing at the time of the passage of the act, April 14, 1905, then a serious question arises as to its constitutionality. At that particular date there might have been one or more counties within the class, but upon what sound legal basis could such counties be distinguished from those which might be placed in the same condition a day, or a week, or at any time thereafter? Section 412, Revised Laws 1905, provides that each county shall provide at the county seat, and keep in good repair, a suitable court house. Section 7834 permits counties to issue bonds for the purpose of constructing a court house when the amount to be expended does not increase the net indebtedness of the county beyond the limit fixed by law, and when the proposition shall have been duly submitted to and approved by the voters of the county.

"There was some reason for selecting as the subject of legislation the general condition of counties which for any cause had no court house, or the emergency which might arise at any time in any county [illegible] court house [illegible]

Ericson-Schram.

On Wednesday morning, Dec. 29, at 8:30 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents in this city, occured the marriage of Miss Mayme Ericson eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Ericson, to Dr. John M. Schram, of Ray, N. D. The ring cermony was used, Rev. D. K. Laurie of the Presbyterian church reading the service. The bridal couple were attended by Miss Alice Ericson as brides maid and Mr. Jos. Toupin as best man. The ceremony was witnessed by immediate relatives only. Dr. and Mrs. Schram left on the morning train over the Northern Pacific for the Twin Cities where they will spend a few days, later proceeding to eastern points.

Miss Ericson is one of the popular young ladies of this city, and has been a teacher in the schools of this state for a number of years. She is of a disposition which attracts as well as makes friends and where ever she has gone has drawn around her an admiring circle of acquaintances. Dr. Schram is a practicing dentist of Ray, N. D., equally as popular and well liked in his home town as his bride is in hers.

The young couple will reside at Ray, where the grown has prepared a home befitting the lady he has chosen to share his joys and troubles henceforth. His many associates will welcome him home and their well wishes will be as sincere as those of the many friends of the young people in this city.

Albert Lizee came up from Glyndon Saturday morning for a short visit with friends and relatives here. Bert now has a barber shop of his own and reports he is doing well.

The Government Warns Public Against Bogus Indian Goods Peddler.

For some time a man giving his name as Louis Monson has been taking orders for goods that he claimed were made by the Indians at Red Lake school. He carried samples of moccasins, buckskin underwear, shoes and beadwork, and stated that he sold fence posts, telegraph poles, etc. also berries during the season. He is a Norwegian about 5 feet, 6 inches high, weight about 145 pounds, had sandy hair though some gray, light complexion, aged about 50. He seemed well acquainted with work of the Red Lake school, and gave his address as Red Lake, Minn., P. O. box 40. We have received letters of inquiry concerning this man for two years, from various parts of North Dakota, and have been unable to locate him. We have no agent or salesman representing this Agency and there are no articles made by pupils of this school only such as are used by them here. The man is a fraud and I would warn the public from giving him any orders hereafter.

FEDERAL ENGINEERS FINISH SURVEY

Flow of Water in Red Lake River Determined and Estimates Filed.

The Improvement of Waterway Would Be Big Benefit to Northern Minnesota.

The federal engineers, who have been making hydrographic survey of the Red Lake river between Thief River Falls and the Red Lakes, completed their labors Tuesday and returned to St. Paul.

The flow of water at the outlet of the great Red lakes was accurately determined and estimates by local parties appointed last spring at various points along the river whose duty it was to take daily readings of the water gauge placed in their charge. The result of these observations and the hydrographic survey will in some degree emphasize the navigability of the Red Lake river and the pressing necessity of some works being established at the source of the stream and along its course to prevent the annual spring floods which rush down this river doing so much damage every year in the Red River of the North.

Though for several decades the stream has been the only means of transportation for farm produce and supplies for traders and settlers along the 100 miles of river and about the great Red lakes, and though several boats are every season engaged in the business of passenger and freight traffic on these waters still adverse interests have succeeded in preventing the improvement of the stream. It is the hope of many people whose interests in large measure are bound up in the navigability of the river that the report of this survey will tend to secure the necessary congressional action which will result in a reasonable improvement of the river and thus insure a safe depth of water therein at all times during the season of navigation.

Seriously Burned

Louis, the six year old son of Mrs. and Mrs. Horace Corbeil was badly burned about the head and shoulders, in a peculiar accident which happened last week. The little fellow was carrying a pot of hot coffee from the stove to the table when he stumbled and fell, spilling the boiling liquid over himself. Though the burns were very painful for a few days, the boy is fast recovering, and no serious results are looked for.

The county-seat war is over "already, yet."

Thanks, but we'll take a court house for a Christmas present!

Now is a good time for Thief River and Red Lake to kiss and make up.

Over 172,000 trainmen want their wages increased. Also some other people who are not trainmen.

Noah Webster gave a definition of the word "already" that even the Thief River lawyers couldn't budge.

The county-seat war reached its last ditch—the supreme court—last Friday. It was "black Friday" for some of the people up the line.

The Thief River people might contribute statues of John Eastman and Dan O'Niell in full war panoply for the new courthouse yard.

Lauritz Swenson has been made minister to Belgium, and yet a lot of Republican workers are not overjoyed. But Swenson is happy, and the Republican state committee will not be embarrassed by his services next year.

The state fair seems to be very much in politics just at present, judging from the charges and counter charges being made in the twin city newspapers. Several members of the fair board are charged with padding expense accounts and other direlections. It is probable that the sensational exposures will put an untimely end to Mr. Furlong's ambitions to become president of the fair.

Red Lake county gets a new court house by virtue of a law passed by the legislature of 1905—Chapter 175. This bill was introduced by Hon. L. C. Simons, then a member of the lower house from Red Lake Falls, but at that time it was not thought that Red Lake county could take advantage of the provisions of the act. The law was passed primarily to aid Clearwater county. The phrase "any county that does not already own a courthouse," was susceptable of two constructions, and it required a supreme court decision to determine wether the law applied only to counties not having a courthouse at the time the law was enacted, or whether the privilige of issuing the bonds was vested in the county commissioners of any county thereafter not in possession of a courthouse. The supreme court took the latter view, which gives the board of Red Lake county the right to issue bonds in the amount of $35,000 to provide a suitable building.

THE CRUEL WAR IS OVER.

The decision of the supreme court handed down last Friday is the last chapter in the litigations in the Red Lake county-seat controversy. The decision means that under Chapter 175 of the laws of 1905 the the county commissioners have the right to issue bonds in the sum of $35,000 for the purpose of erecting a courthouse, and it goes without saying that the bonds will be sold and a courthouse built at Red Lake Falls without further delay. The proceedings have run the gauntlet of the district and supreme courts, and no further appeal and no further legal proceedure is possible.

It has taken just five years to settle definitely and for all time the county seat of Red Lake county, and Red Lake Falls has been a test of strength. The warfare has engendered many personal and political [illegible] will be removed immediately [illegible] it is our duty to do everything possible to dissipate the effects of the two years warfare. Each should vie with the other in working for betterment and the upbuilding of Red Lake county. There is nothing to be gained by further strife and internal dissention will work to the disadvantage of both of the splendid towns that have been at war.

Naturally the people of Red Lake Falls are elated over their success, while in the northern end of the county there is more or less of disappointment. Both parties to the controversy could not win, and all of us should accept the verdict in the spirit that somebody had to win and somebody lose. The leading citizens of both towns have sacrificed considerable in the way of money and time and effort, and are entitled to the gratitude of their people.

The cruel war is over, let's bury our grievences and take up our work in a spirit of co-operation and friendship.

I desire to express my thanks to my many patrons for the liberal patronage I received during the past season, and hope that our business relations during 1910 will be as satisfactory as they were during the year just past.

With my sincerest wishes for a Prosperous, Happy New Year, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

DR. HILLIS EULOGIZES JOHNSON

In a recent address Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, the noted Chautauqua orator and Brooklyn pulpiteer, delivered the following splendid tribute to the memory of Governor John A. Johnson of Minnesota.

I have come in tonight with a bit of gloom answering to the darkness of the skies resting upon my heart, for Governor Johnson is dead. A fine Swedish gentleman, with Norwegion and Swedish blood in his veins, but an American gentleman, an American Christian, an American governor, and one of the noblest and finest and bravest gentlemen that ever made a fight for pure politics in this land.

His mother was a washerwoman. The little boy working from 5 o'clock in the morning until 8 o'clock, when he went to school; when he was 6 years running all the way home at 4 o'clock to help his mother carry washing around to the neighbors, milking cows at 7 years of age, and selling it and carrying it to the neighbors at 10 years of age doing a mans work. At 12 years planning to make himself a scholar. At 16 years interesting himself in the future of young Swedes and Norwegians. At 20 years of age a young patriot, giving himself to the problems of the ballot box. At 25 years of age having climbed up from the position of a working man, very soon soon prominent in politics and governor of his state.

He tells us you can bring 1,000,000 Swedes and Norwegians into Minnesota, that they do not stay Norwegians, Swedes and Danes. They assimilate. They are first of all Americans. They insist on speaking the English language. They stand for the American public school. They stand for the American Sunday. This large university of theirs in Minnesota, is largely supported by Swedes, Danes and Norwegians.

God be praised for what we have received at the hands of the sons and daughters of foreign peoples. When the news came to me that Governor Johnson was dead and I remembered the hour when first of all I met him on the lecture platform and heard his splendid plea for the immigrants to this country and his interpretation of the Declaration of Independence, I felt then my heart fill within me as I knew that if every native-born American in this country should suddenly be taken away by a blight and there were left here these foreign emigrants of ours, there would not be one single American institution here that would be rendered less safe because native-born Americans are dead. These men are taking care of the Christian institutions of this country. When the banners fall from the hands of our native-born Americans, as they sometimes do, they will be taken up and carried to new heights by one of the boys born of a Swedish washerwoman, a young man who climbs to the position of governor. That was a pathetic women, when, after his third operation, he turned to his wife, saying, "Well, Nora, we have made a brave fight and the hour is come when I must go away from you." And he went home to God.

At the Employment Agency.

The seeker for household help had just shown the candidate for domestic honors a flashlight picture of the interior of her kitchen.

"You see," she smilingly said, "that we have every possible convenience, and all the fittings are new."

The maid studied the photograph carefully.

"I hope it suits you," the anxious lady remarked.

The maid shook her head discouragingly.

"I'm left-handed," she abruptly said.

"I don't understand," murmured the lady.

"Th' place won't do," said the maid. "I'm left-handed, an' youse have a right-handed sink."

Whereupon she haughtily turned to the next humble applicant for help.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Fearfully and Wonderfully Made.

"Mazure of head from ear to ear over top of head, 12 inches; from ear to ear under my chin, 9½ inches; from forehead to back hair, 7 inches. I want a black lase bonnet with streamers and rosetts of red or yellow satting ribbon and would like a bunch of pink Rozes or a blue plume with a black jet buckel. If artifishels air still the stile I want a bunch of grapes or a bird's tale somewhere. I do not want anything too fansy, but if you think a renth of pansies would look good why put one on. I have some good pink ribbon hear at home, so you need not put on strings."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Golden Horseshoes.

Roman writers inform us that Commodus caused the hoofs of his horse to be gilded. Nero when he undertook short journeys was always drawn by mules that had silver shoes, and those of his wife, Poppaea, had shoes of gold. From a passage in "Dio Cassius" there is reason to think that the upper part only was formed of those noble metals or that they were perhaps plated out of thin slips. When Boniface, marquis of Tuscany, one of the richest princes of his time, went to Beatrix, about the year 1038, his whole train was so magnificently decorated that his horses were shod with silver. The nails were even of the same metal.

EARLY AUTUMN DAYS

[illegible]

When conversation turned on tall men, a [illegible] in the company said he believed the tall Smith would take some beating in that line.

"I was out walking with Smith one day when he fell face down with the soles of his boots pointing to a grocer's window. The grocer rushed out to inquire who was putting the shutters up."

"Pretty tall," said a soldier who was present, "but a fellow in our company beat it hollow. After a sharp fight with the enemy we were obliged to retreat, when on looking back we saw one of our men standing upright on the field. The fact was the poor fellow had got such feet that he never fell down when he was shot."

"Well," said a horse dealer who sat in the corner, "that's rather tall. But let me have a try. A fellow came down to our stables the other day in a hurry to hire a horse for a journey he was going on. 'I'll have that one,' said he, pointing to a horse in the yard. 'Why, there isn't a man in the world can ride that animal,' I said. 'He'll work in a cart or plow, but no one can stay on his back.' 'I'll try him anyway,' said the stranger as he sprang into the saddle. I expected to see him pitched off, but the horse looked around, saw the man's feet and trotted quietly off. He thought he was between a pair of shafts."

An Exciting Situation.

It was the ninth inning, and the visiting team was at bat. The score was a tie, and every spectator in grand stand or bleacher was on edge. To make it more exciting the bases were full, with two men out, and the team's best swatter was up, with three balls and no strikes to his credit.

In this trying moment the pitcher flung one straight at the plate.

"Str-r-rike one!"

A yell broke from thousands of throats.

Again the ball darted toward the plate.

"Str-r-rike two!"

Another unearthly yell wafted up from the assemblage. Then a death-like stillness fell over all as the pitcher carefully adjusted himself for the next and last effort.

In the midst of this pervading hush a young lady just back of the catcher loudly appealed to her escort:

"Will, I do hope the Giants win."

"They'll stand a good show if they put this man out."

"Everybody here seems to want to have him put out, don't they, Will?"

"They certainly do."

That Settled It.

The commissioners in lunacy were nonplused. The man on whose mental condition the courts had appointed them to pass seemed perfectly sane in spite of all testimony to the contrary. His every action, his every remark was rational. They were about to give up in despair when matters took an unexpected turn. "Oh, doctor, permit me to return the umbrella I borrowed from you last week," said the patient.

And then, at the thought of earning their fees with no qualms of conscience, the learned men decided that any one who would voluntarily return a borrowed umbrella should be placed under restraint.

This simply proves how trifles will ever mold our destinies.—New York Times.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

S.S.S. CURES OLD BLOOD TROUBLES

Contagious Blood Poison is at the bottom of a great many old blood troubles. The disease may have been contracted years ago and some treatment used that removed the outward symptoms and shut the virus up in the system to slumber in the blood, but it only awaited a favorable opportunity to break out in some form again. Certain forms of catarrhal troubles, especially where the bones are affected, scrofulous affections, non-healing sores, ulcerated membranes, etc., are due to this specific poison. Perhaps many who are afflicted in this way are ignorant of the fact that the seeds of this mighty poison are still hidden in the blood. Like the deadly serpent, which is dangerous as long as the faintest spark of life is left to enable it to sink its poisonous fangs, this powerful disease will corrupt and defile while the least particle of its insidious virus remains in the blood.

The best time to get rid of Contagious Blood Poison is when the disease is first contracted, and before its virus so penetrates the blood as to cause ulcerated mouth and throat, copper-colored spots, falling hair, etc. Then of course the victim is saved much humiliation and suffering; but even after the poison has become established in the system it can be removed and a cure effected if the blood be thoroughly purified with S. S. S.

S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers. It possesses penetrating powers that enable it to go down into the blood, and remove the last trace of blood poison. It cures all blood troubles simply and solely because it removes the cause from the circulation. Not only does S. S. S. cure Contagious Blood Poison when first contracted, but reaches it in any of its stages, even where the trouble has been inherited. S. S. S. is made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, and does not contain the slightest trace of mineral in any form. You can get rid of your old blood trouble if you will take S. S. S. and allow it to purify the blood. Book on the blood and any medical advice free.

A PERFECT CURE.

Some eight years ago I was inoculated with poison by a nurse who infected my babe with blood taint. I was covered with sores and ulcers from head to foot. No language can express my feelings of woe during those long years. I was advised by friends who had seen wonderful cures made by it, to try S. S. S. We got some and I improved from the start, and a complete and perfect cure was the result. S. S. S. is the only blood remedy which reaches desperate cases of old blood troubles.

SUNKIST ORANGES

We pick, pack and ship 60% of the California Orange crop. These are of varying grades. The choicest selections are packed under the "Sunkist" label. To get the finest oranges you must insist on fruit that is wrapped in tissue paper with the word "Sunkist" printed thereon.

"Sunkist" Navel Oranges Are Seedless

They are delightfully sweet, juicy and fiberless. They are firm, thin skinned and deep tinted.

"Sunkist" oranges and lemons are picked by gloved hands, wrapped in "Sunkist" tissue paper, packed carefully so as to eliminate chances of becoming bruised or soft. No bruised fruit or fruit that falls to the ground is put in a "Sunkist" wrapper.

Look for "Sunkist" on the wrapper. Ask your dealer for oranges and lemons with "Sunkist" label on the tissue paper wrapper. Oranges and lemons without "Sunkist" wrappers are not "Sunkist" brand. Be sure you get oranges and lemons in their original "Sunkist" wrappers.

It isn't so difficult to strengthen a weak stomach, if one goes at it correctly. And this is true of the Heart and Kidneys. The old fashioned way of dosing the stomach or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is surely wrong! Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. Go to the weak or ailing nerves of these organs. Each inside organ has its controlling or inside nerve. When these nerves fail then those organs must surely falter. This vital truth is leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. A few days test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

To WILLIAM F. REINKE:—

YOU ARE HEREBY NOTIFIED that a default has occurred in that certain contract made and entered into on the First day of December, 1902, between Ira F. Headley and Robert Mather, Trustee for the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company, for the sale to Ira F. Headley by the said Robert Mather, Trustee, of the following described property, to-wit:

The Northeast quarter (NE¼) of Section Fourteen (14), in Township One Hundred Fifty-one (151) North, of Range Forty-two (42), West of the Fifth Principal Meridian.

Such default consists in your failure to pay as the same became due under the terms of said contract, that certain installment or amount of money to-wit: One Hundred Eighty Dollars ($180.00) principal due from and payable by you on the First day of March, 1906, and the further sum of One Hundred Eighty Dollars ($180.00) principal due from and payable by you on the First day of March, 1907, and the further sum of One Hundred Eighty Dollars ($180.00) principal due from and payable by you on the First day of March, 1908, and the further sum of One Hundred Eighty Dollars ($180.00) principal due from and payable by you on the First day of March 1909, with interest as provided in the above mentioned contract, and the further failure to pay at the office of the Treasurer of Red Lake County, the taxes on the above described land for the years 1905, 1906, 1907 and 1908.

You are further notified that E. C. Lindley has succeeded Robert Mather as Trustee for the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company, and that notice of this change in trusteeship is recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Red Lake County, Minnesota.

You are further notified that such contract will terminate thirty (30) days after the service of this notice upon you, unless prior thereto you make compliance with the conditions of the contract and pay the cost of service of this notice.

Dated at Duluth, this Fifteenth day of December A. D. 1909.

By L. B. ARNOLD,
Trustees' Land Agent.

State of Minnesota, County of Red Lake. } ss. In Justice Court. Before A. P. [illegible], Justice of the Peace.

Red Lake Falls Electric Light Co., a Corporation, Plaintiff, against [illegible] P. Berthon and Mrs. [illegible] Berthon, Defendants.

The State of Minnesota to [illegible] Berthon, Defendants:

You are hereby summoned to be and appear before the undersigned, one of the Justices of the Peace in and for said county, on the [illegible] day of [illegible] [illegible]

LIVE STOCK NOTES

A meeting of the association of Angora goat breeders and mohair growers is announced for Nov. 18, at San Antonio, Tex. It is expected that some of the very best goats in America will be on exhibition in the same place from Nov. 19 to Nov. 24, and $600 in prizes will be awarded.

Bare Lot or Grass Lot.

At the Louisiana experiment station an experiment as to the relation of bare lot and grass lot feeding to parasites in the stomach and intestines of sheep has been concluded, and Dr. Dalrymple states in his report of the last bulletin No. 90, that on the whole the lambs raised by the bare lot method were in every way more satisfactory than those raised on the grass lot.

Sugar Beets For Stock.

Farmers are beginning to appreciate the value of sugar beets for stock feeding and are raising more of them each year. Many of the farmers in northern Colorado have grown beets for this purpose and will slice them before feeding, while others will turn their stock into the fields to fatten on tops and roots. The Jones Cattle company of the Middle Park has contracted for 800 tons of beets at Mead, which will be fed to cattle, with hogs following, a plan which was tried last year with excellent results.—Denver Field and Farm.

No American Coach Horse.

Although numerous entries were made, not one was judged good enough to carry off the first prize for a coach horse which was offered this year by the Iowa state fair. The requirements were "American trotting bred horses of suitable size, conformation, style, quality and action for heavy harness service. Size, 15 hands and over, 15.1 to 15.3 preferred. Horses competing must be standard bred or registered nonstandard."

Champion Buttermaker.

Mrs. J. A. Peters of Story county has again won first prize at the Iowa state fair in the women's buttermaking contest. She is champion woman buttermaker in Iowa, having ranked first for many years. Sixty-four women, representing the states of Minnesota, Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska, competed.

Young America.

Of course Thanksgiving doesn't mean
Just sport for every one.
Our parson has to preach that day,
And that can't be much fun.

And mother has to sup'rintend
The roasting of the turk,
While father sharpens carving knives.
This all means lots of work.

But, then, for me 'tis a dandy time.
I simply take my seat
At table when the dinner's on
An' eat an' eat an' eat!

—Marie V. Caruthers in Lippincott's Magazine.

A Man and His Room.

"Play cards with a man for an hour and you will know him better than if you had met him in the drawing room every evening for a year," says a German writer. But Sonia in the Paris Figaro suggests another character barometer, "a never failing test is the hotel room." The way a man arranges his room in a hotel shows whether he has been well reared, what his ideas of propriety are, whether his bump of order has been developed, whether he is methodical or slovenly, and one may even know by the way wearing apparel, ornaments and baggage are disposed of in a room which the occupant knows he will remain in only a few days whether he is thoroughly or superficially educated. "If I had a daughter for whom a young man sued," says Sonia, "I would have him go to a summer resort where I could surprise him in his hotel room. In less than fifteen minutes my verdict would be rendered on the basis of the room's appearance."

Served as coffee, the new coffee substitute known to grocers everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee, will trick even a coffee expert. Not a grain of real coffee in it either. Pure healthful toasted grains, malt, nuts, etc., have been so cleverly blended as to give a wonderfully satisfying coffee taste and flavor. And it is "made in a minute," too. No tedious 20 to 30 minutes boiling. All grocers.

Saving the Feelings.

"I have a lot of junk that I don't want."

"Throw it on the ash pile."

"But I'd feel wasteful."

"Then send it to the Salvation Army and feel charitable."

Think This Over.

"What can you see in that fellow?"

"Oh, I like him."

"He's neither witty, wealthy nor wise."

"No; but he never has any troubles to tell me."

Preventics, the new Candy Cold Cure Tablets, are said by druggists to have four special specific advantages over all other remedies for a cold. First—They contain no Quinine, nothing harsh or sickening. Second—They give almost instant relief. Third—Pleasant to the taste, like candy. Fourth—A large box—48 Preventics—at 25 cents. Also fine for feverish children. Sold by all dealers.

Dr. Shoop's

[illegible]

Blind tooled and morocco jointed,
They have Zaehnsdorf's daintiest dress,
They are graceful, attenuate, polished,
But they gather the dust no less;
For the row that I prize is yonder,
Away on the unglazed shelves,
The bulged and the bruised octavos,
The dear and the dumpy twelves—

Montaigne with his sheepskin blistered,
And Howell the worse for wear,
And the worm-drilled Jesuits' Horace,
And the little old cropped Molière—
And the Burton I bought for a florin,
And the Rabelais foxed and flea'd—
For the rest I have never opened,
But these are the books I read.

—Austin Dobson.

THE IRISH PIPES.

I heard the piper playing,
The piper old and blind,
And knew its secret saying—
The voice of the summer wind.

I heard clear waters falling,
Lapping from stone to stone;
The wood dove crying and calling
Ever, alone, alone!

I heard the bells of the heather
Ring in the summer breeze,
Soft stir of fir and feather
And quiet hum of bees.

The piper drew me yearning
Into the dim gray lands,
Where there is no returning,
Although I wring my hands.

There, to the piper's crooning,
I saw my dead again,
All in a happy nooning
Of golden sun and rain.

You piper kind and hoary,
Your pipes upon your knee,
If I should tell my story,
The things you piped for me,

The folk would leave their selling,
And bid their buying go,
If I could but be telling
The things you let me know.

—Katharine Tynan.

DOUBT.

In love, if love be love, if love be ours,
Faith and unfaith can ne'er be equal powers.
Unfaith in aught is want of faith in all.
It is the little rift within the lute
That by and by will make the music mute
And ever widening slowly silence all.

—Alfred Tennyson.

CREED AND CROWN.

A CREED is a rod,
And a crown is of night;
But this thing is God:
To be man with thy might,
To grow straight in the strength of thy spirit
And live out thy life as the light.

—Swinburne.

A Pertinent Query.

Freddy suddenly stopped playing with his blocks and gazed thoughtfully across the room. After a moment's contemplation he turned to his father. "Papa," he began, "why haven't I ever seen any little boy policemen?"—Lippincott's Magazine.

Full of Sand.

Coach—Haven't you got the nerve to slide harder than that?

Slider (brushing himself)—Sure; I'm full of sand.—Cornell Widow.

The old fashioned way of dosing a weak stomach, or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is all wrong. Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. This is why his prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—is directed entirely to the cause of these ailments—the weak inside or controlling nerves. It isn't so difficult, says Dr. Shoop, to strengthen a weak Stomach, Heart or Kidneys, if one goes at it correctly. Each inside organ has its controlling or inside nerve. When these nerves fail, then those organs must surely falter. These vital truths are leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Test it a few days, and see! Improvement will promptly and surely follow. Sold by all dealers.

Notice.

TO HANS ANDERSON:

YOU ARE HEREBY NOTIFIED that a default has occurred in that certain contract or bond for deed, made and entered into on the 13th day of October, 1892, between yourself and Anna L. Patterson, for the sale to you by said Anna L. Patterson of the following described property, to-wit: The South-west quarter of the South-west quarter and Government Lots seven, eight and nine, in Section Thirty-two, Township One Hundred and Fifty-two, North, Range Forty-three, West of the Fifth Principal Meridian. Which said contract or "bond for deed" was filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds within and for Red Lake County and is recorded in Book "[illegible]" of Deeds on page 37, having been filed and recorded on the [illegible] day of October, 1892.

Such default consists in your failure to pay that certain installment or amount of money, to-wit: Three Hundred Dollars principal due from and payable by you upon the 1st day of November, A. D. 1893, and the further sum of Three Hundred Dollars principal due from and payable by you on the 1st day of November, 189[illegible], with interest at the rate of 10 per cent upon each of said sums according to the conditions of two certain promissory notes given by you upon the date of and as a part of said contract, and the further failure to pay at the office of the County Treasurer of Red Lake County, Minnesota, the taxes on the above described lands for the years 189[illegible] and subsequent years to and including the year 1908.

You are further notified that it is the intention of the undersigned to cancel said contract or "bond for deed," and that said contract or "bond for deed" will be cancelled and terminated and that said cancellation and termination will take effect on the 24th day of January, 1910.

Dated November 27th, 1909.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage executed by T. H. Marshall and Anna Marshall, his wife, mortgagors, to [illegible] Mortgage Loan and Investment Company, mortgagee, dated January [illegible], 190[illegible], and recorded in the office of the register of deeds of Red Lake County, Minnesota, on the [illegible] [illegible]

Notice of Filing and of Hearing on Ditch Petition.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that a petition of which the following is a copy, has been filed in the office of the County Auditor of Red Lake county, State of Minnesota, and that a hearing will be had upon said petition before the County Board at the office of the County Auditor in said County, in the City of Red Lake Falls, Minn. on the 22nd day of January, 1910, at [illegible] o'clock [illegible] M. Dated at Red Lake Falls, Minn. this 22nd day of December 1909.

(SEAL) A. A. Latendresse, County Auditor.

Petition for Public Ditch.

To the County Board of the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota:

We the undersigned land owners whose lands will be liable to be affected by or assessed for the expense of the construction of the hereinafter County Ditch hereinafter described, respectfully represent that the public health, convenience and welfare and the reclamation of swamp or overflowed lands require the establishment and construction of a County Ditch along the following described route in the towns of Gervais and Kratka in said County of Red Lake, and that the construction of the same would be of public benefit and utility.

A general description of the proposed starting point, route and terminus of said ditch is as follows:

Commencing at the North West corner of Section Number Two (2), Township One Hundred Fifty Three (153) North of Range Number Forty one (41), West of the Fifth P. M.; thence due West between Section Three (3), Township One Hundred Fifty-three (153) Range Forty one (41) and Section Thirty-four (34) Township One Hundred Fifty-four (154) Range Forty-one (41); and between Section Four (4) and Thirty-three (33) and between Section Five (5) and Thirty-two (32) in said towns and ranges, to the Northwest corner of Section Five (5) township One Hundred Fifty-three (153) Range Forty one (41). Thence due south between Section Five (5) and Six (6) Township One Hundred Fifty three (153) Range Forty one (41) and between Sections Seven (7) and Eight (8) in said Town and Range, and between that part of Sections Seventeen (17) and Eighteen (18) Township One Hundred Fifty-three (153) Range Forty one (41) lying north of the Red Lake river in said town and terminating at the Red Lake river in said town and range as its outlet.

And your petitioners pray that you will proceed to establish such Drainage Ditch and cause the same to be constructed as provided by Chapter Two Hundred thirty (230) of the General Laws of Minnesota for 1905, and acts amendatory thereto. (5 Payment Plan.)

We have some misses and ladies coats that we are willing to close out for a song. Quality and not style is what you can get at one-half price.—The Big Store.

We have a fine line of Gordon Astrachan Jackets at $27.50 and up. Now is the time for them. These goods have gone up but we will sell that at old prices.—The Big Store.

The ready print service failed to serve again this week and as a result the Gazette is only half size. The home matter is all there, nevertheless, tho the amount of paper is shy.

You would look nice in a Kuppenheimer or Clothcraft suit. Come and try one on. No trouble to show you and won't insist on you buying. Just glad to show you that is all.—The Big Store.

If everybody knew how warm, comfortable and good R. E. Z. cushion shoes are, there wouldn't be anything else sold. Saves wearing overshoes. Ask those who wear them.—The Big Store.

Miss Anna Robillard spend Christmas day and Sunday with friends and relatives here. She returned to Grand Forks Monday evening, at which place she is clerking in a large department store.

Mrs. Ole Elvester will entertain the Ladies Aid of the Norwegian Luthern church, on Friday afternoon Jan. 7, 1911 at the home of Mrs. Jas. Jacobson. Everybody cordially invited.

Among the notable Christmas parties was the one at the home of Eusebe Patnode east of town. Friends and relatives from this neighborhood were present and a good time is reported.

Clem Brunelle left Wednesday for Lankin, N. D., where on Thursday, he asssisted the Lankin band in paying honor to Governor Burke of North Dakota, who deliverd an address at Lankin.

Supt. L. V. Koos returned Tuesday from Grand Forks where he went to hear the Oberlin College Glee Club in a concert on Monday evening. Mr. Koos is personally acquainted with a number of the members of the club and in addition met several other classmates who attended the concert, making the trip a very enjoyable one.

The cantata "A Jack Frost Christmas Shower," given last Friday evening in the Presbyterian church by the pupils of the Sunday school was very well attended. The little children have received many complements on the manner in which they handled their parts.

A number of young people drove out to the Louis Parenteau home in Terrebonne Saturday to attend a party given that evening. Those who attended from town were the Misses Zelli Quesnelle, Cora Lan[illegible] and Pearl Gray and Robert Zaiser [illegible]

The death of D. L. Formes which occurred this week at the Deaconess hospital in Grand Forks ends one of the most peculiar cases that has ever occurred in the northwest. Formes has been laid up in the hospital since July 4 when he was injured in a runaway accident, his back being broken when he was thrown from the wagon he was driving on.

All the merchants of this city express their appreciation of the past years' business in their ads this week. Without an exception the year has been a very successful one in all commercial lines and the part is made more evident by the feeling of good will so numerous in the business places of the city. Even the farmer has felt the touch of prosperity, and the smile that won't come off is as numerous just at present as the frail New Years resolution.

Nearly all of the teachers of Red Lake Falls left Thursday to spend the Christmas vacation with relatives or friends at different parts of the state. Those who went Thursday are: Minnie C. Gibbs, to Anoka; Sara Marshall, to Minneapolis; Helena F. McLean, to Winona; Charlotte N. White, to Chelsea, S. Dak.; Helen M. Clark, to Afton; Clara S. Thompson, to Moorhead; Melissa Williams to Minneapolis.

Louis Corbeil left Tuesday night for his home at Green Bay, Wis., after spending the past month with relatives in this city and at Brooks. Mr. Corbeil is 73 years old and his brother, Joseph of this city is 76 years of age. The two had not seen each other for thirty nine years and at the first meeting were almost strangers. The reunion was a very pleasant one and the visit following was of more than passing interest. Mr. Corbeil was accompanied as far as Crookston by Mrs. F. Corbeil and two children, and the four will visit with relatives at that place for a few days.

Among the Red Lake Falls young ladies who are teaching throughout the state and came home to spend the Christmas vacation are: Miss Maude Findeisen from Bemidji; Miss Clara Marchand from Brown Valley; Miss Margaret Knus from Eveleth; Miss Ella Krueger and Stella Hennemuth from Fosston; Miss Elsie Mead from Akeley; Miss Alice Ericson from Sleepy Eye; Misses Mayme and Ina Linnehan from Sparta; Miss Emily Lafreniere from Grand Rapids; Miss Bertha Lafreniere from Deer River; Miss Florence Fletcher from Moose Lake; Miss Vina Carvier from Henning and Miss Lucy Hunt from Fertile.

If the "J. Lead" or "B. B." cigars seem to be a little blacker than usual, don't think that the grade is any poorer. It is only Clem Brunelle's way of showing his grief over the loss of a dear friend. There are dogs—and dogs—but never a dog like "Sport," Clem's favorite and famous hunting dog. Sport is a good dog now—the best in the country. He's dead. He couldn't stand the Christmas festivities, is what Clem blames it to, but those who have made a study of the case claim that Sport overhead some blundering cuss say that C. C. Bottineau's "yaller purp"—long since departed—was a better hunter than he was, and as the result, Sport, jest natterly pined away and died.

SUPREME COURT DECISION

creation of new counties, where a court had never been acquired. This act cannot be limited to new counties to be incorporated in the future, and if there were any sound reason for legislating in favor of counties which never owneda court house, then all such counties should be included in the act without distinction as to time. Either the language refers only to the time of the passage of the act, or to any time, and to all counties which may, for any reason, be without a court house. We are of opinion that this was the intention of the legislature, and construe the word "already" to have reference to the future as well as the present. Authorities are meagre, but some of them have a bearing. In the case of Schwarzwalder v. Tegan, [illegible] N. J. Eq. 309, the act of the legislature declared that any of the mutual insurance companies already chartered by the legislature or already organized under general laws, might, under certain conditions, become joint stock companies, and the court adopted the construction which would give reasonable and legal effect to the act and held that the [illegible] already organized under [illegible] laws [illegible] at the time when the change was desired to be made [illegible] regulating all existing railroad corporations except [illegible] controls railroad incorporated [illegible] before its passage. [illegible]

[illegible] the public of this city [illegible] surprise last week when the budding younger generation who become grown up when the local high school graduates its annual class next spring, appeared on the streets of this otherwise peaceful hamlet with black and yellow "top pieces." At first glance it looked like a celebration of some kind, but after a closer scrutiny one was amazed to find that the Seniors had undertaken a daring move to show their superiority over the other classes of the school. The hats are all right. They have a crown 2 99-100 inches high and of a width which is impossible to average. Around the crown a bright yellow ribbon having the date 1910, is interwoven. The rims are wide enough to be called rims, but the looks of supreme satisfaction on the faces of the wearers, overshadow every first impression, with the result that the members of the class are receiving many compliments on their hats. Really, they are nifty and present a very attractive appearance, and the class of '10 are to be congratulated.

SOMETHING WRONG

Marriage Licenses are Fewer This Year Than Last.

While compiling his annual report this week, Clerk of Court Johnson made the startling discovery that during the year just past, only 82 licenses to wed were issued to ardent admirers of Red Lake county girls, as compared with 93 during the year 1908. Of course, 1908 was leap year, and that may have something to do with it, but it seems funny that with all the prosperity of 1909, more young men haven't "put their foot in it," so to speak. It is to be hoped that 1910 will make up the difference, and then some, and one way to accomplish this, is to entreat the girls to be a little more encouraging to their suitors than during 1909. "Red Lake county offers inducements."

1878 32 Years 1910

We wish you a Happy and Prosperous New Year

To Our Friends:

At the close of this, our 32nd year in business in Red Lake Falls, we take this opportunity of thanking you for the business you have given us the past year and of expressing our appreciation of your help in keeping this store the best of its kind in Northern Minnesota.

To those who have not been our customers in 1909, we say that we hope to serve you in 1910. Our record of 32 years of square dealing should be an inducement to give us a trial.

With best wishes,

Hunt Hardware Company

THANK YOU

A new mile post is past.
A new record has been made.
A new pace has been set and maintained.

In every department of our business this good, old nineteen hundred and nine has worked wonders for improvement and growth in our business. And for this sound and sane growth we have the people of Red Lake Falls and County to thank. We want you to know that we appreciate your co-operation. And over the County we send a warm hearty hand clasp, with a wish that in the New Year all the good things you so justly deserve may come to you and yours.
